A neceſſary Advertiſement to the Reader.

TO prepare the Reader to receive the deſigned benefit of this work, it will be firſt uſefull to preſent him with a ſcheme, or brief Table of the ſeverals which here are offered to him, and will be reducible to three heads; The firſt concerning the Original Text, the ſecond concerning the Verſion or Tranſlation, the third concerning the Expoſition of it. In every of theſe, if all that hath formerly been obſerved and written by others had here been ſummarily repeated, it would have given a vaſt, but unneceſſary bulk to this Volume: and therefore for thoſe things which have been already thus largely inſiſted on, (whether by the Antients, S. Chryſoſtome, and the Greek Scholiaſts, or, among the many later writers on this ſubject, by the moſt judicious and learned Hugo Grotius, in his admirable Comments on the Goſpels, as alſo in the Poſthumous Annotations on the other parts of the New Teſtament, which for a great part bear his ſignature upon them) the care hath been to leave the Reader from their own hands to receive the account, and reap the benefit of their excellent labours (which are every where to be met with,) and not to adde one Volume more to the great number of thoſe which are already inriched with the ſpoils, and ſwelled by the tranſcribing of others obſervations.

In the firſt place, that concerning the Greek Text, Many learned men, eſpecially Lucas Brugenſis and Robertus Stephanus, have uſed great induſtrie to obſerve the various readings of the many Manuſcript Copies which had been diligently collected and compared. And theſe are already to be had by thoſe that pleaſe to conſult them. Yet becauſe this Kingdome of ours hath been enriched with ſome monuments of Antiquity in this kind, which were probably deſigned by God for more honorable uſes then onely to be laid up in Archives, as dead bodies in vaults and charnel-houſes, to converſe with duſt, and worms, and rottenneſs; ſome of theſe I have choſen to adviſe with, and from them to offer ſometimes a various reading; yet not permitting this to ſupplant or turn out that which hath vulgarly been received, but ſetting it in the inner margent, that thoſe that have judgement may, as they ſee cauſe, make uſe of it.

The firſt MS. which I have my ſelf twice compared, I found in the place of my Education, in the Librarie of S^t^ Mary Magdalene College in Oxford, a fair and an ancient Copie.

The ſecond is that more known in the King's Librarie at S^t^ James's, preſented to our late Soveraigne by Cyrill the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, written in Capital letters by a very antient hand, of Thecla, as it is thought, and now happily prepared for the preſſe by the great pains and judgment of M^r^ Patrick Young, from whoſe hands the moſt Reverend Father in God, the Archbiſhop of Armagh, having long ſince received a Copie of the various readings, was pleaſed to communicate them to me.

The third is the Greek and Latine MS. of the four Goſpels and the Acts, found ninety years ſince in a Monaſterie at Lions in the time of the Civil warre in France, and twenty years after preſented by Theodore Beza, as a monument of venerable Antiquity, to the Univerſity of Cambridge, the variations of which from the vulgar printed Copies I alſo acknowledge to have received from the favour of the moſt Reverend Archbiſhop of Armagh. What hath from any of theſe appeared uſeful to be propoſed, is in the inner margent of this Book tranſlated, and ſet over againſt the Text, with an [or] in the front of it, as the Characteriſtick note to diſtinguiſh it from the changes of the Engliſh Tranſlation, which, without that mark, are put in the ſame margent.

2. In the next place concerning the Tranſlation, The firſt part of my task was to prepare a new one out of the Original Greek, ſuch as ſeemed to me moſt agreeable, and on which my preſent underſtanding of the Text is founded; and to authorize or give confidence to ſuch an undertaking, I had in my proſpect not only the two Engliſh Tranſlat. the one in the Book of Liturgie, the other in the Bibles, but the examples alſo of many learned men, as well thoſe that live in the obedience of the Biſhop of Rome (whoſe great, I ſhall adde, * juſt value of the Vulgar, is notwithſtanding ſufficiently known) as others of the Reformed Churches: Such of both ſorts are Cardinal Cajetane, Mr Calvine, who tranſlate from the Original what they comment upon. So doth Oleaſter, and Mercer, and Forerius, and Eraſmus, and Malvenda a late Spaniſh Frier, in his ſeven Volumes of Comments on the Bible. I need not adde Junius, and Tremellius, and Beza, and Caſtellio, the Authors of the Spaniſh, the Italian, the French Tranſlations, and many more, who have all made uſe of that liberty. Yet conſidering my own great defects, the incompetencie and diſproportionableneſs of my ſtrength and few years conſideration to the length and weight of this work, and knowing that as oft and as farre as I differed in my ſenſe from other men, ſo often and in the ſame diſtance did other men differ from me; and having before my eyes, from the fate of other men's attempts in this kind, (which I could not induce my ſelf to approve of) great reaſons to forecaſt and foreſee mine own hazards, and (though not to diſcern, yet) to fear and ſuſpect many miſadventures therein, and ſo to paſſe that more early cenſure on my ſelf which from others, which ſaw not with my partial eyes, I had cauſe to look for; Upon theſe, I ſay, and ſome ſtore of other conſiderations, I made choiſe of the courſe which now is taken, in ſtead of obtruding a new, retaining the known Tranſlation of our Bibles, and (after the manner which was formerly uſed in our Bibles of the larger impreſſions, of noting ſome other rendrings in the Margents) annexing, where it ſeemed uſefull, another Tranſlation of ſome words or phraſes, with this * or †, or other like marks of reference to the words in our vulgar Text: And this is done alſo in the inner Margent. And where the matter is of any difficulty or weight, the reaſons of the change are more largely offered, and are to be found in the Annotations, referred to by ſome letter of the Alphabet, a. b. c. &c. ſet over the top of the word in the Text. But when the matter is more perſpicuous, or leſſe weighty, ſo that the bare affixing of the Greek words is a ſufficient reaſon for the rendring them, then that only courſe is taken, and the Greek being affix'd to the Engliſh in the margent, the Reader is left to judge of it, and to make that advantage of the change which he ſees cauſe for, without any prejudice to other rendrings.

* See the moſt excellent Paulus Fagius in his Præf. to the Targum of the Pentateuch.

3. Thirdly, for the Explication of thoſe difficulties in the phraſe, or ſenſe, which this Divine writing is ſtill capable of, two waies have been taken which appeared moſt profitable, firſt, by way of Paraphraſe, and ſecondly, of Annotation.

The

The first in compliance with the wants and desires of the most ignorant Reader, for whom it appeared expedient, whensoever any part of the Text seemed capable of clearer words then those wherein the Translation had expressed them, so often to affix to those obscurer words a perspicuous Paraphrase, which is accordingly done in the outer larger margent of every verse, and so much of the verse as is explained is included in one, if it be from the beginning of the verse, or, if not, in two brackets, after this manner [] so that the rest of the Text, which is excluded by the brackets, may coherently be read with the Paraphrase of that which is included, & the sense continue undisturbed by that means. This in the historical parts of this Book is contrived within the bounds of convenient brevity, & sometimes being wholly omitted, is yet supplied by some note of reference to any parallel place where it had been before explained: But in the Epistles, where the Apostles reasoning is close, or the transitions not very discernible, & in the Revelations, where the obscurities of the Prophetick style require a greater circuit of words to explicate them, there the Paraphrase is more enlarged; and so it is in like manner as oft as the length of that seemed sufficient to remove the difficulty or obscurity of the Text, without any farther trouble to the Reader. Besides this, whensoever any appearance of difficulty still remained, which had not been cleared by the former methods, the only reserve hath been by way of Annotation, affix'd in Columnes at the end of every Chapter, and referred by some letter to that part of the Text to which it belongs, and there answered by the same letter both in the Text and Margent. These Annotations are generally designed for the satisfaction and use of those who have some understanding of the Original languages of the Bible, and therefore the several words or phrases, so explicated, are in Greek set down in the margent of the Annotations, and all of them collected into an Index at the end of the Book, (and for the use of the English reader, the like Index of every word or phrase so explained is annex'd in that language also.) And by comparing of those Original languages, the Hebrew words or phrases with the Greek which are used to render them, by consulting the Glossaries of the best Grammarians, Hesychius and Phavorinus especially (who have a peculiar title to this business of explaining words in the New Testament) and by taking notice of some customes among the Jewes, and Grecians, and Romans, and by adding sometimes the testimonies of the Antients, when they appeared most usefull, and when my slender collections enabled me to annex them, and by some other means which the Reader will discern, (that especially of weighing the Context, and comparing one Scripture with another) and by the blessed assistance and influence of God's grace and providence upon all, this whole work hath been made up, and the difficulties of these Divine writings in some measure explain'd, with as much brevitie as the matter seemed capable of, purposely abstaining from all doctrinal conclusions and deductions and definitions on one side, and from all Postillary observations and accommodations, moral or mystical anagogies, on the other side (both because these latter are infinite, and because every man is allowed (within the bounds of sobriety) thus to apply Scripture for himself, as his several tast and Genius shall suggest to him) and generally contenting my self with the one primarie and literal sense of each place, unless when there appeared some uncertainty, and just reason of doubting betwixt two or more senses, which should be preferred. One thing only it will be needfull to adde here, that the lesse curious Reader, which desires only to understand and comprehend the plain sense of the Scripture, and without any more adoe to apply it to his souls health, shall not need to tire himself with the larger trouble of the Annotations, which of neceſſity contain many things above the underſtandings of the more ignorant. But for thoſe whoſe curioſitie ſhall demand the reaſons of any leſſe obvious interpretations, or ſuggeſt to them a willingneſſe of any farther ſearch, it will be neceſſary that the Annotations be read, as oft as there are any; and if at any time they ſeem to be wanting (in which particular I am not ſecure, but that much more may be fitly added in the opinion of other men then to me ſeemed neceſſary) I ſhall deſire that reſort be made to the known Commentators, eſpecially to the moſt excellent Hugo Grotius, from whom, as oft as I had nothing to adde, I purpoſely avoided to tranſcribe any thing.

It remaines that as I am abundantly convinced of the defects and miſcarriages of this work, ſo I beſeech and importune the charity of thoſe who have greater abilities, to contribute every one his talent toward the diſcovery of all the receſſes of this Sacred writing; that at length (though not yet) this Repoſitorie and Magazine of all ſaving knowledge and divine obſervation, being clearly underſtood, and reſcued from the many unſound reſolutions and poſitions which the gloſſes of men have obtruded on it, the reſult may be the compoſing of all diviſions and factions in the Church of Chriſt, the thinking and minding of the ſame things, the obliging and engaging of our ſouls to the purſuit of that One neceſſarie, the performance of an early, chearful, uniform, ſincere, conſtant obedience, and practice of all that Chriſt came from heaven to propoſe to us.

The hope and intuition of which, as it was the main deſigne projected in undertaking of this work, ſo it will be the Readers only juſtifiable aime in peruſing it, and the only qualification which will render him capable of reaping any fruit by the prayers and miniſterie of thoſe which attend on this very thing, among them, of

A POSTSCRIPT CONCERNING NEW LIGHT, OR, Divine Illumination.

§. 1. THAT which Jo. Beverovicius, a Phyſitian of Dort, thought neceſſary to be ſtated by the votes of the Learned of his age, before he would hope his profeſſion could find any conſiderable entertainment among men, viz. whether there were a fatal period of every man's life, beyond which it were not in the compaſs either of art, or ſobriety, or good managery to extend it, and as little in the power of diſeaſe, or intemperance, or even the plague or ſword to ſhorten it; hath been matter of ſome conſideration to me in this work. For as in the deſigning of his time and ſtudies it was prudently foreſeen by him that one ſuch popular error being imbibed, and improved as farre as it would fairly yield, muſt needs be the defaming of his medicaments, and the blaſting of his whole profeſſion, as one great impoſture; ſo after the pains and travail that this work hath coſt from the time of the firſt thought and Deſignation of it, (at the beginning of my entrance on the ſtudy of Divinity) to this preſent day of the Nativity of it, I cannot look on it without ſome apprehenſion, that it may run the ſame hazard which we read of the child in the Revelation, c. 12. to be devoured as ſoon as born, if one falſe pretenſion, which hath of late been ſomewhat proſperous in this Nation, and is utterly unreconcilable with the deſigned benefit of this or any the like work, be not timely diſcovered and removed.

§ 2. And the Pretenſion is this, That the underſtanding or interpreting the Word of God, or the knowing of his Will, is not imputable to the uſe of ordinary means (ſuch are the aſſiſtance of God's Spirit joyned with the uſe of learning, ſtudy, meditation, rational inference, collation of places, conſulting of the Original languages, and ancient Copies and Expoſitions of the Fathers of the Church, analogy of received doctrine; together with unbiaſs'd affections, and ſincere deſire of finding out the truth, and conſtant prayer for God's ſpecial bleſſing on, and cooperation with theſe and the like means) but either to the extraordinary gift of the Spirit in Propheſying, Preaching, and Expounding, or to Illumination, not Prophetical or ſimply Extraordinary, but ſuch as is thought to be promiſed to a new life, the work of the Spirit of God in the heart of every Saint of his, which conſequently ſuperſedes the uſe of all external Ordinances to ſuch, even of the written Word of God it ſelf contained in the Canon of the Scripture.

§ 3. Had this Pretenſion truth in it, I muſt confeſs my ſelf, who doe not pretend to any ſuch extraordinary gift or inſpiration, obliged to acknowledge the great impertinency of all this inſuing work, the perfect vanity of the whole deſign, and every part of it, and therefore am concerned (as far as the hazard of having laboured in vain) to examine the grounds, and manifeſt the falſeneſs of this pretenſion, and that in this method, and by theſe degrees.

§ 4. Firſt, by ſurveying the Scripture-grounds or proofs, which are producible in favour of it; Secondly, by ſetting down the form of ſound doctrine in this matter; Thirdly, by ſhewing the great neceſſity of oppoſing this, and adhering to the true doctrine. And theſe are likely to enlarge this Poſtſcript beyond the bounds that would regularly belong to it, but will carry their Apology along with them.

§ 5. The firſt ground or proof is fetch'd by the Pretenders from Joel 2. 28. cited and applied by S. Peter Act. 2. to the times of the Goſpel; It ſhall come to paſs afterward (or, * in the laſt daies) ſaith God, that I will pour out my Spirit, (or, † of my Spirit) upon all fleſh: and your ſons and your daughters ſhall propheſy, your old men ſhall dream dreams, your young men ſhall ſee viſions: And alſo upon the ſervants and upon the hand-maids in thoſe daies will I pour out my Spirit, (or, of my Spirit) and they ſhall propheſy. Whatſoever can be collected from this place to the benefit of the Pretenders, will receive a ſhort and clear anſwer by conſidering the time to which this prediction (and the completion of it) belonged, and that is expreſsly the laſt daies, in the notion wherein the Writers of the New Teſtament conſtantly uſe that phraſe; not for theſe daies of ours, ſo far advanced toward the end of the world (which yet no man knows how far diſtant it ſtill is) but for the time immediately preceding the deſtruction of the Jewiſh polity, their City and Temple. That this is it, appears not onely by the mention of Sion, and the deſtruction approaching it, in the beginning of that Chapter in Joel, which ſignifies it to belong to Jeruſalem that then was; but alſo by two farther undeceivable evidences: 1. By the mention of the wonders (immediately ſubjoyned) in the heavens, and the earth, &c. as forerunners of the great and terrible day of the Lord, the ſame that had been before deſcribed in Joel v. 2. &c. and applyed by Chriſt, in the very words, to this deſtruction of Jeruſalem, Mat. 24. 29, 30. 2dly, By the occaſion for which S. Peter produceth it, Act. 2. 14. the effuſion of the holy Ghoſt upon the Apoſtles, v. 2, 4. which, ſaith he, was no effect of drunkenneſs in them, but the very thing which was foretold by that place of Joel, before that great and notable day of the Lord, that was to fall upon that people to an utter deſtruction. This being a prediction of what ſhould come before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the completion whereof was ſo viſible and remarkable in that age, to which by the Prophet it was aſſigned (and this as a peculiar character of thoſe times wherein the Goſpel was to be firſt propagated by this means, & to which it had a propriety, as a laſt act of God's miraculous and gracious œconomy for the full conviction of this peoples ſin, before they were deſtroyed) it muſt needs be impertinently and fallaciouſly applied to any men or women, old or young, of this age, ſo diſtant from that to which it belonged, and ſo well provided for by the ordinary means, the ſetled office of Miniſtery in Chriſt's Church, as to have no ſuch need of extraordinary.

of thoſe gifts, is given, or deſigned by God, for the benefit or advantage of the Church. And ſo this is of no force for the Enthuſiaſt, nor appliable to any but thoſe who were thus extraordinarily endow'd by the Spirits deſcending upon them, which was a priviledge of that age, for the planting of the Church, and not to be hoped for (nor without ſacriledge pretended to) in any other.

§ 7. A third proof is taken from Joh. 6. 45. out of Iſa. 54. 13. where it is foretold of the Chriſtians, that they ſhall be all taught of God. For the underſtanding of the full importance of this Text, two frequent known Idiomes of the Sacred ſtyle muſt be obſerved; 1. That Verbs of knowing or underſtanding (ſuch is learning or teaching) do ordinarily include the will or affections alſo, ſo as to know God, is to obey and ſerve him; 2dly, That Verbs Active (ſee Note on 1 Theſſ. 3. a.) and Paſſive (ſee Note on Mat. 11. b.) but eſpecially Adjectives participial, do frequently include a real paſſion, or an effect wrought in the ſubject of the paſſion. And by the virtue of theſe two obſervations (frequently exemplified in the Annotations) the phraſe διδακτοὶ Θεοῦ, taught of God, will ſignifie thoſe that by διδακτοὶ Θεοῦ the attractions of his prevenient grace yielded to and made uſe of by them, are perſwaded to be his followers or diſciples, and ſo belongs not at all to the matter to which it is applied by the Advocates of New Light, (ſee Note on Mat. 15. d.) That this not onely may be, (which is ſufficient to repel the force of the argument drawn from hence) but certainly is the entire importance of this place, appears by the Context in the Evangeliſt. 1. By the Antecedents, No man, ſaith Chriſt v. 44. can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me draw him, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day: where the Father's drawing, and in the ſame ſenſe, the Father's giving to Chriſt v. 39. denotes this effect of the preventing grace of God, received in the humble pliable heart, and that as neceſſary to the undertaking the faith of Chriſt, or diſcipleſhip. And to this is this teſtimony out of Iſaiah applied, It is written in the Prophets, They ſhall be all taught of God, that is, all that ſincerely come to Chriſt, that embrace the Chriſtian religion, are ſuch as were formerly ſpoken of, drawn by God, given to Chriſt by God, taught of God, by his prevenient grace ſo fitted and prepared that they follow Chriſt, become his Proſelytes and Diſciples when he is propoſed to them. 2dly, By the Conſequents, Every one therefore that hath heard and learned of the Father, cometh unto me: where, as the coming unto me is all one with the coming unto me, that is, unto Chriſt, v. 44. ſo they had heard and learned of the Father, being all one with the taught of God, muſt needs be they on whom the effect of that hearing and divine doctrine was wrought, that is, thoſe who were obedient to God's grace, diſpoſing and fitting them with ſuch a temper that they ſhould be ready and willing to be Chriſt's Diſciples (ſee Note on John 6. d.) 3dly, By the importance of the Prophecy from whence 'tis cited, Iſa. 54. 13. where in a Prophecy of the Chriſtian Church, (the flouriſhing condition thereof deſcribed v. 11, 12.) two things are affirmed of the children, that is, members thereof; 1. their obedience to God, they ſhall be taught of the Lord, they ſhall be diſciples, followers, ſervants of God; and 2dly, their proſperous ſtate, and great ſhall be their peace; and thoſe joyned in one, v. 14. In righteouſneſs ſhalt thou be eſtabliſhed, where, as eſtabliſhment (farther expreſs'd by ſecurity from oppreſſion) is all one with their great peace, ſo in all reaſon is their righteouſneſs equipollent with their being taught of God. And ſo ſtill according to all the imaginable waies of judging, this which we have given is the importance of that phraſe, and not that which is pretended from it. Nay, if the Text be again obſerved, it would be a foul abſurdity that would be conſequent to that interpretation of it, that God the Father ſhould be ſaid thus immediately to teach them, who upon being ſo taught are ſaid to come to Chriſt: For 'tis certain Chriſt was ſet forth by God as the teacher of his will, and that was the end of God's drawing any man to Chriſt, that he might receive the full knowledge of his will from thence, which it were impertinent and even impoſſible for him to doe, who were firſt taught by God in this ſenſe. (Of another notion of the word θεοδίδακτοι, a little varied from this, ſee 1. Theſſ. 4. c.)

§ 8. A fourth ground is fetch'd from the purport of the New Covenant, ſet down Heb. 8. 11. out of Jer. 31. 34. They ſhall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, ſaying, Know the Lord; for they ſhall all know me from the leaſt to the greateſt. But theſe words can no way belong to this matter, as will appear if it be but conſidered that that which is here promiſed is ſomewhat wherein the ſtate of the Goſpel is oppoſed to that of the Law, which, if the not teaching be literally underſtood, it cannot be. For as in the Law Moſes taught God's will unto the people, and after him thoſe that ſate in Moſes chair, ſo Chriſt alſo taught it under the Goſpel, and the Apoſtles after him; which could not be, unleſs others were taught and inſtructed by them. And therefore that cannot be the ſenſe of it. The words indeed belong to a matter very diſtant: They are a deſcription of Chriſt's plain, eaſie, and gracious yoke (Mat. 11. 30.) as that is ſet out by the oppoſition to the obſcure, imperfect, more burthenſome, and leſs agreeable yoke of the Moſaical performances, v. 8. To the bare plainneſs and perſpicuouſneſs of the Evangelical precepts it is applied by S. Chryſoſtome, as alſo is that of being taught of God (ſee T. v. p. 244. l. 31.) and to that ſure it belongs, but withall to theſe other excellencies thereof, over and above the Moſaical œconomie. There were in that many πτωχὰ στοιχεῖα beggerly elements for beginners, many things improveable and capable of being heightned, and changed to the better by Chriſts reformation; it was not ἄμεμπτον faultleſs, v. 7. and therefore when God deſigns to reform it, he doth it μεμφόμενος, v. 8. complaining of the defects of it, and incompetency toward the end. And then this New Covenant, which was to be introduced in ſtead of it, is ſet off and illuſtrated by the oppoſition to it, But this is the Covenant which I will make with the houſe of Iſrael after thoſe daies, or in the latter daies, that is, at the coming of the Meſſias, ſaith the Lord, &c. which as it is evidently a notation of the Second Covenant betwixt God and the whole Chriſtian Church, and ſo ſufficiently removed from this of New Light, ſo can it not be applied to any peculiar gift of Prophecy, of Preaching, &c. appropriated to ſome men, but muſt have ſuch a notation as will be common to the whole houſe of Iſrael in the Antitype, that is, to all Chriſtian profeſſors, not only the Saints of God; for with all ſuch is the Covenant made in this gracious manner (though many of them doe not perform their parts, the condition of it) for otherwiſe they could not be ſaid to count the blood of it an unholy thing, Heb. 10. 29. The plain meaning of the words is, that it is a moſt gracious Covenant that God now meant to make with Chriſtians; and the graciouſneſs of it was to conſiſt not only in the abundant mercy and pardon for ſin, which there would be afforded, v. 12. above what the Moſaical purgations and other obſervances could pretend to, but eſpecially in the agreeableneſs of the precepts to the mind of man, to the humane rational ſoul: there ſhould be no need of taking ſuch pains (as among the Jews was taken) to inſtruct men in the multitude of obſervances required of them, which yet under Moſes was abſolutely neceſſary, becauſe the things commanded were ſuch as, unleſs they had been known to be commanded by a Divine Law-giver, and to that end frequently inculcated to that people, no man would have diſcerned himſelf obliged to perform; but the duties now required by God of inward purity (not of external circumciſion and purifications) were of their own nature able to approve themſelves to a rational creature, as moſt excellent and moſt eligible, written as it were in every mans own heart, if he would be patient to conſult them there. And then as this can no way be applied to New Light, ſave as that ſignifies the light which Chriſt brought with him when he came into the world to inlighten every man, viz. the conſtant eſtabliſh'd duties of Chriſtian life univerſally revealed by Chriſt's preaching and promulgating this Second Covenant; ſo it belongs not to any extraordinary way of revealing or expounding this Covenant, or any part or branch thereof (there being no need of that after Chriſt had ſo plainly revealed it, and commanded his Apoſtles to preach it over the world) but onely to the agreeableneſs (to the humane ſoul) of that which was already revealed, the matter of this Covenant. The ſame alſo is the importance of the former words, v. 10. I will give my laws into their minds, and I will write them on their hearts, that is, The Laws which ſhall now be given the Chriſtian Church, as God's Covenant with them, ſhall be laws of ſpiritual internal obedience, for the regulating and ſubduing and mortifying of their affections, impreſſed and inſcribed on their hearts (which muſt now be kept pure, as the fountain from which all actions ſpring) whereas the former Moſaical ordinances reached onely to the fleſh, or outward members, and by that means did not conduce much either to inward or outward purity of the heart or actions.

§ 9. Another ſort of places there are which more immediately belong to the ſecond branch of the pretenſion (and that which is more frequently preſſed) the privilege that the Saints have, by being ſuch, of underſtanding much more of the Will of God then any other can pretend to doe. And a firſt ground is that of Joh. 7. 17. If any man will doe his, that is God's, will, he ſhall know, &c. How little this place doth favour the pretenders of New light, will preſently appear, 1. By conſidering what it is that here it is ſaid that the pious man, or the doer of his Fathers will, ſhall know, viz. whether the doctrine which Chriſt preacheth be of God or no. This was not matter of new Revelation, but the doctrine which Chriſt had already revealed and publiſhed to the world, and ſo could want no New light to make it known; nay for the paſſing judgment of that doctrine thus revealed by Chriſt, whether it were agreeable to the Will, and ſent by the appointment of the Father, he had given them ſufficient means to proceed and conclude regularly, there was no need of any extraordinary diſcerning Spirit, the Miracles which he did in the preſence of all, and the Voice from heaven at his Baptiſme, gave full authority to all that he ſaid, ſaid, were matter of abundant conviction to all pious men, that it was the good pleaſure of God which he now taught, and there was nothing more wanting to beget belief, but hearts duly qualified with piety and humility, which was neceſſary to render them a ſubactum ſolum, a ſoil in which good ſeed being skilfully ſown might take root and bring forth plentifully. And that is the importance of the former part of the verſe, Ἐάν τις θέλῃ τὸ θέλημά μου ποιεῖν, if any man will, or take pleaſure, (ſee *Mat.*27. Note g.) to doe his will; the character of the pious man, of that preparation of the heart which was required of fit men to a chearful entertainment of Chriſt's doctrine, when it was already convincingly revealed to them. Which indeed is but proportionable to what * Hierocles and the Philoſophers were wont to ſay of the neceſſitie of curing and purging the Eye, before it would be able to behold a bright or illuſtrious object; meaning the depoſiting of prejudices, and prepoſſeſſions, and paſſions, and prides, but eſpecially of all habits of ſin, which, while they are upon the ſoul, are the blinding of it, permit not practical truths, (eſpecially thoſe of an higher fourm, ſuch as thoſe of Chriſt's requiring the purity of the Eye and Heart) to have any admiſſion with them: according to that of Ariſtotle, that as thoſe which are of raw and unruly affections, when they are taught Moral precepts, λέγουσιν, ὁ πυθόμενοι, ſay them by road, but believe not a word of them; ſo the habit and cuſtome of any vice is φθαρτικὴ ἀρχῶν corruptive of principles, makes men begin to queſtion, or not to underſtand thoſe practical dictates which humane nature and common notions had furniſhed them with. This advantage indeed (very conſiderable) toward the underſtanding of truths already revealed Humility and Piety hath above Pride and Impiety: but as thoſe that take themſelves to be the onely Saints of the earth, have but a weak claim to one of theſe, (and perhaps as weak to the other, which is never ſeated but in an humble breaſt;) ſo if they had the beſt claim of any men now in the world, it would not raiſe or intitle them to the gift of Revelation, any more then of Tongues and Miracles; of New light, then of ſpeaking Arabick, removing mountains, or foretelling things to come.

* Praef. Com. in Carm. aur.

§ 10. Two other places there are in the next chapter Joh. 8. which ſound as much for the intereſt of the Pretenders, and ſignifie as little, v. 31, 32. If ye continue in my word, &c. ye ſhall know the truth, and the truth ſhall make you free. But that muſt be expounded by another idiome of the Sacred dialect (taken notice of and exemplified Mat. 9. Note d.) when one thing onely being deſigned to be ſaid, another is premiſed preparative to it. And ſo here to them that continue in Chriſt's word, that is, in conſtant obedience to it, the promiſe is, that the truth ſhall make them free, that is, that the doctrine of Chriſt being thus continued in, ſhall procure them a moſt valuable freedome. To which continuing in Chriſt's word, the receiving the knowledge of the truth being preparative, it is accordingly ſet down before it, but not as part of the promiſe, being neceſſarily preſuppoſed in the condition; Chriſt's word, v. 31. and the truth being all one, and the knowing it pre-required to continuing in it. However nothing of New light can poſſibly be intimated by this knowing the truth; but onely that which by Chriſt's preaching was made known unto them.

Γνῶσις ἀλήθειας

§ 11. The ſecond place in that chapter is v. 43. Why doe you not underſtand my ſpeech? Even becauſe you cannot hear my word. But that hath no more aſpect on this matter then the former had: 'Tis only the rendring an account of the reaſon, why Chriſt's expreſſions ſeemed ſtrange unto them, why they did not acquieſce in & believe all he ſaid unto them, but ſtill diſputed againſt it; viz. the diſagreeableneſs of his doctrine to their carnal humors and fancies, their impatience of ſuch ſevere precepts as he came to propoſe to them.

Λαλιὰν ἐμὴν γινώσκετε

§ 12. Another ground is fetch'd from 1 Cor. 2. in many verſes thereof, (which are ſufficiently cleared and vindicated to their proper ſenſe by the ſeveral Paraphraſes upon them) but eſpecially v. 15. He that is ſpiritual judgeth all things, &c. But how little that belongs to the juſtifying this claim, will ſoon be diſcerned by inquiring who is the ὁ Πνευματικὸς or ſpiritual there; without queſtion ſuch an one as is ſaid to have received the Spirit which is of God, v. 12. Such were the Apoſtles and others of that time, which by the deſcent of the holy Ghoſt were taught and inſtructed in all things which belonged to their office to reveal to the world, to whom they had Commiſſion to preach. And of ſuch an one there is no queſtion but that he ἀνακρίνει πάντα, diſcerneth all things, comes to the knowledge of all thoſe parts of God's will which have before been kept cloſe with God, as myſteries which the Angels knew nothing of, but are now by Chriſt and his Spirit (which, ſaith he, ſhould teach them all things) convincingly made known to have been the ſubject of the antient prophecies. And the arguments that ſuch an one uſeth to convince others being not fetch'd from humane reaſon, or the Artiſt's Topicks of probation, but only from proofs afforded by this Spirit of God, Miracles, gifts of Tongues, Voices from heaven, old Prophecies, &c. it therefore follows, that as he by theſe means comes to know theſe myſteries,

Ἀνακρίνει πάντα

Ψυχικὸς so no worldly wiſe man, Philoſopher or the like, called the ψυχικὸς, animal man, before, is qualified to argue or diſpute againſt him. And ſo this hath no propriety or peculiarity of aſpect on theſe future times, wherein as that which was revealed to thoſe Apoſtles is ſufficiently communicated to us by ordinary means, in the writings of the Scripture, ſo there can be no neceſſity or uſe of extraordinary.

§ 13. Others are pleaſed to argue from 1 Joh. 3. 24. Hereby know we that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us. But that will ſoon vaniſh, if we obſerve the notion Πνεῦμα ἅγιον of πνεῦμα Spirit, (enlarged on in Note on Luk. 9. e.) in many places of the New Teſtament, for the temper abſolutely, or more ſtrictly a gracious, pious temper, or diſpoſition of minde; and ſo the Spirit which he hath given us may there very commodiouſly ſignifie that gratious charitable diſpoſition, which being ſo eminently in Chriſt, is by his example and his precepts recommended, and by our continuing in his diſcipleſhip communicated to us, and wrought in us. The underſtanding it ſo in that place is very agreeable to the former part of the verſe, he that keepeth his commandements, dwelleth in him, and he in him, that is, every obedient ſervant of his continueth in Chriſt, that is, adhereth to Chriſt, and Chriſt continueth in him, and ſo he receiveth all gracious influences from him, particularly that of charity or loving his fellow-Chriſtians, as Chriſt gave us Commandment, v. 23. that ſpecial piece of Chriſtian temper, ſo largly exemplified, and ſo ſtrictly required by Chriſt of all his Diſciples. And ſo again we ſee the phraſe uſed, c. 4. 13. By this we know that we abide in him, and he in us, becauſe he hath given us of his Spirit. The ground of that ſpeech is laid v. 12. If we love one another, God abideth in us, and his love is perfected in us; that is, our charity to others is an evidence of our continuing to receive divine infuſions and influences from God (for love or charity is ſuch) and that a proof, that we have tranſcribed & imitated that love which he hath exemplified to us: for this is meant by his love being perfected in us, as his ſufferings are filled up and perfected in us when they are imitated by us, when we ſuffer for well-doing, as he did; the end of a copie or pattern being this, that we ſhould tranſcribe it, and ſo the taking it out, imitating it, as we ought to do, the only way of giving it its due perfection. And ſo that whole verſe is but a Paraphraſe on that ſpeech of Chriſt's, By this ſhall all men know that ye are my diſciples, if ye love one another, Chriſt bringing his ſcholars and followers up in the practice of this duty beyond all others. And upon this is built that which immediately follows, and ſo it muſt be interpreted by it, Ὅτι By this we know that we abide in him, and he in us, ὅτι becauſe, or that, he hath given us of his Spirit; that is, this is a ſure κριτήριον by which we may conclude our living like diſciples of his, our not having forſaken him, as other uncharitable Gnoſtick hereticks appear to have done, and ſo likewiſe his continuing to communicate his influences to us, as to diſciples he is wont, that we are like him in this ſpecial grace of charity, the quality that is ſo remarkable in him. And ſo this is very remote from the Enthuſiaſt's pretenſions.

§ 14. One eſpecial reſerve there is ſtill behinde from 1 John 2. 20. Ye have an unction Χρῖσμα ἔχετε ἀπὸ τοῦ ἁγίου from the holy One, and ye know all things, and v. 27. in words not much varied, and to the ſame ſenſe, The anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: But as the ſame anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, remain in him ſtill, or, as we read, ye ſhall abide in him. Μενεῖτε ἐν αὐτῷ That the full meaning of the Unction's teaching or having taught them all things, is their having been inſtructed by thoſe on whom the holy Ghoſt (which was to teach them all things) had deſcended, and confirmed by the gift of miracles, abiding at that time in their Churches, hath been ſhewed at large Note on Act. 10. d. and that takes away all the Pretenders title from this place. But beſide this, it is evident by the Context, what it was that this Unction was ſaid to teach them, viz. that Jeſus was the Chriſt, contrary to Ἀντίχριστοι the Gnoſtick hereticks, v. 18. which denyed it, and are therefore called Ἀντίχριστοι Antichriſts: They, ſaith he, v. 19. went out from us, theſe hereticks that denyed Jeſus to be Chriſt; But ye have an unction, &c. and ye know all things (the all things here being, according to the ordinary Scripture-ſtyle, to be interpreted only of all thoſe things which are there ſpoken of.) Ye have certain and infallible evidences that Jeſus is the Chriſt. From whence he immediately concludes again, that they that have denyed this are lyars and Antichriſts, v. 22. and puts them in minde of that which had firſt been taught them and ſufficiently evidenced unto them from the beginning of the Goſpels being preached unto them, v. 24. in oppoſition to theſe falſe doctrines which had ſince been infuſed amongſt them, v. 26. to whom again he oppoſeth the unction, v. 27. And ſo ſtill here is nothing in the leaſt degree favourable to the pretenſions of the Enthuſiaſt.

§ 15. Some other places I find to be mention'd, which are yet farther removed from this matter, for which they are pretended, as Gal. 3. 14. that we might receive the promiſe of the Spirit, through faith. What is meant there by the promiſe of the Spirit, that is, the Spirit promiſed his diſciples by Chriſt at his parting from the world, appears at the beginning of that chap. v. 2, 3. viz. the powers of working Miracles, &c. and ſo 'tis interpreted v. 5. He therefore that miniſtreth to you the Spirit, & worketh miracles among you. And this may fitly be ſaid to be received through faith, both as that is oppoſed to the Moſaical œconomie, under which there were not then thoſe powers in the Church of the Jews, as it is ſaid v. 2. Received ye the Spirit by the works of the Law, or by the hearing of faith? and according to Chriſts promiſe to believers, Theſe ſigns ſhall follow them that believe; in my name they ſhall caſt out devils, &c. Mar. 16. 17. And ſo this place belonging to thoſe miraculous operations of the Spirit in thoſe times uſefull for the erecting of a Church, can no more be applicable to believers in theſe times, then the ſpeaking of Tongues, and gifts of Healing, &c. which are not imagined by theſe Pretenders to belong to them by force of this place.

§ 16. Somewhat different from this is that other of Epheſ. 1. 17. (and parallel to that Col. 1. 9.) that the Father of glory would give you the Spirit of wiſdome and revelation in the knowledge of him, the eyes of your underſtanding being enlightned, &c. In this place there is little of difficulty, ſave that ἐν ἐπιγνώσει αὐτοῦ is not rightly interpreted in the knowledge of him, whereas it ſhould be, to the acknowledgment of him, as the end of the wiſdome and revelation, not the matter of it. That it is ſo, appears by the following words, The eyes of your underſtanding being enlightned, that ye may know——Where as the enlightning of their underſtandings is anſwerable to the Spirit of wiſdome and revelation, ſo the phraſe, that ye may know, is anſwerable to ἐν ἐπιγνώσει, and ſo renders ἐν (as it is ordinarly uſed for εἰς) to, not in the knowing, or acknowledging of him. Which being premiſed, the plain meaning of the words is, that the Apoſtle having heard of the Epheſians proficiency in the faith of Chriſt, praies that they may come to farther growth yet, even to all abundance of all ſorts of Chriſtian knowledge, underſtanding the higheſt ſpiritual truths, called wiſdome, and interpreting of Prophecies of the Old Teſtament, called Revelation, and both theſe as extraordinary (χαρίσματα) gifts at that time, and ſo called the Spirit of wiſdome and revelation; and this for this end, that Chriſt might be fully diſcern'd, and the truth of his doctrine acknowledged, by this means; in the ſame manner as ch. 4. 11. it is ſaid of Chriſt, that he gave ſome Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Evangeliſts, ſome Paſtors and teachers, (each of theſe furniſhed with extraordinary gifts, ſuch as here are named) for the building of the body of Chriſt (that is, his Church) untill we come to the unity of the faith and acknowledgment of the Son of God——that ye be no more toſt, &c. All which ſhews the high, extraordinary waies that were then afforded by God, by the deſcent of the Spirit, (for the building of a Church, and confirming the faith of weaklings againſt the invaſion of hereticks, which fell off, and denied Chriſt) and were here by the Apoſtle pray'd for to the Church of the Epheſians, but cannot be extended as a promiſe to the Enthuſiaſt now, that ſuch gifts ſhall be, or are afforded him.

§ 17. Beſide theſe of the New Teſtament, other places are produced out of the Old, as from Pſal. 25. 9. The meek will he teach his way, and v. 12. What man is he that feareth the Lord? him ſhall he teach in the way that he ſhall chuſe, and v. 14. The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew them his covenant. But all theſe belong to a matter very diſtant from what the Enthuſiaſt pretends, viz. the benefit and advantage that accrues to all thoſe that ſincerely and diligently obſerve the laws of God. The meek v. 9. are certainly the obedient, and ſo the man that feareth the Lord, v. 12, 14. and for the promiſes that belong to ſuch, they are all to the ſame purpoſe, under ſeveral expreſſions, God will teach them his way, and teach them in the way that he ſhall chuſe, that is, direct and aſſiſt them in doing that which ſhall be acceptable in his ſight (not make known his laws of life by way of Revelation to them, for they were certainly made known to them already, and ſo here 'tis ſuppoſed, for otherwiſe how can they be ſaid to keep them, v. 10?) and then ſhew them his covenant, and communicate his ſecret to them, that is, afford them (in the practice of piety and vertue) thoſe taſts of the ſweetneſs of it beyond all other courſes, that they ſhall by experience find how excellent and (for it ſelf, abſtracted from the eternal reward) how deſirable a thing it is to follow Gods waies, and not our own corrupt appetites. This muſt needs be the meaning of ſhewing them his covenant, that covenant whereby he promiſeth all good things to them upon their obedience; which Covenant was already made known to them, and could no otherwiſe now be ſhewed them, but by their diſcerning the graciouſneſs of it. And for the ſecret of the Lord, that is this ſweetneſs which reſults from the obeying his precepts, like that of Manna from heaven (called hidden Manna) agreeable to every man's taſt, ſavourie to every rational ſoul. That this is the full meaning of it, appears by v. 10. where all the paths of the Lord (thoſe wherein he is ſaid to guide and teach the meek, v. 9.) are ſaid to be mercy and truth, that is made up of goodneſs in the higheſt degree (ſo ſaith Kimchi of חסד mercy, that it is יתרון הטובה the abundance, or excellence, of goodneſs) and of agreeableneſs to the underſtanding or upper Soul of a man (to the common impreſſions that are in him) to ſuch as keep his Covenant and his teſtimonies, that is, obſerve and practiſe them, and thereby have that excellencie experimented to them, which wicked men, which never come to practiſe and trie what it is to doe as God directs, never apprehend to be in it. To this purpoſe there are infinite teſtimonies in this book of the Pſalms, Pſal. 19. 9, 10. The judgments of the Lord are more to be deſired then Gold, yea then much fine Gold, ſweeter alſo then honey and the honey-comb: moreover by them is thy ſervant taught, and in keeping of them there is great reward. Where 'tis manifeſt what the judgments are, the commands and rules of life, ſuch as are to be kept or obſerved; and all benefits and pleaſures and advantages, preſent and future, are the conſtant reſult and reward of that obſervance. So again v. 7. The law of the Lord is perfect (hath all kind of goodneſs in it, ſo the Hebrew ſignifies, and the Greek τελεῖον) converting or reſtoring the ſoul, bringing the man to himſelf again, from that degenerous condition of the ſinner (ſo unworthy of the rational creature, that it renders him a very fool and unreaſonable) to that honourable ſtate of piety and vertue, and ſo making wiſe the ſimple, changing the Sinner-fool into the Scripture-wiſe, that is, pious, vertuous man. To which purpoſe ſee the 13. part of Pſal. 119. And to the confirming this interpretation of this and the like places, I ſhall uſe one argument taken ab abſurdo, from the abſurdity which would follow from making them inſtrumental to the Enthuſiaſts claims: For it is well known that God revealed his Will in thoſe daies by Prophets particularly called, and deſigned, and commiſſionated to that purpoſe; and if any thing was to be done, which had not been ſufficiently declared by the ſtanding known Laws, or when thoſe had been remarkably deſpiſed and neglected, a man of God was choſen and ſent from heaven with ſuch new Revelations. Which was no way agreeable to, or reconcilable with this other method, of God's revealing all his ſecrets to every pious, obedient ſervant of his; for then there would have been no need of any other.

§ 18. Of the ſame nature with theſe are thoſe others that are produced out of the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 111. 10. A good underſtanding have all they that doe his commandements (where yet our margent reads farre otherwiſe, and ſo as takes away all appearance of force from it, Good ſucceſs have they, &c.) Pſal. 119. 18. Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law; and ſo Prov. 2. 7. God layeth up ſound wiſdome for the righteous, and ch. 3. 32. Gods ſecret is with the righteous; all perfectly agreeable to the former Texts, and vindicated from the Enthuſiaſts miſpriſions by the interpretations that have been affixed to them. As for that of Prov. 28. 5. They that ſeek the Lord underſtand all things, it muſt be explain'd by the Context, not to belong to all things indefinitely, but, as hath been ſaid, and as it is ordinary in the Scripture-ſtyle (ſee 1 Cor. 13. 7) to all the things that are there ſpoken of, that is, the judgments of God in the former part of the verſe, his wiſe and juſt proceedings againſt the wicked, and his rewarding of piety, ſo that no man ſhall have any reaſon (to call the proud happy) to praiſe the wicked, v. 4. And ſo the plain meaning of the place is, that whatever the Atheiſtical ſinner thinks of God's neglecting the government of the world, from whence he takes courage and confidence to ſin, yet the truly pious man is able to contend with, v. 4. and confute him, he finds experimentally the reward of the righteous, and knows that which the Atheiſt will not acknowledge, that there is a God that judgeth the earth: and ſo that is nothing to the purpoſe to which it is produced by the Pretenders.

§ 19. And as little that of the Prophet, Iſa. 35. 8. of the high way, the way of holineſs, and the wayfaring men, though fools, ſhall not erre therein. For (beſides that that Prophecie might have a completion in Iſrael, and muſt not needs be extended any farther then to what it primarily belonged) this meaning of it, as figuratively it is applicable to the Chriſtian Church, is moſt obvious, that the duties by God required of us are ſo plain and evident, that he that ſets himſelf to the practice of them, be he of never ſo ſlow an underſtanding, cannot chuſe but know them: Or elſe that the condition of the Covenant now required of us under Chriſt, is not ſuch, as that any man through weakneſs, or ignorance, or involuntary error, ſhould ever miſcarry, or loſe his part of the promiſe of that Covenant; onely deliberate ſins againſt Grace and againſt Knowledge are imputed to any man to his ruine.

§ 20. So for the promiſe of putting a new Spirit in them, Ezech. 11. 19. that is interpreted evidently by the latter end of the verſe, I will give them an heart of fleſh, that is, give them that meaſure of my grace which ſhall work a reformation in them, that they walk in my ſtatutes and keep my ordinances, as it follows v. 20.

§ 21. Laſtly, for that of Hag. 2. 5. My Spirit remaineth with you, 'tis evident that God's power, and mighty work of deliverance, ſuch as had been ſhewn in reſcuing the Iſraelites out of Ægypt, is the thing there meant by my Spirit; for thus the words are introduced (being ſpoken of the re-edifying of the Temple) According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Ægypt, ſo my Spirit remaineth among you: and therefore as an effect of confidence in that power, it follows, Fear ye not; which can no way pertain to the pretenſions of the Enthuſiaſt.

§ 22. Having taken this view of the chiefeſt of thoſe places which have been deemed favourable to the pretenders of New light, and diſcovered the miſtakes of them, I proceed to the ſecond branch of my method, the ſetting down the form of ſound doctrine in this matter, and that will be moſt fitly done by theſe ſteps and degrees.

§ 23. 1. That all knowledge of God's will is confeſſedly (as every good gift) from God; communicated by thoſe means and degrees which God hath been pleaſed to chuſe, the light of Nature, the Revelations, and Oracles and Voices from heaven to the Fathers, and at laſt by his own Son Jeſus Chriſt, and his Apoſtles commiſſionated by him; which being the laſt method or way of Revelation which we have reaſon to expect, our whole duty is hereby reſolved to be contained and ſet down in thoſe laws of the Old, but eſpecially of the New Teſtament, which make up the Chriſtian Canon or Rule.

§ 24. 2dly, That any farther light, then that which is thus afforded us, cannot in any reaſon be pretended to by any, or ſo as may ſatisfie himſelf or others, unleſs it may appear by means ſufficient to convince a rational man, 1. in general, that it is agreeable to the œconomie under the Goſpel, that any one, after Chriſt and his Apoſtles, and others of that firſt age extraordinarily endowed, ſhould to the end of the world be called to the office of a Prophet, as that ſignifies one that is ſent to make known de novo, to publiſh God's truth or will unto men: and 2. that he particularly is ſuch a Prophet, and ſo ſent, and by authentick teſtification of Divine miracles, or of mighty works, which neither man nor devil can work without the aſſiſtance of an omnipotent power, demonſtrated and evidenced to be ſo.

§ 25. 3dly, That if it ſhould now be affirmed, that any man is, or ſince the Apoſtles age hath been, thus endowed, it would be under a very ſtrong prejudice from the contrary opinion of the whole Church of God for 15. Centuries, who having received the Books of the Old and New Teſtament for the one conſtant durable Canon of Faith, muſt be ſuppoſed to reſolve, that nothing elſe ſhall ever be added to that Canon, that is, no new Revelations ſhall ever be made, (for if they ſhould, our Faith muſt be regulated by them as well as by any part of God's word already received:) and therefore in all reaſon this affirmation muſt be teſtified by arguments or proofs fit to out-ballance ſo great an authority, which cannot be by any one mans affirmation of himſelf, whoſe teſtimony in this matter is of no validity, and yet 'tis evident that there are no other.

§ 26. 4thly, That the underſtanding the word of God contain'd in the Scripture, is no work of extraordinary illumination, but muſt be attained by the ſame means, or the like, by which other writings of men are expounded, and no otherwiſe. In other writings ſome things are ſo plain, that by the ſtrength of common reaſon any man that is maſter of that, and underſtands the language wherein they are written, may underſtand them; others have ſuch difficulties in them, ariſing either from the conciſeneſs or length of ſtyle, or ſublimity of the matter of the diſcourſe, or intermixture of old forgotten cuſtomes, &c. that there will be need of proper helps in each of theſe to overcome the ſeveral difficulties. And ſo it is in the underſtanding of Scripture; thoſe places that are plain want no farther illuminating either of the medium or of the eye, to diſcern or underſtand the meaning of them: and for the ſearching to the bottome of the greater depths, 'tis as certain that the uſe of humane means doth ordinarily aſſiſt and conduct us ſucceſsfully (as obſervation of the uſage of the word or phraſe in other places, conſidering the cuſtomes of the people, the ſcope of the writer, and many the like;) and when it doth not ſo, 'tis viſible that it is from my want of ſuch aſſiſtances, which when I after come to meet with, I get through the difficulty, and by growth in knowledge and obſervation doe come as perfectly to underſtand the more abſtruſe paſſage to day, as I did the more perſpicuous yeſterday. And indeed if extraordinary illumination were required to underſtand the more difficult places of Scripture, it could not be denied to be neceſſary to all the moſt eaſie alſo (It being evident that the plaineſt precept in the original language, which alone is the word of God, is as inexplicable by him that underſtands not Greek or Hebrew, as the cloſeſt ſubtileſt arguings in

S. Paul's Epistle) and so no man should be acknowledged to understand any part of God's will, but the Saint that knows all of it: a supposition most evidently contrary to those many Texts of Scripture, which suppose men to know the will of God, which they doe not practise.

§ 27. 5thly, It is most true that there is need of the concurrence of God's assistance and blessing, his grace and his providence to the use of all ordinary means to render, them successfull to us, and so there is need of God's illuminating Spirit to assist our weak eyes, our dark faculties. But then this Illumination is but that which is annexed to the use of the means, and not that which works without them; and this act of his providence is a suggesting of means which had not otherwise been thought of, had not God by his good hand directed to them, which he doth not by any inspiration, but by offering of occasions, which humane industrie is left to improve, and if it doe not, receives no benefit by them. And so still this is the old light which hath commonly been afforded the diligent, no new illumination for the Enthusiast. And of this sort of illumination three things are observable; 1. That it is not discernible to be such in the principle, but onely in the fruits of it: 'tis not (nor can it without miracle be) known by any, that it is divine illumination, nor consequently that it is true (the suggestions of my own fancy, nay of the devil, may be mistaken for it;) but only by the agreeableness of it with those truths which are already revealed from God, and that are by other evidences then that of the private Spirit known to be so revealed: nay that agreeableness with Divine is not alwaies sufficient to define it an Illumination; for my fansie may and doth sometimes suggest truth, and the devil that knows much truth may, when 'tis not his intereſt to lie, help men to the knowledge of truth, and so in the Oracle he often did. However that truth is again to be examined by humane, rational means, not by the Spirit; for if it were, that second sentence or judgment of the Spirit would again want other means to discern whether that were a true Spirit or no. 2dly, That those Illuminations come not so irresistibly, but that they may be opposed by humane interpositions, prejudices, prepossessions, pride, opinionating, &c. and so still it will be at every turn uncertain, whether they be thus resisted or no, and till that be revealed by some new light also, it will still be unevident which is the truth of God, to which the Illumination or the Providence assists or directs any. And 3dly, that the Illuminations ordinarily afforded by God are proportioned not to his all-seeing knowledge, but to our capacities, and our real wants, and so, as his Sanctifying grace is not given in such a degree, or manner, as to preserve us impeccable, so neither his Illuminations, as to render us inerrable or infallible. But it being certain in both, that God is not wanting to us in necessaries, (as he doth not bind himself to abound to us in superfluities) the onely conclusion from thence will be, that where God affords not his grace, he requires not of us those performances to which that grace was necessary, and so that he will supply by his pardon what was wanting in our strength (and sure he will pardon errors of weakness as well as sins of weakness, humane nesciencles, as wel as humane frailties;) and not that he will give all light, when, by not exacting all knowledge, that light was rendred unnecessary for us.

§ 28. 6thly, That God's Illuminations being proportion'd to our wants, and not to our ambitions or wantonnesses, it will be sufficient that they be afforded to those who are by him regularly called and sent to some office in his Church of instructing and teaching others, those others being left to such more moderate degrees, which are agreeable to their more private condition, and the supplies which are allow'd them from the Pastor, whose lips are to preserve knowledge, and they to seek the law at his mouth. And as this advantage belongs not to the Ahimaaz, who runs, or assumes authority to himself, when he is not so sent, but only to him that can shew the regularity of his mission; so neither to him unlimitedly, but onely so farre as may competently fit him for the discharging his office, which is, the calling sinners to repentance, and directing and confirming them in Christian practice (and a moderate proportion of Knowledge may be as competent for that as a greater measure of Illumination: he that hears not plain duty from Moses and the Prophets, neither will he repent though one were sent from the dead) nor to him without use of the ordinary means, studie, &c. nor to him without possibility of error, through his humane weakness; nor of heresie, and even Apostasie, through the vicious habits in his own heart, which this light doth not dissolve or dispel, but leaves to be mortified by other means.

§ 29. 7thly, The sanctifying Spirit of God being received and employed effectually to the mortifying of carnal sins, and all filthiness of the spirit also, pride, obstinacy, faction, singularity, ambition, vain-glory, sluggishness, and all irregular passions and interests, &c. is an excellent preparative to the receiving benefit from God's illuminations, and the truly humble humble pious man is, cæteris paribus, more likely to be led into all profitable or practical truths, then he who hath all or any of thoſe clouds of darkneſs in him: But this again not ſo that the pious man ſhall be able to acquire knowledge without humane means, to underſtand the Bible in the original without many years ſtudying of thoſe languages wherein it was written, or to divine the meaning of Scripture without the aſſiſtance of thoſe that have ſearched into the depth of it, nor ſo as to be infallible in what he doth uſe means to ſearch, when thoſe means are perhaps imperfect (and will alwaies be ſo till he comes to the ſtate of Viſion) and ſo incompetent to find out the truth, or elſe his parts incompetent for the judging or fathoming of it, it being evident in the moſt pious man, what S. Paul perſonates in himſelf, 1 Cor. 13. that we now ſee as in a glaſs darkly, and know but in part, v. 12.

§ 30. 8thly, That after all this the common illuminations of God's Spirit are imparted, as God's ſun and rain, to the unthankfull and unjuſt and wicked, as well as to the Saints and holy ones (we know the Devils ſcience acquired by natural means is great beyond any mans, and could not be ſo, unleſs either thoſe naturall means were able to carry him as farre as common illuminations doe others, or elſe the illuminations afforded one be alſo communicated to the other.) The chief differences are 1. in the uſe of their knowledge: The one uſeth it to the benefit of himſelf and others; the other uſeth it not at all to his own advantage, but abuſeth it to the deſtruction of others. 2dly, The one through humility and many other vertues is kept from aſſuming knowledge where he hath none, or of boaſting it where he hath, and ſo is preſerved from many errors and foul miſadventures, which the arrogance of another betraies him to; but ſtill theſe differences and others ariſe from the qualifications of the recipient, not from the degrees of the illuminations. If illuminations of themſelves were competent to purge the heart, and prepare them for that holineſs without which no man ſhall ſee the Lord, it might then be reaſonable to extend God's promiſe of more grace to the Humble, by way of reward for their humility, to the more illuminated. But the uſe of illuminations being to fit ſome men to inſtruct others (and that being reconcilable with the eternal periſhing of the inſtructers, 1 Cor. 9. 27.) there appears not any reaſon of extending that promiſe from ſanctifying grace to that which is ſo diſtant from it, the increaſe of light and knowledge being ſo frequently, what the Apoſtle affirms in his time, the betraying and ruining of humility, 1 Cor. 8. 2. that it cannot regularly be looked on as the reward of it.

§ 31. It now remains, that in the laſt place I proceed in few words to demonſtrate the great neceſſity of oppoſing and rejecting the Enthuſiaſts pretenſions, and adhering to the true doctrine. And that will be done by conſidering the dangers conſequent to thoſe pretenſions.

§ 32. Firſt, that of diminiſhing or increaſing the Scripture or Canon of the written word, whenſoever the Enthuſiaſt (who by his truſting on a broken reed is of all men the moſt likely to fall often) ſhall miſtake in interpreting any part of it. For the new light, if it be from heaven, being as certain to diſcover truth, as it is certain that God cannot lie, whatſoever is taught by it muſt neceſſarily be as true as that holy Scripture it ſelf; and if it be the interpretation of any particular parcel of Scripture, and yet vary from the true ſenſe of it, it muſt conſequently (to every one that believes it) take out ſo much of God's word out of the Canon as that parcel did truly contain, and add as much to it alſo as that falſe interpretation amounts to: which being as often iterable as there be places of Scripture explicable, or miſtakable by the Enthuſiaſt, theſe ſubſtractions and additions may alſo be infinite, and as many different new Canons of Scripture every year made, as there be, or may be, aſſuming pretenders to interpretation, and thoſe are infinite alſo. And this is one competent danger.

§ 33. A ſecond danger is, that by the poſſeſſing of men's minds with this opinion of new light, or the voice of God's Spirit within them, the authority of the whole written word of God in effect is ſuperſeded and evacuated. This we ſee already to be the fruit of this pretenſion in many, who calling the Scripture the Letter, and the voice within them the Spirit, apply to theſe two that place of 2 Cor. 3. 6. the Letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life; the concluſion from whence is naturally and inevitably this, that the Scripture, when it differs from the Enthuſiaſts phanſie, is pernicious and mortiferous, and no antidote ſufficient againſt it, but the following the dictates, be they never ſo corrupt and carnal, (as when they are contrary to Gods written word it muſt be expected they ſhould be) of a mans own heart. And then, as when there was no King in Iſrael, it was an eaſie deduction, that every one ſhould doe that which was right in his own, not in God's, eyes; ſo it is to be expected that when this Theocraty (God's governing mens lives by the written word) is caſt off, all villa-nies and abominations ſhould ſtraight poſſeſſe thoſe hearts which have betaken themſelves to this riotous liberty. And ſo we find it affirmed of the Gnoſticks by S. Peter and S. Jude, (as the general obſervation of the Apoſtles) that they ſcoffed and derided the revealed promiſes of God, walking after their own ungodly luſts, every man following his own inordinate appetite; and theſe very men, when they did all this, calling themſelves the ſpiritual, and the knowing (ſo Γνωστικοὶ ſignified, and that γνῶσις knowledge was the interpreting the myſteries in the Scripture after their own phanſie, miſcalled the Spirit, directly the New light which now we ſpeak of.) A conſequent whereof it was, that they ſeparated from all the Orthodox Chriſtians, and joyned with the Jewes to perſecute them.

§ 35. A fourth danger is confuſion among men, continual diſturbances of Kingdomes or States; the Governors whereof having no other authority then what is founded on or agreeable to the word and will of God, it will ſtill be in the power of each pretender to deliver oracles out of his own breaſt, as immediate dictates of God, quite contrary to the ſafety and intereſt of that government, whatſoever it is, which is at any time any where eſtabliſhed. And ſo the peace of kingdomes muſt be as uncertain and mutable as the phanſies of men, and the laws as ambulatory as Teſtaments while the Teſtator lives; every illuminate breaſt pretending to come, like Moſes from God in Sinai, with new tables of Divine commandments, which in all reaſon muſt ſuperſede the old, be they never ſo firmly eſtabliſhed.

§ 36. The ſum of this matter is, that it being evidently conſequent to this pretenſion, that the voice of the Devil may be miſtaken for the dictate of the Spirit of God, there is nothing ſo vile or monſtrous, earthy, ſenſual, deviliſh, but may paſs for Divinely inſpired by theſe means; and if it be regular to worſhip him as God, whom we own as ſuch, it may by immediate conſequence bring in among the Chriſtians the ſame worſhip of Devils, which had long poſſeſſion of the heathen Temples, thoſe being by the worſhippers believed and adored as the true God, becauſe they gave reſponſes out of the cave, delivered Oracles, &c. unto them.

§ 37. How far the ſober attempt and endeavour of interpreting obſcure places of Scripture, by the aſſiſtance of God's Spirit cooperating with humane means, is removed from all theſe dangers, I ſhall not need to ſhew in more words then theſe, that what is here offered to the Reader in this enſuing volume, pretends no otherwiſe to challenge his belief, then it ſhall ſatisfie his underſtanding, that it probably is what it pretends to be; and then if he receive dammage by us in any thing, it is by his own raſhneſs and over-great eaſineſs of belief, which he muſt in reaſon endeavour to put off, in exchange for ſome prudence and diligence of ſearch, before he enter into this temptation.

a * of Covenant.

Annotation.

THE Title of this whole Book [ἡ καινὴ Διαθήκη, the New Teſtament or Covenant] which is prefix'd in ſome Copies, (in others with this addition [of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt] in others with ſome variation of the form, [Τῆς καινῆς Διαθήκης ἅπαντα All the books of the New Covenant]) by whomſoever it was affixed to theſe books or writings following, doth referre to the conſent of the Catholick Church of God, and that Tradition, which giveth teſtimony to theſe Books, as thoſe, and thoſe only, which complete and make up the new Canon; And the word Ἅπαντα] ſignifies, as in the Titles of other Authors, ἅπαντα τὰ διδόμενα, all the Books or Writings, that have been written, and by God's providence derived to the Church, ſo as by it to be received in canonem, i. e. into the number of thoſe writings, which are unqueſtionably acknowledg'd to be the writings of the Apoſtles and Diſciples of Chriſt; All others as Apocryphal (of dubious and uncertain Authority) being excluded out of this Catalogue. Now for the word [Διαθήκη] here, how it is to be rendred, and what is the peculiar notion of it, is a matter of ſome difficulty. Two things eſpecially it ſignifies in this Book, a Covenant, and a Will, or Teſtament; a Covenant, Mat. 26. 28. Mar. 14. 24. Lu. 22. 20. as may appear by the adjunct [καινὴ new,] which notes the oppoſition of this to the Old, and ſo that this is, what the Old was, i.e. not a Teſtament, but a Pact or Covenant; Not a Teſtament (to which Death is ſuppoſed neceſſary, Heb. 9. 16. but could there have no proper place) but a ſtipulation betwixt God, and his people the Jewes, promiſing mercies, and requiring duties of them. And ſo the Hebrew ברית which is rendred by Διαθήκη, ſignifies a Covenant, but never a Teſtament. So again 2 Cor. 3. 6. καινὴ διαθήκη is oppoſed to παλαιὰ v. 14. which Old was written in Tables of Stone, v. 3. and ſo appears to be the Law given to the Jewes, and that was clearly a Covenant not a Will, or Teſtament. So again Jer. 31. 31. (from whence the Writers of the Goſpels, and S. Paul ſeem to have derived the word) there is mention of a New Covenant, καινὴ Διαθήκη; That muſt be a New Covenant, becauſe it is oppoſed to a former, v. 32. which former, being that of God the Father with the Jewes, is a Covenant ſtill, and not a Teſtament, for the reaſon forementioned, and ſo is there deſcribed to be a kind of Marriage-Covenant, as between an Husband and Spouſe, not a Teſtament between a Teſtator and Executor. And the truth is clear that Baptiſme, and the Lord's Supper being the Sacraments of this καινὴ Διαθήκη, this New Covenant, as Circumciſion was of the παλαιὰ, the Old or former, theſe are Fœderal rites, or Ceremonies, Stipulations and promiſes, which again referre to a Covenant, and not to a Will or Teſtament. So Gal. 4. 24. Δύο Διαθῆκαι, I conceive, are two Covenants (though the relation which the Apoſtles diſcourſe there hath to the κληρονομία inheritance v. 7. and 30. may ſeem to look toward a Teſtament) for the main drift of that place is, to repreſent to us the Law and the Goſpel, the Law as a Codex of Servile tasks, the Goſpel of Gracious promiſes, the latter out-dating the former, but yet ἀνλίσυιχον, and anſwerable to it: and conſequently the Law being a Covenant, not a Teſtament, ſuch alſo muſt be the notion of the Goſpel in that place, and the very inheritance it ſelf being part of the promiſe made to Abraham, is agreeable enough to the word under the notion of a Covenant, and not of a Teſtament, part of the Evangelical Covenant being God's promiſe in Chriſt to receive us by adoption as Sons, and (if ſons, then heirs) to beſtow the inheritance upon us. One place indeed there is in theſe Books, where Διαθήκη infallibly ſignifies a Will or Teſtament, Heb. 9. 16, 17. as appears by the Death of the Teſtator mentioned v. 16. But of thoſe two verſes it is obſervable, that the notion of [Teſtament] is there taken in by way of Accommodation, as a ſecond ſenſe of the word, ſuperadded to the former of a [Covenant] in which it is uſed v. 15, 18, 20. it being ſaid of Chriſt, v. 15. that he is the μεσίτης Mediator, or Sponſor of this καινὴ Διαθήκη new Covenant, not Teſtament, that of Mediator being farre from this of a Teſtator. And beſides, that καινὴ Διαθήκη, the New] there, is oppoſite to the [πρώτη, firſt] in the end of the verſe, and ſo muſt be in the notion of a Covenant ſtill, becauſe the πρώτη, firſt] was onely a Covenant, and not a Teſtament, the Author of it there being cleerly God the Father, in whom Death, the ratification of Teſtaments, could have no place. This again further appears by what is ſaid of it v. 18, & 19. For there the Διαθήκη, which was ſaid to be conſecrated with blood, was the Tables of the law, the Commandements, v. 19. and will fitly be rendred there [Covenant] not [Teſtament] v. 20. It being the conſtant cuſtome and practice of the Eaſtern Nations to uſe Blood in the ſtriking of any Pact or Covenant, but not in making every Will or Teſtament, and to that the expreſs teſtimony of Exod. 24. 6. which is there cited, doth belong, the ſprinkling of blood being the ceremony following Moſes's rehearſing the Commandements to the people, Exod. 20, & 21, & 22, & 23. as the ſanction of a Covenant. So that although it be evident, that Διαθήκη v. 16, 17. does ſignifie Teſtament yet it is as clear, that, as in all the other forementiond Texts, ſo alſo in the verſes antecedent, and conſequent to theſe, it ſignifies Covenant alſo, and even in theſe not Teſtament, excluſively to Covenant, but Covenant and Teſtament ſuperadded to it; Covenant in the other verſes, and then, by extending the uſe of the word to its full latitude, Covenant and Teſtament both. Upon this conſideration, and in reverence to the uſage of the Latine and Weſtern Churches, who generally have uſed Teſtamentum in this place, (though ſome have uſed Inſtrumentum to contain both, and others Fœdus, Covenant onely) and that by retaining the word Teſtament, I may be ſure alſo to retain that comfortable intimation, viz. that in the Goſpel unſpeakable gifts are given or delegated to us antecedently to all conditions required of us (ſuch are Chriſt's giving himſelf for us, Calling us, and giving us Sufficient grace to come unto him) Upon theſe grounds, I ſay, it is not amiſs to take in both the words in the rendring of this Title, that of Covenant, as being moſt agreeable to the uſe of the words in the Sacred Dialect, and moſt agreeable to the nature of the Goſpel, which is, (as all Covenants made with inferiors are Laws) νόμος Χριστοῦ, the law of Chriſt, νόμος πίστεως, the law of faith, a New Law, requiring a condition of Faith and Obedience in us without which the Goſpel is not the ſavour of life, a Goſpel of mercy to any; and withall that of Teſtament alſo wherein the Chriſtians inheritance is ſeal'd to him as to a Son and Heir of God's, and wherein the death of Chriſt as of a Teſtator, (Heb. 9. 16, 17.) is ſet down at large by way of ſtory, and as it is applyable to our benefit.

according to
S[t]. [b]MATTHEW.

Annotations.

THe Goſpell] What the word Εὐαγγέλιον in Greek, (which we render Goſpel) ſignifies among Authors, is ordinarily known, viz. from εὖ and ἀγγέλω, good news or good tidings. Thus the Angel ſpeaks of the birth of Chriſt, in relation to all that ſhould follow after it, Luke 2. 10. Εὐαγγελίζομαι ὑμῖν χαρὰν μεγάλην I bring you good tidings of great joy, i. e. very joyful good tidings. Only in this ſacred uſe of it, there ſeems to be a Metonymie, or figure very ordinary, whereby the word that ſignifies good news, is ſet to denote the hiſtory of that good news, the birth and life, and reſurrection of Chriſt, which all put together is that joyful good news or tidings. As for our Engliſh word Goſpel, which the Saxon read ȝoꝺſpel, that is compounded of God, and ſpel; the word ȝoꝺ among the Saxons ſignifying good as wel as God, & no difference being diſcernible in the writing of thoſe two words among them, unleſs that when 'tis taken for God it hath an e after it. So in the Treatiſe De veteri Teſtamento, ȝoꝺe ỳſ eall ȝoꝺ, ⁊ ælc ȝoꝺ cumꝺ oþ him. God is all good, and all good cometh of him, According to the notion of moſt Nations, the Heathens calling God, Optimus, the beſt, and Chriſt according to the Jewiſh notion telling the young man, that there was none good, ſave God onely. As for the other part of it [ſpel] it ſeems to ſignifie [word] among the Saxons, as when biȝſpel, Deut. 28. 37. & Pſal. 79. 14. ſignifies a by-word or Proverb, or as it is ſtill uſed in the North by-ſpell. So in the Treatiſe De Vet. Teſt. Among Solomon's writings, an ỳſ panabole þ ỳſ biȝſpel boc, One is Proverbs, i. e. by-ſpell book, and again, ꝑiſeꝺomeſ biȝſpel, by-ſpell of wiſedome. Some remains of the uſe of this word are ſtill among us, as when a charm, carmen, ἔπος, indifferently a verſe or a word, one or more lines of Scripture or otherwiſe, either ſpoken or written and hung about ones neck, on deſign to drive away a diſeaſe (according to the ſuperſtitious beleef, and practiſe of our Anceſtors) is ſtill among us called a Spell, from the antient uſe of it, as in the Poet,

Sunt verba & voces, quibus hunc lenire dolorem
Poſſis—— words ſignifie charms. And ſo this word ȝoꝺſpel, or by euphony, Goſpel, in Wicleifs tranſlation, and ever ſince, notes theſe good tidings delivered, as firſt by an Angel, and after by the Apoſtles by word of mouth, ſo here in writing, by way of Hiſtory alſo; and in brief ſignifies that bleſſed ſtory of the birth, life, actions, precepts, and promiſes, death, and reſurrection of Chriſt, which of all other ſtories in the world we Chriſtians ought to look on with moſt joy, as an Εὐαγγέλιον or good word, i. e. a Goſpel. a. Εὐαγγέλιον

According to Matthew] Κατὰ Ματθαῖον, is no more than this, That ſtory of Chriſt, which Matthew, one of Chriſt's diſciples, and Apoſtles, (who had aſſociated himſelf to Chriſt, as a diſciple of his, ever ſince he began to reveal himſelf, or to preach) compiled, and ſet down. This he is ſaid to have written eight years after the reſurrection of Chriſt, and that in the Hebrew tongue. Τὸ κατὰ Ματθαῖον ἅγιον εὐαγγέλιον παρὰ τοῦ ἐξ Ἰουδαίων ἐξενεχθὲν υἱοῦ αὐτὸς ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις διὰ γραμμάτων Ἑβραϊκῶν· διὰ τοῦτο γὰρ, ὅτε Ἑβραίοις γράφων, οὐδὲν πλέον ἐζήτησε δεῖξαι ἢ ὅτι ἀπὸ Ἀβραὰμ καὶ Δαυὶδ ἦν ὁ Χριστός· ἐξενεχθὲν δὲ ὑπ' αὐτοῦ χρόνους ὀκτὼ τῆς Χριστοῦ ἀναλήψεως, ſaith an antient MS. The holy Goſpel according to Matthew was ſet down by him for thoſe of the Jews at Jeruſalem in Hebrew, and therefore as writing to the Hebrews, he proceeds no farther in the Genealogy of Chriſt, then that he was from Abraham and David; Now this was ſet out by him eight yeers after the aſſumption of Chriſt. So another antient MS. ἐξεδόθη εἰς Ἱεροσολύμοις φωνῇ Ἑβραΐδι, It was ſet out at, or delivered and ſent to Jeruſalem in the Hebrew language. And though that which we now have be onely in Greek, yet being tranſlated into that language either by himſelf, or ſome Apoſtolical perſon (that it might be of farther uſe, then onely to thoſe of Jeruſalem, the Jews, for whom it was firſt deſigned) and, as ſuch, univerſally without all contradiction or queſtion received into the Canon of the new Teſtament by the whole Primitive Church, it is with the ſame reverence to be received by us, as if it had been firſt written in Greek, or as if we had the Hebrew ſtill remaining to us. b. Κατὰ Ματθαῖον

Having ſaid this of the firſt, it will not be amiſs in this place, by the way, briefly to conſider, Who were the Authors of all the four Goſpels, and What is generally obſervable of each of their writings. For the firſt it much tends to the advancing the authority of theſe books, to conſider, that two of them, the firſt and the laſt were compiled by two Diſciples, and Apoſtles of Chriſt, who were perpetually preſent with him, and ſaw, and heard all the particular words and actions, which they relate, viz. Matthew and John. And for the other two, Mark and Luke, though they were not ſuch Diſciples, and Apoſtles, immediately retaining to Christ, and continually attending on him, yet they were familiar and constant attendants, the former of Peter, one of these Apostles also, (who wrote his μ χρόνοις ί. saith that antient MS. ten years after the ascension of Christ) the latter of Paul, who being call'd by Christ miraculously from heaven, was at that time by Christ put into a course of coming to an exact knowledge of the truth of this whole matter, (as appears by the story of the Acts) and long after, when he was at Rome, say the Antients, Luke being by him instructed, wrote this Gospel, which therefore, saith the MS. Ἰταλικῷ χαρακτῆρι ἐκδέδοται, hath the Italick character, or manner of writing discernible in it. To this may be added what the Ecclesiastick Historians say of Mark, that Peter did deliver, and, as it were, dictate this Gospel to him, Ἰσέον ὅτι τὸ κατὰ Μάρκον Εὐαγγέλιον ὑπηγορεύθη ἐν Ῥώμῃ ὑπὸ Πέτρου, saith an antient MS. It is to be observed, that the Gospel according to Mark was dictated by Peter at Rome, according to those verses antiently written on his Gospel,

Πέζῃ μυηθεὶς τῶν ἀπορρήτων λόγων
Τὴν τοῦ θεοῦ κένωσιν εἰς βροτῶν φύσιν,
Ἣν ἡ διπλοῦν ὢν ἀνθρωπος φύσει,

Mark being instructed by S. Peters preaching in the doctrine of the exinanition, or descent of Christ to our humane nature, wherein he was two-fold, God-man by nature, set this down accordingly, and now hath the second place in the writings of holy Scripture, i. e. of the new Testament. And of this there be some characters discernible in the writing it self, As that setting down the story of Peter's denying of Christ, with the same enumeration of circumstances, and aggravations of the fault, that Matthew doth, when he comes to mention his repentance, and tears consequent to it, he doth it (as became the true Penitent) more coldly than Matthew had done, onely ἔκλαυσε he wept, whereas Matthew hath ἔκλαυσεν πικρῶς he wept bitterly. And for Luke, his profession is, that he had made diligent enquiry, c. 1. 3. and received his advertisements not onely from S. Paul, but also from those who were both eye-witnesses of what he writes, and ὑπηρέται officers, instruments imployed by Christ in the particulars of the story, and therefore is as creditable a witnesse as their authority, from whom he had his instructions, can render him.

That which is generally observable of these four writings is this, that the three first of them write the whole story from the Birth of Christ till after his Resurrection, but two of them more largely, Matthew and Luke, the third (Mark) more succinctly, setting down the series of the actions rather than the sermons, and passages delivered by him. And again though none of them agree throughout in observing the Order and Succession of the actions by them related (see note on Mar. 5. a.) yet two of them doe agree in it one with the other, much more constantly, than the third with either of them, viz. Matthew an Apostle, and eye-witnesse, and Mark, from Peter, who was such also, but the third, Luke, which wrote his story out of collections, which he had from others, and compiled it himself, hath not so exactly observed the order, wherein the things were done, but onely set down the things themselves; and when, beside that of the order, he hath sometimes varyed from the others in some words, or circumstances (as, when others say 'twas a Maid that spake to Peter, and occasioned his second denying of Christ, Mat. 26. 71. Mar. 14. 69. he reads ἕτερος in the masculine, Lu. 22. 57. and some other the like) these are generally so inconsiderable, and of so no-importance to the main matters of Faith, the doctrines of the Gospel, that they are rather arguments to demonstrate that these writings were not contrived by any compact, or agreement of one with the other, but each of them apart, without consulting, or knowing, what the other had done, which is a circumstance that was necessary to make their testimonies several, and so to give them the greater authority from the number of them. As for the fourth, John, his writing seems to have been designed to these two ends, 1. To demonstrate, and declare the Divinity of Christ (διηγεῖται δὲ τὰ τῆς πάλαι ἀγεννήτου καὶ ἐνδόξου χρείας θεολογίαν, saith an antient MS. copy, he describes the first and glorious age, or generation of Christ with the Father) as the other three had set down his Humanity, and cleared the matter of his Conception, and Birth, of the Virgin, And 2^dly, to adde out of his own knowledge some remarkable things (especially those which most tended to the former designe) which had beeen omitted by the other three, to which purpose he saw it necessary to set down the story of Christ's Passion, and Resurrection, as the rest had done, that so he might affix those other circumstances, which he design'd to adde unto them. This is all that I think necessary to premise in this place of this matter.

CHAP. I.

Paraphraſe.

THE book of the [a] generation of Jeſus Chriſt, the ſon of [b] David, the ſon of Abraham,]

1 An hiſtory of what concern'd, or narration of the paſſages of the birth, life, death, and reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt, who according to the prophecies foregoing of the Meſſias, ſprang from the line of David, and Abraham, to both whom he was particularly promiſed. a. b.

2 Abraham begat Iſaac, and Iſaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat Judas and his brethren.

3 And Judas begat Phares and Zara of Thamar, and Pharez begat Eſrom, and Eſrom begat Aram,

4 And Aram begat Aminadab, and Aminadab begat Naaſſon, and Naaſſon begat almon,

5. And Salmon begat Booz of [c] Rachab, and Booz begat Obed of Ruth, and Obed begat Jeſſe, c.

6. And Jeſſe begat David the King, and David the King begat Solomon [of her that had been the wife of Urias.]

6. Of her that had been defiled by David, while ſhe was the wife of Uriah, but was now after Uriahs death taken to be Davids wife, and of her in that matrimony Solomon was born.

7. And Solomon begat Roboam, and Roboam begat Abia, and Abia begat Aſa,

8. And Aſa begat Joſaphat, and Joſaphat begat Joram, [and Joram begat Ozias,]

8. And Jehoram begat Ahaziah, Ahaziah begat Joas, Joas begat Amaziah, Amaziah begat Ozias, called alſo Azarias. See 1 Chron. 3. 11.

9. And Ozias begat Joatham, and Joatham begat Achas, and Achas begat Ezekias,

10. And Ezekias begat Manaſſes, and Manaſſes begat Amon, and Amon begat Joſias,

11. And Joſias begat Jechonias and his brethren, [* about the time they were carryed away to Babylon,

11. Immediately before the time (ſee note on Mar. 2. b.) that Jechoniah king of Judah, Jer. 24. 1. and the Jews with him, were, at divers times, carried captive by the king of Babylon to his countrey.

* neer upon the tranſportation or remove to Babylon, ὁπὶ τῆς μετοικεσίας Βαβυλῶνος.

12. And after they were brought to Babylon] Jechonias [d] begat Salathiel, and Salathiel begat Zorobabel, 12. And after the time of their being carried or removed thither. d.

13. And Zorobabel begat Abiud, and Abiud begat Eliakim, and Eliakim begat [e] Azor, e.

14. And Azor begat Sadoc, and Sadoc begat Achim, and Achim begat Eliud, 15. And Eliud begat Eleazar, and Eleazar begat Matthan, and Matthan begat Jacob,

16. And Jacob begat Joſeph the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jeſus, who is called Chriſt.

17. So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations, and from David untill the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations, and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Chriſt, are fourteen generations.]

17. So that the Genealogy here ſet down (not by enumeration of all the ſeverals which ſucceeded one another from Abraham to Chriſt, ſee v. 8. but) in that manner as is ſufficient to deduce his pedegree from Abraham, and David, may, for memory ſake, be divided into three fourteens, one of thoſe from Abraham to David, before they were Kings; a ſecond from David to the captivity, whilſt they enjoyed the Regal power intire; the third from the captivity to Chriſt, when there were only ſome weak remainders of the Regal power among the Jews.

* For Mary his mother having been betrothed to Joſeph, μνηστευθείσης δὲ, &c. before they came together, ſhe was found to be with child from or by the holy Ghoſt, ἐν γαστρὶ ἔχ. † righteous † by dream, κατ' ὄναρ. * to take Mary to wife, παραλαβεῖν Μαριὰμ τὴν γυναῖκα σου (ſee note f)

18. Now the birth of Jeſus Chriſt was on this wiſe: [*When as his mother Mary was eſpouſed to Joſeph, (before they [f] came together) ſhe was found with child of the holy Ghoſt.]

18. His mother Mary had been betrothed to Joſeph, but was not yet marryed to him and in this ſpace he diſcerned her to be with child, but knew not by whom it was, it being indeed conceived in her by a wonderful miraculous manner, by the operation of the holy Spirit of God. f.

19. Then her husband Joſeph Being [g] a †juſt man, and not willing [h] to make her a publick example, was minded [i] to put her away privily]

19. Then her husband Joſeph being a merciful pious man, and not willing to expoſe or ſubject her to that publick and ſhameful puniſhment, which belonged among the Jews to thoſe women, whom the husbands when they firſt came in to them, found not to be virgins, was willing ſecretly to diſmiſſe her, that being not known to be betrothed to him, ſhe might onely be lyable to the puniſhment of fornication viz. infamy, not death. g. h. i.

20. But while he thought on theſe things, behold, the Angel of the Lord appeared unto him † in a dream, ſaying, Joſeph thou ſon of David, fear not *to take Mary to thee thy wife; for that which is conceived in her [is of the holy Ghoſt.]

20. Proceeds from the powerful work of the holy Ghoſt over-ſhadowing her, Luke 1. 35. and omnipotently working in her this conception.

21. And

21. Whether by thee (as here) or by Mary, Luke 1. 31. or by both together (by the common right of parents) his name ſhall be called Jeſus, i. e. Saviour, the title of leaders or generals, and governours among the Jews, Obad. 21. to denote his ſpirituall kingdome, and conduct of all that beleeve and obey him, againſt their ghoſtly enenemies, ſin, &c.

21. And ſhe ſhall bring forth a ſon, and [thou ſhalt call his name Jeſus, for he ſhall ſave his people from their ſins,] k 22. (And hereby that prophecy, Iſa. 7. 14. had a notable completion, when the prophet ſaid to Ahaz, 22. (Now all this was done[k] that it might be fulfilled, which was ſpoken of the Lord by the prophet, ſaying,]

l. 23. And as there the child in the prophet was called Emmanuel to ſignifie the preſence and protection of God to Ahaz, ſo ſhall the birth of this child be the coming of God among us.)

23. Behold a Virgin ſhall be with child, and ſhall bring forth a ſon, [and they ſhall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.)]

[1] * or, thou ſhalt, for the antient Gr. and Lat. MS reads κληθησεται.

24. Then Joſeph † being raiſed from ſleep, did as the Angel of the Lord had bidden him, and * took unto him his wife,

† when he was riſen, διεγερθεις

* took her to him to wife, ſee v. 20

25. And ſhe brought forth this Jeſus, her firſt born (and in all probability, her onely) ſon (the word [till] being of no force to the contrary, as may appear, 1 Sam. 15. 35. without ever being known by her husband, either before, or after the conception of him, (and, as tis piouſly beleeved, though not affirmed in Scripture, remained a virgin all her life after) and on the eighth daie, the daie of circumciſion, and of impoſition of names, his name was called Jeſus by the appointment of his parents, according to the Angels direction.

25. And knew her not, till ſhe had brought forth her firſt born ſon, and † he called his name Jeſus.]

† or, ſhe, for ἐκάλεσεν bears either: ſee note l.

Annotations on Chapter I.

a Γένεσις

The word γένεσις doth not here ſignifie peculiarly or preciſely the birth of Chriſt, for that is expreſſed by another word differing ſomewhat from this, v. 18. ἡ γέννησις from γίνομαι to beget (ſo uſed v. 2. and ſo on, in every verſe after) whereas γένεσις is from γίνεσθαι which ſignifies in a wider ſenſe, not onely to be born, but alſo to be done, or come to paſs. It is here anſwerable to the Hebrew תולדה, which though it come from ילד ſignifying to beget, (and ſo often ſignifies that peculiarly) yet the verb ſignifying alſo any inanimate production, any event, that time brings forth (as Prov. 27. 1.) thou knoweſt not what a day ילד will bring forth, and Eccl. 4. 14. and even in his kingdome נולד רש he is made, or becommeth poor (not as we render it, he that is born in his Kingdome, and Job. 11 12. and man יולד ſhall become a wild Aſſes colt) proportionably the noun תולדה ſignifies event, accident, any thing that is done, or come to paſs, and ſo likewiſe any ſuch event, or paſſage ſet down, or related, the hiſtory, or relation of it. So Gen. 2. 4. Theſe are the תולדות the things that came to paſs, the ſtory, relation of the heavens and the earth, &c. i. e. not onely the creation of them, but other paſſages following it. So Gen. 5. 1. the book of the תולדות βίβλος γενέσεως, the book of the ſtory of Adam, his creation, and following life, as here βίβλος γενέσεως of the birth, and life of the ſecond Adam. So Gen. 37. 2. Theſe are the תולדות the ſtory of Jacob, where tis clear, that his own birth or the procreation of his children is not the peculiar matter in hand at that time, that being paſt c. 35. and Eſau's genealogy ſet after it, c. 36. but v. 1. his dwelling in Canaan, v. 2, 3. his love to Joſeph, and the paſſages conſequent to that. And accordingly Aben Ezra there obſerves, that the word noteth any event, any thing that befell Jacob, and ſo ſaith that excellent * P. Fagius, Non ſtatuit hic texere genealogiam ſtirpis Jacob, ſed potiùs miſerabiles caſus, & eventa, quæ ipſi acciderunt; He meant not to ſet down Jacobs genealogy, but the ſad events, that befell him. So Num, 3. 1. Theſe are the תולדות, the ſtory of the paſſages of Aaron and Moſes, &c. and ſo here not only of the birth of Chriſt (for that is but a very ſmall part of this book,) nor yet onely the genealogy of Chriſt; for though that here follow immediately, yet makes it not up any conſiderable part of this whole book, but the book of the ſtory of the birth, life, death, and reſurrection of Chriſt, of all the events that belong to that matter recorded by that Evangeliſt, as Πράξεις Ἀποστόλων is all that befell the Apoſtles after.

b. Δαβὶδ δὲ Ἀβραάμ

The reaſon of the ſpeciall mention of David and Abraham here, without any between, is the ſpeciall promiſes which had been made to thoſe two, to the one of continuing the Kingdome to his poſterity; to the other of a numerous ſeed.

c. Ῥαχάβ

That Rahab was the wife of Salmon and mother of Booz, is not ſet down in the old Teſtament, nor mentioned in the genealogy in Saint Luke, but recited by this Evangeliſt either out of the Cabala or tradition, or elſe from ſome other written Authors of ſufficient credit among the Jewes; as the names of Jannes and Jambres, 2 Tim. 3. 8. appear to have been, and ſome others which ſhall be noted in their place.

d. Ἰεχονίας

Of Jechoniah 'tis pronounced [Write this man childleſs, Jer. 22. 30. which ſeems to infer that Salathiel was not his ſon, but his heir only. An thus hath the learned Grotius ſet it, Lu. 3. 23. that Joſias begat Jechoniah, i. e. Jehoiakim, Jehoiakim another Jechonias, that dyed childleſs, Zedekias (his uncle) ſucceeding him, and Aſſir ſucceeding Zedekias, and then Salathiel the ſon of Neri was Aſſir's heir, and ſo is here ſaid to be begotten by Jechoniah. For that of leaving one heir or ſucceſſor, is a kind of civil begetting, and which the Hebrew ילד will bear, as God is ſaid to have begotten ſons, whom he hath only adopted. And therefore when Ier. 22. 28. there is mention of Jechoniahs ſeed caſt into a land, &c. i. e. carried captive with him, and 1 Chron. 3. 17. when in his genealogy we read, The ſons of Iechoniah, Aſſir, and Salathiel his ſon, this may be the meaning of it, that theſe were his heirs, or ſucceſſours. Although others interpret it otherwiſe, either that his children ſhould be cut off, or at leaſt that none of his ſeed ſhould ſit upon the throne of David, which is there rendred as the reaſon of Jeremies ſpeech, For no man of his ſeed ſhall proſper, v. 30.

e. Ἀβιὰμ

In a very ancient Hebrew copy of this Goſpel, this verſe is ſomewhat varyed, thus, And Eliakim begat Abner, and Abner begat Azor, &c. by which interpoſition of Abner the fourteen generations are compleated, in which otherwiſe there will ſeem to be defect, Salathiel probably being the firſt of this third fourteen, and not Jechoniah (as Solomon was the firſt of the ſecond, and not David) from whom to Chriſt there will then be but thirteen, if Abner be not thus added to ſupply. Another way there is of making up the fourteens by putting in Jachim v. 11. (as Rob. Steph. finds and ſets down in his Var. lect.) Ἰωσίας ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰαχείμ, Ἰαχείμ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰεχονίαν, Joſias begat Jachim and Jachim begat Jechoniah, and to this the genealogy agrees, 1 Chron. 3. 15. and if this this be taken, then Jechoniah must be first of the last fourteen, so that ἀπὸ τ. v. 17. shall signifie from the beginning of, or from the [ἀπὸ τ.] v. 11. from that time, about or before the transportation; Of these and other the like questions both in the Genealogy here and in S. Luke, and especially for the according, and reconciling them with one another, I shall purposely abstein to speak more largely, both because, although they have great difficulties in them, yet the profit consequent to the resolving of them is not proportionably great, and especially because this is a subject wherein very many learned men have already taken very excellent pains, (to whom I referre the Reader) especially the most excellent Hugo Grotius, in his annotations on the Gospels.

f. Συνελθεῖν

What is meant here by the [Συνελθεῖν, or coming together] of Joseph and Mary, may be best determined by consideration of several passages of the context, all which seem to fix it on his actuall marrying of her, which is called συνδυασμὸς conjunction of two together, and ἀνδρὸς καὶ γυναικὸς συνάφεια, the joining of man and woman, and συλλήψεως ἅπασης καὶ βίου παντὸς, a joining of all that belongs to them, their whole estate, &c. and not relate to the conjunction of bed, as the sound of the word might import. For first it seems to be that which was next in order of time to betrothing (μνηστεία, πρὸ τοῦ Συνελθεῖν having been betrothed before they came together) This of her being with child, falling out in that space, which was betwixt the betrothing and Συνελθεῖν. Now after betrothing, marriage was the next, and therefore betrothing is called by Isidore, primæ nuptiæ, the first marriage; and by S. Basil, ἀρχαὶ τοῦ γάμου, the beginnings of marriage, being (according to the definition of μνηστεία) μνήμη καὶ ἐπαγγελία τοῦ μέλλοντος γάμου, a wooing and promise of the future marriage (in the notion of μνήμη from μνάομαι, ambio, procor, to woo) and that marriage was to intervene, before the use of the bed was imaginable. And betwixt betrothing and marriage there was wont to be a set space, Deut. 20. 7. in which that which is here related, might well fall out, her being or appearing to be with child. Secondly, that which is meant by [Παραλαβεῖν Μαριὰμ τὴν γυναῖκά σου, taking to thee Mary to wife] v. 20. seems to be the importance of Συνελθεῖν: for thus the story lies, she is with child between the betrothing, and the [Συνελθεῖν] thereupon he is afraid Παραλαβεῖν, to take her to him, till the Angel appears and dispels that fear.

Παραλαβεῖν

Now παραλαβεῖν, to take to him, especially, as 'tis here παραλαβεῖν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ, to take her to him to wife, v. 20, & 24. signifies to marry, and is relative to διδόναι to give, which belongs to the father of the spouse, Tob. 7. 11, 13. (after the example of God in paradise Gen. 2. 22.) because he delivers her into the bridegrooms hand, who was therefore called Petitor (desponsat puellam qui petit, sponsat petitoris Pater saith Donatus in Andr. Terent.) the suiter, and so λαβὼν τὸ γένος, he that takes her, in Strabo, is used for the husband, and so [to take a wife] signifies Deut. 20. 7. and simply to take, Tob. 7. 12. Take her and lead her away to her Father; This, upon the Angels warning, he presently doth, being onely betrothed before, and though he be called ἀνὴρ, her husband, v. 19. yet that implyes no more, then betrothing a wife, Deut. 20. 7. and so 'tis here used immediately after mention of the betrothing, v. 18. One other possible notion there is of the [Συνελθεῖν] his taking her into family with him; so in the Gospel for the Sunday after Christmass it is rendered [before they came to dwell together] This is κομίζεσθαι εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, among the Greeks, to bring home the Bride, which being joyned so closely closely with marriage, (Tob. 7. 12.) Ducere uxorem (which denotes that) doth among the Latines, signifie marriage also. As for that of the bed, not so much as a thought of that is medled with, yea or no, till the order of things require it, i.e. till after the marriage compleated; and then under the phrase, so usuall in Scripture, of knowing, 'tis denyed, v. 25. He knew her not, &c.

g. Δικαιοσύνη

The word δικαιοσύνη answerable to the Hebrew צדיק, signifies ordinarily works of mercy, charity; of which when Maimonides sets down seven sorts or degrees, the seventh is distinctly צדקה righteousness: so Deut. 24. 13. צדקה both according to the context, and the Septuagint's rendring, is ἐλεημοσύνη, mercy. So when the † Rabbines say, there are two thrones, one of judgment, לדין, the other of mercy, לצדקה, the latter is so stiled by the Author to the Hebrews, c. 4. 16. the throne of mercy: so Psal. 112. 9. He hath given to the poor, and his righteousness, &c. that is, his bounty to the poor, precedent. So Prov. 11. 18. where He that soweth righteousnes] appears to signifie the merciful, who soweth, i. e. scattereth, v. 24. and disperseth abroad his almes, and, as the sower, receives this back again with the greatest usury, τῇ ὄψει σκορπίζει, τῇ δὲ ἀληθείᾳ συνάγει, saith S. Chrysostome, he seems to scatter, but really he gathers together, ὥσπερ ὁ σπείρων τῇ γῇ δανείζει, as the sower lends his seed to the earth upon interest, and accordingly there it follows, to him shall be a sure reward. So Isa. 58. 7, 8. and Mat. 6. 1. where we now read ἐλεημοσύνην, 'tis apparent (by the vulgar reading Justitiam) that δικαιοσύνην was an ancient reading, and that for almes in that place. Thus even in Heathen Authors. As when Jarchas the Indian and chief of the Brachmans in * Philostratus, doth scoffe at Apollonius Tyanæus, and the Grecians, that they apply the word, δικαιοσύνη, righteousness, to any who doe not wrong others, when (saith he) among the chief offices of righteousness, and importances of that word χρηστότης and ἀγαθότης, goodness and bounty are to be reckoned, and φιλανθρωπία, humanity. Proportionably to these acceptions of the word, the righteousness of Joseph here shall signifie not legal justice, but peculiarly goodness and clemency, of which this was an eminent expression in Joseph, which here follows.

h. Παραδειγματίζειν

The Greek παραδειγματίζειν signifies literally to defame or disgrace, to publicate or shew openly, as an example or spectacle, and by consequence (in Polybius and other good Authors) to inflict the punishment of death on any, because those that are so punished, doe as Christ saith Iohn 12. 32. (though accommodating it to a diviner sense) draw all men unto them, i. e. attract the eyes of all spectatours to behold them, by which phrase he there notes that he was to die a condemned person, according to that of Isai. 53. 8. (see note on Acts 8. h.) according to this double notion of the word we find the process, Deut. 22. against a Damosel taken to wife, and suspected by him to be defloured before his coming in to her. For in this case he is first said to give occasions of speech against her, and to bring an evil name upon her, i. e. to accuse and publicate her, to make a publike business of it, and that before the Elders of the city in the gate, i. e. the Judges, v. 15. saying plainly v. 14. I found her not a maid; and if this prove true, she is then to be stoned, v. 21. Both these together make up the full importance of παραδειγματίζειν here, and so here it must belong to the capitall punishment of such a one who being taken to wife appears to be no virgin before the husbands accompanying with her, which sure was

Josephs opinion of Mary at this time, till the Angell had told him otherwise, v. 20.

i. Ἀπολῦσαι, To put away] here must be taken not as an act of divorce, but so as without taking notice of the betrothing, which being ordinarily performed at home, might be kept from publick knowledge, and so her being with child needed not bring the punishment of one found by the husband to be no maid (Deut. 22. 21.) upon her, but only that which belonged to the unmarried.

k. It must be here noted once for all, that the particle [ἵνα, that] doth frequently denote the consequent, or event only, and not the end. This is a difference of some weight, and very often worthy, and necessary to be observed. For example Rom. 5. 20. The Law came in betwixt, (i. e. between Adam, and Christ) ἵνα πλεονάσῃ τὸ παράπτωμα. that sin might encrease, not that that was the end, for which the Law was designed to be given, but because this was the consequent, or event, of giving the Law, that mens offences, being now committed against a promulgate Law, received aggravation thereby. To the same sense is [εἰς τὸ εἶναι] to be taken in many places, as Rom. 1. 20. the invisible power, and Godhead is discerned [εἰς τὸ εἶναι] αὐτοὺς ἀναπολογήτους] not [that they may be] as if that were the designed end, but [so that they are] (by way of effect or consequent) become without excuse. And so here in this place, if it denoted the end, then the sense of it would be, that all these actions of God, and dispositions of infinite mercy in the birth of Christ, &c. were all designed by God to this end, that what was by one of his Prophets foretold, might be fulfilled; whereas indeed the great end designed by God in these actions, was the benefit and salvation of mankind, and so this is the principal effect wrought by it. But because by the way, a prophecy was fulfilled, which being delivered upon another occasion, had yet covertly foretold this glorious work of mercy, therefore 'tis also consequent to this (though not the aim and design, unless very remote and secundary) that this prophecy was fulfilled, and this is all that is meant by the phrase [Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled, which was spoken, &c.] i. e. by the doing of all this, (not yet to recite those grand signs, and many gracious effects of it, after to be declared) it fell out, that an antient prophecy was eminently fulfilled; and this indeed in a high improved sense, over and above that other vulgar sense, which belonged to those words, when they were delivered to Ahaz by God, and wherein they had then been performed to him (viz. as a sign, that within the space of time, wherein a virgin might marry and conceive and bring forth, and the child come to the age of distinguishing good and evil, Isai. 7. 14, 15, 16. that is, within very few years, Rezin and Pekah his two great enemies should be brought low.) This observation of the importance of [ἵνα] will often be made use of in the ensuing paraphrase, without farther troubling the Reader with the account of the reason of it, having here once done it. This the Grammarians have expressed by [ἵνα αἰτιατικὸν, and ἐκβατικὸν, [That] causal and [That] consequential, the latter many times best rendred by [so that] though here the precedent words permit it not: See note on c. 4. 14. d.

l. Theſe words in Isaiah had there a literall sense (whither really to be then performed, or only in vision, it is not certain) which is thus to be interpreted, that the child given for a sign to Ahaz, was to have this name imposed upon him, Emmanuel, which signifies God with us; Not that that child then born in Isaiahs time, should be God, but (as Gen. 22. 14. the place where God provided the Ram instead of Isaac, is called Jehovah jireh, God will see or provide, which concludes not that the place was God, or that the place should see, but onely that that was to be a memorative of Gods seeing and providing so here) that the imposition of this name upon the child should signifie (as a sign given Ahaz to that purpose) that God would afford him his peculiar presence, and assistance against his enemies. And so all is plain in the place of Isaiah (as for the accommodation of it to this of the birth of Christ see note, k.) Only it must be added, that if [καλέσουσι] be the right reading of the place, then there is a scheme of the sacred dialect discernible in it, whereby [they shall call] is but a phrase, for [he shall be called] as, Thou fool, this night shall they require thy soul, i. e. thy soul shall be required, and as of making friends of Mammon, 'tis added, that when ye fail, they may receive you, i. e. that you may be received into everlasting habitations. And accordingly v. 21. for καλέσεις thou shalt call, spoken to Joseph, some copies have καλέσουσι, they shall call, i. e. he shall be called. But the antient copy which Beza sent to the University of Cambridge, reads [καλέσεις, thou shalt call] in both places, & so in Isaiah, from whence this place is taken, it is certainly [thou shalt call] whereupon though our Bibles read, a virgin shall conceive, and shall call, yet in the margent 'twas thought necessary to set it, thou, O virgin, shalt call. And so in the Epistle appointed by the Church for the Annuntiation of Mary, 'tis rendred And thou his mother shalt call. And in the Gospel for the Sunday after Christmas, the 25 v. of this chap. which stands ambiguously in the Greek, is there determined to the mother, [till she had brought forth her first begotten son, and called his name Jesus.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. II.

1. The birth of Christ, and the circumstances belonging to that, being set down in the former Chapter, here now succeed in this some passages pertaining to his childhood, and the first passage is, That after some time, not immediately after his birth, but whilest Mary and her son remained yet at Bethleem, certainly after the time of Maries purification at Jerusalem (mentioned by S. Luke) and return to Bethleem again, the Chaldeans or Arabian Astronomers came to Jerusalem.

1 NOW when Jesus was born in Bethleem of Judea, in the daies of Herod the king, behold there came * a wise men from the east to Jerusalem]

a. * learned men or Magi, μάγοι

b. c. d. 2 When we were in our countrey we saw a strange extraordinary starre rise in the heavens, which we never saw before, and discerning that it signified the birth of the Messias of the Jews (and of all other true sons of Abraham) foretold by Jewish prophets that he should be born (and that all kings should worship him, Psal. 72. 11.) we are come to bring presents to him, and worship him, and therefore we desire to be informed, where is the place of his Birth, and where is he.

2. Saying, [where is † he that is born [b] king of the Jews? for we have seen his [c] starre [d] in the east, and are come to worship him.]

† the king of the Iews which is born, ὁ τεχθεὶς βασιλεὺς, &c.

3. When Herod the king had heard these things he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

4. And

4. And when he had gathered all the chief prieſts and ſcribes of the people together, he demanded of them where * Chriſt ſhould be born.]

* the Chriſt is, or, muſt be born, ὁ Χριστὸς γεννᾶται.

4. And calling the Rulers of the Sanhedrin to him, (ſee note on Mar. 5. 22. a) he propoſed this queſtion to them, What place do your books aſſign for the birth of your expected Meſſias? ſee note on Act. 15. c)

5. And they ſaid unto him, in Bethleem of Judea, for thus it is written by the [prophet]

5. Prophet Micah, c. 5. 2.

† the territory of Judah,

6. And thou Bethleem † in the [c] land of Judah, art [f] not the leaſt among the [g] princes of Judah, for out of thee ſhall come a governour that ſhall rule my people Iſrael.]

6. And thou Bethleem which art part of the portion of land aſſigned to the tribe of Judah in the diviſion, thou wert in precinct, and known by the name of Bethleem Ephrata for its affinity to Ephrath, Gen. 35. 16. though wordly account, one of the leaſt cities of Judah, yet art thou not now by any means the vileſt, but the moſt honourable; for from thee ſhall proceed, or, in thee ſhall be born a Ruler, who ſhall govern my people Iſrael.

7. Then Herod when he had privily called the wiſe-men [h], * enquired of them diligently what time the ſtarre appeared.

8. And he ſent them to Bethleem, and ſaid, Go and ſearch diligently for the young child, and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worſhip him alſo.

* had ſeen εἶδον. † led them along, ἐφώτησεν αὐτούς

9. When they had heard the king, they departed, and loe the ſtarre which they * ſaw in the eaſt, [† went before them, till it came and ſtood over where the young child was]

9. Moved before them in the heavens as a guide to lead them to the place where the child was, and when it came to the point of the heavens which was juſt over the houſe, it ſtood ſtill.

10. When they ſaw the ſtarre, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.]

10. And diſcerning that the ſtar, which they had not ſeen ſo long, appeared again to them, in an horizon ſo far diſtant from that, where they firſt ſaw it, and that it conducted them, and at laſt ſtood ſtill, and pointed out the houſe to them, they rejoiced very exceedingly.

11. And when they were come into the houſe, they ſaw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down and worſhipped him, and when they had opened their treaſures, they preſented unto him gifts [i gold,] and frankincenſe, and myrrhe.

11. Gold as an acknowledgement of a King: which alſo fell out opportunely, to fit the parents for the charge of their journey into Egypt, v. 13.

* by dream κατ' ὄναρ

12. And being warned of God * in a dream, that they ſhould not return to Herod, [they departed into their own countrey another way]

12. They went home a neerer and more private way (not that way which they came, through Jeruſalem, which was about,) and ſo were out of Herods reach before he miſs'd them.

13. And when they were departed, behold, the Angel of the Lord appeareth to Joſeph in a dream, ſaying, Ariſe, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there, untill I bring thee word, for Herod will ſeek the young child to deſtroy him.

14. And when he aroſe, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt.]

14. And upon the Angels warning, after the departure of the Magi, or Aſtronomers, immediatly he took the child and his mother in the night time, and went a private way into Egypt.

15. And was there untill the death of Herod, [that it might be fulfilled that was ſpoken of the Lord by the prophet, ſaying, Out of Egypt have I called my ſon.]

15. And ſo that ſpeech of Hoſ. 11. 1. which had one accompliſhment in the people of Iſraels being carried into, and fetcht out of Egypt, was now again fulfilled in this true promiſed ſeed of Abraham, i. in Chriſt, (of whom Iſrael, called Gods firſt-born, was a type) and in him, now that he was a child, as it was ſaid in Hoſea.

16. Then Herod when he ſaw that he was mocked of the wiſe men was exceeding wroth, and ſent forth and ſlew all the children that were in Bethleem, and all the coaſts thereof, from two yeers old and under, [according to the time which he had * diligently enquired of the wiſe men.]

16. According to the time of Chriſts birth, or according to the age which he had by conference with the Magi, calculated Chriſt to be of, viz. not two years old.

* learn'd, ἠκρίβωσε, ſee Note h.

17. Then was fulfilled that which was ſpoken by Jeremy the prophet,] ſaying,

17. Then had that prophecy of Jeremy, c. 31. 15. (which was delivered firſt to expreſs the captivity of Babylon and ſlaughter of Jeruſalem) another more eminent completion.

18. In Ramah was there a voice heard, lamentation and weeping, and great mourning, [k] Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, becauſe they are not.

19. But when Herod was dead, behold an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joſeph in Egypt,

20. Saying, Ariſe and take the young child, and his mother, and go into the land of Iſrael, for they are dead which ſought the young childs life.

21. And he aroſe and took the young child, and his mother, and came into the land of Iſrael.

22. But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judah, in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither, notwithſtanding being warned of God in a dream, he [turned aſide into the parts of Galilee:]

22. Went into Galilee, where another of Herods ſons Herodes Antipas that contended with Archelaus for the whole kingdome had ſeated himſelf, having gotten that from him. He probably would not be inquiſitive or jealous againſt any, that ſhould be likely to dethrone Archelaus, and ſo there was not from him any apprehenſion of danger. Beſides he was not ſuch a tyrant as Archelaus had diſcovered himſelf to be.

23. And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth, [that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the prophets, He ſhall be called a [l] Nazarene.]

23. And ſo by reſiding and dwelling in Nazareth, he was made capable of that title which is uſed of the Meſſias in the prophets, that he ſhould be Natſer, the branch of the root of Jeſſe, (or, as the word may bear, a Saviour) ſo often promiſed to that people.

2. Μάγοι.

V.1. Wiſe men] The Greek μάγοι ſignifies not only thoſe which in our ordinary dialect we call Magicians, i.e. Sorcerers, but alſo φιλόσοφοι, θεολόγοι, in Heſychius, generally learned men, Students, & Profeſſours of liberall ſciences, eſpecially of Aſtronomy, without any ill character upon them. Theſe were then famous among the * Perſians, and were both their Kings and their Preiſts, and ſo among other nations alſo, but eſpecially the Eaſtern, and were at that time honoured and known for the ſtudy of good learning, and ſo the [ἀπὸ ἀνατολῶν, of, or from the eaſt] is perhaps to be joined with μάγοι the wiſe, or learned men of, or from the Eaſt] (as οἱ ἀπὸ Θεσσαλονίκης Ἰουδαῖοι the Jews of, or from Theſſalonica, Act. 17. 13.) not to the word [came] as if they came from the Eaſt of Jeruſalem thither. Theſe are by an Antient Commentator on Plato mentioned under the name of * Chaldeans, thoſe ſo much famed for skill in Aſtronomy. Now the Time of their coming to Bethleem when it was, is not diſtinctly known, but may be concluded not to be the twelfth day from his birth, not onely by the diſtance of Bethleem from their homes, but eſpecially by one circumſtance which is recorded. 'Tis here ſaid that immediately after theſe wiſe mens departure, the Angel appeared to Joſeph, v. 13. and diſpatched them into Egypt, which could not be before the time of Maries purification, for then ſaith S. Luke, they went up to Jeruſalem, Luk. 2.22. which cannot be ſuppoſed to be after their going into Egypt, nor betwixt the departure of the Magi, and their going thither, for that had been to throw themſelves into Herods hands at Jeruſalem, which they were commanded to avoid, by going into Egypt. From Jeruſalem it ſeems they returned to Bethleem, and there dwelt in an hired houſe, till after the coming and departing of the Magi, and therefore the tradition which makes the Epiphany, the twelf day from the day of the Nativity, may mean it of that time twelve-moneth (according to which it is, that upon exact enquiring the time of the ſtarres appearing, Herod v. 16. appoints the killing of all children from two yeers old and under, which probably he would not have done, if they had told him that the ſtarre appeared but few daies ſince.) Or elſe ſecondly, the word ἐπιφάνεια ſignifying appearance, may denote the time of the firſt appearing of the ſtarre to them in their countries, v. 2. differing from that other appearance, v. 9. and that might well come to be exactly known by the Church, from the intelligence that was given by the Magi, v. 7. and that might be the very twelfe day after Chriſts nativity. But then thirdly, the Greek ἐπιφάνεια is the word to ſignifie Chriſts appearance in the world, the Nativity, which is mong the Ancients commonly ſo ſtyled, ἐπιφάνια, and θεοφάνια, the appearing ſimply, or the appearing of God; and the feaſt of the Nativity being celebrated twelve daies, of which the firſt and the laſt, according to the cuſtome of the Jews in their feaſts were high, or chief dayes of ſolemnity, each of theſe might fitly be called ἐπιφάνια, Epiphanie, in that ſenſe, and not only referring to the ſtar, though not excluding but containing it alſo, as a ſpecial circumſtance belonging to the nativity.

* Μάγοι καὶ παρ' Πέρσαις οἱ φιλόσοφοι καὶ φιλόσοφοι, ὧν ἦρχε Ζωροάστρης, Phavorin.

* Χαλδαίους

b. ὁ πρῶτος ἑρμηνεύς.

V.2. King of the Jews] Whether the Angel of God had appeared to thoſe Magi, & told them that ſuch a perſon was born, who was, or, ſhould be king of the Jews (and that in an extraordinary manner, the Meſſias whom that Nation did according to Propheſies fully expect about this time) is utterly uncertain, being neither here, nor any where elſe diſtinctly affirmed. Yet ſome way of revelation may probably be conjectured, or ſuppoſed, by their calling him the King of the Jews, which they could not read in the ſtar, unleſs either the prophecie of Balaam, or ſome other of Daniel, &c. had directed them, thus to apprehend, or unleſs the Angel had appeared to them, as he did to the Shepheards, Lu. 2.11. ſaying, There is born to you this day a Saviour, which is the anointed Lord (i. e. Prince, or, King here) in the city of David, i. e. (in another phraſe, the ſame with this here) the King of the Jews, with an emphaſis on [the] The expected King, or, Meſſias. Theſe Magi then having ſome way apprehended and beleeved thus much already, that this ſo honourable perſon, the deſire of all nations, the expectation of the very Gentiles, was born, came to Jeruſalem, and enquired for him, πῦ ἐστι; where is this King, which is born?

c. Ἀστέρα αὐτοῦ

Ib. His ſtar] His ſtar ſignifies an extraordinary ſtar appearing in the heaven, obſerved by thoſe Magi in the field to differ from the ordinary ſtars of heaven, & ſome way interpreted to them to be the Index or finger to point out this miraculous Birth, the ἀφεῖχ & to light him into the world. Concerning this it is obſervable which we find in Chalcidius in his Comment upon Plato's Timæus, who relating ſome portentous ſignificancies of ſtarres, adds, *Eſt quoque alia venerabilior & ſanctior hiſtoria, quæ perhibet ortu ſtellæ cujuſdam inſolitæ non morbos, * moreſque prænunciatos, ſed deſcenſum Dei venerabilis ad humanæ ſervationis rerúmque mortalium gratiam, quam à Chaldæis obſervatam fuiſſe teſtantur, qui Deum nuper natum muneribus venerati ſunt. There is alſo a more venerable and ſacred hiſtory* (the Goſpel, no doubt) which mentions the riſing of one extraordinary ſtar, by which was foretold, not the diſeaſes and (tempers, or,) manners of men, but the deſcent of a venerable God* (or of a God, who is to be reverenced) in favour to the preſervation of men (or, ſalvation, as it ſeems he collected out of the word σωτῆρ in S. Luke 2.7.) and the benefit of mortals here below, which ſtarre they teſtifie the Goſpel again) to have been obſerved by the Chaldeans, (the Magi, v. 1.) who came to this God which was newly born and worſhipped and preſented him.

d. Ἀνατολὴ

Ib. In the Eaſt] Theſe obſervers learned in Aſtronomy & curious in their daily beholding the riſing and ſetting of the ſtars, ſaw at this time a Star riſe, which they never had ſeen before, and were amazed at it, as at a new prodigious ſight, which did certainly preſage ſomething of great conſideration. This riſing of the ſtar may poſſibly be ſignified by ἀνατολὴ here, and [ἐν ἀνατολῇ] be rendred not [in the Eaſt] either here, or v. 9. but [at the riſing of it] or [when it aroſe] and that it ſhould be ſo rendred, may be gueſſed by the ortu ſtellæ, &c. in Chalcidius out of the ſanctior hiſtoria, i.e. out of this Goſpel, and tis obſervable to this purpoſe that among the Greek Aſtronomers, the riſing of ſtars is called ἀνατολὴ and ἔκπτωλη, (as ἀνατολὴ ἡλίου, the riſing of the ſun, Apoc. 7. 2.) and the ſetting of them δύσις, but the Eaſt is commonly expreſs'd in the plural number ἀνατολαὶ, as tis here diſtinctly, v. 1. and the Weſt δυσμαὶ, and ſo they are uſed Mat. 8. 11. they ſhall come ἀπ' ἀνατολῶν καὶ δυσμῶν, and ſo Lu 13.29. and Mat. 24. 27. All this put together would make that of [ἐν τῇ ἀνατολῇ, at the riſing of the ſtarre] both here, and v. 9. a probable rendring, but becauſe ἀνατολὴ in the ſingular doth once ſignifie the Eaſt. Rev. 21. 13. and becauſe the 9th verſe ſeems to ſet down the ſeveral places of the Starres appearance, now juſt vertical to the houſe where Chriſt was, as before ἐν τῇ ἀνατολῇ, which ſeems to denote the place, where they firſt ſaw it, and whence they came, v. 1. It may therefore be rendred [in the Eaſt] in both places.

e. Τῇ Ζαβουλών

V.6. In the Land] The word γῆ is the nominative case, and here signifies that portion (i.e. a part of it) which belonged to the Regal tribe, (as c 4.15. γῆ Ζαβουλὼν καὶ γῆ Νεφθαλείμ, is the portion of Zabulon and Nephthalim) and though it were a town or city, yet it is capable enough of that appellation, as the city of the Sodomites, and of those of Gomorrha, is called by the same word, γῆ Σοδόμων, &c. c. 10.15. and is vulgarly rendred the land, clearly the city of Sodome.

f. Οὐδαμῶς ἐλαχίστη εἶ

Ib. Not the least] Some doubt hath been of the agreement of this phrase [οὐδαμῶς ἐλαχίστη εἶ, thou art by no means the least] with the Hebrew Mich. v. 2. לִהְיוֹת צָעִיר which the Septuagint render ὀλιγοστὸς εἶ, and the Vulgar, Parvulus es, thou art little. But M. Edward Pocock, a great Master of the Oriental languages, hath evidenced out of many learned Grammarians that this word צָעִיר, little) signifies also the quite contrary, and is used for Primaria, Judex, Princeps, Magistratus, all great ones: So Jer. 48.4. Rabbi Tanchum renders צְעִירֶיהָ his Princes and Governours; And so the Chaldee Paraphrast there, סלטנהא his Sultans, or Rulers: So Ebn Jannahium a learned Grammarian, affirms of צָעִיר that it is one of the words, that signifie contraries and cites Zach. 13.7. where הַצְּעָרִים, saith he, signifies Nobles and Princes. And so the Author of the Hebrew-Arabick Glossary sets סולטאן Sultan, Ruler, or Prince, for one of the significations of צָעִיר, and so in that place of Zachary, the Septuagint render it ποιμένας Pastors, and the Syriack עלנא Superiors, and the Arabick Pastors or Rulers. Many words of that sort, which have such contrary significations, Mr. P. hath collected, to confirm this interpretation.

g. Ἡγεμόσιν

Ib. Princes] In stead of the Hebr. word in Mi. 5.2. rendred [the thousands] the Evangelist hath here set ἡγεμόνες Rulers: The meaning of it will not be discerned, but by remembring a custome of the Jews, among whom the people was distributed by chiliads or thousands, so many in a town, or city, not that that number was so to continue, and not to exceed, but (as we see in our hundreds or wapentakes, which, as by the original of the view of Frank-pledge appears, was first an Hundred families precisely, but since hath much varyed) onely in relation to the first distribution. Hence it is, that such a division, or town, or city is in the old Testament phrase called a chiliad or thousand, as in Micha it is, and Jud. 6.15. where the ordinary translation reads [My family is poor in Manasseh] but the Hebrew rendred in the margine is [My thousand is the meanest, &c.] Of every such Division there was some Lord, or Chief, under whom the whole multitude were, as under a Patriarch, or head of a family, and such was Gedeon, Jud. 6.15. when he saith [My thousand] and as it is ordinary for a King of any nation in Authors to signifie not onely the person of the King, but the whole people under him also; so here the ἡγεμόνες, Rulers, in the Evangelist are the very same with the thousands in the Prophet, and each of them signifie the towns or cities of Judah, such as Bethleem was, which is here spoken of, as the place where the Messias was to be born, according to that in Micha aforesaid. Unto which also agrees that known Oracle, that ex Judæa profecti rerum potirentur, Rulers should come out of Judea, which is mentioned both by Tacitus and Suetonius (and by them falsly applyed to Vespasian) and also by Cicero in l. 2. De Divinat. by Virgil in Eclog. 4. by Suidas in Αυγυστος. Where as the [rerum potiri] is the direct rendring of the Hebrew מֹשֵׁל in Micha and ποιμαίνειν here (in the sense wherein not onely Homer calls Agamemnon ποιμένα λαῶν, and Xenophon also defines, Βασιλικὰ ἔργα ὄντα νομίσῃς ἀγαθὰ, καὶ βασιλέως ἀγαθὰ, the two offices of a Pastor and a King are neer, and answerable one to another; but wherein Ezechiel also describes the Regal power by that of Shepheards, c.34.23, 24.) so to the [ex Judæa profecti] is the very literal rendring of the [ἐκ σοῦ ἐξελεύσεται] here.

V.7. Enquired of them diligently] Ἀκριβολογοῦμαι is to enquire diligently, ἀκριβῶς ἐξετάζειν, v. 8. but ἀκριβόω with an accusative of the thing, as ἀκριβῶ τὰ χθιζὰ, or ἀκριβῶ χρόνον, here signifies to learn exactly by enquiry, ἀκριβῶς ὀπτᾶσθαι, to know exactly, saith Phavorinus, and ἀκρίβεια, ἡ ἀκεραία κατάληψις, the accurate knowledge of any thing saith Hesychius.

h. Ἀκριβῶσον

V.11. Gold, &c.] Among the gifts that Abraham gave to the sons of Chetura, there were (say the traditions of the Jews) Gold, Frankincense, and Myrrhe, which he had received from the Kings of Sodome and Gomorrha, as Epiphanius cites it out of them in the Exposition of the Cathol. Faith, and therefore (saith he) their posterity in Magodia, a region of Arabia, presented the same gifts to Christ at his Nativity.

i. Χρυσὸς, λίβανος, σμύρνα

V.18. Rachel weeping] That which is here cited out of Jeremy 31.15. was there a Prophetick and figurative speech spoken of the captivity of Babylon, and the slaughter at Hierusalem (a city of the tribe of Benjamin the son of Rachel) long after Rachels death, who therefore did not really weep, but is set to express a lamentable slaughter, and so also it hath here a second completion in this killing of the Infants in Bethleem; the people of the Iews being by an ordinary Synechdoche capable of the title of Benjamin, because in the breach of the Kingdome the two tribes of Iudah and Benjamin make up that people, and therefore Rachel, Benjamins mother is also here figuratively brought in, lamenting this slaughter as of her children, and that the more properly, because she was buryed in Bethleem, Gen. 35.19.

k. Ῥαχὴλ κλαίουσα

V.23. A Nazarene] That he should be called a Nazarene, as that signifies an Inhabitant of (or one that sprang from) the city Nazareth, is no where found to be affirmed in the Prophets of the old Testament. That which is here observable, is, 1. That there is an Hebraisme ordinarily to be discerned in the word [κληθήσῃ, he shall be called] The Hebrew word דבר signifies promiscuously a word and a thing, and is rendred ῥῆμα or λόγος, word, when it denotes a matter, or thing. So Exod. 8.12. עַל דְּבַר, διὰ λόγῳ βατράχων, about the word, i.e. the businesse of the frogs. So 1 Kings 14.19. the rest of the acts of Ieroboam, are in the Hebrew וְיֶתֶר דִּבְרֵי πεπαυδὼν ῥῆμα, and v. 29. λοιπὰ λόγων, the rest of the words. So Tob. 1.1. βίβλος λόγων, the book of the words, i.e. a Commentary or story of the actions. And so 1 Kings 11.41. So Luke 2.15. ῥῆμα τοῦτο γεγονὸς, this word, i.e. thing, which is done. So Acts 8.21. Mark 1.45. Luke 1.37. By the same analogy and proportion the two words, καλεῖσθαι and εἶναι [to be called] and [to be] are all one (as names and persons, Act. 1.15. and Luke 6.22. Revel. 3.4. & 11.13.) So Isai. 56.7. and Mar. 11.17. My house shall be called, i.e. shall be to all people an house of prayer, i.e. there shall be a Court, or Atrium in it for the Gentiles, as well as for the Iews; and so Saint Luke reads it οἶκος ἐυχῆς ὅτι, it is an house of prayer. So Isai. 9.6. his name shall be called wonderful, i.e. he shall be a wonderfull person, so Lu. 1.32. he shall be called, i.e. he shall be the son of the highest, & v. 36. καλουμένη στείρα, she that is called i.e. that is barren and Apoc. 19.13. his name is called, i.e. he is the word of God, and Mat. 5.19. he shall be called, i.e. he shall really be the least, &c. So Gen. 21.12. In Isaac shall thy seed be called, i.e. the seed to which the blessing sing belongs, shall be from Isaac. And accordingly here [he shall be called] is no more then [he shall be] Secondly, it must be observed that the Evangelist accommodates unto this matter (of his dwelling in Nazareth) a title by the Prophet oft applyed to the Messias, that of נצר surculus, a branch, and so (by that Hebraism) the meaning of these words [κληθήσεται Ναζωραῖος, he shall be called a Nazarean] will be no more then this, [He shall be that Netser in the Prophets] paraphrased in the Targum by משיחא Messiah, but by the Greek rendred ἄνθος, a flower, Isa. 11. 1. perhaps by a mistake of נצר for נץ flos, leaving out the ר, or else in a wider acception of ἄνθος, for any branch, or plant. From whence, no question, it is that Phavorinus speaking of this word Ναζωραῖος, besides the ordinary acceptions of it, adds ἤ κατά τινας ἄνθος, some use the word for a flower, referring to the Greek rendring of נצר in Isaiah, but applying it to Ναζωραῖος in the Evangelist, which no doubt signifies that learned Grammarians opinion, that נצר and Ναζωραῖος are all one. But beside this acception of the word for a branch or plant, it may also be observed that the radix נצר signifying servavit, and God being called by a name coming from that radix, Iob. 7. 20. Prov. 24. 12. it may also possibly intimate the title of Saviour, which is so often given him in the Prophets, and which is the importance of נוצר and the Arabick Nazir a defendour or protectour, according to which 'tis cleer that Is. 60. where the Hebrew reads נצר a branch, and the Targum נצבא a plant, the Greek reads φυλάσσων keeper taking it for נצר without points. But the former notation of the word, as it referres to the branch of the root of Iesse, is that which is to be preferred in this place, and the meaning of the [ἵνα πληρωθῇ] that by his dwelling in Nazareth he came to be styled הנצרי or Nazaren, i. e. that true branch, of which the Prophets, Isa. 11. 1. Ier. 23. 5. & 33. 14. Zach. 6. 12. & 3. 8. Isa. 4. 2. had so often spoken. This I conceive to be the truest notion of the word Ναζωραῖος, both because the Iews call Christ הנצרי with צ from the Hebrew נצר with צ, and because this onely can be said to have been foretold διὰ τῶν Προφητῶν, by the Prophets. Others indeed think it not improbable that it should referre to the word נזר with ז, which signifies separavit. For thus also the Greek ζ in Ναζωραῖος and Ναζαρηνὸς (which are indifferently used in the Gospels) would bear; and to this purpose it is observed, that when Gen. 49. 26. & Deut. 33. 16. Ioseph is called נזיר אחיו one separated from his brethren, the Latin reads, Nazoraus fratrum suorum: and it may be considered to this purpose, how fitly Ioseph was a type of Christ, as he is represented to us in this chapter. As Ioseph was by his brethren sold into Egypt, so is Christ by the persecution of Herod driven thither. As Ioseph was separated from his brethren and cast out from among them, so was Christ for fear of Archelaus separated from his own tribe of Iudah, and constrained to dwell in Nazareth of Galilee, whose name may denote that flight or separation: and lastly, as נזיר in Zachary 7. 3. is used for an afflicted humbled person, one separate from the comforts of life, his daily bread, so is this applyable to Christs being brought up in Nazareth, a vile place (Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?) and so a speciall part of Christs humiliation to live there. This other account of the word I cannot further commend to the Reader; yet thought it not amiss to mention it, as it is. The former of the Branch] is most commodious and satisfactory; All the difficulty is, how this dwelling in Nazareth should be said to be designed to the fulfilling of that prophecy, which referres not at all to his dwelling there. In answer to which, it is first to be remembred, (what was said on c. 1. note k.) that the word [ἵνα that] is here ἐκβατικὸν not αἰτιολογικὸν, and notes no more then this, that by this passage of story, those passages of the Prophets received a completion; and secondly that Prophecies are sometimes said to be completed or fulfilled, when strictly and properly (or in the primitive sense of the words of the Prophet) they are not fulfilled, but onely in a large acception of them, so as by way of Accommodation they may be applyable to what is come to pass, or that the thing done may reflect or referre to such words in the Prophets, or bring them to the minds of men. Thus doth the Author to the Hebrews from the interpretation of Salem, of which Melchisedek (the Type of Christ) was King, conclude Christ to be the prince of peace. Is. 9. And then why may not the Evangelist here from his dwelling in Nazareth (and so being capable of the title הנצרי) conclude as properly that the appellation נצר that Isaiah foretold of him, did now appear to belong to him though not in that sense in which 'twas first affirmed of him, yet) by way of Accommodation? which it will doe more discernibly, if it be considered, that as Cinnereth in Ioshua (reteined by the Hierusalem Targum, Num. 34. 15.) was after chang'd into Gennesareth the valley of branches, (and therefore Christs abode and conversation was so much about that lake, by which he shewed himself to be truly that branch so oft prophecyed of) so in all probability that city in the tribe of Nephthali which is called En Hazor, Ios. 19. 37. was after contracted and lightly changed into Nazor and Nazareth to signifie the city of the branch, or where the Messiah [the branch] should be brought up, and accordingly this becomes Christs vulgar title, Ναζωραῖος, Mat. 26. 71. Mar. 10. 47. Lu. 18. 37. 24. 19. Iohn 18. 5, 7. and 19. 19. and seven times in the Acts, and Ναζαρηνὸς (in the same notion) sometimes, Mar. 1. 24. 14. 67. 16. 6. and Luk. 4. 34.

CHAP. III.

1. Now before Christs entring upon the first part of his office, that of preaching the will of God, called his prophetick office (in which he continued till his crucifixion) it was necessary to set down the office of John Baptist, who proclaimed his comming before-hand as his harbinger, or forerunner and at whose baptizing of Christ, the holy Ghost visibly descended on him, and consecrated him to this prophetick office. And thus it was, while Jesus continued at Nazareth, though many years after his first coming thither, John the Baptist preached in the desert called the desert of Judea (differing from other deserts mentioned in the Scripture, under the name of Maon, Engaddi, Ziph, the desert of Idumea, &c.) by a river side neer Enon and Salim.

Not giving them any new precepts of life, but charging them with their breaches against the rule or law which they had already, and accordingly saying to all that people, Reform, & mend your lives, for the kingdome of the Messias, so long look'd for, is now approaching, and so the time that God shall come to execute most visible judgments on this land (even to an utter destruction, if ye repent not at this preaching of John and Christ) and withall bestow most eminent and remarkable preservations upon all penitent believers.

2. And saying, [b] Repent ye, for the [c] kingdome of heaven is at hand. b. c.

3. And this according to that which Iſaiah c. 40. ſaith, He ſhall preach in the wilderneſſe of Judea, and the ſumme of his preaching ſhall be, The approach of the Lords coming to receive his Kingdome, and upon his being rejected, coming with his hoſts againſt the obdurate and rebellious, to deſtroy them that would not let him reign over them. See note c.

Wore a rough garment made of Camels haire (ſuch as Elias had, 2 Kings 1. 8. and was thence called an hairy-man) or of ſackcloth, Rev. 11. 3. agreeable to his being in the wilderneſſe, and nothing to gird it to him, but (as Elias again) a peice of leather made of ſome beaſts skin, and he eat nothing but either a larger ſort of graſhoppers, called locuſts, Rev. 11. 22. (or elſe, as ſome think, green herbs) and field-honey, i. e. neither bread nor wine, Mat. 11. 18. Luke 7. 33. but only ſuch as the wilderneſſe, or as the wood brought forth.

5. Then went out to him Jeruſalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan.

6. And were baptized of him in Jordan, confeſſing their ſins]

5, 6. And upon this fearful denouncing of his againſt the Jews, a great multitude of Jews of all parts went out to him, and confeſſed their ſins, which might juſtly bring down theſe judgements on them, each acknowledging his own particular guilts, and promiſing reformation. And he received them by baptiſme, or immerſion in the water of Jordan, promiſing them pardon, upon the ſincerity of their converſion, and amendment, or reformation of their lives.

7. But when he ſaw many of the Phariſees and Sadduces come to his baptiſme, he ſaid unto them, [O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?]

7. O ye, that are more like to broods of venemous creatures, than the progeny of Abraham, who hath admoniſhed you to make uſe of this means to eſcape this deſtruction approaching?

8. Bring forth therefore * fruits meet for repentance.

8. See that your reformation be ſincere, producing fruits worthy of the ſtock from which you glory to ſpring (i. e. of Abraham, v. 9. who is your father indeed, but from whom you are ſo farre degenerated, that you are become broods of vipers, v. 7.) or abſolutely (as Acts 26. 20.) meet, fit, ſeaſonable fruits, ſuch as may avert or prevent thoſe judgements.

9. And †f think not to ſay within your ſelves, we have Abraham to our father, for I ſay unto you, that God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children unto Abraham]

9. And ſay not, or, doe not pleaſe and ſatisfie your ſelves in ſaying or thinking, that you have the privilege of being children of Abraham, which will be able to ſecure you; For God hath not ſuch need of children of Abraham, that he may not deſtroy them; he can, without breach of promiſe to him, deſtroy them all, and then out of the obdurate Gentile world (or, if he pleaſe, out of the ſtones in the ſtreets) produce and raiſe up a people to himſelf, followers of the faith of Abraham, and ſo as pretious to God, and to whom the promiſes made to Abraham as truly belong, as to the proudeſt Jew among you.

10. * And now alſo the axe is laid to the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewen down, and caſt into the fire.

10. But now are Gods judgments come home to this people, and ready to ſeize upon the whole nation, and ſhall actually fall upon every unreformed ſinner among you. See note on Acts 15. c. (In this how every ſort of people are concerned, ſee Luke 3. 10. &c.)

* But the axe is even already, ἤδη δὲ καὶ ἡ ἀξίνη.

11. I indeed § baptize you with water unto repentance, but he that cometh after me is mightier then I, whoſe ſhoos I am not worthy to *h bear, he ſhall baptize you with the holy Ghoſt, and with fire.]

11. But, this is not all I have to ſay to you; Beſide this warning you to repent, I am alſo ſent to tell you, that the Meſſias is now at hand, ready to enter on his office. And indeed all that I doe, is to preach repentance, and to receive proſelytes after the Jewiſh manner, with water, the only ceremony that I uſe; but Chriſt, who, though he comes after me, is much ſuperior to me, and whoſe diſciple or ſervant I am not worthy to be, (he being that great prophet foretold by Moſes, that all muſt hear under pain of utter exciſion, and accordingly reforming and hightning Moſes's law, which I have not meddled with, ſave to call you to repent of the breach of it) he ſhall come in greater pomp, ſhall firſt ſend the holy Ghoſt to come down viſibly on ſome of you his choſen diſciples, who ſhall beleeve in him, and to whom he ſhall entruſt all power in his Church after him, thereby not only to aſſure them of the truth of his doctrine, but alſo to conſecrate them to his ſervice (ſee note on Acts 1. a.) to preach his doctrine to the whole world (but firſt to all the cities of Jury.) And this ſhall be another manner of initiating of diſciples, mine with water, but his with fire, which will purge thoſe things which water will not, and this fire perhaps an embleme of ſomething elſe; For immediately after that, by that time they have preached thorough all the cities of Jury, he ſhall alſo come down with fire, or flaming judgments, on the obdurate unbeleevers, v. 12. (ſee Acts 2. 17, 19. &c.) and at the end of the world, reward every man according to his works.

13. Then cometh Jeſus] from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him.

13. While John was thus a preaching and baptizing, and had gathered good ſtore of diſciples, Jeſus cometh.

14. But John forbad him,] ſaying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comeſt thou to me?

14. And John beſought him it might be otherwiſe.

15. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid unto him, Suffer it to be ſo now, for thus it becometh us [to fulfill all righteouſneſſe. Then he ſuffered him.]

15. To doe all thoſe things which are by God required of all under this ſtate of Johns miniſtery, (ſee note on Rom. 1. b) and by ſo doing, i. e. by my receiving baptiſme from thee, God hath determin'd to inaugurate me to my office of preaching the Goſpel, by ſending down his Spirit upon me at that time, and giving me teſtimony from heaven; upon this John permitted him, and baptized him, and accordingly it came to paſſe.

16. And Jeſus when he was baptized, went up ſtraightway out of the water, and loe the heavens were opened unto him, and he ſaw the Spirit of God deſcending *k like a dove, and lighting upon him.]

16. For Jeſus, as ſoon as he was baptized, went out of the water before John, and aſſoon as ever he came out of the water, he fell down on his knees in prayer to his father, Luke 3. 21. and whilſt he was praying, behold the heavens (ſee Acts 7. 56.) either really, or after ſome remarkable manner of appearance, parted aſunder viſibly before Chriſt, and the Spirit of God deſcended upon him, as a dove deſcends upon any thing, viſibly hovering, and lighting upon him, (ſo Mark 1. 10.) and John Baptiſt ſaw and diſcerned what was done, Jo. 1. 32.

17. And loe a voice from heaven, ſaying, [This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed.]

17. And as the heavens parted aſunder, a thunder came out, and (joyned with it) a voice, delivering theſe words, This is, &c. i. e. This is my ſon whom I have ſent on purpoſe to reveal my will by him, and whatſoever he teaches comes from me, and is perfectly my will or law.

a. Βαπτιστὴς

V. 1. The Baptist] That we may understand the meaning of the title Baptist, we must first know what was meant by the washings among the Jews. Their frequent every day washings I now speak not of, but referre them to their proper place, Mark 7. 3. Those which we now speak of were those of the whole body, of which sort were first the Washings of the Priests, when they went into the Temple to minister or officiate, for that they never did after the building of the Temple, but they first wash'd their whole body. At the going into the Tabernacle washing the hands and feet was sufficient, Exod. 30. 20. but not so after the building of the Temple: see Cod. Joma, c. 3. They bring the Priest to the house of washing, לבית הטבילה, which was without the Temple over the water-gate. There (as it follows §. 3.) the Priest washes, and though he be under no legall uncleanesse, yet he never enters but he washes first, and (§. 4.) he puts off his clothes and goes down, and washes. The washing of his hands and feet, which was oft repeated (10. times in a day §. 3.) was done in the Temple. over the house of Happarvah, as 'tis there called; but this first washing of the whole body was constantly used before the entrance into the Temple (four times more in the Temple on the day of Expiation) for it was not lawful to come in thither without washing first, an imitation of which are the washings and lustrations among the Gentiles. A second sort was the washing of the Proselytes, who were to be received into the Church or Temple of the Jewes, and so to be wash'd at their entrance, as the Priests at their going into the Temple. Those Proselytes I mean, which being not born of Jewish but Heathen parents, became Proselytes of Justice, i. e. receiv'd the Jewish religion, and submitted to their whole Law, were circumcised, &c. These men were admitted by the Jewes, not only by Circumcision and (while the Temple stood) by Sacrifice, but also with this ceremony, or solemnity of Washing, i. e. ablution of the whole body, done solemnly in a River, or other such great place, or receptacle of waters; so saith the Talmud of Jethro Moses's father-in-law, בהגיר במילה ובטבילה במים He was made a Proselyte by circumcision, and immersion in water, Tr. Repudii: and the manner of this immersion is said to be, that they should sit in water up to the neck, and in the while learn some of the precepts of the Law, both hard and easie. This ceremony of their Initiation was never upon any occasion reiterated, say the Jewish writers (see note on Joh. 13. 6.) and belonged not only to those which being of years came over from Heathenisme to the Jewes religion, but also to their children-infants, if their parents, and the consessus under which they were, did in behalf of their children desire it, and on condition, that the children, when they came to age should not renounce the Jewes religion. Nay, the native Jewes themselves were thus baptized, so saith the Talmud, Tr. Repud. ישראל לא באו לברית אלא בשלשה דברים במילה ובטבילה ובהרציות הקרבן אף הגרים כיוצא בהם The Israelites doe not enter into Covenant but by these three things, Circumcision, and Baptism, and Peace-offering, and the proselytes likewise. Now these that were thus initiated, did put off all their former relations, not only their former worships and manners, but their relations of kindred, &c. and came forth, as if they had been new born, of a new mother, as the Talmud oft expresses it. So that he which was kin to him before, shall from thenceforth cease to be so, i. e. to be so accounted by him. To which I suppose our Saviour referres, when he speaks of leaving father, and mother, and wife, and children, &c. Mark 10. 29. Luke 18. 29. and when he talkes of being born again of water, &c. To this no question belongs that of Tacitus Hist. l. 5. speaking of those that went over to the Jewes religion, nec quicquam priùs imbuuntur, quàm contemnere Deos, exuere patriam, parentes, liberos, fratres vilia habere, they are taught by their first admission to despise, i. e. to forsake, their fathers and mothers, children and brethren, &c. And the Jewes have a saying, that he that hath married a wife too neer of kin to him, if he turn Proselyte to the Jewes, and receive their Baptism, he is no longer neer of kin to the woman, and so may now lawfully live with her. Of this custome of Baptizing Proselytes among the Jewes, we have a clear testimony in Arrian the Stoick Philosopher in his Epictetus, l. 2. c. 9. where the Proselyte Jew is by him styled βεβαμμένος, dipt, or baptized, and he that is not really converted to their religion, but only λόγῳ in word, or outward profession and shew, is by him called παραβαπτιστὴς a counterfeit baptized person. Having said thus much of the custom among the Jewes, 'tis now most easie to apply it to the practise of John, and after of Christ, who certainly took this ceremony from them. Hence was John's baptism, as theirs, in a River, in Jordan, Mark 1. 5. in a confluence of much waters, as in Ænon, John 3. 23. because, as it is added, there was much water there, and therefore as the Jewes writing in Greek call those Lakes wherein they wash themselves κολυμβήθρα, so in the Christian Church the βαπτιστήριον, or vessel which contained the baptismal-water, is oft called κολυμβήθρα a swimming, or, diving place, with some reference also to that ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ. John 5. 2. where the cures were wrought on them that went down into it. The other parts of the parallel will easily apply themselves; all that is proper to this place is only this, that John preaching repentance to the Jewes in the desert, received all that came unto him, as new Proselytes, forsaking their old relations, i. e. their sins, and in token of their resolved change put them into the water, dipped them all over, and so took them out again, and upon the sincerity of their change promised them remission of their sins, and told them of the Messias, which was suddenly to appear among them, and warned them to beleive on him.

Προσήλυτοι

b. Μετάνοια

V. 2. Repent ye] This μετάνοια is not only sorrow for sin, or wishing it undone, but a change of mind, μετάθεσις τῆς νοῦ, conversion, Mal. 4. 6. and reformation, μετάνοια ἀπὸ πονηρῶν ἔργων, Heb. 6. 1. Repentance not only for, but from dead or sinfull workes. Both very necessary.

c. Τῶν οὐρανῶν

Ib. Kingdome of heaven] The phrase βασιλεία τῶν οὐρανῶν, or τοῦ Θεοῦ the kingdome of heaven, and, of God signifies in the New Testament the kingdome of the Messias, or that state or condition, which is a most lively image of that which we beleive to be in Heaven, and therefore called by that name. For as Gods regal power exercised in Heaven consists in assisting, defending, and rewarding all his faithful subjects, and in warning, punishing, and destroying his obdurate enemies, so this kingdome of the Messias is an exact Image, or resemblance of it; And being, as 'tis elsewhere affirm'd, not of this world, a Secular kingdome, but consisting especially in subduing the world to his dominion, That is done first by the descent of the Spirit, and preaching the Gospel, by his word powerfully working in some, and bringing them unto the Faith, and then by his iron rod executing vengeance on others, viz. the contumacious and obdurate (to this purpose that Parable deliver'd by Christ, Luke 19. 12. on occasion of their thinking that the Kingdom of God should presently appear, v. 11. is very considerable: see the place,) and particularly those of the Nation of the Jewes after the crucifixion of Christ. And accordingly this kingdom of God will generally signifie these two together, not only the first alone, but in conjunction with it, that other more tragicall part of it also. That 'tis used so here may be discerned; First by that which is said in Malachy, by way of Prophecy, of Johns preaching, c. 4. 5. that he should come before the great and terrible day of the Lord, (see note on c. 17. a.) i. e. before the fatal destruction of this people, and also in Isaiah, that when he cryed in the wilderness, this was part of his crying [Prepare ye the way of the Lord:] noting him an anteambulo, or forerunner of Christ's coming (which what it signifies will be explained, Mat. 24. b.) and again, Every valley shall be exalted, and every hill brought low; Which although it were Literally spoken by the Prophet, of the reducing the people from Captivity to their own country, (expressing it by the former deliverance and passage out of Egypt through uneven craggy wayes in the desert, which yet by Gods conduct were made passable to them, and they brought at last to a Canaan) and Mystically of the removing all Obstacles in our way to felicity and blisse, yet may farther be applied to this of the Roman armies coming against Jerusalem, and perhaps be explained by that passage in Josephus de Bell. Jud. l. 6. c. 12. that the high and low places were made plain for the coming of the Roman Army, and engines against Jerusalem, in like manner, as when * Strabo saith of the Romans, ἔσφωσαν ἢ κ τὰς κατὰ τὴν χώραν ὁδοὺς, προσβάντες ὀκλοπάς τε λόφων, κ ἐγκώσεις κοιλάδων, they plain'd the wayes through the region, cutting down the hils, and filling up the hollow places. And so the verses of Sibylla Erythræa (set down by [a] St. Augustine and [b] Prosper) beginning with Judicii signum, the sign of judgement, and E cœlo Rex adveniet, the coming of the king from heaven, and that in carnem, into the flesh, præsens ut judicet Orbem, that being present he may judge the world, there follows,

the destruction of the earth or land, i. e. (in the sacred Dialect) of Judæa.

Secondly, by that which follows here v. 10. as the explication of this text of the Baptists [and now also the axe is laid to the root of the tree, every tree therefore that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down, and cast into the fire] and again v. 7. by the ὀργὴ μέλλουσα [the wrath ready to come upon them] which is proportionable, or parallel to the approaching kingdome of heaven, as the exhortation v. 8. of bringing forth meet fruits of repentance, is to μετανοεῖτε repent, and so directly in that Prophecy of Malachi's concerning the coming and preaching of John Baptist, Mal. 4. 5. 6. the summe of his preaching is expressed by the effect of it, He shall turn the heart of the fathers to (or, with) the children, and the heart of the children to (or, with) their fathers, i. e. shall convert all sorts of Jewes, young and old, fathers and children, preach conversion and repentance to them, lest I, (i. e. God) come and smite the earth (or, land) with a curse; Where, as Gods coming is interpreted by his smiting Judæa (curses and inflictions on that land) so is this Denunciation of those judgments, part of that Baptist's sermon, and the repentance or conversion by him preach'd, the only meanes to avert them. And so likewise in Isai. 40. the revealing the glory of the Lord, &c. v. 5. may be 1. the preaching of the Gospel, and then the visibleness of Gods judgements on all the Jewes in Judæa, and the sixth, seventh and eighth verses very fitly referre to the sudden Destruction of that people, as the withering of grasse, or fading of flowers upon Gods blowing upon them, whereby his Displeasure is expressed. To which yet his preservation of the remnant (as here his gathering the wheat into his garner v. 12.) his protecting of the few beleivers (so that not an hair of their heads shall fall, Luke 21. 18.) is immediately annex'd v. 9, 10, 11. And accordingly [the kingdome of God] here is not so to be restrain'd to the Punitive part, but that it also contein under it that other peice of Regality, which consists in protecting of subjects, and rewarding them which doe well also, which should be most visible at the time of his punishments on the obstinate, his burning the chaffe with unquenchable fire. To this purpose the words of Saint Luke, c. 21. v. 18, 31. are most remarkable, where setting down distinctly the Signs and forerunners of the destruction of the Temple and that people, and among those prognosticks, the great persecutions which the Disciples should find from the Jewes, he bids them then cheerfully look up, v. 28. for their ἀπολύτρωσις Redemption, deliverance from these hazards and pressures, draweth neer, and, with a short Parable interposed to expresse it, he adds v. 31. Know that the Kingdome of God is at hand, this Kingdome surely here, which now approached, but should then be more neer, wherein the judgement of God should be most visible in judging betwixt the Wheat and Straw, burning up the refuse, destroying the impenitent unbelieving Jews, but protecting and setting safe on the shore all the Disciples & beleivers, and that by the very destruction of these their Brethren who were their chiefest persecutors, v. 16. This sense will be the more unquestion'd, if it be observ'd, that when Christ himself begins to preach, he used these same words, c. 4. 17. by which it is clear, that Christ's preaching the Gospel was not the only thing meant by this kingdome (as 'tis generally supposed) because that was then actually present, when Christ saith only [ἤγγικα, it is nigh approaching.] And if it be said, that ἤγγικα in the Preter tense, expressed by the Latine, appropinquavit, may signifie that it hath been neer, but now is present; Then first I answer, that that Grammaticall nicety will not be appliable to many other places of Scripture, where that Tense is used. 2. That even the full Grammaticall importance of it will be made up by rendring it [it hath for some time been approaching] that peoples sins long calling for it. 3. Luke 21. 31. (which was long after this, and withall a prediction of a time then Future) 'tis then but ἐγγύς ἐστι the kingdome of God is nigh. And as by Christ, so when the Apostles are sent out by him the same stile is still prescrib'd them, Mat. 10. 7. As you go, preach, saying, The Kingdome of heaven is at hand. And as it is to this same sense affirmed by Christ, that he came to send a sword ἐπὶ τ γῆν, i. e. a slaughter on the land of Judea, Mat. 10. 34. so when this commission of the Apostles is set down by St. Luke, 10. 11. to those that receive them not, they are appointed to use a direful ceremony, shaking off the dust from their feet against them, and telling them the importance of it, that the kingdome of God is nigh upon them, ἐφ' ὑμᾶς, v. 11. and upon the back of that, v. 12. Verily I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for Sodome in that day (i. e. not in the day of Judgement to come, for that belongs to each particular person, not whole cities together, but) in that day of the Kingdom of God, then for that refractory city. Gods dealing with Sodome in the day of their destruction with fire and brimstone, shall be acknowleg'd to have been more supportable, then his dealing with such contumacious impenitent cities of Judea; So Mat. 16. 28. The Son of man coming in his kingdome] belongs not to the Transfiguration, as 'tis by many mistaken, but to a coming in the glory of his father to reward and punish, v. 27, (and is call'd the kingdom of God coming with power, Mark 9. 1.) and that belongs clearly to the scope of the place, viz. to arme his followers, that they should not be terrified with the malice of the Iewes, v. 25. or tempted to deny Christ, Luke 9. 29. So Luke 19. 11. when 'tis said, they thought the kingdome of God should presently appear, Christ's parable concluding with the bringing forth, and slaying the enemies before him, applies it directly to this purpose, v. 27. and so what he adds v. 43. at his entrance into Ierusalem. So Luke 17. 20. when he answers that the kingdom of God comes not with observation, i. e. in a pompous remarkable manner, so as Kings are wont to come with their Court and train attending, which all men come out to look after, and crie, Lo here, i. e. it is come, &c. it is clear by the consequents, that it belongs to this matter, 1. the preaching of the Gospel among them, then already begun, v. 21. and then the destroying of unbeleivers, v. 22. 24. &c. The way by which this phrase comes thus to signifie, is this, because there be several offices of a King, the exercise of the power of the Sword, as well as of making Laws, of punishing and rewarding, as well as of reigning, he is ἔκδικος εἰς ὀργὴν, Rom. 13. 4. an avenger to inflict punishment, and so he is express'd at his ἐκδίκησις, Luke 18. 7. speaking of this matter. In this respect it is, that the Governours of the Iewes were call'd Iudges; inflicting of punishments or judgements (which is one part) giving denomination to the whole Regal office; and so Luke 10. these three phrases, [the kingdome of God] v. 11. and [that day] i. e. the time of his exercising that Regall power, v. 12. (or as Saint Marke reads it, ἡμέρα κείσεως, Mar. 6. 11. the day of executing judgement) and in the same matter [κρίσις ver. 14. judgement simply] are all phrases of the same significancy to note the destruction here threatned, with which there was also Mercy mingled, and preservation to some. See Luke 17 34. and 21. 28. The same thing is express'd by other phrases, the coming of Christ, the end, the end of all things, the conclusion of this age, &c. which in their due places shall be observ'd.

d. Καμήλε τρίχες.

V. 4. Of camels hair] This garment ἀπὸ τριχῶν καμήλε, of Camels hair used by Iohn the Baptist, seems to be no more then a garment of Hairecloth, made of haire rude and raw, not of haire softned and dress'd, or spun into a thred. The difference betwixt these two is the same that betwixt Flax rude or unprepared, and the same dress'd or spun, one having much more of courseness and asperity then the other; or between that which we now call Hairecloth, which is made of rude, undress'd haire, and chamlet or grogoram, that is made of it, when 'tis softned, and spun, and prepared. That the former is that which is here mention'd, may appear, 1. by the design of it, used by Iohn, as here set down by the Evangelist, to signifie the Austerity of his Habit, as well, as that, which follows, is of his Diet; (and so interpreted by all the Ancients,) which it would not be, had it been thus dress'd and softned. 2ly. It is to be considered, that as he was Elias, that was foretold should come, so his Habit, and his Diet, and the Wilderness (as well as the matter of his Prophecy, fire from heaven, judgments on the impenitent) were to represent Elias. Now of Elias we read, his habit thus described, 2 Kings 1. 8. He is an hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loynes, where the haire, being joyned with the leathern girdle, or zone, may most probably be interpreted (both of them) to the same matter of his habit, or manner of attire, enquired of v. 7. (and so 'twill be a complete description of that, this haire cloth and leathern zone being all the clothes that he had visible about him, as it was of the Baptist here) and not of the Form, or manner, or constitution of his Body, that he was like Esau, a man with much hair growing upon him, for that alone would have been but a very imperfect description of him, nothing else of his body being mentioned, and on the other side, only a leathern girdle about his loynes, which as it cannot be applyed to the form or fashion of his body, but must necessarily denote his attire, so it would be a very imperfect description of that, if nothing else of that kind were joyned with it. 3ly. This was the mourning habit, Sackcloth and Haircloth (if among them they differed at all) differing but little, both of them garments of the greatest courseness, and austerity. And then as in the Christian Church, from the Iewish, he that Excommunicated, or pronounced sentence of Anathema against any, is said to mourn or bewail him, 2 Cor. 12. 21. so the Prophets that came to foretell judgements upon a Nation, did put on such mourning habits to denote the sad errands they came about. That was Elias's errand then, and Iohn Baptist's now, of the axe laid to the root of the tree, &c. and thus the two witnesses in the Revelat. c. 11. (that are described, like Elias v. 5. the fire cometh out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies, relating to his calling for fire from heaven: and again v. 6. they have power to shut heaven that it shall not rain, as Elias had) are said to prophecy clothed in sackcloth v. 3. which sackcloth Rev. 6. 12. hath the Epithet of τρίχινος hairy, bestow'd upon it, expressing the materials of it to be of Hair, which they used for their mourning habit. To this clearly referres that of the false Prophets, that they wore rough garments to deceive, Zach. 13. 14. The rough garments, the token of the Prophet, as the Deceiving is all one with the False. As for their conceit who think Iohn's garment here to have been a skin of a Camel with the hair on, such as the sheep-skins and goat-skins Heb. 11. it is sufficiently confuted by the Evangelist, who makes the Clothing, and the Girdle of different matters, using different forms of speech to expresse them by, which there is no reason to think would have been done, if they had been both of the same. Σάκκος

Ib. Wild honey] The μέλι ἄγριον, or field honey is a kind of extemporary diet (as water out of the spring) such as was to be found in woods, running out of trees where bees were so 1 Sam. 14. 25. there is δρυμὸς μελισσῶν καὶ πρόσωπον τῆς ἀγροῦ, where our English, out of the Hebrew, read [they came to a wood, and there was honey upon the ground] and v. 26. εἰσῆλθεν ὁ λαὸς εἰς τὸν μελισσῶνα, καὶ ἰδοὺ διεπορεύετο μέλι, when they came into the wood, behold the honey dropt, and v. 27. Ionathan dipt his rod, εἰς τὸ κηρίον τοῦ μέλιτος, in a combe of honey. In which place, that which is δρυμὸς μελισσῶν, a wood of honey in the Greek, is by an Hypallage mel sylvestre, wood-honey, the very thing that is here, μέλι ἄγριον, field-honey, or wood-honey (agri and sylvæ being oft promiscuously used for any places (remoter from towns) open and unenclosed, though they be not wood-lands. So in Virgil, sylvis egressus, Æne. 1. and sylvestrem musam, Eclog. 1. in relation to the mountains or downs, where they fed their flocks) which sense of the μέλι ἄγριον makes it also not improbable, that ἀκρίδες, which here are joyn'd with it, as the Baptists only food, may signifie ἀκρόδρυα or ἀκρώμονες, i. e. πάντες οἱ τῶν δένδρων καρποὶ, or καρποὶ δενδρικοὶ, all fruits of trees in Phavorinus, i. e. fruits of the wilder trees, or indeed herbes or leaves. To which purpose I shall referre the Reader to Steph. Forner. rer. quotid. l. 6. c. 27. Thus doth Isidore Pelusiote interpret it with great earnestnesse against the other rendring of it, Αἱ ἀκρίδες ἃς ζῶα ἐσθίει, ὥς τινες ἠνόησαν ἀμαθῶς, μὴ γένοιτο, ἀλλ' ἀκρώμονες βοτανῶν καὶ φυτῶν. Ep. 5. the word, which we render locusts, signifies not living creatures, as some have ignorantly conceived, no by no meanes, but the tops of herbs and plants. And to this purpose is it, that Burchardus (p. 330.) in his Description of the Holy Land, saith, that he hath found in the Monasteries of Palestine, neer Iordan, a food which the Monks there use, of a sort of herbs call'd locustæ, the same, say they, which the Baptist fed on. Though the truth is, Origen, Clemens, Ambrose, and Hilary interpret ἀκρίδες locusts as a sort of grashoppers: and it appears by Leviticus c. 11. 22. that they were used for food, being reckoned among the clean creatures, and by Pliny Nat. e. Μέλι ἄγριον Ἀκρίδες

Nat. Hiſt. l. 11. and Athenæus l. 4. that the Æthiopians and ſome others fed on Graſhoppers, but thoſe ſalted and dried, ſaith Pliny, which cannot well be ſuppoſed of the Baptiſt here, whilſt he continued in the wilderneſſe. 'Tis more probable, that as the Sarmani or Σαμονᾶιοι in Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 1. or Germanæ in Strabo call'd ὑλόβιοι (thoſe that lived in the woods, (not as 'tis falſly read ἀλλόβιοι) and neither inhabited cities, nor had houſes) ἀκρόδρυα σιτοῦνται, καὶ ὕδωρ ἐν χερσὶν πίνουσι, eat hearbs, and drink water in their hands, ſo the Baptiſt here abſtein'd from wine, fed on this victus parabilis, food that wanted no dreſſing (ἄπερ οἱ νῦν ἐγκρατῆται, ſaith he, as the Encratites of this time) which Strabo, out of Megaſthenis Indica, expreſs'd by ὑλόβιοι ζῶντες ἐν ταῖς ὕλαις ἀπὸ φύλλων καὶ καρπῶν ἀγρίων, they that lived in woods upon leaves, and wild fruits.

f δοκεῖν

V. 9. Think] The phraſe [μὴ δόξητε λέγειν] is no more then μὴ λέγητε, ſay not, or, as S. Luke reads c. 3. 8. μὴ ἄρξητε λέγειν, begin not to ſay, For ſo δοκεῖ, and videtur is oft an Expletive. So 1 Cor. 10. 12. ὁ δοκῶν ἑστάναι, He that truly ſtands (not only ſeems or thinks himſelf to ſtand) for none elſe are capable of falling: ſo 1 Cor. 11. 16. If any man δοκεῖ φιλόνικος εἶναι (not ſeem to be, but really) be contentious; and c. 12. 22. where δοκοῦντα μέλη ἀσθενέστερα ὑπάρχειν, the members which ſeem to be more weak, are all one with ὑπάρχοντα, thoſe that are the weaker: ſo Heb. 4. 7. Let us fear, μή δοκῇ τις ὑστερηκέναι, leſt any man (not ſeemingly, but really) come ſhort. So Luke 8. 18. the [ὃ δοκεῖ ἔχειν, that which he ſeems to have] being compared with Mat. 13. 12. καὶ ὃ ἔχει, even what he hath, and Mat. 25. 29. and Mar. 4. 25. appears to ſignifie [that which really he hath] (though he make not the right uſe of it) otherwiſe it could not be taken from him. So Mar. 10. 42. οἱ δοκοῦντες ἄρχειν they that think or ſeem to rule, is rendred by Saint Matthew 20. 25. οἱ ἄρχοντες the Rulers. So in the ſtory of Suſanna v. 5. οἱ ἐδίκων κυβερνᾶν, not they which ſeem'd, but that really did govern. So in Procopius on 1 Kings, οἱ δόξαντες εὐσεβεῖν is applied to the pious Kings, Aſa, Jehoſaphat, &c. So in Optatus, ſpeaking of the fleſh of Chriſt, quæ nullum videbatur admiſiſſe peccatum, which ſeemed to have committed no ſin, his meaning muſt ſure be, that really he had not ſinned. Thus in humane Authors [δοκεῖ] is the form of affirming any thing. If there be any farther force in this word, then only as an Expletive, then (according to another notion of δοκεῖ) it will beſt be rendred do not pleaſe, or, ſatisfie your ſelves in ſaying, as δοκοῦντα is explain'd by ἀρέσκοντα, Phavor. See Note on Mar. 2. a. and Note on Act. 16. a.

11. Baptize you with water] John's Baptiſme by water previous and preparatory to Chriſt's Baptiſme by the Holy Ghoſt and fire, ſeems to be imitated by the Devil and his worſhippers, the Indians in * Philoſtratus, who had, ſaith he, a well, whoſe water they eſteem'd ſacred, and endued with ſecret virtue, Ὅσιον δὲ νομίζουσι τῷ ὄντι Ἰνδικῇ πάσῃ, which was counted ſacramental to all the Indians, nigh unto which, ſaith he, there was a veſſel of fire, in which the Indians were purged from their Involuntary ſins whereupon their wiſe men call the well, The well of conviction, or, reproof, and the fire, The fire of pardon, or, expiation. And ſo the Brachmans, before they ſacrificed, uſed to anoint themſelves ἀλειφόμενοι φαρμάκῳ, which ſo heated their bodies, that they ſent out fume and ſweat in great abundance, as if they had, ſaith he, been * waſh'd with fire.

h Βαστάζειν

Ib. To bear] That which is here βαστάσαι, is not, as in other places, βαστάζειν βάρος, the bearing of a burthen or weight (the Labourers or Porters office) but as a Miniſterial Office, either 1. to remove things that are not of preſent uſe, out of the way (the ſame that in other places is expreſs'd by ἆραι, as ἆραι κράββατον to take away, or put aſide the bed, as being no longer uſefull) and by this meanes it will here be all one with λῦσαι τὸν ἱμάντα τῶν ὑποδημάτων, to looſe the latchet of the ſhooe, Mar. 1. 7. and John 1. 27. that Looſing, being in order to taking it off; Or elſe 2ly, as Lu. 10. 4. βαστάζειν ὑποδήματα to carry ſhooes was ordinary in journeys, ſo might it fitly be the Diſciples office to doe ſo, and ſo either way the meaning of the Baptiſt's ſpeech is, that he was unworthy to be Chriſt's Diſciple, for the Diſciples of any Prophet among the Jews were to ſerve him as his Miniſters, to perform to him his ordinary neceſſary ſervices; ſo Joſhuah was unto Moſes, Exod. 24. 13. and in Joſephus l. 1. So Eliſha miniſtred unto Elias, 1 Kings 19. 2. and poured water on Elias hands, (this being ſet down as the Diſciples office among their Conſtitutions) and ſo when Chriſt ſaith, he was among them as he that miniſters, Luke 22. 27. that of miniſtring, referres to the office of a Diſciple. And ſo when they are call'd the ſons of the prophets, it is in the Hebrew notion, wherein בָּנִים and מְשָׁרְתִים, ſons and ſervants, or miniſters, are all one.

Ὑτίον

V. 12. Fan] Πτύον ſignifies a winnowing inſtrument, ξύλον ἐν ᾧ διαχωρίζουσι τὸν σῖτον ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀχύρου, a piece of wood, by which they ſeparate the wheat from the chaffe, ſaith Heſychius. The Hebrew reads מוֹרֶה ventilabrum from זָרָה diſperſit, ventilavit, referring in generall to Winnowing or holding up to the wind, but not peculiarly to the manner of doing it. The Syriacke hath רפשא raphſho, and ſo the Arabick alſo. In which languages the word is ſaid to have two ſignifications, 1. to note a ſhovel, or ſuch like inſtrument, with a broad head, as a paddle, &c. wherewith the ſurface of the earth is plained or pared. So 'tis in the Arabick proverb, Men al rapſh el al arſh, from the ſhovel to the throne, from the meaneſt profeſſion to the greateſt dignity; 2. (as * Jeſu Bar Ali defines it) an inſtrument with a broad head, wherewith corn is moved or winnowed, or ſtirr'd up, to cleanſe it. Accordingly the Greek πτύον Heſychius expreſſes firſt by δείναξ, and then δείναξ, ſaith he, is ὄργανον ὀδοντικὸν. an inſtrument with teeth, and again he explains it by τρίαινα, and τρίαινα he defines to be δόρυ τρεῖς ἔχον ἀκμὰς, a ſpeare, or pike, having three teeth or ſharps, a three-tooth'd pitchfork, uſed to ſtirre, or throw up corn, when they make up their floors; and in another place, he makes it all one with τρίβολος, which being by the Grammarians ſaid to be τρίβελος, i. e. τρία ἔχων βέλη, that which hath three darts, quod tres cuſpides habet, it appeares to be directly all one with τρίαινα. The reſult of all this Grammaticall diſcourſe is this, that the word πτύον here is ſet to denote that γεωργικὸν ὄργανον ὀδοντικὸν, that inſtrument with teeth, ſomewhat like our pitchfork, with which they managed the buſineſſe of Winnowing their corn, ſtirring it up, that the chaffe, when the corn is out of it, having no weight in it, may be driven away with the wind. if there be any, and if there be none, they had an inſtrument, as we have now ſayles to make a wind, and then that blowes away the chaffe without any other helps, then of ſtirring it up, that the wind may have force on it. Thus Iſa. 30. 24. the corn is ſaid to be winnowed בְּרֹחַר (which, ſaith Kimchi, ſignifies Pala, quâ grana, per ſpatium longiuſculum in ventum illata, à ventilatore purgantur, (as Mr. Fuller renders him) and accordingly we render it a ſhovel) וּבְמִזְרֶה and (with the fan, we read, i. e.) with that inſtrument here ſpoken of, that ſtirres up the corn for the wind, that that may drive all the duſt and chaffe away; the word that the Hebrew here uſeth. This is diſtinctly and properly the manner of the διαχωρίζειν τὸν ἄλωνα, the throughly cleanſing of the threſhing floor, which here follows. For ſo at this day in thoſe parts under the Turks dominion (and alſo in Spaine, where, by the inhabiting of the Moors, who are baſtard-Jews, many Jewiſh cuſtomes are retained) the Threſhing-floor is in an eminent place in the open field, large enough to be compared with that of

* Syr. Arab. Lex.

Araunah, 2 Sam. 24. where David built an Altar. Thither, after gathering their corn, they bring it, then have they a pair of wheels of iron, joyned with an axle tree, and dented, or toothed, like a saw, and sometimes an heavy boord or plank, about the bigneſſe of an ordinary door, driven on the lower ſide, full of ſharp ſtones, or pieces of flints (the מורג and חרוץ, Iſa. 41. 15. which the Greek renders τρίχας ἀμάξης ἀλοητῆς, and Iſa. 28. 27. חרוץ, and אופן the threſhing inſtrument, and the cart wheel) and one of theſe the oxen draw over it, ſo at once with their feet treading out the corn, and with theſe breaking the ſtraw into ſmall parts, which is the ordinary food for their cattell all the year. This they take away and put up in bags. As for the Chaffe the wind drives that away, as 'tis Pſal. 1. 4. and Job 21. 18. and Iſa. 41. 16. λικμήσεις, καὶ ἄνεμος λήψεται αὐτούς, thou ſhalt * winnow them, and the wind ſhall take them. Only in caſe of the winds turning, when they fear that it will bring all the chaffe back again upon the floor, they put fire to it at the wind-ſide, and that creeps on and never gives over till it hath conſumed all the chaffe, and ſo is a kind of ἄσβεστον πῦρ here, a fire never quenchable, till it have done its work. To this deſcription of their practiſe many places in the old Teſtament agree. The threſhing the mountains, Iſa. 41. 15. referres to the cuſtome of Threſhing-floors in ſuch eminent places, and ſo ſetting the hills as chaffe, winnowing or diſperſing them as chaffe upon a hill, and the wind carrying them away v. 16. So Jer. 4. 11. a drie wind of the high places in the wilderneſſe, not to winnow, nor to cleanſe, even a full wind from thoſe places, &c. a full wind, in ſtead of Winnowing or cleanſing the Wheat from the Chaſte, carrying all away. So Prov. 20. 21. 'tis ſaid of the wiſe King; that he ſcattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them, ſcatters them as he that Winnows, and that he may doe ſo, brings firſt upon them the Wheel or Threſhing inſtrument. The ſame אופן wheel, that we had even now in Iſa. 28. 27. joyned with the threſhing inſtrument. And Pſal. 83. 13. O my God make them like a wheel, and as the ſtubble before the wind, both parts referre to this cuſtome alſo; make them, as a Threſhing wheel is wont to make the Corn, driving one part from another, and then the wind comes, and drives away the ſtubble and chaffe, and then follows, as the flames conſume the mountains (that is, ſet the Chaffe on the mountains on fire, and burn it, lick it quite up) perſecute them ſo with thy tempeſt, &c. ſo Iſa. 5. 44. as the fire conſumeth the ſtubble, and the flame devoureth the chaffe. According to this notion of Winnowing, and Burning the chaffe, this verſe accords with the generall matter of John Baptiſt's preaching, viz. Chriſt's rich promiſes of all merciful reception, and preſervation to thoſe that ſhall repent, and receive the Goſpel, and threatning of all judgements upon the impenitent Jewes, formerly expreſs'd by the kingdome of God approaching, and again by the axe laid to the root of the tree, ready to hew it down, and that attended with caſting into the fire, as here the chaffe is with burning with fire unquenchable. And ſo it was fulfill'd on the Jewes even in this life (as it was oft foretold) the godly true Penitents that received Chriſt, through theſe tribulations, were preſerved, when the reſt that could not bear, or hold out the tryall, all that the wind of temptation, falſe doctrine, &c. carried away, were generally deſtroyed, the corn laid up in a garner, and the chaffe devoured with the fire.

* or perhaps threſh them, (Scenite on chap. 21. g.)

V. 16. Like a dove] That the Spirit came upon Chriſt in the body or ſhape of a Dove, cannot, I think, be concluded from this place, nor from the parallel Mar. 1. 10. but only that the Spirit deſcended, and came, or lighted on him, as a Dove uſes to doe on any thing, firſt hovering, and overſhadowing it. And whereas 'tis added by Saint Luke, σωματικῷ εἴδει, that will be beſt rendred in, or, with a bodily appearance, and joyned with καταβῆναι, i. e. the Spirit deſcended ſo, as might be (and was really) ſeen (εἶδε in Matthew, and Marke, he ſaw him deſcend) ὡσεὶ περιστερὰν as it were a dove, i. e. as a Dove viſibly deſcends, and lights on any thing, or, in a manner ſomewhat reſembling a dove (ſo ὡσεὶ ſignifies, as Acts 2. 3. the divided tongues ὡσεὶ πυρὸς, as it were of fire) doth not denote them to be of fire, at leaſt to have the effects of fire, burning, &c. but either in the colour, or form like that of fire) not defining any ſhape, wherein the Holy Ghoſt appeared. That the Holy Ghoſt both here and in other places did Viſibly appear, there is no doubt; That he did in the caſe of Mary, at the time of her Conception of Chriſt, ἐπέρχεσθαι come upon her, and ἐπισκιάζειν overſhadow her, is affirmed Luke 1. 35. and that is perfectly agreeable here to this of deſcending ὡσεὶ περιστερὰν a Dove uſes to doe, when it comes down and viſibly lights on any thing. Nay other glorious appearances of God are expreſs'd in other places, in the ſame manner, as when the bright cloud (i. e. an appearance of ſhining light, as broad as a cloud) ἐπεσκίαζον αὐτοῖς, Mat. 17. 5. thus hovered over or overſhadow'd them. So again Mark 9. 7. Luke 9. 34. and accordingly in the Tabernacle were the Cherubims of glory, thoſe officers or miniſters of this appearance of God, overſhadowing or hovering over the propitiatory, or covering of the Arke, Heb. 9. 5. And ſo 2 Peter 1. 17. This Voice at this time deliver'd [This is my beloved ſon, &c.] is ſaid to have come from the magnificent glory (gloria majeſtaticæ præſentiæ, the glory of the majeſtatick preſence, ſo frequent in the Targum) i. e. from this Cloud, where the Angels were, and wherein Elias and Moſes appeared, and ſo in the third verſe of that chapter δόξα glory, ſeems to denote the appearing of the Holy Ghoſt, as ἀρετὴ virtue, or power, Chriſt's after-miracles; In the like manner, as we find πνεῦμα ſpirit and δύναμις power in other places, and as learned men, in rendring the Jewiſh writers, interpret שכינה Gods inhabiting or appearing among us (ordinarily rendred glory) by Spiritus ſanctus the holy Ghoſt. But by all this there is no more expreſs'd, but only the Manner of this appearance, or how he viſibly was ſeen, or appeared to deſcend; but for the Shape wherein the Holy Ghoſt appeared, here is yet nothing expreſs'd. That which ſeemeth moſt probable is this, That the holy Ghoſt took not on him here any bodily Shape, but yet appeared to be Preſent as God is ſaid to be Preſent in any place in the old Teſtament, i. e.) by the appearance of Angels, which being the Courtiers of heaven, where they appear, there God is ſaid peculiarly to be preſent. Hence it is, that the well Lahairoi, where the Angel appeared to Hagar, Gen. 16. 7. 14. is by the Hieruſalem-Targum Gen. 24. 62. ſtyled Beer (the well) ubi manifeſtata illi fuit præſentia Domini majeſtatica, where the majeſtatick preſence of the Lord, or the preſence of God in majeſty, was manifeſted to her. And ſo the Sanctuary, where, by the Cherubims, God exhibited himſelf, is called by the ſame phraſe, Gloria majeſtaticæ præſentiæ Domini, The Glory of the majeſtatick preſence of the Lord, Gen. 40. 34. So in the delivering of the Law, which, the Author to the Hebrewes c. 2. 2. ſaith, was ſpoken by Angels, God ſaith Ex. 19. 11. the Lord will come down in the ſight of all the people, and I have talked with you, c. 20. 22. Now how thoſe Angels, the good Angels; the Courtiers of God, appeared, may be collected in generall from their title, Ἄγγελοι φωτὸς Angels of light, in reference to a lucid, ſhining, flaming appearance (as the Philoſopher ſaith, that if God would take upon him a body, it would certainly be light) but more diſtinctly from the ſtory of it, Mat. 28. 3. His appearance was as lightning, and his garment white as ſnow (as Luke 9. 29. 'tis ſaid of Chriſt on mount Tabor, his cloathing was λευκὸς ἐξαστράπτων, white and flaſhing as lightning doth) i. e. a bright ſhining cloud (ſuch as in Exodus is call'd a cloud by day, but fire by night, a pillar of cloud Deut. 31. 15.) or fiery appearance in the midst of a white cloud, as of a garment, i. e. cloathed or encompass'd with it, which is directly ῥεφέλη φωτεινή, the lightsome cloud, even now mention'd: and so generally the Scechinah, by which the Hebrews use to expresse Gods presence on earth, is rendred δόξα glory, from Exod. 24. 16. the glory of the Lord abode, &c. (see Note on Rom. 1. f. and c. 9. c. and Jo. 1. c.) and that glory generally expres'd by Painters by the rayes, or beams of the Sunne, or light, because that is the liveliest resemblance of it, as 'tis set down Luke 2. 9. δόξα κυρίου περιέλαμψεν, the glory of the Lord shone about them, which is added to the mention of the Angels coming to them. And so God's promise of coming to the people on Sinai the third day, c. 19. 11. is thus performed v. 16. there were thunders and lightnings and a thick cloud upon the mount. And agreeable to this it is, that in that other visible descent of the holy Ghost upon the Apostles, Act. 2. 3. ὤφθησαν αὐτοῖς διαμεριζόμεναι γλῶσσαι ὡσεὶ πυρὸς, ἐκάθισέ τε ἐφ' ἕνα ἕκαστον αὐτῶν, there were seen by them tongues parted or divided, as of fire, and it, i. e. the fire (or that so like fire,) sat, or rested on every of them, That which appeared was cloven, or divided tongues as of fire, several flashes or beams as of fire, in the shape of tongues divided, as it is easie to conceive by a flame cleft asunder in many places, according to the natural motion of flames, of which every part as it extends it self in longitude, grows more Pyramidal, and so divides from the part next to it, and one of these divisions did, as it were, lambere, lick, and so rest upon the head of every of the Apostles, according to the Hebrewes phrase or idiome, who for flame of fire, use לשון אש the tongue of fire, Isa. 5. 24. because a flame is of that form, say they. Somewhat like this hath the appearing of Angels generally been in the Scripture, see Exod. 19. 18. where God descends on the mount in fire, gloria præsentiæ divinæ in flamma ignis, saith the Jerusalem-Targum, the glory of the divine presence in a flame of fire, which is but the explication, and rendred as the reason of what was said before v. 16. of the lightning and thick cloud, or thick cloud, or darknesse, where God was, Gen. 20. 21. and therefore Psal. 104. 4. his ministers (i. e. Angels ministring to him) are said to be a flaming fire. Thus in the first mention of it Gen. 3. 24. the Jerusalem-Targum reads, gloriam divinæ præsentiæ supra duos Cherubinos collocavit, he placed the glory of the divine presence upon two Cherubims, where in the Hebrew we find the two Cherubims, and להט החרב (a flaming sword we read it, but it may perhaps be better rendred) a flame of sword, i. e. of separation, division, φλὸξ διαμεισμοῦ, for so the Hebrew חרב which is rendred sword, signifies division, as is exemplified by Mat. 10. 34. compared with Luke 12. 51. where instead of μάχαιρα sword in one, is διαμερισμὸς division in the other, and then that φλὸξ διαμεισμοῦ, flame of division, or partition there (signifying that appearance to be a bright shining as of fire, and that parted one from another in many places, to turn every way, saith the text) will be somewhat answerable to the word διαμεριζόμεναι divided, in the Acts, in respect of the division of the fire (that appeared) in several branches, but certainly in respect of the fire. By all that hath been said, the meaning of the words in this place may be conceived to be this, The heavens were opened to Christ, and the Spirit of God (himself invisible, and taking no bodily form or shape upon him) was by John seen to descend upon him as a Dove descendeth and lighteth on any thing, or as it were a dove, that which appeared someway resembling a dove, with the wings spread abroad and hovering over one; viz. Angels, the token of God's, or the holy Ghost's presence, appeared in a bright shining cloud, or a flash of lightning in a cloud, and this stooped down upon him, and with that lightning thunder, and with that thunder a voice v. 17. (see Note on Acts 19. b.) And this as the solemnity of his Consecration, Imposition of hands, as it were, from Heaven, by which he received his commission to his Prophetick office, which he after communicated to his Apostles, in a manner somewhat like Acts 2. 2. 1.

V. 17. Beloved son] Those words of the Father from heaven, both here, and at the Transfiguration c. 17. [οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ υἱός μου ἀγαπητὸς ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα, this is my beloved Sonne in whom I am vvell pleased] were by him deliver'd with an intention, that they should be understood to relate to that Prediction, before deliver'd concerning the Messias, Isa. 42. 1. This will not so easily and so clearly appear by comparing these words with that Prophecy, either in the Hebrew, or the Greek, (because for beloved] here, and c. 17. 'tis [chosen] there, for [ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα, In whom I am vvell pleased] here, and c. 17. the Septuagint there have [προσεδέξατο αὐτὸν ἡ ψυχή μου, My soul hath accepted him] for [ὁ υἱός μου, my son] here, and c. 17. 'tis there in the Hebrew [עבדי my servant,] and in the Septuagint, ὁ παῖς μου, agreeable to that, though capable of being rendred my son also) as by comparing that of Isaiah with Mat. 12. 18. for in that place of Matthew, where those words of that Prophet are purposely recited, we find all these words [ἰδοὺ ὁ παῖς μου ὁ ἀγαπητός, εἰς ὃν εὐδόκησεν ἡ ψυχή μου, behold my son or servant, beloved--in whom my soul (i. e.) is well pleased] which differ very little from those voices from heaven in this, and that other place, save that the [ἰδοὺ behold] of Emphaticall promise in the Prophet, is here chang'd into [οὗτός ἐστι this is] as fitter to point him out now present; and παῖς an Equivocal word for a son, or servant, is changed into υἱὸς which is a son only. To this may be added that one part of these words in Isaiah [δέδωκα πνεῦμα ἐπ' αὐτόν, I have given my Spirit upon him] was here really supplied at this time, the holy Ghost coming visibly upon him, and in like manner [κρίσιν ἀπαγγελεῖ, he shall declare judgement] in the close of that verse, Isa. 42. 1. is equivalently supplied Mat. 17. 5. in [αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε Hear him] he having then begun that office of declaring or preaching, which consequently was then to be heard by them.

CHAP. IV.

Paraphrase

1. THen was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderneſſe, to be tempted of the [a] Devil.]

1. And immediately after his baptism, and before he entred on his prophetick office, that Christ might give an evidence of his piety, and trust in God, and of his constancy, it was thought fit that some trial should be made of him, And to that end, by incitation or impulsion of the Spirit of God (of which he was full, Luke 4. 1.) he went up from Jordan farther in the desert, not voluntarily putting himself upon temptation, but doing it according to Gods appointment.

2. And when he had fasted fourty dayes and fourty nights, he was afterward an hungred.]

2. And being there he was enabled by the miraculous power of God to continue fourty dayes and nights without eating or drinking any thing, as Moses and Elias, the two great prophets, had done, and after that, that he might be the fitter for the insuing tryall of his trust in God, made on him by Satan, he was as sharply assaulted with hunger, as any man at any time is, for want of meat.

3. And the Devil laying hold, and taking advantage of that opportunity came and ſaid unto him, If thou art the Son of God, make uſe now of that power to thy own releife, and turn theſe ſtones into bread.

3. And when the tempter came to him, he ſaid, If thou be the ſon of God, command that theſe ſtones be made bread.]

4. Bread or ordinary meanes of ſuſteining men, is not of neceſſity to the life of man, God can feed and uphold him by other meanes, whatſoever he pleaſe to make uſe of to that purpoſe, his bare word and nothing elſe, Deut. 8. 3.

4. But he anſwered and ſaid, It is written, [man ſhall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.]

5, 6. Then Satan, as 'tis b moſt probable, carried him in the aire, without doing him any hurt, unto Jeruſalem, being permitted by God to doe ſo, and ſet him on the battlement of the Temple; and urging a verſe of the Pſalm to him, Pſal. 91. 11. he perſwaded him to caſt himſelf down from thence, by that means to teſtifie that he was the Son of God; for if he were ſo, this he might doe ſecurely.

5. Then the Devil taketh him up into the holy city, and ſetteth him on * a b pinnacle of the Temple,

* the battlement.

6. And ſaith unto him, If thou be the ſon of God caſt thy ſelf down, for it is written, He ſhall give his Angels charge concerning thee, and † in their hands they ſhall * bear thee up, leſt at any time thou daſh thy foot againſt a ſtone.]

† on their

c. 7. It is ſufficiently manifeſt to me, that I am the Son of God, and cared for by him. toward me, as the Iſraelites did, Exod. 17. 7. ſaying, Is the Lord among us, or no? To which the prohibition of tempting God referres, Deut. 6. 16. (which is the text quoted in this place, a prohibition not of too much, but too little confidence, of doubting of Gods preſence among them.)

7. Jeſus ſaid unto him, [It is written again, Thou ſhalt not c tempt the Lord thy God.]

I ſhall not require any more ſigns to prove it, nor expreſſe any doubt of his power, and goodneſſe

8. And from thence gives him a view of all that was to be ſeen from thence, and addes a repreſentation of many of the other kingdomes of the world, in as ſplendid and inviting manner as he could, and all this in a moment of time, Luke 4. 5. not one after another, that ſo they might amaze and affect him the more with their ſplendor, and on a ſudden prevail upon him, which otherwiſe would not be ſo likely to doe it.

8. Again the Devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, [and ſheweth him all the kingdomes of the world, and the glory of them.]

9. And ſaith unto him, All theſe things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worſhip me.

10. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan, for it is written, Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve.

11. Then for a while Lu. 4. 13. Satan left tempting him, (afterwards ſetting himſelf more induſtriouſly on all ſtratagems to take away his life) and as the Devil left him, the good Angels came and waited on him, miniſtring to his hunger, or bringing him meat, as to Elias was done.

11. Then the Devil † leaveth him, and behold Angels came and miniſtred unto him.]

† diſmiſſeth, ἀφίησιν

12. After this, not immediately, but having gone once into Galilee, and done many followers, John 2. 2. by name Philip, John 1. 43. (for this and much more was done before Johns being caſt into priſon, John 3, 24. ſee note on Joh. 1. e.) when he heard of the impriſonment of John, he went a ſecond time into Galilee.

12 Now when Jeſus heard that John was * caſt into priſon, he departed into Galilee.]

* delivered up, παρεδόθη

13. And leaving Nazareth he came and dwelt in Capernaum, which is upon the ſea coaſt, in the borders of Zabulon and Nepthali:

14. That it might be fulfilled, which was ſpoken of Iſaias the Prophet ſaying,

15. Galilee incompaſs'd, or in the confines of other nations.

15. The land of Zabulon and the land of Nepthali d by * the way of the ſea, beyond Jordan, [Galilee e of the † Gentiles,] * did the light ariſe, φῶς ἀνέτειλεν.

17. Now began Jeſus to enter on his prophetick office (conſiſting of three things, preaching or making known the will of God, entertaining diſciples, doing of miracles: the firſt here, and more largely Mat. 5. 6, 7. and in his many parables: the ſecond v. 18. &c. the third, as neceſſary to confirm his doctrine, on all occaſions from time to time, till his death, and departure hence) and the ſumme of that office was to bring ſinners to repentance, by giving them warnings from God, promiſes to allure, and threatnings to fright them to it.

17. From that time Jeſus began to preach, and to ſay, Repent, for the kingdome of heaven is at hand.]

18, 19, 20, 21, 22. And as Jeſus was walking by the lake of Geneſereth (ſee note on Luke 8. c.) he ſaw two brethren that were fiſhers, Simon who was afterwards ſurnamed Peter, and Andrew his brother, a waſhing their net upon the ſhore, Luke 5. 2. and having ſpent ſome time in diſcourſe with them, or preaching to them, he went a little farther, and ſaw two other brethren, James and John with their father Zebedee, all of the ſame trade, and they were in their boats mending their nets, having newly waſh'd them on the ſhore alſo, Luke 5. 2. and now returned to their boat again. And ſoon after this, having done a great miracle, ſet down diſtinctly Luke 5. 3. &c. (ſee note a. on that chap.) he called all the four, commanding them to follow him, promiſing to make them fiſhers of men, or to inſtate them in a calling (and endue them with powers) of gaining and converting of men, and they all forſook their boats and trades, obeyed and followed him.

18. And Jeſus walking by the ſea of Galilee ſaw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, caſting a net into the ſea (for they were fiſhers.)

19. And he ſaith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fiſhers of men.

20. And they ſtraightway left their nets and followed him.

21. And going on from thence, he ſaw other two brethren, James the ſon of Zebedee and John his brother in a ſhip, with Zebedee their father, mending their nets, and he called them,

22. And they immediately left the ſhip and their father, and followed him.)

23. And Jeſus went about all Galilee, teaching in their Synagogues, and preaching the Goſpel of the Kingdome, and healing all manner of ſickneſſe, and all manner of diſeaſe among the people.

24. Affected with any diſeaſe, on which the changes of the moon had influence, whether madneſſe, or falling ſickneſſe, ſee note on c. 17. c.

24. And his fame went throughout all Syria, and they brought unto him all ſick people, that were taken with divers diſeaſes and torments, and thoſe which were poſſeſſed with Devils, and thoſe which were [lunatick,] and thoſe that had the palſy, and he healed them.

25. And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jeruſalem and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan.

Annota-

a. Διάβολος

V. 1. The Devil] The Hebrew שָׂטָן, an adversary, may be taken either in the General, or else as it contains under it two Specificall notions, one of an adversary in foro, an accuser, and especially a false accuser, the other of a treacherous person, that consults and studies to mischief others. In the General it is often met with, and applied to the Devil, our Enemy, indefinitely. In reference to the Specificall notions, it is accordingly rendred by the Septuagint, sometimes διάβολος, accuser, sometimes ἐπίβουλος, betrayer, and in 1 Mac. 1. 36. the word διάβολος accuser, is used, where the sense, and the mention of the sore snare v. 35. enforceth and requireth ἐπίβουλος, treacherous person, and yet our English renders it in the Generall (according to the more comprehensive nature of the Hebrew, to which it is answerable) an adversary. Thus in the New Testament doth the word διάβολος prevail, and is commonly used to signifie not in the Special, either a Calumniator, or, insidiator (though it sometimes signifies one of them, perhaps the latter, John 6. 70. One of you Διάβολός ἐστι, means to betray me, and the former Eph. 4. 27. Let not the sun go down upon your wrath, neither give place τῷ διαβόλῳ to the Calumniator, who is then wont to interpose, and widen the Breach, and so certainly 1 Tim. 3. 11. μὴ διαβόλους not Calumniators, and 2 Tim. 3. 3. and Tit. 2. 3.) nor yet the Devil under that one peculiar notion, as a lyer or calumniator, but so as the Greek be of the same latitude with the generall comprehensive Hebrew word שָׂטָן, and as 'tis all one with ἐχθρὸς enemy, and ἀντίδικος adversary, or plaintiffe, and ἀντικείμενος opposer, in other places, and so it may best be rendred Satan (retaining the Hebrew in the translation, as the Septuagint oft doe) i. e. that evil spirit, which sets himself as an Adversary against all good men, and endevours to doe all mischief that he can.

Ἀντίδικος

b. Πτερύγιον

V. 5. A pinacle] Πτερύγιον signifying literally a little wing, doth here note the exterior circuit of the top of the house, which compasseth it in (and is thence call'd στέφανη Deut. 22. 8.) to keep men from danger of falling from the roof, and is therefore in the Law prescribed in their buildings, that thou bring not blood upon thy house. It is by the Grammarians explain'd by ἀκρωτήριον, and that defin'd to be τὸ ἐπάνω τῶν ναῶν ἀναπεφυκὸς ζῳδιον, a kind of girdle on the top of the Temple to encompasse it, which is clearly the battlement, not the pinacle, see Note on c. 10. i.

c. Πειράζειν Θεόν

V. 7. Not tempt the Lord] That the phrase of tempting God signifies not too much, but too little confidence, a diffidence, and incredulity, may appear by the severall places, wherein the phrase is used. Thus the Israelites tempting of God in Exodus and Deuteronomy, is generally Doubting of Gods care, and providence, and power, and wisdome, of which they had had so many arguments, and assurances, and promises from him. And so Num. 14. the tempting God ten times, v. 12. is all one with not beleiving him in all his signs, which he did in the midst of them, v. 11. and what that unbelief was, appears by their words ver. 2. Would we had died in Egypt, and, Wherefore hath God brought us into this land? thinking (it seems) that God would not go along with them, but permit them to be devoured by the people of the land (see v. 9.) So Psal. 78. their provoking, and tempting of God, v. 18, 19. is first their Doubting whether God could, and would prepare them a table, v. 20. give them bread, provide them flesh in the wilderness, v. 21. when by their own confession he had evidenced his Power & Will sufficiently in giving them streams of water out of the rock, and v. 42. they tempted God, &c. which is explain'd v. 43. by [They thought not of his hand, and of the day when he delivered them, --how he had wrought his miracles in Egypt] v. 44. i. e. by their forgetting, or not considering the arguments they had had for the beleiving, and depending on him: and so again, after he had cast out the nations, &c. done all for them imaginable, yet v. 57. they tempted the most high God, &c. so Isa. 7. when Ahaz saith, he will not tempt the Lord, the words signifie, that he needed no farther arguments to ascertain him of the truth of what there was promised. Where yet Ahaz seems to have spoken Ironically, he will ask no more signes, beleiving the thing impossible, and therefore is reprehended by the Prophet for incredulity and wearying of God, and making it necessary for him to give a sign, v. 13, 14. And thus clearly the phrase is used in this place, where the Devil perswading Christ, by casting himself down from the Battlement, to make tryall, whether God would deal with him as a Son, i. e. preserve him, or no, Christ that needed no such evidences of his being the Son of God, Mat. 3. 17. replies that this is that tempting God, which is forbidden in Deut. So Mat. 16. 1. and Luke 11. 16. the Pharisees asking a sign from heaven, to demonstrate that he was the Messias, are said πειράζειν, to tempt Christ, a note of their infidelity, and so censured by Christ, an evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, Mat. 16. 4. and beyond the miracles which he had already done among them, he will now shew those Pharisees no more, but only that great convincing one of his Resurrection from the dead v. 5. Sometimes this phrase is used in a notion a little different from this, not in relation to any promises of God, but of any other part of his Will revealed, & notes any act of infidelity, any contrariety to the revealed Will of God, whether in point of Doctrine, or Practice: Of Doctrine, so Acts 15. 10. When Peter had given them convincing evidences and arguments (from the example of God toward Cornelius) that God required not the Christian Gentiles to be circumcised, he adds, Now therefore why doe you tempt God, to lay a yoake, &c. i. e. your continuing to desire to lay that yoake on the Gentile Christians, after such evidences of Gods Will to the contrary, is an act of infidelity, and a kind of tempting of God. So also of Practice 1 Cor. 10. 9. Neither let us tempt Christ, i. e. let us not by our provoking sins dare God, trie his patience, whether he will make good upon us his threats against sinne, so Mal. 3. 15. they that tempt God, are all one with the proud sinners, contumacious offenders, which are also said to weary him, c. 2. 17. Acts 5. 9. Why have ye agreed to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? i. e. to commit a sin, which is in effect a trying, or experimenting whether the Apostles, Peter, &c. had the Spirit of discerning their fraud or no, and consequently of punishing.

d. Ὁδὸν θαλάσσης

V. 15. By the way] That which is here ὁδὸν θαλάσσης, is in the Greek Isa. 9. 1. (whence this verse is cited) οἱ λοιποὶ οἱ τῆς θαλάσσιαν, the rest that dwell by the sea side. Now for this whole place that is here cited out of the Prophet, and said to be fulfilled by that which here happened, it must first be remembred, what hath been said, Note on c. 1. k. That Prophecies, besides the literal sense of them, have sometimes another affixed to them, to which when they are accommodated, they are said πληροῦσθαι, to be fulfill'd, i. e. to have a more eminent accomplishment. And so here. For these words had in Isaiah c. 9. 1. a clear literal sense, belonging to that time, viz. That God having threatned by his Prophet a sore calamity to Judah and Jerusalem from Sennacherib King of Assyria, begins in these words a little to soften it, thus, Nevertheless the dimness (or mist, or twylight) shall not be to her, to whom the vexation shall be i. e. to Jerusalem which shall be thus afflicted) according to the first time, wherein he lightly afflicted the land land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthali, and the latter time, wherein he more grievously afflicted the way of the sea beyond Jordan, Galilee of the nations; i. e. this that shall befall upon Judah, though sharp, shall not be comparable to either of those two other; the First, the more tolerable of the two, when Zabulon and Nephthali &c. were carried into captivity by Tiglath-Phalassar King of Assyria, 2 Kings 15. 29. the Second, not then come, which should be much more heavy, when the rest of the tribes should be carried away by Salmanassar into Assyria, 2 Kings 17. The people that walk in darkness, i.e. Judah and Jerusalem, wasted and besieged by Sennacherib, have seen, i. e. should see, a great light, i. e. have an illustrious remarkable deliverance, the siege being raised by an Angel, and Sennacherib's army destroy'd, and to them that were in the shadow of death, i. e. expected verily to be destroyed, hath the light appeared, i. e. this deliverance is befall'n. This whole passage belonging to that matter, is here by the Evangelist applied to Christ's preaching in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthali, only by way of Accommodation. This preaching of his being the great light, and the state of ignorance, that before they were in the shadow of death and the darkness. All the difficulty is, to give any account, how this should here be applied to Zabulon &c. when in Isaiah they were not to have this deliverance but only Judah, and they were only mention'd to comfort Judah, that they were, and should be more terribly afflicted then Judah, and had none of the light, or comfort. But the account must be, that such Prophecies as these, thus accommodated to Christ, are accomplish'd in an higher sense, then that wherein they were literally spoken, and here this light, i. e. the preaching of Christ came and shone on these, as well as on Jerusalem, nay in the first place, before he went thither, and consequently in the application here, the great light is applied to them. (though in the letter of the Prophecy it belonged not to them.) Which being perfectly true, is all that is said by the Evangelist, only the words of the Prophet, not in the literal, but an higher sense, applied to them, by way of Accommodation, which differs from the citation of a testimony. To which this may also be farther added, that now that land of Zabulon and Nephthali was not inhabited by Israel, for they were carried captive, never to return again, 2 Kings 17. 20, 23. and none left but the tribe of Judah only, 18. and so that Prophecie that spake of the light shining to Judah, did here literally belong to them, i. e. to those of Judah, which after their return from Babylon inhabited these parts, which before belong'd to Israel.

Ib. Galilee of the Gentiles] That which is here Γαλιλαία τῶν ἐθνῶν is in Isaiah 9. 1. גליל הגוים the circumference of the nations, or that part of Palestine which is farthest from Jerusalem, and hath the Nations round about it, from גלל volvit, circumduxit, and so by the Targum 'tis rendred תחום confinium, the confines of the Gentiles, because round about that part of Palestine, the Egyptians, Arabians, Phenicians inhabited neer the seaside, in respect of Traffick. Thus we find Gen. 14. 1. βασιλεὺς ἐθνῶν the King of the Nations, which will be confess'd to belong to the Nations adjoyning to that region, if you compare it with Jos. 12. 23. where though our English, out of some Hebrew copies, reads, the King of the Nations of Gilgal yet the Septuagint reading [βασιλέα γῆς Γαλιλαίας] shew that they read מלך גוים לגליל the King of the nations of the confines, such were the Tyrians, Sidonians, and other Gentiles, and accordingly we read that King Solomon gave twenty cities in that part to Hiram the King of the Tyrians, בארץ הגליל in the land of the confines, 1 Kings 19. 11. Thus Jos. 13. 2. we read גלילות of the Philistines, where the Targum reads תחומי the confines again, the Septuagint ὅρια borders, and Joel 4. 4. Tyre and Sidon, and all the גלילות circumambient regions of the Gentiles, where though the Greek reads, as here, Γαλιλαία ἀλλοφύλων, Galilee of the Gentiles, yet the Targum more exactly תחומי the confines, or that part of Palestine, which bordereth on the Nations. And so when the Evangelist S. Luke had said, that Jesus return'd into Galilee c. 4. 14. he adds, And the fame went out καθ' ὅλης τῆς περιχώρου, through all the ambient region, so again v. 37. there went a noise of him εἰς πάντα τόπον τῆς περιχώρου, i. e. into all that circumambience of the Gentiles; And so saith * Josephus of the Galileans ποσὶ τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἀλλοφύλοις κεκυκλωμένοι they are encompass'd with so many other strange (or heathen) nations. These ambient Nations are meant by ὁδὸν ἐθνῶν the way of the nations c. 10. 5. i. e. those ambient nations next to Galilee, Tyre, &c. in opposition to Judæa there expres'd by [the house of Israel.]

a 1, 2. Christ now in a more eminent manner sets upon his prophetick office,

1. AND seeing the multitudes he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his [a] disciples came unto him,

2. And he opened his mouth and taught them, saying] and there being a great multitude present, he went up into a mountain, as a place of advantage to speak most audibly, and there seating himself as a prophet or teacher, a company of his constant followers, all that received and obeyed his doctrine (not only the twelve, which were afterward chosen to be his Apostles) came close up, and communed with him, And to them he addressed his speech, saying, (for the explication of this whole Sermon, see Pract. Chatech. l. 2. &c.)

3. Blessed are all they that how high soever their condition is in this world, are yet in mind, affection, and conversation humble and lowly, and they which, when they are in worldly poverty, bear it willingly, not only of necessity, for to these belongs the riches, and those the greatest, even of a kingdome, and that of heaven, (see Luke 6. 21. Yours is the kingdome of heaven.)

3. Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdome of heaven.]

4 For they are of a fit temper, and capacity to receive that comfort, which Christ and the Spirit offer to all that are capable of it, and accordingly their present sadness shall be repaired here, and moreover rewarded with future joyes, Luke 16. 25. whereas those that have most of the carnall jollities of this world, that have enjoyed all their good things here, have a sad arrear of mourning which expects them in another world.

4. Blessed are they that mourn: [for they shall be comforted.]

5. The quiet-spirited persons and they that live in obedience to government, for they ordinarily shall live quietly, and receive the protection, and benefit of Government, and invading no mans goods, or life, shall generally enjoy long life and tranquillity in the earth. Or when the exercises of this virtue in some singular conjunctures of time brings losses, or death upon them, they shall be richly rewarded in another world, and be made amends abundantly there for all that the practice of this virtue hath brought upon them.

5. Blessed are [the meek: for they shall inherit the [b] earth.]

6. Whose appetites are removed from the meaner inferiour objects of our thirsts (which may raise but never satisfie our appetites) from the worldlings importunate desires, ambitions and covetings, to the eager and impatient pursuit of the favour of God, and of piety of the highest kind, that way of salvation now proposed to men by Christ (see note on Rom. 1. b. For these shall be sure to obtain what they pursue, and to be fully satisfied in the acquisition.

6. Blessed are they [which do hunger and thirst after righteousnesse: for they shall be filled.

7 Blessed

7. Bleſſed are [the merciful: for they ſhall obtein mercy.] 7. They that are compaſſionate, and pitifully affected to the wants of other men whether of their ſouls, or bodies, apt to releive, and to pardon, to give and to forgive, for as they ſhall deal with others, God ſhall deal with them, in their time of want and requeſts they ſhall have pity ſhown to them abundantly, Luke 6. 38.

8. Bleſſed are [the pure in heart; for they ſhall [c] ſee God.] 8. They whoſe eye of their ſoul is not defiled by looking after fleſhly or worldly luſts, nor polluted with other foul mixtures, for by this purity they are fitted for that viſion of God, which none elſe can attain unto, Heb. 12. 14. c.

9. Bleſſed are [the [d] peace-makers: for they ſhall be called the children of God.] 9. Peaceable, that love and labour for peace, for they are like to God, as children to parents, and like the only begotten Son of God, that great peace-maker, and ſhall have the priviledges that belong to ſuch, the childrens portion, that of grace in this life, and of the inheritance in another. d.

10. Bleſſed are they [which are perſecuted for righteouſneſſe ſake: for theirs is the kingdome of heaven.] 10. That ſuffer for the diſcharge of a good conſcience, for the conſtancy of their obedience to any of Gods commandements; for their ſufferings here ſhall be hereafter rewarded with a kingdom, though they are oppoſed and perſecuted by men, they ſhall be own'd, and crown'd by God, as his Martyrs or Confeſſors.

11. Bleſſed are ye [when [e] men ſhall revile you, and perſecute you, and ſhall ſay all manner of evil againſt you × falſly for my ſake.] 11. When ye ſhall be reviled, and perſecuted, and have all kind of evil reports calumniouſly raiſed againſt you, becauſe you are profeſſors of the faith of Chriſt (this was the condition of Martyrs and Confeſſors in the Chriſtian Church, when Chriſtianity it ſelf was perſecuted, as ver. 10. of all that conſtantly adhere to any part of Chriſtian duty, and are not by any temptations of perſecution, &c. moved out of it. e.

12. Rejoyce ye and [be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven; for ſo perſecuted they the Prophets which were before you.] 12. Exult or leap for joy; for God will reward upon you not only your integrity, and your patience, but their multiplied revilings and ſlanders with a multiplied recompenſe in another world. For thus were the Prophets before you dealt with, thoſe that came with commiſſions immediately from God, with whom if ye communicate in doing well, and ſuffering patiently, ye ſhall proportionably partake of reward with them.

13. Ye are the ſalt of the earth; but if the ſalt † [f] have loſt its ſavour, wherewith ſhall it be ſalted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be caſt out, and trodden under foot of men.] 13. You diſciples, all ſorts of true Chriſtians, (ſee note a.) are the men that by your doctrine, and exemplary piety and charity are to keep the whole land, the whole world from putrefying. But if your lives grow unſavoury or noyſome, what meanes is there imaginable to repair or recover you? None certainly. And then are ye (unſavoury Chriſtians) the moſt unprofitable refuſe creatures in the world, and ſo ſhall be accounted of, (Mark 9. 50. Luke 14. 34.) and dealt with accordingly. f.

14. Ye are the light of the world. A city that is ſet on a hill cannot be hid.] 14. As a city ſet upon an high illuſtrious place is ſeen by all that travail neer it, and by them enquired after what it is, ſo the Chriſtian Church (which is a moſt conſpicuous ſociety in reſpect of the difference of their lives from other men) cannot chuſe but be taken notice of by the reſt of the world, and either attract them by their good, or diſcourage and deterre them by their evil examples, Iſa. 60. 11. Phil. 2. 15.

15. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a buſhel, but on a candleſtick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the houſe. 15. It is my deſign in you, (in the doctrine which ye are to preach, and the exemplary lives which you are to live) to ſet up a torch or eminent luminary, like the ſun in the firmament, for all the world to be enlightned by it, and directed in the actions of their lives. Now ye know, 'tis not mens meaning, when they light a candle, to put it under that which will cover, and ſhut up the light of it, but to ſet it up at the beſt advantage, ſo that it may diſpenſe its light moſt freely to all that are within reach of it. And ſo muſt ye diffuſe your doctrine and examples to all the heathen world, whoſe ignorance and ſins render them anſwerable to the dark parts of the houſe, which yet the candle, when it comes to them, doth illuminate.

16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your [good works.] and glorifie your father which is in heaven. 16. Honeſt, honourable, commendable actions ſuch as are not practiſed by other men.

* diſſolve; or pull aſunder, καταλύσαι. † perfect, fill up.

17. Think not that I am come [to * deſtroy the [g] law and the prophets, I am not come to deſtroy but [h] to † fulfill.] 17. To take any thing from the Law and the Prophets, i. e. the rule of duties, toward God and man, in force among the Jews, to looſe mankind from the obligations that formerly lay upon them (v. 18, 19. and note f.) to permit, much leſſe to cauſe any one morall command to be evacuated, but to repair and make up whatſoever is any way wanting, to reſtore whatſoever hath been taken from it by falſe interpretations of thoſe which have ſtriven to evacuate ſome parts of it, to require more explicitly, what was obſcure before, and where there is any need, to encreaſe and adde unto the Law. g. h.

× Iota ἰῶτα † until all things be done, ἕως ἂν πάντα γένηται. * looſe, or diſſolve one of the leaſt of theſe commandements, λύσῃ μίαν τῶν ἐντολῶν τούτων τῶν ἐλαχίστων.

18. For verily I ſay unto you, [Till heaven and earth paſſe, one × [i] jot or one tittle ſhall in no wiſe paſſe from the law, † till all be fulfilled.] 18. Till the world be deſtroyed and all things come to an end, no one leaſt particle ſhall depart from the Law, or be taken away, or looſe its force, or obligation. i.

19. Whoſoever therefore ſhall [* break one of theſe leaſt commandements, and ſhall teach men ſo, he ſhall be called the leaſt in the kingdome of heaven; but whoſoever ſhall doe and teach them, the ſame ſhall be called great in the kingdome of heaven.] 19. By his practiſe and doctrine evacuate any one of the leaſt commands of the Law, or which I ſhall now deliver to you, he ſhall be the leaſt, (ſee note on c. 8. k.) i.e. be deſpiſed, and rejected by God in the day of judgement (which is called Gods Kingdome, 2 Tim. 4. 1. Mat. 25. 1.) or, he ſhall be caſt out of the Church, be thought unworthy of having his name retained in the catalogue of Chriſtians here, or Saints hereafter, (as among the Jews he that did teach, and do contrary to the determination of the Conſiſtory, i. e. who, being a Doctor of the Law, did teach any thing to be lawful, which the determination of the Conſiſtory made to be unlawful, he was look'd upon as a rebellious Elder, and was by law to be put to death.) But whoſoever ſhall himſelf practiſe and teach others to practiſe all, not neglecting the very leaſt of them, ſhall be rewarded in an eminent manner here, and at the day of judgement; ſhall be a principal Chriſtian here, and Saint hereafter, advanced to the dignity of judging others, and to the glory attending it in heaven.

20. For I ſay unto you, that except your righteouſneſſe [ſhall exceed the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſees,] ye ſhall in no caſe enter into the kingdome of heaven. 20. Shall abound more above the ordinary practiſe of men, then the actions, or righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſees abounds.

21. [k] Ye

k. 21. [k] Ye have heard that it was [ſaid * by them of old times, Thou ſhalt not kill, and, whoſoever ſhall kill ſhall be † in danger of the judgement.]

21. Delivered by Moſes in the Law to the Jews, that they ſhould commit no murther, and that he that did ſo ſhould be lyable to be tryed for his life, pleadable in the leſſer Sanhedrim (the houſe of twenty three men, who had the cognizance in capital and greater matters) obnoxious to capital puniſhment, that particularly of the ſword.

* to τοῖς ἀρχ. † lyable to ἔνοχος τῇ,

22. For a light cauſe, or above the proportion of the cauſe, or immoderately for any cauſe, he ſhall be deemed to deſerve that puniſhment which is anſwerable to capital, viz. the loſſe of eternal life (except repentance prevent it, and releif from the death of our high prieſt) but he that ſhall call his brother empty worthleſſe fellow, that ſhall vilifie, deride, and ſcoffe other men, ſhall be lyable to the great Senate of ſeventy two, where the puniſhment is ſtoning, ſeverer than the former, and ſo proportionably in another world to a yet deeper degree of hell. But he that permits his paſſion to break out into virulent rayling, ſhall be lyable to that degree of puniſhment in another world, which is anſwerable to the burning in the valley of Hinnom, which was a puniſhment farre greater then the other two, and ſo notes a very great degree of eternall torments. For in that place 'twas the cuſtome to put their children into hollow brazen veſſels over the fire, and therein to ſcald them to death, crying out lamentably, very many together.

l. 22. But I ſay unto you, that whoſoever is angry with his brother [* without a cauſe ſhall be † in danger of the judgement; and whoſoever ſhall ſay unto his brother, [l] Racha, ſhall be in danger of the || councell; but whoſoever ſhall ſay, Thou fool, ſhall be in danger of * hell fire.]

23, 24. If therefore at any time thou art a bringing, or haſt brought, to the Prieſt thy offering for atonement of ſin, thy peace-offering to be receiyed by him, and offered for thee upon the altar, and, as thou art there ready to preſent thy offering to the Prieſt, thou calleſt to mind that thou haſt done any man any injury, doe thou in that minute ſtop, and leave thy offering unpreſented to the Prieſt, and betake thy ſelf firſt to that perſon whom thou haſt thus injured, uſe means to reconcile him, to make him friends with thee, to obtain his pardon, to work thy reconciliation with him, and then come and complete thy intended atonement.

23. Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there remembreſt that thy brother hath ought againſt thee,

26. Verily I ſay unto thee, Thou ſhalt by no means come [out thence, till thou haſt paid the uttermoſt farthing.]

27. Ye have heard that it was ſaid × by them of old time, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery.

× to them τοῖς.

28. But I ſay unto you [that [o] whoſoever looketh on a woman to luſt after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.]

29. And be thy eye (one inſtrument of enſnaring thee, as the hand is another, v. 30.) never ſo uſeful or advantagious to thee, thou hadſt better have none, then be enſnared by it. And ſo for all other things, if that which is moſt pretious to thee, and uſeful (as inſtrumental to the greateſt uſes, and moſt gratefull delights) be thereby a means of enſnaring thee in any ſin, or hindring thee in thy progreſſe of a holy or chaſt life, deny thy ſelf the uſe of that, which veilds thee, together with that delight, that damage alſo, and the damage farre more conſiderable than the delight; and Adultery being forbidden, account it the moſt advantageous precept, this of not feeding or pleaſing the eye, &c. which, when it is indulged to, makes it ſo hard, if not impoſſible, to abſtain from the fouler groſſer ſin, at leaſt in the heart, (the purity of which, and not only of the outward members, is ſtrictly required by Chriſt, v. 7.) For it is much better for thee to want thoſe delights or advantages at this preſent, than that by the enjoying them, thou ſhouldſt plunge thy ſelf body and ſoul into everlaſting perdition.

33. And as v. 21. & v. 27. (that of v. 31. being but appendant to that of adultery and brought in as in a parenthesis) I mention'd to you ſome of the commands of the Decalogue. So now again another.

34. All voluntary ſwearing, though it be by a creature, is wholly interdicted thee. And though in involuntary, thoſe that are lawfully impoſed by the Magiſtrate, by way of adjuring, or laying an oath upon thee, thou mayeſt and art obliged, in obedience to authority, to ſwear by God himſelf, yet in any other caſe thou art not to ſwear by any thing elſe, though it be inferiour to God, becauſe being created by God, it is he only, that hath power over it, and therefore it is not ſubjected to thy will, to abuſe or ſwear by it, as for example,

34. But I ſay unto you, [ſwear not at all] neither by heaven, for it is Gods throne,

35. Nor by the earth, for it is his footſtool; neither by Jeruſalem, for it is the city of the great King;

36. Neither ſhalt thou ſwear by thy head, becauſe thou canſt not make one haire white, or black.

For whatſoever is uſed above theſe neceſſary expreſſions, and confirmations, (as any kind of oath uſed in diſcourſe between men, be it, by the heaven, the earth, &c.) proceeds from ſome evil principle, ſometimes from your vainglorious humour, delighting in ſuch big-ſpeaking (founded in an opinion, that fearing to ſin is a poor-ſpirited thing) ſometimes from want of reverence to the name of God, ſometimes from the faithleſneſſe of men, but moſt commonly from the Devil, that evil one, who hath many ſnares to catch ſouls, and inſnare them in idolatry, or errour, or unbeleif, and the uſe of the forementioned forms of ſwearing may tend to this end undiſcernibly; and beſides, the not obſerving exact truth in all our converſation (which makes us not fit to be truſted without oaths) and the incredulity of men, (that they will not beleive without them) and ſo the pride, and irreverence alſo, are all the works of the Devil, in which reſpect (as alſo, becauſe there is no part of our ſenſitive appetite, to which oaths doe properly afford any delight or pleaſure) the oaths that come from any one of theſe, may be ſaid to be from him, eſpecially all needleſſe promiſſory oathes, to which Chriſts ſpeech eſpecially belongs.

but on the contrary, whoſoever ſhall uſe thee contumelioufly, bear it patiently (as to turn the cheek ſignifies proverbially, Lam. 3. 3.) yea though the doing ſo ſeemeth to thee a likely means to bring the like upon thee another time. 43. 'Tis true indeed that the precept of Moſes concerning the kind-dealing of the Jews with other men, extended not univerſally to all, but peculiarly to their country-men, or fellow-Jews (called, the ſons of thy people,) To others who were aliens, and alſo enemies to them, they were not bound to be kinde; but againſt ſome, viz. the ſeven Nations, they were commanded to proceed hoſtilely.

44. Let your kindneſſe be extended, as the bleſſings of heaven, even to enemies,

46. For if ye have ordinary charity to them which

48. Therefore of you Chriſtians I require that you exerciſe your charity whether of the loweſt or higheſt ſort, and extend it as farre as the mercy of God is extended, viz. to enemies as well as friends, Luke 6. 36.

Annotations on S. MATTHEW Chap. V.

a. Μαθητὰς.

V. 1. Diſciples] The word μαθητὴς ſignifies a ſcholar, or learner, that hath entred into any ſchool of knowledge, the relative to a Maſter or teacher; And though the Twelve, which were afterwards Apoſtles, be ordinarily known by this title of οἱ μαθηταὶ the diſciples by way of excellence, yet doth it not from thence follow, that thoſe Twelve were the only Auditors of this Sermon (or if they had been, that the doctrine here preached belongs only to Apoſtles, and their ſucceſſors in the Church, becauſe thoſe very Twelve, were as yet but μαθηταὶ learners, not Apoſtles, till they were ſent out to preach, Mat. 10. 1. and after to govern and rule the Church in Chriſt's ſtead) but rather the contrary, c. 7. 28. where at the concluſion of this Sermon, 'tis ſaid, ἐξεπλήσσοντο οἱ ὄχλοι the multitudes (of his Diſciples or learners, thoſe that now heard, and received his doctrine, though perhaps not abſolutely the ὄχλοι c. 5. 1. the promiſcuous multitude, the ὄχλοι πολλοὶ c. 4. 25. the many troops that followed him, but, I ſay, the multitudes of Diſciples that beleived on him) were aſtoniſh'd at his doctrine, ἦν γὰρ διδάσκων αὐτούς, for he taught them: thus Luke 6. 17. it is ſet down diſtinctly ὄχλῳ μαθητῶν a multitude of Diſciples (out of which, 'tis ſaid, he choſe twelve, v. 13. ſignifying that there were more Diſciples then thoſe twelve) in oppoſition to the πλήθει πολὺ τοῦ λαοῦ, &c. the great multitude of people from all Judæa, &c. that came to hear, and to be healed of him; So oft in other places, the word [μαθητὴς diſciple] is applyed to all that entred into his ſchool, as well as to the Twelve. So c. 8. 21. 'twas a Diſciple which ſaid, Lord, ſuffer me firſt to bury my father, but ſure none of the Twelve, and ſo in many other places. From all which 'tis clear, to whom the doctrine and precepts of this Sermon belongs, as also who are the [ὑμεῖς γε] who are said to be the salt of the earth, &c. v. 13. not the Apostles peculiarly (for as yet there were none such) but all Christians, which were then in the world, and so in like manner all that should succeed them in that title, all that enter Christs school, that professe his doctrine, and so follow him as obedient Disciples.

b. γῆ. V. 5. The earth] Ἡ γῆ very often hath a peculiar Critical signification in the Gospels, and referres to the land of Judea, and here by being promis'd to the Meek and obedient, looks distinctly on the fift Commandement, and in it on the Land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, i. e. a fruitful prosperous being here on earth: which is here said to belong by promise of God peculiarly to the Meek; And though sometimes it proves not so, when in time of civil dissensions, the supreme Governours are resisted and perhaps overcome (for then the Meek or obedient conscientious subjects are commonly involv'd in the worst (because in the Princes) condition, are deprived of their part in this promise, turn'd out of their κληρονομία, inheritance or portion) yet because this is an irregular and extraordinary case, (in respect of which this General rule is capable of exception) and because this is a particular tryall, fit to befall a righteous man, to see whether his estate will tempt him out of his duty, and because the Godly mans ταῦτα πάντα, Temporal felicity, that is promis'd to him, is alwayes with this reservation, unless it be fitter for his turn, that God make some experiments by afflicting of him (which, if he be found faithful in such tryals, will encrease his glory, and abundantly recompense the losse of this earth here, by the land of the living hereafter,) and because the Hundred fold promised in this life, i. e. the most fruitful Canaan-harvest, the κληρονομία τῆς γῆς the inheriting of this plentiful land, is dispensed μὴ διωγμῶν with an allay or mixture of persecutions, therefore, I say, the truth of this promise still remains good, that the meek shall possesse the earth, that obedience to superiours hath generally (though with the exceptions premised) the promise of this life, and on the other side the [κραυγὴ] or cry, which, saith Procopius on Isaiah c. 5. 7. is the direct contrary to this murmuring, disobedience, sedition, &c. is there, saith he, the peculiar cause of desolation, even of Temporal infelicities.

c. Ὁρᾶν τὸν Θεόν. V. 8. See God] The seeing God here may perhaps not look so farre off, as the Beatifical vision in another world, but be first fulfill'd in the work of Grace, in opening our eyes to behold the wonderful things of God's law, for this belongs peculiarly to the purity of heart, as that excludes both hypocrisie and uncleanesse, filthinesse of the flesh and spirit. Thus, saith Origen, did God exhibit himself to be seen of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, not to the eyes of their Bodies, ἀλλὰ καθαρᾷ καρδίᾳ, to the pure heart, contra Cels. l. 1. p. 285. Many excellent Discourses toward this purpose we have from the light of Nature among the Pythagorean Philosophers, Porphyry, Iamblichus, Plotinus, Marinus, when they speak of their καθαρικὴ, particularly in Hierocles his pref. on the Golden verses.

d. Ποιῆν. V. 9. The Peacemakers] The word ποιεῖν to doe, or work, in sacred dialect, doth oft signifie the habit or bent of the mind, with the consequent actions; so [ἁμαρτίαν ποιεῖν] to commit, or live indulgently in sin, and [ποιεῖν δικαιοσύνην] to have a sincere inclination or resolution of mind (which is never sine effectu, utterly uneffectuall) toward righteousnesse, as that signifies Ἐφησυχαστὰς. the practises of Christian virtues. Thus εἰρήνην ποιοῦντες, James 3. 18. they that work Peace, are peaceable minded men, and so proportionably the compound [εἰρηνοποιοὶ] peace-makers, is used in this place in the same signification. As for the κληθήσονται υἱοὶ, (which follows,) they shall be call'd sons, that must be rendred according to the importance of the word καλεῖσθαι to be called, i. e. to be, mention'd on Mat. 2. k. (And so 'tis used 1 John 3. 1.) and υἱοὶ Θεοῦ, sons of God, both here and v. 45. are they which partake of (and resemble him in) some special divine excellencies (as sons of God are imitators of him, Eph. 5. 1.) such as peaceable-mindednesse here; Just as υἱοὶ Ἄρεως sons of Mars, are good souldiers, and sons of Neptune, men of a savage and tyrannous disposition. And so 'tis observable that John 8. 39. the ποιεῖν ἔργα to doe the works, and θέλειν ποιεῖν being willing or delighting to doe them, v. 44. are evidences of Sons.

e. Ὀνειδίσωσιν. V. 11. Shall revile you] As [καλέσουσιν ὄνομα, they shall call his name,] c. 1. 23. signifies his name shall be called, (and so in other places there noted) so here [ὅταν ὀνειδίσωσιν] when they shall persecute, and revile you, signifies when ye shall be persecuted, &c. and v. 12. [οὕτω γὰρ ἐδίωξαν τοὺς Προφήτας, for so they persecuted the Prophets, (without any intimation who the Persecutors were) is, so were the Prophets before you persecuted. See Note on Luke 16. 9.

f. Μωρανθῇ. V. 13. Have lost its savour.] The Hebrew word תפל signifies two things, first ἄναλον, insipidum, unsavoury, and then, by a Metaphor, μωρὸν foolish; and here one of those is taken for the other, and so [μωρανθῇ] used for being saltlesse, insipid, unsavoury, ἄναλον γένηται, having lost all its saltnesse, all of that quality that belongs to that creature.

g. Νόμου. V. 17. Law.] The use of the word νόμος law] in the new Testament is very observable, and the several notions of it may perhaps be reducible to two heads: for first it signifies in one general notion the whole way of œconomy among the Jews under the old Testament (taken precisely by it self, without opposition to the reformation wrought after by Christ,) that way that men were then put into, in order to their eternal weal. Thus in this chap. v. 17. I came not to dissolve the law, &c. but πληρῶσαι to perfect it, i. e. not to destroy or pull asunder that former fabrick under the old Testament, but to reform and improve it in some things wherein it may be better; And so v. 18. when he saith, One Iota or title shall not passe from the law, till all be done, i. e. till the end of the world (and again v. 19. when of him that looseth any of the least of these commandements, he saith, that he shall be the least in the kingdome of heaven) 'tis clear that the law there signifies the old Testament-course; the religion of the former age, which indeed Christ came to review, and reform, to bring substance in stead of shadows, to make clearer revelations, clearer or higher promises and precepts, (which he calls πληρῶσαι to fill up) but not λῦσαι to pull asunder or dissolve it; This Justin Martyr excellently sets down in his discourse with Tryphon the Jew. Somethings there were, saith he, (not only permitted, as that of divorce, &c. but) διατεταχθέντα ordained and appointed you, διὰ τὸ σκληροκάρδιον τοῦ λαοῦ, because of the hardheartednesse of that people, as Circumcision, and other such outward observances, to interpose some checks, or stops in their course of carnality, and impiety, that they were so bent to, that they would not mind the τὰς αἰωνίους καὶ φύσει δικαιοσύνας καὶ εὐσεβείας, those eternal and natural rules of justice and piety. Now these things being thus required of them by the Law of Moses, they again abused contrary to Gods design, placed all piety in those external performances, and neglected the natural justice and piety signified, and meant by God to be secured, and not betrayed by them. This therefore Christ comes to reform, to require the substantial duties in stead of the shadows that darkly signified them, and all the changes wrought by Christ were of this nature, Reformations; And so, we know, pulling out weak or broken Timber in a building, and putting in better and stronger, is not pulling down of a house, but only repairing it; so farre was Christs design from destroying of it. And it is observable vable that in that place of v. 17. the Prophets are added to the Law, and ſo both in that, and many other places, the Law and the Prophets together ſignifie the religion of the former age, ſimply taken as that differs from Chriſtianity, which was the altering ſome things in it to the better, reforming and mending of it; ſo Mat. 7. 12. This is the law and the prophets, i. e. this is a prime part of the Jewiſh religion or doctrine, and c. 11, 13. the Prophets and the Law propheſyed till John, i. e. the Jewiſh religion continued in every part till John the Baptiſt; and Luke 16. 16. the ſame is again repeated, and Matth. 22. 40. all the law and the prophets] i. e. the whole doctrine of that religion. Thus Mat. 12. 5. & 22. 36. and 23. 23. Luke 2. 22, 23, 24, 39. Luke 10. 26. and 16. 17. and 24. 44. and ſo generally throughout all the Goſpels, and moſt places in the Acts it ſignifies, viz. the religion of the Jews; only with this difference, that ſometimes the context pointeth to one part of it, ſometimes to another; but to any of theſe parts ſtill, as they are in conjunction with the other parts, and ſo with the whole body of their religion. In the Epiſtles (and perhaps in ſome of the places of the Acts, as when there is mention of ζηλωται̃ τ̃ν νόμ, Zelotes of the law, and the like) ſome variation may be obſerv'd, and that will give us the ſecond notion of the word, as 'tis ſet oppoſite to the Goſpel. For though Chriſt had told them, and that moſt truly, that he came not to deſtroy the law, but only to reform and perfect it in all reſpects, yet ſuch was the blindneſſe and obſtinacy of the Jewes, and their zeal for every ceremony in the Law, and their pride in diſcriminating themſelves from all other men, by that privilege of having and obſerving the Law juſt as 'twas given to Moſes (i. e. the Jewiſh religion in every title) that when Chriſt would make reformations, telling them the true ſignifications of their types, and giving them ſubſtance for ſhadowes, they look'd upon Chriſt and his Diſciples after him as enemies of the religion of the Jewes, and ſet up their more imperfect legal obſervances (which were only burthens to exerciſe, and imploy them in time of their minority, and had nothing of real good in them, and might well be left off, eſpecially when God in Chriſt declared his will that they ſhould, and gave excellent, moral, ſubſtantial precepts in ſtead of them) againſt all Chriſts ſcheme, or form of reformation. Which dealing of theirs was the ſame in effect, as if that God, that firſt deſign'd the frame of the Temple, ſhould after appoint ſome little things to be alter'd in it (very much to the better, from that which was leſſe to that which were more uſeful and agreeable) and to that end, to pull out ſome little pins, to take down ſome partitions, and the like, to take off Wood, and put Gold in ſtead of it; and the people that firſt received that Temple from God (and obſerved, and valued it only for his ſake) ſhould now oppoſe the ſo uſeful alterations and reformations, as deſtructive to this Temple of Gods erecting, and be zealous for the punctual retaining of that old form againſt God himſelf in this new deſignation. This was the practice of the Jewes generally in Chriſts time, nay even of a great number of thoſe that had received and beleived on Chriſt, for though they rejected not what he taught, but followed him, became his Diſciples, took him for (and clave to him as) the Meſſias, yet many of them, (eſpecially thoſe that had any thing of the Phariſee in them before their converſion) would have all the Moſaical rites obſerved by all Chriſtians, Acts 15. 2. Which was in effect, as if they ſhould accept of a reformation, and embrace all the new things which Chriſt brought in, but withall require to keep all the old ones too, thoſe which he took out to put thoſe in in the ſtead; Or as if he, that had his burthen made eaſier by God, ſhould call for his harder heavier burthen again, and oppoſe God and all his faithful ſervants, nay perſecute them (as the zealous Judaizing Chriſtians, and Gnoſticks after did) becauſe they would not agree with them to impoſe theſe heavier tasks on all men. How unreaſonable this was is eaſily diſcern'd; but however by this means it came to paſſe, that a great contention did in the infancy of the Church ariſe, betwixt the Judaizing zelots, and the Orthodox meek diſciples of Chriſt. The former were for the obſervation and continuance of every ceremony of the Judaical law, obliging all the very Gentiles, as many as accepted of the faith of Chriſt, to undertake the obſervance of it, to be Circumcis'd, &c. The latter aſſerted the liberty of the Gentiles, who were never under that Jewiſh yoke, and for the Jewiſh converts, inſiſted on Chriſts reformation, and conſequently the abolition, and non-obligation of thoſe ſhadowes, which he had changed for that which was ſo much more excellent, Rom. 7. 4. The Judaizers yet farther preſs'd the great prerogative that the Jewes had beyond all others, in having that Law of Moſes, meaning by it that exact form, as it was given by him, and as that was oppos'd to Chriſt's reformation, or the ſame now review'd and reform'd by Chriſt. Nay becauſe the promiſes made to Abraham were by them ſuppos'd to belong to all the Jewes, which ſtuck cloſe to that old Moſaical form, and to none elſe, and to help them to juſtification, to the favour of God, and pardon of ſins, Mat. 3. 8, 9. (though they liv'd in many ſins unreform'd, and thoſe ſuch, as were of farre greater moment, Mat. 23. 23. than the omitting the ceremonies of the Law could ever be deemed, which they ſo vehemently ſtood for) therefore they more and more enhaunſed and preſs'd the neceſſity of retaining every pin in the Temple, every ceremony of the Moſaical law, as it was before Chriſts reformation; And with them the Gnoſticks ſoon complyed, and generally inflam'd the unbeleiving Jews againſt all the Orthodox Chriſtians, that did not: And againſt theſe Hereticks, and thoſe boaſters of this Law, as a prerogative beyond all others, (theſe aſſertors of Moſes's old form againſt Chriſt's review and reformation) the Apoſtles wrote the greateſt part of moſt of their Epiſtles: And ſo in them, though the word be very oft uſed in the former notion for the Jewiſh religion, not as 'tis oppoſed to, but as 'tis perfected by the Goſpel, (and that ſo often, that 'twere tedious to name them) yet doth the word νόμ& the law, and ἔργα νόμ, the works of the law, many times ſignifie (that, which I now ſet down for the ſecond notion of the word) this old form of the Jewiſh religion (as it was, before it was reformed by Chriſt in thoſe particulars formentioned) and that in oppoſition to the new form, as it now ſtands reform'd, and heightned, altered and improv'd by Chriſt; Thus Rom. 2. 17. ἀναπαύ πῷ νόμῳ (ſpeaking to and of the growing ſect of the Gnoſticks, or Judaizers) He reſts in, depends on, and boaſts of the law, diſcriminates himſelf from all others, not only Gentiles, but Chriſtians, which Judaize not, and though he commit groſſe ſins againſt the very law, v. 21, 22. yet he thinks to be juſtified by being a punctual aſſertor of the external obſervances of the Law, againſt all things elſe even againſt Gods own reformations. So Rom. 3. 20. By the works of the law no fleſh ſhall be juſtified before him, i. e. by obſervation of the form preſcribed by Moſes, as it differs from Chriſts reformation, or by bare obſerving the outward ceremonial without the inward ſubſtantial part of it, the circumciſion without the purity, Rom. 2. 28, 29. For, as it follows, by that is ἐπίγνωσις, the diſcerning or acknowledging of ſin; the law of Circumciſion ſhews a man his obligation to inward purity, and his being Circumciſed is an accuſation of him for every impurity he commits, farre from juſtifying him in the commiſſion of it. So again v. 21. χωρὶς νόμ (as v. 28. χωρὶς ἔργων νόμ) without the law, or without the works of the law, i. e. without that punctual obſervation of the Moſaical form, the righteouſneſſe of God (or, God's way of juſtifying men) is manifeſted. Where 'tis obſervable, that this way of juſtifying χωρὶς νόμου, without the law, taken in this ſecond ſenſe, is ſaid to be teſtifyed by the νόμου καὶ τῶν προφητῶν] the law and the prophets, in the firſt ſenſe; It being often intimated by them, that not the outward ceremony, but inward purity was that which is acceptable to God. So again v. 27. νόμος ἔργων, the law of works] oppoſed to νόμος πίστεως, the law of faith, the outward to the inward law; where yet v. 31. having oppos'd them in that ſecond notion, he makes them friends again in the firſt notion of the Law, In which, ſaith he, Chriſt did not aboliſh, but only perfect, and ſo eſtabliſh the Law, heighten the former duties, and require more elevated performance of them, then was before beleived to be under precept; and for the Ceremonial, change them from the external to the internal performance of them; and ſo likewiſe for the Judicial requiring the equity of them, i. e. that which among us is proportionable to that which appeared to be Gods will among them, as farre as the variation of circumſtances makes prudent, or reaſonable for us. So again, Rom. 4. 13. οὐ διὰ νόμου ἡ ἐπαγγελία τῷ Αβραὰμ, the promiſe to Abraham was not by the law; The law there ſignifies the command of Circumciſion, Gen. 17. 10. which being after the giving the promiſes to him, Gen. 12. 2, 7. and 13. 14. and 15. 1, 4, 6. and 17. 2. it could not be ſaid, that that was the foundation of the promiſes made to Abraham; ſo Gal. 3. 17, 18, 21. and ſo Rom. 4. 14, 15, 16. So again Rom. 6. 14, 15. where [ὑπὸ νόμον, under the law] under the Moſaical yoak of legal performances, ſuch as Chriſt reform'd and alter'd, is oppos'd to [ὑπὸ χάριν, under grace] that ſtate under Chriſts reformation. So Rom. 7. 4. you are dead to the law, or, the Law to you, you are no more bound to it, and v. 6. we are freed from the law, i. e. from thoſe parts of it, wherein Chriſts reformation hath made a change. So Rom. 8. 3. τὸ ἀδύνατον τοῦ νόμου, the unability and weakneſſe of the law] points to that ſecond notion of the Law, before 'twas perfected by Chriſt. So Gal. 2. 16. three times ἔργα νόμου, the works of the law] in the ſame ſenſe, as was explain'd, Rom. 3. 20. So again c. 3. 2, 5, 10, 11, 12. and in many more places in that chapter, (only with this light change, The Law without the mercy, or pardon of ſin brought in by the Goſpel, The Law taken alone, as Excluſive of the other, For by that, Curſed is every one that continues not in all, &c. And in this ſenſe is v. 13. the curſe of the law, that puniſhment, that the Law brings on every ſinner, and none but the Goſpel frees us from.) So c. 4. 21. and c. 5. 4, 18. So νόμος τῶν ἐντολῶν, the law of commandements] Epheſ. 2. 15. (though νόμος ἐντολῆς σαρκικῆς, the law of a fleſhly commandement, Heb. 7. 16. belong to another matter, ſpeaking of Melchiſedek and Chriſt typified by him, and denotes a law making proviſion for the mortality of Prieſts, appointing them in ſucceſſion) that Codex or body of Commandements under Moſes, before Chriſt's reformation. So Phil. 3. 6, 9. Heb. 7. 19. And becauſe this Law of Moſes was written and ſet down in the Scripture of the old Teſtament, and ſo oppos'd in that reſpect to the law of Nature in the hearts of the Gentiles, and all men, (call'd ἄγραφος νόμος the unwritten law) therefore as the word νόμος or law is uſed, ſo in the ſame notions the word [γράμμα writing] is uſed alſo. Sometimes in the firſt notion of νόμος, for the law or religion of the Jewes. So Rom. 2. 27. σὺ διὰ γράμματος καὶ περιτομῆς, thee that haſt literally obſerv'd the law of Moſes, and art circumcis'd, and v. 29. (with a little change) ἐν πνεύματι, οὐ γράμματι, the circumciſion in the ſpirit, not in the letter, or writing i. e. the Spiritual circumciſion purity of the heart, and not that outward commanded by Moſes's Law. So Rom. 7. 6. we ſerve in the newneſſe of the ſpirit. i. e. according to this new reformed law, which looks moſt to inward purity, and not ἐν παλαιότητι γράμματος, in the oldneſſe of the letter or writing, which required external circumciſion, &c. So 2 Cor. 3. 6. God hath fitted and prepared us to be miniſters of the new Teſtament, οὐ γράμματος, ἀλλὰ πνεύματος, not of the writing, but of the ſpirit, i. e. not of the Law, as it ſignifies the external body of the Moſaical conſtitutions unreformed, but of the Spiritual or Evangelical law, the law of faith, or, the law, as Chriſt hath reformed it, or the Covenant of mercy and pardon of ſin under the Goſpel: For, as it follows, γράμμα ἀποκτείνει, that law, as it is in Moſes, unreform'd by Chriſt, brings death, but no life; Condemnation, but no Juſtification, or pardon unto the world; But the Spirit, i. e. this new reformed law, ζωοποιεῖ, gives life, enables to gain life, to come to Juſtification or ſalvation. And ſo again v. 7. Διακονία θανάτου ἐν γράμμασιν, the miniſtration of death in the writing, i. e. in the Moſaical or written law, as it ſtands there unreform'd by Chriſt, and oppoſite to the διακονία πνεύματος, v. 8. the adminiſtration of the Spirit, i. e. this new, reformed, Evangelical law; which, either firſt, becauſe it comes neerer to the ſoul, and requires purity there, whereas the Moſaical law deals moſt in external purifications, or 2ly becauſe the Holy Ghoſt came down firſt on Chriſt, then on the Diſciples, to confirm this new Evangelical courſe under Chriſt, in oppoſition to the former under Moſes; or 3ly becauſe in this Evangelical adminiſtration there is Grace given to enable us to perform what is now required (and that Grace is a gift of God's Spirit,) for one, or all theſe reaſons, I ſay, it is called πνεῦμα, the Spirit. Thus much in this place of the word [νόμος law] and (by occaſion of that) of γράμμα and πνεῦμα letter and ſpirit, which may help to the underſtanding of many places, and will not need to be repeated again, when we come to them.

Ib. To fulfill] The Greek word [πληρῶσαι] is anſwerable to the Hebrew לְמַלֵּא which ſignifies not only מָלָא, to perform, but מָלֵא, to perfect, to fill up, as well as to fulfil; and ſo is rendred ſometimes by one, ſometimes by t'other. And the Greek it ſelf is ſo uſed in like manner; when it referres to a Word, or a Prophecie, then it is to perform, to fulfil, 2 Chron. 36. 22. 1 Mac. 2. 55. In other caſes it is to fill up, to compleat, to perfect. Eccluſ 33. 16. and 39. 12. 2 Chron. 24. 10. and Mat. 23. 32. This the ancient Greek Fathers expreſſe by the ſimilitude of a Veſſel, that had ſome water in it before, but now is filled up to the brim; and again of a Picture, that is firſt drawn rudely, the limbs only and lineaments, with a cole or pen, but when the Painter comes to draw it to the life, to adde the ζωγράφησις to the σκιαγραφία, then it is ſaid to be fill'd up. This may farther appear by what Chriſt here adds, Except your righteouſneſſe, i. e. Chriſtian actions, and performances, exceed the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſees, i. e. go higher then that ſtricteſt ſect of the Jewes, and the Doctors among them thought themſelves obliged to, or taught others that they were obliged, they ſhall not enter into the kingdome of God, paſſe for Chriſtians here, or prove Saints hereafter. This ſame truth is at large exemplified in the remainder of this chapter, by induction of ſeveral particulars of the Law, firſt barely ſet down by Chriſt, and then with Chriſts improvement added to them, in this form of ſpeech, But I ſay unto you] Thus when Rom. 8. 3. it is ſaid that God condemn'd ſin in the fleſh, i. e. ſhew'd a great example of his wrath againſt ſin, by what Chriſt ſuffer'd on the Croſſe for our ſins, the reaſon of Gods doing ſo, is rendred v. 4. that the δικαίωμα τοῦ νόμου, Ordinance of the Law, circumciſion, &c, πληρωθῇ ἐν ἡμῖν, might be perfectly perform'd in us, i. e. in a higher degree then by the Jewes it was thought to oblige; And that it is the general interpretation of the antient Church-writers, (eſpecially the Greeks) down to S. Auguſtine, may appear by theſe few of a multitude of teſtimonies; Irenæus

So S. Baſil on Pſal. 15. calls Chriſt πλήρωμα νομοθετῶν. See the Author of the Conſtitutions l. 6. c. 23. So in Chryſoſtome Tom. 3. p. 93. Ἐν καινῇ νόμοι μυεῖοι καὶ πολλῶν μείζονων. And that Chriſt's giving of Lawes was πλήρωσις καὶ ἐπίτασις, and that Chriſt did not here recite all the Commandements of the Decalogue, becauſe he meant not πάντας ἀνεῖπαι, So that it was then μείζονων ἐντολῶν χωρὶς, & ὰ τὰ αὐτὰ κεῖ παλαιοῖς καὶ ἡμῖν κεάμματα. So Theophylact, that Chriſt came not καταλύειν σιαγραφίαν ἀλλὰ μᾶλλον ἀναπληρῶν.[a] And ἐλθόντ῾ τῶ χειρῶ παλαίσματα ἐυκολώτερα γέγονε, διὸ καὶ μείζω ἀγωνίσματα, ὡς μείζον῾ βοηθείας δεδομένης ἡμῖν, When Chriſt was come, our contentions became eaſier, wherefore we had alſo greater taſks, as having greater aſſiſtance afforded us. And [b] παλαιοτέρᾳ νόμῳ ὑψηλότερον νόμον ἔχων τὸν τῶ χειρῶ, having a Law more ſublime then the old Law, viz. the Law of Chriſt. And [c] ἵνα παραβαίνωμεν τὰ τῆ νόμῳ, διὰ τῦτο ἐλευθεριάζομεν, ἀλλ' ἵνα ὑπερβαίνωμεν καὶ τὸν νόμον, We are not therefore free, that we may tranſgreſſe the Law, but that we may tranſcend or exceed the Law; where in ſtead of Chriſts πληρῶσαι to fill up] he ſets ὑπερβαίνειν to exceed and go beyond. And [d] νόμον ἐκβάλλει ὡς ἐλάττονα τῆς παρ᾽ τῶ πνεύματ῾ διδομένης φιλοσοφίας, He caſts out the Law as inferiour and leſſe then the philoſophy, or rule of living, given by the Spirit.

And Ampliandæ, adimplendæque legi adjutricem Chriſtus præfecit patientiam. l. de Pat. And, Chriſtus Dei creatoris præcepta ſupplendo & conſervavit & auxit l. 4. cont. Marc. And, Legem ſiſtimus, ſcilicet in iis quæ & nunc Novo Teſtamento introducta, etiam cumulatiore præcepto prohibentur, pro non mœchaberis, qui viderit, &c. So S. Aug. ſerm. in mont. l. 1. Chriſtus implevit addendo quod minus habet, & ſic perficiendo confirmavit, & dum fiunt quæ adduntur, multò magis fiunt, quæ permiſſa ſunt ad inchoationem. And, quæ à me adduntur, qui non veni ſolvere ſed adimplere, And, non ſecundùm illa minima, ſed ſecund mea quæ dicturus ſum. Quæ ſunt autem iſta? ut abundet juſtitia, &c.

i. Κεραία. V. 18. Jot.] Κεραία] is thought by ſome to referre to the Hebrew Chirec, by others to ſome corners of the Hebrew letters, from whence their Criticks were wont to deduce great Myſteries. But the word muſt be reſolved to be of a Greek origination, and there it ſignifieth ἀρχὴ γεάμματ῾ (for ſo ſure we muſt read in Heſychius, not κεφέα, ἀρχὴ γεάμματα, but κεραία, ἀρχὴ γεάμματ῾) the beginning of a letter, which is leſſe then the leaſt letter, iota, which went before; Thus (ſaith Plutarch l. 2. adverſus Col.) did Epicurus contend with Democrates περὶ συλλαβῶν καὶ κεραιῶν; about ſyllables and theſe, where moſt probably they ſignifie pieces of letters, as ſyllables are pieces of words. Thus is the word uſed in Heſychius for any the leaſt part of any thing; thus he renders κέρῳ῾ (mention'd here c. 7. 3.) κεραία ξύλε λεπτὴ, a thin minute piece of wood, of ſome, but very little length. The Hebrew reads עוקץ, which the Rabbines frequently uſe for the little ſtalk or tail of any fruit. The Syriack hath ſerto, which Ferrarius interprets minima linea, and ſo the Arabick, chatta linea or lineola, the leaſt ſtroke or part of a letter. And accordingly it is here ſet to denote any the ſmalleſt inconſiderable parts, any minutiæ in the Law. The word is here joyned with ἰῶτα, the name of a Greek letter, which cannot be tranſlated into Engliſh any otherwiſe then that it is a Greek [ι] and therefore I have retain'd it in the margent, as Alpha and Omega two Greek letters are retain'd in the rendring of the Apocalypſe.

k. Ἀκοὴν. V. 21. Heard] There were three waies among the Hebrews of interpreting Scriptures; firſt שמעתא hearing, ἀκοὴ, when any fact is recited, or Hiſtorical ſenſe explicated, which to have heard is ſufficient without any more. 2ly. אגרא myſtical expoſition. 3ly. מתלי parabolical expoſition. The firſt of theſe belongs to thoſe paſſages of Scripture, which were plain matters of fact, as here plain commands of the Decalogue, without any other expoſitions on them; then the bare reciting them out of the book; And to ſhew that this, and that of adultery v. 22. and that of perjury v. 33. were commands of the Decalogue, and that that of the lex talionis, law of retaliation v. 38. and loving freinds, and hating enemies v. 43. (which two, though they agree with the reſt in the ἠκούσατε, ye have heard, yet differ in the τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, to them of old) were doctrines of Moſes Law, though not of the Decalogue (as that of Divorce having neither the [ἠκούσατε, ye have heard] nor the [τοῖς ἀρχαίοις] to them of old time, is neither) to ſhew this, I ſay, it is that Chriſts form here ſtill begins with ἠκούσατε ye have heard, in reference to the שמעתא hearing, forementioned, which belong'd to ſuch; or in reference to [Hear O Iſrael] the form, with which the Law began, in Moſes's reciting it, Deut. 5. 1. and ſo, in like manner, his form of addition [ἐγὼ δὲ λέγω ὑμῖν, but I ſay to you] is an intimation of the Rabbins forme, when having ſet down anothers doctrine, they make obſervation upon it, ואני אומר And, or, But I ſay,

l. Ῥακά. V. 22. Racha] The word Ῥακὰ is an Hebrew word, and ſignifies vaine, or empty, and being applied to any man, is a word of Contumely, calling him empty, deſpicable, witleſſe fellow, this is here forbidden by Chriſt, and (as an unſupportable wound to anothers reputation, which is generally prized next to life, often preferr'd before it) is by him thought fit to be ſuperadded to the old command of not killing. And that this is an elevation of Chriſt's doctrine above the Heathen theology, may appear by a known paſſage in Homer Iliad. α. where Minerva forbids Achilles ſtriking Agamemnon,

Ἀλλ' ἄγε λῆγ' ἔριδ῾, μηδὲ ξίφ῾ ἕλκεο χειρὶ,

Leave of contending, and draw not thy ſword, yet gives leave to reproach him, and counſels to Contumelious words, which is here moſt ſtrictly prohibited by Chriſt.

m. Καταλλαγῆθι, διαλλάγηθι. V. 24. Reconciled] The words [καταλλαγῆθι, and διαλλάγηθι] in the Paſſive voice have a peculiar ſenſe in the New Teſtament; In ordinary Greek Authors they ſignifie to be pacified, reconciled, but contrariwiſe in theſe (according to the notation of the Reciprocal conjugation, Hithpabel, among the Hebrews) to reconcile himſelf to another, i. e. to appeaſe, get the favour of that other. So 1 Cor. 7. 11. ἀνδρὶ καταλλαγήτω let her appeaſe, reconcile her ſelf to her husband. So Rom. 5. 10. If we being enemies κατηλλάγημεν τῷ Θεῷ, were reconciled to God, i. e. reſtored to his favour (God pacified toward us) So 2 Cor. 5. 20. καταλλάγητε τῷ Θεῷ, take care that God be reconciled unto you, and ſo here διαλλάγηθι τῷ ἀδελφῷ, take care that he be reconciled to thee: pacifie him, reconcile thy ſelf to him, for that which goes before is, not that he hath done thee injury, but thou him, when thy brother hath ſomewhat againſt thee] In which ſenſe alſo that other phraſe v. 25. [ἴσθι εὐνοῶν,] literally [be well minded] is to be taken, not that thou think well of thy injur'd brother (for that is not the buſineſſe of that place) but that thou ſeek his favour and forgiveneſſe, his accord and agreement with thee, that he may think well of thee, and be reconcil'd to thee. See Note on Mar. 14. 54. f. So in like manner the Active καταλλάττειν is not, as in other Authors it ſigaifies Εὐνοῶν. Καταλλάττειν signifies, to appeaſe, but) to reſtore any man to anothers favour, 2 Cor. 5. 19. All this is to be made up by obſerving the importance of the Hebrew רצה in the ſeveral Conjugations.

n. Ὑπηρέτης. V. 25. Officer.] The word ὑπηρέτης Officer, or Sergeant, which is here uſed, and ſo in like manner Joh. 18. 3. is alſo uſed Luke 4. 20. in another ſenſe, by which compared together it appears that the ſame men which in the Conſiſtory, or Court of Judgement among the Jewes, were Apparitors, or Sergeants, were alſo in the Synagogues imployed (as Deacons) to miniſter, to bring and take away the book, &c. So the very word Διάκονος that we ordinarily render Deacon doth Mat. 22. 13. ſignifie the officers, that take and carry men to priſon, and (as it was the Lictor's office) bind men hand and foot, &c. In ſtead of ὑπηρέτης here, is πράκτωρ Luke 12. 58. i. e. the Sergeant or Lictor that executes the ſentence, to which any man is adjudg'd by the Court of Juſtice. Διάκονος. Πράκτωρ.

o. Βλέπειν. V. 28. Looketh] Βλέπειν here ſignifies not to ſee, but to behold, conſider, look upon with ſome intention, or earneſtneſſe, or voluptuous deſigne. Proportionably to what we find of this word, when 'tis applied to other matters, As Epheſ. 5. 15. Βλέπετε, ſee, i. e. take heed very diligently πῶς ἀκριβῶς, &c. that ye walk accurately. And very frequently in that ſenſe for taking heed. Saint Chryſoſtome here reads, ὁ ἐμβλέπων, he that looks upon, and as Theophylact renders it by ſtandeth and looketh earneſtly, ſo he by maketh it a buſineſſe to doe ſo; hunts after, feeds his eyes with the ſpectacle, nails them to handſome faces, and again, looks that he may deſire. An example of this there is in the two Elders Suſ. v. 32. who being denied the farther enjoying of their luſts, command to uncover her face, that they may be filled with her beauty. And ſo 1 Eſdr. 4. 19. they gape, and even with open mouth fix their eyes faſt on her: And Eccluſ. 9. 5. and 8. μὴ καλαμάνδανε, gaze not, look not on a maid, as if thou wert a learning her, filling thy Phanſy with her beauty, leſt thou be inſnared by her complexion, colour, or beauty in her cheeks: for ſo I ſuppoſe the right reading (ψιμυθίοις not θηλυμίοις) imports. So Eccluſ. 41. 21. καλανόησις, contemplating another mans wife, and περιεργία (not, as 'tis rendred, being over-buſie, but) a curious earneſt beholding his maid, as the word is uſed 1 Tim. 5. 13. and Eccluſ. 42. 12. Look not earneſtly on any man for beauty, and ſo the Fathers generally uſe περιεργία, to this matter. And ſo in Humane authors. Ἐρωτικοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς εἶδε, καὶ τὸ κάλλος περιεργάσατο, Niceph. Baſilac. Anny. β. Look'd with amorous eyes, and earneſtly beheld his beauty, and ſo ὅτι ψυχῆς ἐθαλαμιπόλῃ τὸν ἔρωτα, bedded her love in her heart, it being dangerous to let it out, The very thing call'd here, committing adultery in the heart. The thing then here forbidden by Chriſt is the delight or pleaſure of looking on carnal objects, which pious men of the old Teſtament have abſtein'd from, as Job 31. 1. but is now moſt ſtrictly prohibited by Chriſt. Thus (ſaith * Athenagoras) τὸ ἡδέως ἰδεῖν, μοιχεία, to behold with pleaſure is adultery to a Chriſtian, μὴ τὰς ὄψεις τῶν παρθένων περιεργάζεσθαι, 'tis not lawfull to behold curiouſly the beauty of virgins, * Cat. in Job. and ſo ἐμβλέπειν περιεργότερον ὄψεως ὀλισθηρᾶς in † Clem. Alex. and ὁρᾶν ἀκολάστως, the incontinence of the eye is forbidden the Chriſtian, ſaith S. Chryſoſtome. And even among the Heathens, the anſwer of Pericles to Sophocles, ſhewing him a beautiful woman, is conſiderable, τὸν σώφρονα στρατηγὸν οὐ μόνον τὰς χεῖρας, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν ὄψιν ἔχειν παρ' ἑαυτῷ δεῖ, A ſober General muſt keep at home, or in his power, his eyes as well as hands. p. Ἐρρέθη. V. 31. It hath been ſaid] The form of the Preface here, being no more then [ἐρρέθη it hath been ſaid without either the ἀκούσατε, ye have heard or [ἀρχαίοις, to them of old] doth note that the matter here recited was no Precept, given either by Moſes in the Law, or by any other after him, to that antient people, but that it was only a Permiſſion, by allowing impunity in the דבר ערות, the caſe of nakedneſſe, or turpitude, Deut. 24. 1. to this the Phariſees diſtinctly referre c. 19. 7. and Mar. 10. 7. Why then did Moſes command, &c. where yet all that Moſes did command is only this, that he that doth put away his Wife (in the caſe, which for the hardneſſe of their hearts he permits v. 8. but allows not, much leſſe commands) ſhall doe it formally, and legally, giving her a bill of Divorce, that by that means the divorced woman may marry again, and bring forth children by ſome other man. 'Tis true indeed there were ſome licentious doctrines brought after into the ſchooles by ſome of their Doctors or latter Interpreters of Moſes. One ſort of them, which acknowledg'd it to be allow'd in no other caſe but that of Nakedneſſe, or turpitude, did yet extend the word Turpitude to almoſt every matter of diſlike; another ſort extended the liberty, or allowance (without any reflexion on that of turpitude) to משום כל דבר, κατὰ πᾶσαν αἰτίαν, Mat. 19. 3. for, or, upon every cauſe. But the context here ſeems not to referre to theſe Doctors, but peculiarly to the Permiſſion afforded by Moſes (and the command of giving the Bill of Divorce) Deut. 24. which indulgence, or impunity is here, and Mat. 19. retrenched by Chriſt, and ſtrict command given, both that no cauſe but that of Fornication ſhall be competent for Divorce, and that no Chriſtian ſociety ſhall grant that toleration, which only for the hardneſſe of their hearts was then afforded the Jews.

q Ἀντίστηναι, Ἀντιδιδόναι. V. 39. Reſiſt] The word ἀντιστῆναι may here ſignifie (in a notion, wherein ἀντὶ, in Compoſition, imports vicem referre,) repayment of injury, violence, &c. as in the word ἀντιπάσχειν, ἀνταποδιδόναι, to ſuffer by way of retaliation, and give by way of recompenſe, &c. and ἀντικαλεῖν to invite him again who had invited thee, Luke 14. 12. So doth Tertullian ſeem to render it, laſi vicem referre prohibentur, Apol. c. 37. when we are injur'd we are forbidden to make returnes, the ſame that Rom. 12. 17. is called κακὸν ἀντὶ κακοῦ ἀποδιδόναι, to repay evil for evil, which is there the interpretation of ἐκδικεῖν ἑαυτοὺς, v. 19. avenging themſelves. And 'tis obſervable that the word is apply'd in the Old Teſtament to impleading, or proſecuting at law, as Jer. 49. 19. where the Hebrew reads עורר, diem dicere, to implead, the Greek have τίς ἀντιστήσεταί μοι; who ſhall reſiſt me? So Jer. 50. 44. and ſo the word עמד, when 'tis rendred ἀντιστῆναι, to reſiſt, Iſa. 5. 8. it ſignifies impleading in judgment, & Oba. 11. to uſe violence againſt any. So ענה which ſignifies any kind of return to another in word or action (and is ordinarily rendred ἀποκρίνομαι or ἀνταποκρίνομαι to anſwer) is rendred ἀντιστῆναι to reſiſt, as Deut. 19. 18. Iſ. 3. 9 and 59. 12. Jer. 14. 7. by which (as 'tis here ſet in oppoſition to the lex talionis, law of retaliation, the eye for eye v. 38.) it will appear that in caſes of this nature (a light Contumely, &c.) not only private revenge is interdicted Chriſtians, but alſo the exacting of legal revenge before the Magiſtrate. But beſide this [ἀντιστῆναι] ſignifies ordinarily violent and armed reſiſtance, Rom. 13. 2. and ſo in Heſychius [ἀνθιστάμενον] and [ἀντιστρατευόμενον] reſiſting, and waging warre, are all one; and ἀντιστάτης, is ἀνθιστὼς ἐν τῇ μάχῃ, in the Old Gloſſary, ἀνθίστημαι obſto, obſiſto, reſiſto, and ſo in Homer:

and 'tis not certain that it ſignifies any otherwiſe here: and then the matter of Precept will be, that in injuries (of this nature again) we may not, for the ſecuring our ſelves from more, flie to any violent reſiſtance; Patience at the preſent, and depending on Gods providence for the future, doth much better become a Chriſtian. And the Philoſopher hath ſtated it excellently, τὸ δὲ ὀίεσθαι δικαταφρονήτους πᾶσι ἄλλοις ἔσεσθαι, ἐὰν μὴ τοὺς φωτῆρας ἐχθροὺς παντὶ βόπῳ βλάψωμεν, σφόδρα ἀγεννῶν καὶ ἀνοήτων ἀνδρῶν, It is the part of degenerous and fooliſh men men to think, they ſhall be contemn'd by others, if they do not by all means avenge their firſt enemies, Φαμὲν γὰρ τὸν ἀκαταφρόνητον νοεῖσθαι μὲν, καὶ κατὰ τὸ δυνατὸν εἶναι βλαπτικὸν, ἀλλὰ πολὺ μᾶλλον νοεῖται κατὰ τὸ δυνατὸν εἶναι ὠφελεῖν, For as we ſay that a man will be deemed free from contempt by his being able to hurt, ſo much more will he be deemed by his being able to help. An example of this doctrine we have James 5. 6. where the Juſt man is impleaded (even capitally) condemn'd, and executed, which is the higheſt that can befall, and yet οὐκ ἀντιτάσσεται ὑμῖν (in a word equivalent with this notation of this) he makes no violent reſiſtance, prepares not to oppoſe your violence with the like, and then all bloody and violent means to avert and repay injuries (eſpecially ſuch ſlight injuries as are here mention'd) are here utterly forbidden. As for the τῷ πονηρῷ, that is plainly the Greek of לרשע, which Exod. 2. 13. is rendred diſtinctly [ἀδικοῦντι] to the injurious, as κακοπαθοῦντα the Paſſive, is he that receives injury, Act. 7. 24. See Note, t.

Γ. πονηρὸς, Καλωσυνάμενον. r. Χιτῶν.

V. 40. Coat] Some difficulty there is, what is here meant by χιτὼν, which is rendred a coat, but more properly a ſhirt or ſarke, and ἱμάτιον the upper garment; perhaps it may be cleared by finding the notation of the former, χιτὼν, for then the latter, ἱμάτιον, being a more general word for any kind of garment, will be here regulated by Analogie with that: For the original of [χιτὼν] there is little doubt, but it is Hebrew, differing ſo little from their כתונת; The Hebrew word notes it to be linnen, and it is the name of the Prieſt's inner garment among them, and ſo χιτὼν τὸ ἐνδότερον., ſaith Moſchopulus on Heſiod p. 70. it ſignifies the inner garment. So in Ariſtophanes, Σὺ μέντοι πολλὰ γὰ χιτῶν' ἔχεις· where χιτὼν ſignifies, and is by the Interpreter rendred interula, the inner garment. So in [b] Euſtathius ὑπόκειται ὁ χιτὼν, ἔπικειται δὲ τὸ φᾶρος, it ſignifies the inner garment, and giving it an Etymology (ſomewhat remote) from χύω. he ſaith it is ſo called, ὡς ἀμέσως ἀντίκα πεπηχυμένος τῷ σώματι, becauſe it is immediately next the body. And a phraſe in Saint Jude v. 23. [ἀπὸ τῆς σαρκὸς ἐσπιλωμένον χιτῶνα] ſignifies it to be next unto the Fleſh, the ſame which the Latines call camiſia, and the Greeks ſometimes ὑποκάμισον, and Heſiod hath given it the Epithet of τερμιόεντα, ὕσην ποδήρη, i.e. a long garment, ſaith Moſchopulus. Thus in Homer's Iliad.

the outer and inner garment, both which cover the ſhame. So in Iſidore Peleuſiota, χιτὼν ἡ ὑδρυῆς, is the ſhirt which covers the nakedneſſe, which, ſaith he, was it, which Joſeph's miſtreſſe rent from him, and brought to her Husband for an evidence of his attempting to defile her. The ſame Hebrew כתונת is, by tranſpoſition of letters, the Latine tunica (by which 'tis often rendred) as the writers of the Origination of words have obſerved, and that, though it be ſometimes otherwiſe applied, agrees in the uſe of it alſo with the Greek and Hebrew; Tunica ſignifying principally the inner linnen garment, next the body, as when 'tis proverbially ſaid, Tunica propior eſt pallio, & when 'tis in the Poets uſed for a ſhirt or ſmock, as when Propertius ſaith of the Goddeſſes.

——quas Paſtor viderat olim
Idæis tunicam ponere verticibus.

This being the meaning of χιτὼν the inner linnen garment next the body; (Tunica ποδήρης ex lino (ſaith Saint Hierom ad Fabiol.) uſque ad crura deſcendens, ſuch, ſaith he, as the ſouldiers camiſia, cloſe to their body, that they may run or fight, or doe any ſervice the more expeditely; and agreeably to that, the Roman ſouldiers are ſaid to be μονοχίτωνες to have no other garment on, when they fought) there will now be little doubt, but that ἱμάτιον will ſignifie the upper exterior garment, the Hebrew מעיל or Latine pallium, which was the covering of the כתונת or χιτὼν or tunica, and therefore in Plautus in Aulul. when they are a ſearching one for ſomewhat loſt, 'tis firſt, agedum, excute dum pallium, then when that is done (when the upper garment is taken off, and yet the thing not found) it follows, nè inter tunicas habeas, ſignifying pallium to be the upper, tunica to be the under garment. So Acts 9. 39. we find together χιτῶνας, and ἱμάτια, all that belonged to the clothing of the poor Widdowes there, the under, and the upper garments. So in the enumeration of the High-prieſts garments, Cod. Jom. c. 7. §. 5. there be four garments mentioned of the Prieſt, and כתונת χιτὼν, is the firſt of them, and then, ſaith he, the High-prieſt adds four more to theſe, which are all upper garments, worne over the other, and מעיל is one of thoſe, as here ἱμάτιον is added to χιτὼν. And in Heſiod, χλαῖνα ὕσην χλαμύδα, ſaith the Scholiaſt, τὸ ἐκτὸς καὶ παχύτερον, the outward garment thicker and warmer then the other, and it is to be obſerved that this latter was both more uſefull and prizable (μαλακὸν ſaith the Poet) then the former, being (as Joſephus ſaith of the High-prieſt's Pall, and ſo Rev. 1. 13.) a long garment down to the ground, and as Maimonides addes, כבר בגדי הגדולים as the garments of noble men. And ſo Mat. 11. 8. ſpeaking of theſe, under the title of μαλακὰ ἱμάτια, ἰδοὺ, ſaith he, οἱ τὰ μαλακὰ φορεῦντες ἐν τοῖς οἴκοις τῶν βασιλέων εἰσὶ, the faſhion was for courtiers to wear them, and ſo they go generally for garments of Peace, and ἐν ἱματίῳ ἐῒ in Plutarch, and ἐν ἱματίοις βίος in Theopraſtus, ſignifies ſuch a liſe. So * Alexander Aphrodiſæus, ſpeaking of the unfitneſſe of uſing clothes to ſoften or effeminate the body, which ſhould rather be deſigned as Armes to to fortifie and make it courſer, and ſo ſtronger, ſaith, that it is much fitter to uſe ἐνὶ χιτῶνι, one inner garment then two (which they that took care for ſoftneſſe and ſmoothneſſe did) and yet better to uſe none at all ἀλλ' ἱματίῳ μόνον but the outer garment only; where the Interpreter of Stobæus (in whom this paſſage is ſet down p. 18.) moſt abſurdly renders ἱμάτιον interula, quite contrary to the deſign of the place, where it muſt needs ſignifie the outer (which is generally the leſſe ſmooth or ſoft) garment, not the ſhirt or inner garment, which in Homer hath that Epithet, Ιλ. β.

μαλακὸν δ' ἐνδύνει χιτῶνα, πρὸς ἀντιδιαστολὴν τοῦ φάρους, to contra-diſtinguiſh it from φᾶρος ſaith [d] Euſtathius, which φᾶρος he [e] elſewhere expreſſeth to be ἱμάτιον, and here to be the upper garment ἐπικείμενον τὸ φᾶρος. The whole matter is put out of queſtion by the words of Plutarch in his Nuptial precepts, ſpeaking of the wind and the Sun, contending which ſhould force the man out of his clothes, ὁ ἄνεμος βιαζόμενος τὸ ἱμάτιον ἀφελέσθαι μᾶλλον ἔσφιγγε, καὶ συνῆγε τῷ περιβολῷ, τὸν δὲ ἥλιον θερμῶς γενόμενον καὶ πάνυ ὠφέλιμον, ἔστα καυματιζόμενος, καὶ τὸν χιτῶνα τῷ ἱματίῳ ἀπεδύσατο; where ἱμάτιον being the outer garment, that which only the wind had force on, and that which in the Sun-ſhine was firſt put off, χιτὼν muſt needs be the inner garment. And then that is the gradation here, If any man ſue thee, and take away thy lower or inner garment, let him take away thy upper garment alſo, rather then thou, by oppoſing violence, or revenging thy ſelf on him, think to ſecure thy ſelf from farther greater damage. The truth is, if Chriſt's diſcourſe were of his forcible taking away the garment from thee, it would be more reaſonable that the Upper garment ſhould be firſt named, and the Inner garment after it, becauſe that is the order of pulling off, and accordingly S. Luke ſetting it down with ſome change, and ſpeaking of the caſe of Forcible taking away, he inverts the order and ſets ἱμάτιον firſt, and then χιτῶνα, Luke 6. 29. but our Saviour here ſpeaks of Civil violence, uſing a ſuite at law, as the engine to rob thee, and then 'twas fitteſt to name that firſt, which was leaſt pretious or conſiderable, and afterward that which was more valuable, that ſo the duty of this Text might be enforced, which was, that in caſe of any leſſer inconſiderable injury done to us, we ſhould not meditate revenge, or flie to force, though by that

f. Ἀγγαρεύσει. V. 41. Go a mile] Ἀγγαρδίν is a Persian word (and custome) to take up men, as we take up Post-horses, to carry our burthens from stage to stage (and so the word is used, c. 27. 31.) which when one hath performed, another is taken up in his stead for the next Post. These stages are each of them a Parasange, called ἀναπαυλαι saith * Agathias, because, when men came to the end of them, they did refresh themselves and return home. Now the μίλιον or mile, which is here mention'd for the supposed stage, is but the fourth part of a Parasange (or thereabout) the Parasange being, saith he, thirty stadia, and the μίλιον, but seven or eight, to signifie (as in the former the ῥάπισμα was a light supportable injury, or rather a Contumely only, and the taking away the Cloak, a robbery again supportable to him, that hath the Coat left, and perhaps a great Estate also, so) here the oppression or invasion of liberty spoken of, to be but a petty damage, going but a quarter of an ordinary Post (and no burthen mention'd neither) and they that are so impatient of such tolerable injuries, as to oppose force or meditate revenge for them (which ordinarily brings greater sufferings upon them, and so is farre from gainful to them that use it) especially to break into open violence upon such light grounds, are directly contrary to this practise of Patience here commanded, and prescribed to all Christians.

(or as when ἀγαθοεργίαι Jam. 3. 1. & ἀγαθοεργίαι good works in our ordinary phrase, signifies works of charity, or mercy) such an one as Hesychius explains by χάριν (a word taken into the Greek language from the Hebrew חסיד, or the Syriak חסי, only with the addition of the Greek termination) and so in like manner, the word τέλειος perfect, (answerable to the Hebrew word תם v. 48.) signifies the same charity or benignity of nature, and is all one with ἐλεήμων in the Parallel place Luke 6. 36.

CHAP. VI.

Paraphrase

a. b. 1. a TAke heed, that ye doe not your almes before men, [to be b seen of them, otherwise ye have no reward of your father which is in heaven.]

1. To be beheld or look'd on by them, If you doe not thus take heed, you will lose that reward which God in heaven hath laid up for the Almes-giver.

2. Therefore when thou doest thine almes, doe not sound a trumpet before thee, as the Hypocrites doe, in the * synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, [They † have their reward.]

2. The praise of men is their reward, the only one which they are likely to have for this performance, which is this they acquit God of all farther payment.

From God they are sure to receive none, by receiving thus by them design'd to their own glory.

* assemblies, or, places of concourse, τὰς συναγωγὰς, see note d.

† receive, or, are payd; or have received ἀπέχουσι, see note on Mar. 14. d.

3, 4. Watch over thy self as one that is very apt to fall into this sin, to doe works of mercy vainglorioously, and therefore doe them as secretly as you can, and let not thy dearest bosome-friend, which is to thee as thy left hand, know what thou doest in this kind (unlesse so farre as he shall be necessary to assist thee in the doing of it, or as his knowing of it may some other way be ordinable to the glory of God, without any reflexion of any praise on thee from him or other) and God which beholds that which was thus done by thee in secret, shall give thee that very reward for thy secret piety, which the vainglorious person designes to himself, (but cannot so readily obtein, as by this contrary way thou shalt) make payment to thee in the sight of Men and Angels.

3. But when thou doest almes, [let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth,

4. That thine almes may be in secret; And thy father which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly.]

c. d. 5. Like them, which pray with the same designe, that stage-players act on the stage, to gain applause by so doing, as they that stand in the meeting of two streets, choose that as the place of best advantage, to be seen by those which passe in either street.

5. And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be [as the hypocrites are; for they love to pray c standing in the * d synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men,] Verily I say unto, They have their reward.

For all their joy in praying is to doe it in places of greatest resort, where they may be most visible, * places of concourse.

6. Retire from thy worldly company (as Jacob Gen. 32. 24. when he wrestled with the Angel) and with thy doores shut to thee, pray there to thy heavenly father, which is himself invisible, and seeth thee, how secret soever thou art, and consequently that which is done by thee in secret, and he that is thus the beholder of thy closet-devotions shall reward thee before Men and Angels.

6. But thou when thou prayest [enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy father which is in secret, and thy father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.]

e. 7. Doe not lengthen your prayers with idle tautologies, after the manner of the heathen, which think they shall have their prayers granted through the multiplicity of words used by them in their devotions.

7. But when ye pray, [use not e vain repititions, as the heathen doe, for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.]

8. Hath no need of your expressions to tell him your wants, and therefore is not likely to be wrought on, by the length and multiplicity of them.

8. Be not ye therefore like unto them: For your father [knoweth what things you have need of, before ye aske him.]

9, 10. I shall therefore set you a pattern, after which to form your prayers. Our father which remainest in thy throne in heaven, and there art praised by the Angels and Saints, which reignest there, and art perfectly obeyed, grant that thy name may be hallowed, thy throne may be set up and acknowledged, thy holy will and commands obeyed here below on earth also, by us thy sons and servants, sincerely, and readily, and in some proportion, to what is there in heaven.

9. [After this manner therefore pray ye, Our father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name.

21. For as long as your treaſures are thoſe of this world, your hearts will be faſtned upon this world, your only way of elevating your deſires, and ſetting them on heaven, is to lay out that which God gives you, on his ſervice.

22. The * light of the body is the eye, If therefore thine eye be † [l] ſingle, thy whole body ſhall be full of light.

22, 23. As the eye is the candle of the body, lightens and directs it, ſo hath liberality of mind a moſt obſervable influence upon the whole [l]

23. But if thine eye be || evil, thy whole body ſhall be full of darkneſſe. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkneſſe, how great is that darkneſſe?]
Chriſtians life, and actions, ſerving them with light and directions, toward the making them all very Chriſtian; But where, in ſtead thereof, covetouſneſſe is gotten in, there is commonly nothing but darkneſſe, i. e. a life aliene from Chriſt, from the temper which he requires; If then that moſt eminent leading virtue in Chriſtianity, thy charity, or liberality be extinct, and turn'd into the contrary, that of covetouſneſſe, what a deep darkneſſe ſhalt thou walk in, though the light of the Goſpel ſhine round about thee?

24. No man can ſerve two maſters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other, or elſe [he will [m] hold to the one and deſpiſe the other; Ye cannot ſerve God and Mammon.] whom he hates, or undervalues, if he be engaged in his ſervice, he will deſpiſe his commands, and not care to pleaſe him; even ſo the tending and obſerving of wealth, doing nothing but what may in the eye of the world tend to increaſe of riches, is not reconcileable with the ſerving of God, doing what Chriſt requires of us.

24. He will perform faithfull ſervice to the one whom he loves, but for the other, [m]

25. Therefore I ſay unto you [* take no thought for your life, what ye ſhall eat, or what ye ſhall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye ſhall put on. Is not the life more then meat, and the body then rayment?]
in allowing you the neceſſities of life, food and rayment; for 'tis ſo much more eaſie to give food than life and rayment than a body, that ſure God, who was ſo able, and ſo kind to doe the one, will not be unable, or backward to doe the other to all that depend upon him faithfully.

25. Be not fearful or anxious for the future, nor doubtful of God's providence

26. Behold the fowles of the ayre, for they ſow not, neither doe they reap, nor gather into * barnes, yet your heavenly father feedeth them. Are ye not much better then they?

32. (For after all theſe things doe the Gentiles ſeeke) for your heavenly father knoweth that ye have need of all theſe things.]

33. But let your principall and firſt care be to approve your ſelves the obedient ſervants of God, performing all thoſe things with all diligence and exactneſſe, which are required to render you acceptable in his-ſight, and then for the neceſſaries of this life (though ye now, which follow me, have no way to lay in for your ſelves) I promiſe you, that they ſhall not be wanting to you I will take care they ſhall be brought in unto you.

33. But ſeek ye firſt the kingdome of God and his righteouſneſſe, and all theſe things ſhall be added unto you.

34. Be not therefore beforehand importunely doubtfull, or ſollicitous concerning your future ſubſiſtence, be not ſollicitous for that to day, which may be ſoon enough cared for to morrow, only labour and pray for that which is ſufficient for the preſent time; and when the future comes, then take care and pray for that, let that have the proportion of care and prayer, which is due to it, layd, or charged upon it, and let not the preſent have the charge, and burthen of the future alſo, having enough of its own trouble and turmoyle belonging to it; (Thus is this whole diſcourſe directly deſigned by Chriſt to prohibit all anxiety for the future in a Chriſtian, though not abſolutely all care or proviſion for the preſent neceſſities of life, or the prudent managing of ſtore and poſſeſſions, when God gives ſuch; Every day, as it comes, requiring that duty from us, to preſerve that life in our ſelves (and thoſe that belong unto us) which God hath beſtowed on us.)

34. Take therefore no thought for the morrow; for the morrow ſhall take thought for the things of it ſelfe; ſufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. Προσέχειν.

V. 1. Take heed] Προσέχειν] with an accuſative caſe, is ὀπιμελῶς τηρεῖν, to watch, or obſerve carefully, ſaith Phavorinus; and may poſſibly here be ſo, there being no neceſſity, that the conſtruction ſhould run thus, προσέχετε μὴ ποιῶν, take heed that you doe not, but as probably προσέχετε τ ἐλεημοσύνλω, look to your almes, μὴ ποιεῖν not to doe it, or, that thou doe it not, &c. But yet becauſe the phraſes uſed in theſe books are not alwaies to be judged by the uſe in other Authors, and becauſe Saint Matthew uſeth [προσέχετε] in all other places, a little diverſly from the reſt of the writers of the New Teſtament, thoſe generally joyning unto it a Dative caſe, but Saint Matthew leaving it out, and underſtanding it, therefore 'tis poſſible it may be ſo here alſo; and ſo the reading will be neither [προσέχετε ἐλεημοσύνλω look to your almes] nor [προσέχετε μὴ ποιῶν look that you doe not,] but underſtanding [ἑαυτοῖς] look to your ſelves, that you doe not, &c. So when Saint Matthew reads προσέχετε ἀπὸ τ ζύμης, c. 16. 16. and 11. 12. take heed of the leaven, Saint Luke reads, προσέχετε ἑαυτοῖς ἀπὸ τ ζύμης, take heed to your ſelves of the leaven, &c. As for the word ἐλεημοσύνη, from whence our Engliſh word [Almes] is form'd, that is, any act of pity or mercy, eſpecially of liberality to them which want, for which ſome copies read δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, which as it is all one with ἐλεημοσύνη, and in the tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, uſed promiſcuouſly for it (according to the notion of the Hebrew צדקה forementioned, Note on c. 1. g.) ſo doth it ſignifie this Charity, to be an act of duty and righteouſneſſe required of all Jewes and Chriſtians, and not to be omitted (by them which are able) without ſin.

Προσέχετε. Ἐλεημοσύνη

b. Θεαθῆναι

Ib. Be ſeen] The word [θεαθῶναι] imports ſuch a beholding or looking on, as is on a ſtage or Theatre, for men that act parts, or ſtrive for maſteries, whoſe reward conſiſts only in the θεαθῶναι and δοξασθῶναι, v. 2. the applauſe, and praiſes, and approbation of the Spectators, which appears to be the meaning of the word here, by the concurrence of all the circumſtances, 1. by the μισθὸς reward, twice uſed immediately, v. 1, 3. By being thus lookt on, they have their reward, as in thoſe ſpectacula or prizes 'tis wont to be, where the conquerour hath no other acquiſition or βεβεῖον, but the reputation of the victory, with a crown of leaves, of no kind of value, to expreſſe and teſtifie it. Then 2ly. to this, I ſuppoſe, refers the mention of the σαλπίζειν, v. 2. the ſounding of the Trumpet before him, a ſolemnity with which the ſtage-players, and gladiators were brought into the Theatre, and by which the company were call'd together, χρῶνται σάλπιγγι καλοῦντες τοὺς ὄχλους ἐπὶ αὐτῆς, they uſe the trumpet calling the multitudes with it, ſaith Phavorinus, and this uſe of it among the Jewes, to call the people together, is oft mentioned by Moſes. This might yet 3ly. be farther probable by the mention of [οἱ ὑποκριτὴ] (the very word that ſignifies thoſe Actors or ſtage-players primarily, and is only by a figure brought to that ſignification which now ordinarily belongs to the word hypocrites in Engliſh) but that this word in the New Teſtament is in ordinary uſe for hypocrites, as we now ſpeak, and not for perſonators, or Actors. But then 4ly. theſe were wont to have their trumpet ſound in the Marketplace, and places of concourſe (which is the meaning of συναγωγαὶ here, not ſacred Aſſemblies, or Synagogues) and ἐν ῥύμαις in the ſtreets, places where men are wont ordinarily to paſſe, and where to meet, (as Heſychius renders ῥύμη all one with ἀγορὰ) where the ſounding of the trumpet may moſt probably be a means of calling together all men, that dwell in that place or neighbourhood.

c. Ἑστῶτες.

V. 5. Standing] The word [ἑστῶτες] may poſſibly referre to that particular poſture of ſtanding, which was uſuall in Prayer, as among the ancient Chriſtians, ſo among the Jewes before them; whence it is that עמידה ſtatio, is reckon'd by them as one of the ſeven names of Prayer. So Manahem ſpeaks of Abrahams ſtanding, i. e. (ſaith he) praying before the Lord, and thence is the proverbiall ſpeech of Rabbi Judah in Muſarim, without עמידה ſtation, the world could not ſubſiſt. And beſides the poſture of ſtanding might be more convenient for their turne of being more and farther ſeen by men. But the truth is, both the Greek ἑστῶτες, and the Hebrew belong promiſcuouſly (not to ſtanding only, but) to every or any poſture of the body. So Mat. 16. 20. ſome of thoſe that ſtand (i. e. that are) here, as עמד ſignifies eſſe, to be, or adeſſe, to be preſent; and ſo Jo. 12. 19. ὄχλος ὁ ἑστὼς, the people that ſtood (i. e. were preſent) (in like manner as καθίζειν to ſit is uſed for any poſture, or without relation to any, no more than ſimply to abide, as Lu. 24. 49. καθίσατε ἐν τῇ πόλει tarry in the city) and ſo in this very matter, Mar. 11. 25. ὅταν στήκετε προσευχόμενοι, when you ſtand praying, that is, when you pray. So in Heſychius, ἕστακε or ἑστήκασι κεῖται· ἕσται, ἔσται, to ſtand, that is to be placed, ſituate, to be, yea and ἕστηλο, ἐκάθηλο, he ſtood, that is, he ſat, to take it quite off from the notation of ſtanding. So ſaith S. Chryſoſtome of the Sea, οὕτως ἀσφαλῶς ἕστηκεν, ὡσανεὶ δεδεμένη, * Cat. in Job, it ſtood as firmly, as if it were bound, which the Learned tranſlator renders rightly, firmiter & in tuto ſitum eſt, it was placed firmly; and ſo the Latine, ſto, as well as exiſto, is often uſed as a Verb ſubſtantive only, to ſuſtein a Participle, without reference to any poſture.

Ib. Synagogues] That the word Συναγωγαὶ ſignifies not what we call in Engliſh Synagogues (by them meaning meaning places set apart for divine service) but any place of publick concourse, will be very probable in these places following; Besides the two in this place v. 2. & 5. (where 'tis joyned with ῥύμαι streets, and γωνίαι πλατειῶν, Angles of the streets) see c. 10. 17. c. 23. 6, & 34. Mar. 12. 39. c. 13. 9. Lu. 8. 41. c. 11. 43. c. 12. 11. c. 20. 46. c. 21. 12. Acts 9. 2. c. 22. 19. c. 24. 12. c. 26. 11. Jam. 2. 2. and therefore Munster's Hebrew of Matthew having מקהלותיהם here is literally rendred [in frequentiis] to note, as the Hebrew doth primarily, any place where the people are met together: for though עדה signifie some special congregated assembly, and be therefore the word used by the Syriack for ἐκκλησία, the Church, c. 16. 18. yet קהל signifies every kind of meeting, either civill for Judicature, (Mat. 10. 17. & 23. 34. Lu. 12. 11. Acts 9. 2. James 2. 2. and in some other of those places, where this word ζυναγωγὴ is to be rendred Consistory) or even for ordinary affaires of trading, &c. (as ζυναγωγὸς and ζυναγοράζειν are all one) and so it is most commodious to render it in this place. See Note on James 2. b.

e. Βαττολογία

V. 7. Vaine repetitions] The Greek [βαττολογέω] is literally, to doe as Battus did, which what it is, is described by Suidas in these words, Βαττολογία ἡ πολυλογία, Battologie is multiplying of words (just agreeable to this verse which sets these words as Synonymous) ἀπὸ Βάττου τινὸς μακρὰς καὶ πολυσίχους ὕμνους ποιήσαντος, ταυτολογίας ἐγχωρίας, The word is taken from one Battus who made long hymnes, consisting of many lines, full of Tautologies. Whence Hesychius βαλολογία (it should be βαττολογία ἀργολογία, ἀκαιρολογία, empty, idle, unseasonable discourse. 'Tis sure enough that Christ spake not Greek in this Sermon, and so referr'd not to the name or style of Battus, but the Evangelist, or his Translator thus rendred his Syriack expression, by this proverbiall Greek word. Munster's Hebrew reads it לא תרבו את דבריכם doe not multiply words, viz. above that which is fit and seasonable. The peculiar notation of this phrase in this place, will be best discerned by the practise of the Heathens, which is here referr'd to, ὥσπερ οἱ ἐθνικοὶ, as the heathens doe] and that practise is best represented in their Tragedians, as in Æschylus, who hath neere a hundred verses at a time, made of nothing but Tautologies, ἴω, ἴω, and φεῦ, φεῦ, and ὔ, ὔ, ὔ, ὔ, in their crying unto their Gods. So 1 Kings 18. 27. the Idolatrous worshippers cried in the same words from morning till noone, O Baal heare us. And Acts 19. 34. for two houres space, The Great Diana of the Ephesians. Of this kind generally were their charmes and Incantations, and therefore Polybius calls the using of such repetitions, πρὸς τοὺς θεοὺς μαγγανεύειν, to set upon their Gods to charme them. This those Heathens did to two ends, 1. to make their Gods heare them not knowing how farre off they might be, which Elias referres to, 1 Kings 18. 27. Cry aloud, for perhaps your God is asleep, &c. and they look not on it as an Irony, but follow his advice, v. 28. 2ly that they may understand and remember their petitions the better, both which Christ mentions here, v. 7, & 8. So that the things here forbidden in prayer (and especially in private prayer, ἐν ταμιείῳ and ἐν κρυπτῷ, in the closet, and in secret, v. 6.) are first ἀργολογία, a cold unseasonable lengthning out of time with tautologies, when it is not any effect of zeale, 2ly. the care of verball, not reall eloquence in prayers, for that will come under πολυλογία, much speaking. But still not all repetition, or length, or eloquence, for of all these we have approved examples in the Scripture, and they are each of use for the quickning & enflaming devotion, especially in publick prayers. And even in Poetry it is observable that what was unskilfully done by Battus, and so became ridiculous in him, being yet done dextrously by others, is a great ornament of verse, that of Repetition.

f. Ἐπιούσιον

V. 11. Daily] The word ἐπιούσιος is capable of a double Origination, either from the word ἐπιοῦσα, the day approaching, whether that be the now-instant day, or else the morrow, that is (in the Scripture sense of the Hebrew מחר) the future, the remainder of our lives, how long, or how short soever. Thus in Phavorinus, ἐπιοῦσα is explained by ἐπερχομένη approaching, or coming on, and ἐπιοῦσα τύχη notes the future events, as opposed to παροῦσα the present in Niceph. Basilac. Diny. 18. If the word be derived from hence, then the ἄρτος ἐπιούσιος will denote as much as shall be sufficient, or proportionable for the future, or the remainder of our lives, which we pray that we may receive this day, that is, as S. Luke interprets it, τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν, day by day. Another way there is of deducing this word, from ἐπὶ ἡ οὐσία, that which is agreeable for my being, or subsistence, or condition in the world, ἐπιούσιος ἄρτος ὁ τῇ ἑκάστῃ οὐσίᾳ ἡμῶν ἁρμόζων saith Phavorinus, that which Solomon calls food convenient for him; and so in either sense (but the first is more according to analogie of Derivations) that which is sufficient, and agreeable for the remainder of our lives, the daily sustenance, and necessaries of our bodies, and especially of our soules.

g. Εἰσενεχθῆναι εἰς πειρασμόν. Εἰσφέρειν.

V. 13. Into temptation] בא במסא εἰσενεχθῆς εἰς πειρασμὸν to enter into temptation] signifies to be so involved in straights or difficulties as that one cannot extricate himself, c. 26. 41. and proportionably here εἰσφέρειν εἰς πειρασμὸν] is to bring men, or suffer them to be brought into such an estate; Contrary to which is Gods promise, 1 Cor. 10. 13. of [ποιεῖν σὺν τῷ πειρασμῷ καὶ τὴν ἔκβασιν] giving away of escaping, or getting out, together with the temptation, and that is it which we here pray for, in assurance of Gods fidelity in performance.

h. Ἀφανίζειν

V. 16. Disfigure] What ἀφανίζειν here signifies will be somewhat uncertain, because in this very Chapter, v. 19. it is used again in a sense, which will hardly be accommodated to this place, howsoever we should render it. A probable way to hit upon the right in both places will be to consider the diversity of the matter, and accordingly to apply the word in the diverse significations of it. In that other place 'tis cleer that it must signifie some kind of taking away, spoiling, or consuming (for that is proper to the Moth, and the βρῶσις, whatever that signifies) and so Hesychius renders it πεφαγωμένους, either as that is feeding upon, πεφαγωμένη βόσκησις, feeding, saith he, or as 'tis preying upon, snatching, carrying away, πεφαγωμένη, ἁρπάζη, καλασύρῃ, and so ἀφανισμὸς is used for any kind of consuming, whether by death or otherwise, as γηράσκον ἐγγὺς ἀφανισμοῦ, that which is old is neer dying, Heb. 8. 13. and in the Psalme, Before I goe hence and be no more seen, or, be taken away; and so ᾅδης the state of the soule separate from the body, or, the state of Death, is expres'd by ἀφανισμὸς, as a word of the same origination and notion with it, one being deduced from the privative particle, and ἴδω, video, to see, and the other from the same particle, and φαίνω, appareo, to appear, and so both signifie Death, the vanishing of the soule into soft ayre, as the Atheist (which beleiv'd no future life) calls death, Wisd. 2. 3. or in the Christians notion the departure from the body. And thus the word is used not only for totall destruction, but for being lost, or out of the way for a while. So saith Thomas Magister, ἀφανίζεται ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀφανὴς ἐπὶ καιρὸν γίνεται, φιλόσοφοι ἐν ᾧ Εικόσιν, οὐχ ὡς ὑπόλοιπον, ἀλλ' ὡς ἀφανισθὲν εἰς μίαν ἡμέραν, not that they are destroyed or gone, but that they disappeare for one day. But this notion of the word cannot at all belong to this place, where the Hypocriticall fasters, that desire their devotions should φανῶσι be seen and commended by men, are said to be σκυθρωποὶ of a sad countenance, and ἀφανίζειν πρόσωπα which is not surely by any outward applications to conſume, or deſtroy, or ſpoil their faces, but denotes only ſo much as ſhall make good the oppoſition betwixt them, and thoſe immediately after mentioned, which anointed their heads, and waſhed their faces (which ſignifies an abſence of all mourning at leaſt) The moſt then that the matter of the place will direct us to, toward this enquiry, will be only this, That this ἀφανίζειν πρόσωπα, as it is elegantly joyned with [ἵνα φανῶσι νηστεύοντες, being diſcern'd to faſt] being uſed as a means to make others beleive that they are in a condition of ſadneſſe and faſting, and of ſadneſſe, as that may be an evidence, and reporter of their faſting ſo it may poſſibly ſignifie only Negatively, they doe not anoint, and ſet out themſelves, as men ordinarily doe, when no ſad occaſion forbids it: and that this is it, and no more but this, one probability the Context affords, for that which is v. 17. preſcribed, as the way of avoiding that Hypocritical practiſe, is, to anoint the head, and waſh the face, which makes it probable, that their Hypocriſie conſiſted in not doing ſo, or neglecting to doe ſo. But beyond this perhaps it may denote ſomething Poſitive. And to this purpoſe firſt it may be obſerved, that Heſychius renders it ἀφανίσαι, σκεπάσαι, to hide, or cover. So 'tis known that that of hiding, or veiling, or covering the face, was cuſtomary among the Jews, and hath been ſo among other nations in time of mourning, and ſo ſtill among us the uſe of hoods in cloſe mourning is obſerved and veiles are generally the garments of mourners. Thus not only in Horace——

Rufus tecto capite, ut ſi Filius immaturus obiſſet, he covered his head, as if his ſon were come to an untimely death; but particularly in the Scripture, The King covered his face, and cryed, &c. the deſcription of David's lamentation for Abſalom, 2 Sam. 19. 4. and ſo Haman, Eſt. 6.12. mourning, and having his head covered. So Ezech. 24.7. make no mourning, cover not thy lips, and ſo v. 22. and ſo Mich. 3.7. it being the cuſtome of mourners, caput, faciem, os, labra tegere, to cover the head, the face, the mouth, and the lips. And then why may not this be the meaning of [ἀφανίζειν πρόσωπα] here? which literally ſignifies, to hide or cover, ſo that it doe not appear. So ſaith Phavorinus ['Αφανίζεται] is not only τὸ φθείρεται ὅλον, totally periſhed, but alſo τὸ κρύπτεται, καὶ μὴ φαίνεται, when a thing is hidden and appears not, and ἀφανίζει, τὸ ἀφανὲς ποιῆσαι, to make inviſible, and ſo 'twill be proper to affirm, by its contrariety to ἐμφανίζειν, to make manifeſt. And this may ſeem to be a proper, and firſt notion of the word, which comes to ſignifie other things by deduction from this. And this will be very proper to the turn, by hiding, or covering, or veiling the face, to ſignifie mourning, or ſadneſſe, or humiliation, and by that to publiſh their faſting, which they ſhould keep ſecret. Another ſecond notion of the word ἀφανίζειν is ordinarily pretended for diſfiguring, or diſcolouring their faces, for ὠχρότητα, paleneſſe, but this, as it will hardly be exemplified either in Sacred, or profane Writers (nay on the contrary 'tis uſed for painting to advantage, that is, beautifying, in * Nicoſtratus, ζωγραφοῦντος, καὶ ἀφανίζοντος τὰς ὄψεις) ſo will it not be found that the Jewiſh hypocrites uſed any ſuch arts either in time of mourning or faſting; Neither is it eaſily defined or explained what particular way of diſfiguring, or diſcolouring, or cauſing palliduneſſe it is which is meant by it. The moſt that I can diſcern toward this ſence, is this, There is a diſeaſe which is called Αλωπεκία, defined by Phavorinus to be πάθος ψιλωτικὸν τῶν τριχῶν καὶ τῶν γενείων, a diſeaſe that fetcheth off the hair from the head and beard, makes it very thin, a ſcurf that grows upon the head or face, ſo called from Αλώπηξ a Fox, becauſe as the urine of a Fox τὸν τόπον ἄκαρπον ποιεῖ, makes the place where it falls fruitleſſe, the graſſe will not grow after it; ſo this deals with the head or face: Now the countenance which is thus affected, is uſually called ὠχρὸν πρόσωπον, as being ſo diſmally diſcoloured by it, as the ground is, when by the urine of the Fox it hath loſt its verdure, and is dried up. And to that I ſuppoſe belongs the place in Heſychius, though corrupt in the ordinary copies, where to Αλωπὸς and ἀλωπεκώδης, he addes, οἱ δὲ ἀφανὴς κατὰ τλῶ ὄψιν, ſome ſay it ſignifies one of a macerated, diſcoloured, or (as ἀφανὴς is rendred by σκοτεινὸς) of a dark countenance. And then this agrees with Phavorinus's notion of σκυθρωπὸς, which is here uſed in the ſame ſence, ὁ ἀφανὲς πρόσωπον κακοπαθοῦντος, one that hath ſuch a dark, diſcoloured, macerated countenance. And ſo that may poſſibly be conceived the meaning of ἀφανίζειν τὰ πρόσωπα, to macerate & diſcolour their countenances: (So the Lexicon Græco-Latinum, ἀφανίζω extermino, diſperdo, deformo, depravo, not only to deſtroy, but to deform and deprave. So Antiochus Hom. LV ſaith of Envy, τὸ πρόσωπον ἐξαφανίζει, it cauſeth a pale countenance; So * Proſper ſeems to render the phraſe here, Jejunant, ſaith he, ut vultus ſui pallorem perniciosis laudibus vendant, they faſt that they may ſell the paleneſſe of their countenance for hurtfull praiſes, ἵνα φανῶσι νηστεύοντες, that they may by their looks be taken for auſtere aſcetick perſons, men that faſt very often, having thus macerated themſelves with that exerciſe. And then proportionably with that, σκυθρωποὶ in the beginning of the verſe muſt be more then ſad: Heſychius renders it χαλεποὶ and ἀμὸς, of a fierce, and horrid, ghaſtly countenance, ſuch as men have when they are well nigh ſtarved. But paſſing by this, there is yet a third rendring of the phraſe, which ſeems more commodious to the place, by interpreting πρόσωπα the looks, and not the faces, and then it may fitly be rendred, they ſpoil their looks, endeavour to look as ill as they can; And for this, it is to be obſerved that foul or ſordid apparel will contribute much toward it: So in Euſtathius on * Odyſſ. ζ. σῶμα λύσοις τημελούμενον καλλιον γίνεται, καὶ ἱματίων λαμπρῶν ἐνδύσει, ὥσπερ αὖ πάλιν ἀυχμῷ πιναρίσεις καὶ κακὰ σπίλῳ τὸ λαμπρὸν εἶδος ἀφανίζουσι, The body carefully waſh'd becomes fairer, and ſo alſo by putting on white clothes; as on the other ſide ſordidneſſe and ill-tatterd clothes (σπίλον τὸ κακὸν ἱμάτιον καὶ τὸ ῥακῶδες, it ſhould be read in Heſychius) darken a bright countenance: where the word is uſed of that illneſſe of looks which ſordid clothes do cauſe. To this I may yet further adde, that תמהו which Hab. 1. 5. is rendred ἀφανίσθητε, ſignifies ſuch a confuſion of countenance, as attends aſtoniſhment or vehement trouble; (See Note on Acts 13. k.) and ſo may here in that ſence be fitly joyn'd with σκυθρωποὶ forming, and putting on ſuch a ſad, troubled, confounded, countenance, which cannot but be taken notice of by any. But this ſtill not by any outward meanes of diſcolouring it, but by an affected ſadneſſe or change of looks, or by foul and ſordid garments, and the like.

V. 9. Anoint] The interdict of Unction and Lotion among the Jews, belongs only to dayes of mourning and humiliation. Thus the Miſchna Cod. Joma c. 7. §. 1. On the day of Expiation, that great day of humbling the ſoul, אסור באכילה ובשתיה וברחיצה ובסיכה they are interdicted meat and drink, and waſhing and anointing, and ſo in like manner, בתשמיש המטה the companying of husband and wife, to which agrees that of S. Paul, 1 Cor. 7. 5. that the husband and wife are not to deprive one another, but for a ſeaſon upon conſent, that they may σχολάζειν τῇ νηστείᾳ καὶ τῇ προσευχῇ, be at leiſure for faſting and prayer, (and accordingly the Greek and Latine Church have made Canons to that purpoſe. See Balſamon ad Can. 3. Dionyſ. Alex. and Gratian. Decret. par. 2. cauſâ 33. queſt. 4.) by which it appears that this Anointing and Waſhing are not feſtival rites, but uſual at all times, ſave only of faſting. So Dan. 10. 3. deſcribing his faſt [neither did I anoint my ſelf at all] is joyned to his [I eat no pleaſant bread, neither came any fleſh or wine into my mouth] and and ſo of David, 2 Sam. 12. 20. when he made an end of mourning for the child, 'tis ſaid, he aroſe from the earth, and waſhed, and anointed himſelf, and eat bread, to ſignifie that the omiſſion of thoſe was a ceremony of his mourning, & faſting, and ſo 2 Sam. 14. 2. the widow of Tekoa, that is to feign her ſelf a mourner, is bid to put on mourning apparel, and not anoint her ſelf with oyle. By this and many other teſtimonies appeareth the daily uſe of Anointing, and Waſhing, and not that they were uſed onely on feſtival dayes, though then they were uſed moſt liberally, (ſee Note on c. 26. c.) And conſequently that which Chriſt here commands under the phraſe [anoint, and waſh] is no more then this, that in thoſe private faſts of theirs, they ſhould appear in their ordinary guiſe, and not ſeem to men to faſt, (not that they ſhould appear to feaſt at that time.)

k. Βρῶσις.

V. 19. Ruſt] The word βρῶσις is directly Greek, for the Hebrew חסיל, from חסל conſumpſit, comedit, to conſume or eat, for which the Septuagint read κατέδεται Deut. 28. Hence is the noun uſed for the locuſts, or whatſoever it is that ſtrikes and devoures the corn, Joel 1. 4. 1 Kin. 8. 37. Pſal. 77. 57. and is rendred βρῦχος, and ἀκρὶς, and ἐρυσίβη, and in Latine, rubigo, ruſt, not that which Iron is ſubject to, but that which ſpoils corn, and is called ſmutte among us. And ſo this will be a proper ſenſe for the word βρῶσις here, yet ſo that in a greater latitude it may belong to all other vermine, which devour corn in the barn or garner, yea and the Caterpillars that eat up plants, and all other fruits alſo. And then all the three ſorts of earthly riches, which humane providence is wont to ſtore up, are here noted, 1. Garments, 2. Corn and fruits of the earth, and 3. Gold, and Silver, and Jewels, all ſubject to theſe three ſorts of ſuch great uncertainties, as make them unfit to be kept or treaſur'd up, only fit for the preſent uſe of themſelves and others; the poor mans ſtomach, or back, or purſe, being the ſafeſt ſtore-houſe, wherein we can lay them up, and that by Malachy called Gods ſtore-houſe; and our liberality to them, the laying up our riches, or treaſures in heaven, here v. 20. 'Tis true the word [ruſt] doth ſeem to referre to Metals, which are ſubject to it, and if we took it in that ſenſe, it would be agreeable to the ſound of θησαυίζετε θησαυρὸς, Laying up treaſures, forbidden at the beginning of the verſe, Garments and Metals, being the chief treaſures, and ſo reckon'd Jam. 5. 3. where after ἱμάτια, and χρυσὸς, and ἄργυρος, garments, gold and ſilver, followes θησαυίζετε, treaſure up. So Achan of the treaſure of Jericho, purloin'd (to adde to his own treaſure) a wedge of Gold, and a Babyloniſh garment; and agreeably to this, the uſual preſents that ſubjects gave to their Kings, and the ξενήια which great perſonages gave to their gueſts as teſſeras amicitiæ & hoſpitalitatis, tokens of freindſhip and hoſpitality, at their departing, were either apparell or metals. So Naaman, 2 Kings 5. offer'd Elizeus, talents of Gold, and changes of rayment. And Alcinoüs and other Pheacian Princes gave to * Ulyſſes, at his departure, each a talent of Gold, and a rich veſtment, and ſo in Iſocr. ad Nicoc. in the beginning. And for garments and cloaths it was wont to be a great treaſure in this Kingdome, till the vanity of changing faſhions made it otherwiſe. So in Records and antient Wills among us, the bequeathing of garments took up a great part. And accordingly the offices about the Wardrobe were of eminence in the Kings court, as thoſe other about the Treaſury or Exchequer alſo. Notwithſtanding all this, the former ſenſe of [ruſt] (as it belongs to corn, and fruits of the earth, and the many accidents that thoſe are ſubject to) ſeems to be the thing here moſt pertinent and proper. For firſt the notion of βρῶσις in the Bible belongs only to this rubigo, not erugo; and ſo ſecondly, the notion of θησαυίζειν to treaſure up, and θησαυοὶ treaſures, here doth not referre to the pretiouſneſſe of commodities (though the fruits of the earth alſo be called τίμιος pretious, Jam. 5. 7.) but to the ſollicitude, or μέριμνα in making proviſion for the time to come, which is the literal notation of θησαυίζειν τιθέναι εἰς ἄυριον, laying up for to morrow, and the particular thing here look'd to in Chriſts prohibition; and thirdly, the fear of ruſt to their Gold and Silver would not be very conſiderable, in reſpect of the damage, nor conſequently ſo great an argument to deterre them from hoarding it, as ruſt to their corn would be, and theeves to their money; fourthly, the ruſt of their money is rather threatned as a witneſſe againſt them to condemn them (as coveting the poſſeſſion, but not making uſe of it, in liberality to them that want it) Jam. 5. 3. then for marring their metall; and laſtly, the word there uſed by S. James for the ruſt of their money, is ἰὸς, not βρῶσις.

V. 22. Single] Ἁπλότης ſimplicity in the new Teſtament, generally ſignifies liberality, Rom. 12. 8. 2 Cor. 8. 2. c. 9. 11, and 13. as ἀφελότης alſo, Acts 2. 46. (by the ſame analogie, that τέλειος perfect, Mat. 5. 48. is all one with ἐλεήμων Luke 6. 36. from the latitude of the Hebrew * תם: for that ἀφελὴς and τέλειος are Synonymous, appears by Heſychius, who renders it καθαρὸς, ὁλόκληρος, pure, and perfect) ſo in Phavorinus not only ἁπλῶς ſingle is rendred ἐλευθερος free or liberall, but ἐλευθεία liberality, back again rendred χρημάτων ἁπλῆ δόσις, or ἀρετὴ τῆς ψυχῆς εὐδαπάνητος εἰς τὰ καλὰ, a liberal beſtowing of money, or giving of wealth, or the virtue of the mind, conſiſting in a diſcreet laying out of what a man hath, upon good and proper objects; clearing this matter, that ἁπλότης ſignifies liberality. Then for the applying this Epithet to the eye here, 'Tis 1. that the ſimilitude may go on in the ἀντιπόδοσις or ſecond part of it; 2. becauſe the Eye is that part of the body, which hath moſt to doe with wealth, as appears by Eccl. 5. 11. What good is there to the owners of riches, ſave the beholding them with their eyes? and therefore Coveteouſneſſe is call'd the luſt of the eye, 1 Joh. 2. 16. 3. becauſe the phraſe is moſt agreeable to the dialect of Scripture, Deut. 5. 9. Prov. 23. 6. and 28. 22. Eccluſ. 14. 8, 9, 10. wherein πονηρὸς ὀφθαλμὸς the evil eye ſignifies Envie, as that is the contrary to all liberall diſpoſition, in the ſenſe, wherein ἀφθονώτερος χεὶρ in Ariſtophanes, he who hath little of envie in his hand, and ἄφθονος he that hath no envy, ſo frequent a title of Gods in Damaſcen (the Father of the Greek ſchool) ſignifies bounty and liberality. And accordingly in Theophylact on 2 Cor. 8. 2. Ἁπλότης ἄφθονος γνώμη ἢ ἐυμεταδοτος, It ſignifies a mind void of envy or parſimony, apt to communicate. And in that ſenſe, I ſuppoſe, πονηρὸς is taken c. 7. 11. for niggardly, covetous, or illiberal, the contrary to ἁπλῶς liberal here, in the notion, wherein רשע evil is uſed in Hebrew, when 'tis ſet oppoſite to צריק and חסד the righteous and merciful, and is proverbially ſaid to ſay, That which is thine is mine, and that which is mine is mine own. So on the contrary, שוב עין, the good eye, is by us rendred bountiful, and by the Greek ἐλεῶν ἢ πτωχὸν, pitying the poor, Prov. 22. 9. and ſo ἀγαθὸς good, Matth. 20. 15. If this ſenſe be embraced, then theſe two verſes will perfectly connect with antecedents, and conſequents all to the ſame matter of liberality, otherwiſe they will cauſe a direct chaſme, or hiatus in the Context.

* See note on Mat. 5. 45.

Contrarie ὀφθαλμὸς.

m. Ἀντέχομαι.

V. 24. Hold to] Ἀντέχομαι here uſed, is by Phavorinus rendred ἀντιλαμβάνομαι to help, and ſo by Heſychius; and ἀνθέξεται, ἀντιλήψεται, who alſo addes φροντίζειν to care for. The former of theſe notions may be accommodated to this place of a Servant toward a Master whose office is to assist his Master in all his business, and accordingly it is applied to servants, 1 Tim. 6. 2. δουλεύτωσαν ἀντιλαμβανόμενοι τῆς εὐεργεσίας, let them serve them, assisting them in well doing: but being set opposite to despising, perhaps that of caring for may be the fitter notion of it.

n. Ἡλικία

V. 27. One Cubit unto his stature] Ἡλικία signifies μέγεθος σώματος, and μέγεθος, the quantity or stature of the body, and again the habit of body, and consequent to that, the verdure of age and beauty, as when ἡλικίαν διαφθείρειν, in Heraclitus. φθείρει ἀπὸς. ἁ. signifies to destroy their beauty or youthfull colour, but especially stature, as in Niceph. Basilac. ιγ'. p. 167. ἥλικίαν ὑπερνεφῆς, of a stature reaching to the clouds. So ἐνήλιξ tall being spoken of Pyrrhus, p. 316. μέγας τῷ ἡλικία, of Nestor, p. 307. ἡλικίαν τετράγωνος, foursquare, as broad as high, of Diomedes, p. 307. ἡλικίαν σύμμετος, a proportionable stature in Is. Porphyrogen. p. 206. And so also doth it ordinarily signifie age (and so doth קוֹמָתָא Kaumto which the Syriack here uses, statura, item annus ætatis, stature, as also the year of ones age, saith Ferrarius) and may possibly doe so here, 1. because the Dehortation, which this is brought to enforce, was particularly that concerning Solicitude for the life, and to that this will be very proper, of our not being able to adde, by all our sollicitude, the least proportion to our age, to enlarge the period of life πῆχυν ἕνα, one cubit, that is, one smallest measure or proportion, beyond what God hath set us. 2ly. it will be observable, that one cubit being here set down as a very small measure, (So as in Mimnermus [πηχύιον ἐπὶ χρόνου for a time proportionable to a Cubit] signifies a very short space such as leaves and the most transitorie fraile things enjoy; and accordingly here the Hebrew readeth [even one cubit] would yet be a very great proportion, being applied to the stature of the body. Nay such as are come to their full growth (as the farre greatest part of Christs auditors were) could not thus hope to adde one thousandth part of a cubit to their stature, but on the other side a Cubit will seeme but a small part to the many yeares of a long life, and he that is of the fullest growth, may yet hope to enlarge the period of his life, and to that generally mens sollicitude is applied, by diet, Physick &c. to acquire long life, not to encrease their stature. 3ly. The word πῆχυς cubit is ordinarily a measure of the longitude of any space, Jo. 21. 8. Jos. 3. 4. and so saith * Eustathius, πλέθρον μέτρον γῆς πηχίων ξ'. and generally the same is said of other measures of the ground, &c. and particularly of a Race (to which mans life is compared, Job. 9. 25 and 2 Tim. 4. 7.) in the Scholiast on Pindar, Ὀλυμπ. ὁδ. 13. Στάδιον, saith he, ὁ τόπος ἐν ᾧ ἔτρεχον· ἦν δὲ πηχίων τριακοσίων διάστημα, &c. The race, as it signifies, the place wherein they run, was the space of 300. cubits, and so in Mimnermus πηχυῖος χρόνος even now cited proportionable to that of David, Thou hast made my dayes as it were a spanne long, a measure much lesse then a cubit, applied to our dayes, or space of life.

* in Il. 2.

o. Κοπιᾷν

V. 28. Toyle] The word κοπιᾷν doth properly belong to husbandry-labour, plowing, sowing, &c. So 2 Tim. 2. 6. κοπιῶντα γεωργὸν, the husbandman labouring, and Job. 4. 38. θερίζειν ὃ οὐχ ὑμεῖς κεκοπιάκατε, to reap what you have not labour'd, that is, ploughed, and sowed, &c. and so here of Flax, which is first sowed, and pluck'd &c. before it comes to spinning.

p. Χόρτος

V. 30. Grasse] χόρτος signifies any thing that growes in the field, or garden; here the Genericall word is restrain'd by the Context, and referring to the lilies of the field v. 28. doth signifie a flower (see Note on c. 7. e.) one day glorious and beautifull in the field, and the next day, or soon after, cut down, and used for the heating of ovens, or fornaces.

Paraphrase.

CHAP. VII.

1. The sin of judging is very rife among the Jewes (see note on Rom. 2. 2.) against this therefore you are to be forewarned. Observe not other mens words or actions severely, or without mercy, lest you suffer the same from others which you doe to them, and will be most unwilling to suffer from them, nay feel the like severity from God when he comes to judgement, Jam. 2. 12.

1. JUdge not that ye be not judged.]

2. For you have reason to expect to be dealt with, both by God and man, as you your selves deal with others in this particular; and this generally is so observable, that it is become a proverb among you, (see note on c. 10. h.) that with &c.

2. For with what judgement ye judge, ye shall be judged: and] with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

3. How strange a thing is it, that thou should'st look so severely on the light faults of others, who hast for the most part so much vaster crimes, particularly this of judging others, to be censur'd and reform'd in thy self? this makes thy censuring others very unreasonable in thee.

* small thin shiver of wood,

3. And why beholdest thou the * [a] mote that is in thy brothers eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?]

4. Which way in reason shalt thou ever be fit so much as to reprehend, or direct another to amend any the least fault, much lesse to judge him, when thou art thus guilty of greater faults thy self? Thy continuing still guilty of such greater sins (such is this of judging others) argues either no need of having his lesser faults reformed, or thy no skill to assist him therein.

4. Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye, and behold a beame is in thine own eye?

5. The beginning with other men, judging of them and neglecting the reforming of thy self, is a piece of hypocrisie, Take care to reform thy self first, then wilt thou be better able to work a reformation of any even the smallest sin in another.

5. Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beame out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brothers eye.]

6. And for this matter of reprehending others, (all holy advices and admonitions out of Gods word) because they are a very pretious deed of charity, (and so in like manner, for all other holy things, the word, and prayer, and the use of the sacraments, &c. by way of analogie with that of reprehension, here particularly spoken of, v. 4.) take care they be not cast away upon those that are incorrigible, and will but return the reproaches, and contempt for them, as swine tread under feet the most precious jewels, that are offer'd them, and as dogs often tear them, that give them what is most precious.

6. Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they [b] trample them under their feet, and turn again and rent you.]

7. And that your selves may be blamelesse, free from the greater, and lesser guilts, (and so for all other things you want) apply your selves to God in prayer, and that will be a means of obtaining it, Lu. 11. 9. 13. Ja. 5. 6.

7. Ask, and it shall be given you: seek, and ye shall find: knock, and it shall be opened unto you.]

8. For

8. For every one that asketh, receiveth; and he that ſeeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it ſhall be opened.]

8. For prayer, if joyned with conſtancy, and importunity, never miſſeth to obtain that which is moſt for his benefit to receive, and therefore ſhall not fail to obtain grace.

9. Or what man is there of you, whom if his ſon aske bread, [c will he give him a ſtone?

10 Or if he aske a fiſh will he give him a ſerpent?]

9, 10. Any father will give his ſonne which asks him profitable things, thoſe things, or hurtfull (nay if he ask ſuch, for which he asks, at leaſt will give him other things as good or better, but by no means worſe he will not give them.)

11. If ye then being * evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more ſhall your father which is in heaven, give good things to them that ask him?

* envious niggardly; ſee note on c. 6. 1.

11. If you therefore which are not alwaies willing to give, and doe not alwaies know what is good for your children, doe yet not make ſuch ill returns to your childrens requeſts, as to give them ſerpents for fiſhes, how much more ſhall God be ſure to give you thoſe things that are beſt for you? (though not alwaies in kind what you ask for, becauſe that is not alwaies ſuch, yet) grace which is alwaies ſo.

12. Therefore all things whatſoever you would that men ſhould doe to you, doe ye even ſo to them: for this is the law and the prophets.]

12. Another branch of prime Chriſtian duty required of you is this, that whatſoever you would eſteeme reaſonable that other men ſhould doe to you, if you were in their, and they in your condition, the ſame you muſt now think your ſelves obliged to doe to them, for this equity is taught you by your own law, and Scriptures in force among the Jewes: ſee note on Mat. 5. g.

13. Enter ye in at the ſtraight gate, for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to deſtruction, and many there be which goe in thereat.]

13. Let all your care be to ſet your ſelves upon the Chriſtian courſe, be it never ſo ſtrict (for 'tis eaſie to enter on a vicious courſe, and go through with it, and there are multitudes good ſtore, which paſſe that way to eternall deſtruction, and damnation)

14. Becauſe ſtrait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.]

14. And there will be all need of your care, becauſe the entrance, and whole courſe of a Chriſtians life is made up of perfect ſtrictneſſe, in oppoſition to the looſneſſe of the world, and that makes ſo few to chooſe it.

15. Beware of falſe prophets which come to you in ſheeps cloathing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.]

15. Take heed of falſe teachers, that, when they come to infuſe their doctrines into you, weare ſheep-skins, as the prophets oft uſed to doe, thereby pretending the greateſt innocency and meekneſſe that can be, but deſign and intend the direct contrary, devouring and rapacity. See Acts 20. 29.

16. Ye ſhall know them by their fruits:] Doe men gather grapes of thornes or figs of thiſtles?

16. Ye ſhall certainly know them and diſcern them, if you take notice of and weigh the doctrines which, when they have gotten ſome authority with you, they will preſently endeavour to infuſe into you. They that make no other uſe of their being counted prophets, but to infuſe higher degrees of all kind of piety and charity into you, ye may reſolve they are ſent from God, for the Devil would never help men to credit and reputation in the world, who ſhould make uſe of it only to the advancement of piety. But if their deſign be to infuſe into their followers any ſeeds of impiety, injuſtice, uncleanneſſe, uncharitableneſſe, ſedition, rebellion, &c. Let their pretences, and behaviour be never ſo fair, be ſure they are falſe prophets.

17. Even ſo every good tree bringeth forth good fruit, but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down, and caſt into the fire.

20. Wherefore by their fruits ye ſhall know them.

21. Not every one that ſaith unto me, Lord, Lord,] ſhall enter into the kingdome of heaven, but he that doth the will of my father which is in heaven.

21. And though in words they take upon them to be the only ſervants, ſons, and ſaints of God, as hereticks and ſchiſmaticks ordinarily doe, yet theſe words of theirs and their confident calling on God, are not ſuch fruits, by which you can judge well of them, for 'tis not every one which beleiveth on me, which acknowledgeth me, which looketh for ſalvation from me, that.

22. Many will ſay to me [in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not propheſied * in thy name? and in thy name have caſt out Devils? and in thy name, done many wonderful workes?]

* by, vide infra.

22. At the day of judgement, Lord we are the men which thou by thy power haſt enabled to foretell things to come, and by the ſame, to exorciſe Devils, and doe all kind of miracles.

23. And then will I profeſſe unto them, [d I never knew you;] depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

23. ſaying, I never knew you.

24. Therefore whoſoever [heareth theſe ſayings of mine and doth them, I will liken him to a wiſe man, which built his houſe upon a rock,]

24. Beleiveth and entertaineth all theſe commands here contained in this Sermon, (beginning c. 5. 1.) and practiſeth them, he is like a prudent builder, that laid the foundation of his houſe upon a rock (ſee note on c. 10. b.)

25. And the rain deſcended, and [the e floods] came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that houſe and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

25. Land-floods that proceeded from that ſudden rain.

26. And every one that heareth theſe ſayings of mine, and doth them not, [ſhall be likened] unto a fooliſh man, which built his houſe upon the ſand.

26. Shall be like, and by all men known and reputed to be like.

27. And the rain deſcended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that houſe, and great was the fall of it.

28. And it came to paſſe when Jeſus had ended theſe ſayings, the people were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine.

29 For he taught them, as one having authority, and not as the Scribes.]

29. For all this Sermon of his, whether ſpoken continuedly, or with pauſes between, was delivered by him as by one which had extraordinary power and miſſion, prophetick at leaſt, which ſince Ezras time had been intermitted (as the Jewes confeſſe) and not as the Doctors of Law among the Jewes.

a. Κάρφος. V. 3. Mote] What κάρφος here ſignifies, will appear by two waies of judging, firſt by the judgment of the Greek Grammarians. Heſychius renders κάρφη, ξύλα λεπτὰ καὶ ξηρὰ, thin drie pieces of wood, and then taking it in that notion of a thin piece of wood, the leaſt ſplinter or ſhiver imaginable, of very little, yet of ſome length, 'twill be here very fitly uſed, and ſet oppoſite to the δοκὸς, the beame, the biggeſt and longeſt piece of wood, which is uſed. The ſecond way is by comparing the next verſe (which is the varying the phraſe a little) with a Proverbial ſpeech among the Jewes, in and before Chriſts time (ſet down afterward with ſome variation in the Talmud, thus) They which ſay to others טול חיסם מבין שניך take out the ſmall piece of wood out of thy teeth, are anſwer'd טול קורה מבין עיניך take out the beame out of thine eyes. To check the importunity of thoſe, who are alwayes cenſuring and condemning others for ſmall matters, reprehending for trifles, when they are themſelves guilty of thoſe things, which are much more to be reprehended.

b. Ἔκπωμα. V. 6. They trample] There is in theſe words obſervable an ἔκπωμα or ὑστέρησις, a going back, ſpeaking firſt to the ſecond of the two things propoſed, and then after to the firſt. As it is very frequent with the Prophets in the Old Teſtament, and not ſeldome uſed in the Writers of the New. So Mat. 12. 22. the blind and the dumb both ſpake and ſaw, that is, the blind ſaw, and the dumb ſpake; and c. 18. Chriſt having mention'd the three degrees of Admonition, by one alone, by two or three, and by the Rulers in the preſence of the aſſembly, v. 15, 16, 17. he then reſumes to ſpeak ſomewhat farther of each of theſe, and begins firſt with the laſt, what in caſe of ſuch refractarineſſe, the Rulers of the Church are to doe, Verily I ſay unto you, Whatſoever ye ſhall bind on earth, &c. v. 18. And then v. 19. (in reference to the ſecond thing mention'd, the admonition in the preſence of one or two v. 16.) Again, Verily I ſay unto you, that if two of you ſhall agree upon the earth, &c. it ſhall be done unto them of my Father; From which, before he proceeds back again in the firſt place to the firſt, of the private admonition, Peter asks a queſtion, which introduces the diſcourſe, which was proper to have been deliver'd on that ſubject. So c. 23. 16. Chriſt having mention'd ſwearing by the Temple firſt, and then by the Altar v. 18. he after reſuming them both again, v. 20. begins firſt with that of the Altar, and then that of the Temple, after it. So in that c. 23. 25. having mention'd firſt the outſide of the cup and platter, and then the inſide v. 26. he returns firſt to the cleanſing of the inſide, then the outſide of it. So Rom. 2 12. S. Paul having affirm'd two things, the firſt of the Gentiles that had not the Law, that they ſhould periſh without it, the ſecond of the Jews that had the Law, that they ſhould be judged by it, he v. 13. ſpeaks firſt of the ſecond, for the hearers of the Law, &c. and then v. 14. of the firſt, For when the Nations, &c. So Rom. 14. having ſet down two heads of diſcourſe, that the ſtrong ſhould not ſet at nought the weak, Nor ſecondly, the weak judge, or condemn the ſtrong, v. 3. he reſumes the latter firſt v. 4. who art thou that judgeſt, and then v. 10. returns to the former, and thou why doſt thou ſet at nought thy brother? So 1 Cor. 6. 11. After the general of waſhing, which contains the two ſubſequent, ſanctifying and juſtifying, the mention of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which is firſt named, belongs to the latter, that of Juſtification, and the Spirit of our God, to the former, that of Sanctifying. So 2 Cor. 2. 15. Having mention'd the σωζόμενοι firſt, them that are ſaved, and then ἀπολλύμενοι them that periſh, he goes back v. 16. firſt to the latter, to thoſe a ſavour of death unto death, & then to the former, to thoſe a ſavour of life unto life. So Philem. 5. hearing of thy love, and faith, which thou haſt toward the Lord Jeſus, and toward all Saints, 'tis apparent, that the Saints are the object of the Love, and the Lord Jeſus of the Faith. So Heb. 5. where in the four firſt verſes there are three things propounded of an high-Prieſt, 1. that he offer for ſin, 2. be compaſſionate to ſinners, and to that end be himſelf infirm, and offer for himſelf, as well as the people, 3. that he be called to this office by God himſelf. To theſe three, all applied to Chriſt, the Apoſtle ſpeaks particularly, and to the laſt firſt, So likewiſe Chriſt glorified not himſelf to be an high-Prieſt, &c. v. 5. 6. Then to the ſecond v. 7, & 8. who in the daies of his fleſh offer'd up prayers, &c. and then to the firſt laſt, v. 9. being made perfect he became the author of eternal ſalvation, &c. So Heb. 9. 1. having named two things, the ordinances of worſhip, and the worldly ſanctuary, he dilates firſt on the laſt of them, v. 2, 3, 4, 5. For there was a tabernacle made, &c. and then after comes back to the former, v. 6. Now when theſe things were thus ordain'd, the Prieſt went alwayes, &c. So Heb. 10. 33. having mention'd two acts of ſuffering in them, the firſt perſonal in themſelves by reproaches and afflictions, the ſecond by way of ſympathy with the Apoſtles, in the next verſe he reſumes both, but firſt the latter, for ye had compaſſion on me in my bands, and then the former, took joyfully the ſpoiling of your goods. So 2 Pet. 3. where the Atheiſts objection conſiſts of two parts, 1. that God hath not made good his promiſe concerning his coming v. 4. 2ly, as a proof of that, that there had been no ſenſible mutation ſince the beginning of the world, in the latter part of the verſe; The Apoſtle makes anſwer firſt to the latter, v. 5, 6, 7. and then comes back, and ſatisfies the former alſo, v. 8. &c. And, to inſtance no more, two examples of this there are moſt clearly here in this place; The firſt in the ſixt and ſeventh verſes, for having mention'd two things, v. 5. pulling out the beam in thine own eye, that is, reforming a mans own ſins; ſecondly, caſting out the mote out of thy brothers eye, that is, reprehending faults in other men, he ſpeaks firſt to the latter of theſe, the matter of reprehenſion, v. 6. and then v. 7. returns to the former, the means that muſt be uſed for the reforming our ſelves, prayer for grace, which ſhall ſo ſurely bring it. The ſecond here in the ſixt verſe, where having mention'd the Dogs and the Swine, he firſt ſpeaks of the Swine, and after of the Dogs; for certainly the treading belongs to the Swine, and the rending to the Dogs; for the Swine doe not uſe to turn, and rend, but the Dogs doe; (and therefore Munſter's Hebrew reads it וישובו הכלבים and the Dogs returning, &c.) and Dogs doe not tread under their feet what is caſt to them, as Swine doe. Theſe are both proverbially ſpoken, to expreſſe, how ſure good charitable reprehenſions are, to be caſt away upon incorrigible ſinners, according to that of the Satyriſt,

Contemnunt Scauros, & caſtigata remordent.
Enormous vices, if they be chaſtiſed, or reprehended, will contemn and bite again.

c. Μὴ. Sanhed. fol. 10. V. 9. Will he give] Μὴ δώσει, is here no more then will he give? The Greek μὴ being oft all one with the Hebrew מי nunquid? as in the * Gemara מי כתיב, nunquid ſcriptum eſt? is it written?

d. Ὅτι. V. 23. Ὅτι here and in ſome other places, hath a peculiar notion, neerer an Expletive then a Cauſall, and is beſt rendred by the Latine ſcilicet, the Engliſh Thus, or the like, as a form only of introducing the ſpeech that comes after; He ſhall ſay unto them, what ſhall he ſay? Why, or thus he ſhall ſay, I know you not, &c. So c. 10. 7. and ſo c. 26. 72. He denied with an oath, ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα, which will be beſt rendred, ſaying I know him not, ſo v. 74, 75. In all which places, if it ſhall be rendred that, the words will not be coherent, but if it be rendred ſaying, or elſe quite omitted, as an Expletive, and not rendred at all, the ſenſe will be perſpicuous. Thus I conceive is ὅτι to be taken Rom. 3. 8. καὶ μὴ (καθὼς βλασφημούμεθα, καὶ καθὼς φασί τινες ἡμᾶς λέγειν) ὅτι ὅτι ποιήσωμεν, &c. and why ſhould we not ſay (as they ſay we doe) to wit, Let us doe evil, &c.

e. Ποταμοὶ. V. 25. The floods] The word ποταμοὶ doth not peculiarly ſignifie rivers, that is, ſtreams or chanels, either beginning from ſprings, or proceeding from the ſea, but is a general word, of which, as thoſe rivers are one ſpecies, ſo are land-floods, or torrents, that ariſe from any tempeſtuous, ſuddain rain, another, and the latter of theſe is here meant, being joyn'd to the deſcending of the rain, and accompanied with the blowing of the winds. Thus in Homer, Ἰλ. δ.

Ὡς δ' ὅτε χείμαρροι ποταμοὶ κατ' ὄρεσφι ῥέοντες.

As when the torrent rivers running down from the mountains—— Where ſaith Euſtathius, the word ποταμοὶ is a Generical word, χείμαρροι, Specifically, ποταμὸς being of two ſorts, 1. ἀένναος, a continual river that flowes from a ſpring, and 2. χείμαρρος that comes in a torrent from a tempeſtuous rain (ὄμβειων ὕδωρ, rain water there in Homer) and therefore he concludes τόδε ποταμὸς χείμαρρος παρακείμενον ἔχει τὸ γένει τὸ ἄδος, ὁμοίως τῷ βοῦς ταῦρος, The word ποταμὸς hath the adjective χείμαρρος, added to it, the ſpecifical word to the generical, as if to βοῦς the word ταῦρος were added. And ſo as βοῦς is ſometimes taken peculiarly for a bull, though it be a more general comprehenſive word, and ſignifie an oxe alſo, ſo doth ποταμὸς here ſignifie a land-flood or torrent; though in its own amplitude it ſignifie a river alſo, juſt as χόρτος the generical word for graſſe and flowers, &c. is yet by the context reſtrained to ſignifie flowers peculiarly, c. 6. 30.

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. When he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.]

1. After the finiſhing of this Sermon of his, there was great reſort unto him, not only for his doctrine, but his miracles of cures, &c.

2. And behold there came a leper and [× a worſhipped him, ſaying, Lord if thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean.]

a. × fell down before him.

2. Fell down and beſought him that he would pleaſe to make uſe of his power, whereby he was confident that he was able to cure his leproſie. a.

3. And Jeſus put forth his hand and touched him, ſaying, I will, be thou clean. And immediately [his leproſie was cleanſed.]

3. He was cleanſed or cured from his leproſie.

4. And Jeſus ſaith unto him, [b See thou tell no man, but goe thy way, c ſhew thy ſelf to the Prieſt, and offer the gift that Moſes commanded, d for a teſtimony unto them.]

4. Be ſure thou divulge not this to others, but according to the Law ſhew thy ſelf to the Prieſt, and offer the offering required of all ſuch, as are thus cleanſed from leproſie; This Jeſus ſaid to him on deſign, that it might by this means be a teſtimony to aſſure them, 1. that he was the Meſſias, 2. that he was God, 3. that he oppoſed not the law given by Moſes. b. c. d.

5. And when Jeſus was entred into Capernaum, there came unto him a [Centurion,] beſeeching him,

5. A captain or commander of an hundred ſouldiers.

6. And ſaying, Lord, my ſervant lyeth at home ſick of the palſie, grievouſly e × tormented.

e. × affected, puniſhed.

7. And Jeſus ſaith unto him, I will come and heal him.

8. The Centurion anſwer'd and ſaid, Lord, I am not worthy that thou ſhouldſt come under my roof [but ſpeak the word only, and my ſervant ſhall be healed.]

8. But of this I am aſſured, that one word of thine will as eaſily cure him, as if thou ſhouldſt thy ſelf come perſonally.

9. For I am a man under authority, having ſouldiers under me. And I ſay to this man, Goe, and he goeth, and to another, Come, and he cometh, and to my ſervant, Doe this, and he doeth it.]

9. For I am a man, who though I am under other mens authority, that of the chief Commander, and of the Emperour, yet have under me ſouldiers for my military commands, and ſervants for my domeſtick, and whatſoever I command them, is done by them as ſurely, as if I did it my ſelf, how much more canſt thou with thy word command health (who art the word, which healeth all things, Wiſd. 16. 12.) without troubling thy ſelf to come down to my houſe?

10. When Jeſus heard it, [he marvelled and ſaid to them that followed, Verily I ſay unto you I have not found ſo great f faith, no not in Iſrael.]

10. At this ſaying of the Centurions, Jeſus expreſs'd much wonderment, and calling to his diſciples, ſaid with ſome earneſtneſſe, of aſſeveration, I have not found any Jew ſo fully perſwaded of my power, or that behaves himſelf ſo much like a beleiver, as this Gentile. f.

11. And I ſay unto you, that many ſhall come from the eaſt and weſt, and ſhall g ſit down with Abraham, and Iſaac, and Jacob in the kingdome of heaven:]

11. But this which is now ſo very admirable, will within a while be frequently exemplified: For the old Prophets have oft foretold it (and now the time of the completion approacheth) that many multitudes from all parts of the world will come in, and beleive on Chriſt, partake of this ſpiritual feaſt, and be made to ſit down with Abraham the father of the faithful, and the reſt of the Patriarchs of the Jewiſh nation. g.

12. But the children of the Kingdome ſhall be caſt out into utter darkneſſe,] there ſhall be h weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

12. And the Jewes themſelves to whom this Meſſias was primarily ſent, will diſ-beleive, and be puniſhed accordingly, ſhut out of the ſpiritual feaſt, out of the Church here, and heaven hereafter, deprived of the light and cheerful heat, that is wont to be in houſes of feaſting, and left to utter darkneſſe (the cold of the night, and winter, without) ſtupid blindneſſe here, and eternal darkneſſe hereafter. h.

13. And Jeſus ſaid unto the Centurion, Goe thy way, and as thou haſt beleived, ſo be it done unto thee; And his ſervant was healed in the ſelf ſame hour.

14. And when Jeſus came into Peters houſe, he [ſaw his wives mother layd, and ſick of a fever:]

14. Found his wives mother ſick of a feaver, and layd to bed under it.

15. And he touched her hand, and the fever left her, and ſhe aroſe and [miniſtred unto them.]

15. Provided for them, what was neceſſary for their entertainment.

16. When the even was come,] they brought unto him many that were poſſeſſed with devils, and he caſt out the ſpirits with his word, and healed all that were ſick:

16. When by the approach of the evening-cool it was more convenient,

17. He was ſo affected with all the miſeries that befell us, that out of compaſſion to us, he made uſe of his divine power to heal even our bodies of the diſeaſes that were on them.

i. 17. That it might be fulfilled, which was ſpoken by Eſaias the prophet ſaying, [Himſelf i took our infirmities, and bare our ſickneſſes.]

18. Now when Jeſus ſaw great multitudes about him, he gave commandement to depart unto the other ſide;

19. And a certain Scribe came and ſaid unto him, Maſter, I will follow thee whitherſoever thou goeſt;

20. No place or dwelling of his own to reſt in, or entertain any follower.

20. And Jeſus ſaith unto him, The Foxes have holes, and the birds of the ayre have neſts; but the ſon of man hath [not where to lay his head.]

21. Lord I deſire, and firmly purpoſe to be a conſtant follower of thine, But for a time I beſeech thy leave, that I may abide at my fathers houſe, to perform the laſt rites of funeral obſequies unto him.

21. And another of his diſciples ſaith unto him, [Lord, ſuffer me firſt to goe and bury my father.]

k. 22. Leave that office to be performed by others, who are not imbarked in this more holy and divine imployment; For as in the Law the Nazarites and the Prieſts might not meddle with the interrements even of their parents, but others might lawfully doe it, others that were not Nazarites or Prieſts might bury one another: So thou that art a conſecrated perſon, the departing to bury a deceaſed friend, though it be a Father, or to receive an inheritance or legacy from him, is an imployment unfit for thee.

22. But Jeſus ſaid unto him, Follow me, and [let the k dead bury their dead.]

23. His diſciples and none elſe.

24. The lake, ſee note on Luke 8. c.

23. And when he was entred into a ſhip, [his diſciples] followed him.

24. And behold there aroſe a great tempeſt in [the ſea,] inſomuch that the ſhip was covered with the waves; but he was aſleep.

25. And his diſciples came unto him, and awoke him, ſaying, Lord ſave us, we periſh.

26. Ye that in the due ſeaſon make not uſe of that promiſe in the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 107, 23, 28. and apprehend not the fulfilling of it in and by Chriſt, ye that have ſo poor an opinion either of my power, or care of you, as to doubt of my preſence to ſecure you,

26. And he ſaith unto them, Why are ye fearful [O ye of little faith?] Then he aroſe and rebuked the winds and the ſea, and there was a great calme.

27. And at this they were wonderfully amazed, and terrified, Mark 4. 41. Luke 8. 25.

27. But the men marvelled] ſaying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds, and the ſea obey him?

l. 28. That country where Gergeſa and Gadara (Mar. 5. 1.) lie neer together, ſee Mark 8. 10.

28. And when he was come to the other ſide, into [the countrey of the Gergeſenes,] there met him two poſſeſſed with devils coming out of the l tombs, exceeding fierce, ſo that no man might paſſe by that way.

29. Be quiet, let us alone, we deſire not to have any thing to doe with thee, thou ſon of God and Saviour of mankind: Our time is not yet come of being remanded to our priſons; doe not thou haſten and precipitate it.

29. And behold, they cried out, ſaying, [What have we to do with thee, Jeſus thou ſon of God? Art thou come hither to torment us before the time?]

m. 30. And there was a good way off from them an herd of many m ſwine feeding.

31. And thereupon the Devils knowing that Chriſt would caſt them out, and by that miracle ſo farre ſhew forth his power, that it would probably bring all the country to beleive on him, deſired to prevent this, and thereupon fell on this project, which might incenſe the countrymen againſt him (as it proved in the event, v. 34.) and in order to it beſought Chriſt.

31. So the Devils beſought him,] ſaying, If thou caſt us out, ſuffer us to goe away into the herd of ſwine.

32. See Mar. 5. 13. Lu. 8. 32.

32. And he ſaid unto them, Go, and when they were come out, they went into the herd of ſwine, and behold the whole herd of ſwine ran violently down a ſteep place into the ſea, and periſhed in the waters.

33. Gave them notice of the loſſe of their ſwine, and telling the occaſion of it, let them know how as their ſwine were loſt on one ſide, ſo two men poſſeſs'd with Devils were recover'd, and that Chriſt had done this ſince his coming thither.

33. And they that kept them, fled, and went their waies into the city, and [told every thing, and what was befaln to the poſſeſſed of the Devils.]

34. Hereupon the whole city as being very much concern'd in that which had happened, came out to meet and ſee Jeſus, which did ſuch miracles, and in ſtead of being wrought on by his cure on the men, to deſire his continuance among them, the conſideration of the loſſe of their ſwine made them deſire, and beſeech him, &c.

34. And behold, the whole city came out to meet Jeſus: and when they ſaw him, they beſought him] that he would depart out of their coaſts.

Annotations on St. MATTHEW Chap. VIII.

a. Προσεκυνεῖ. V. 2. Worſhipped] Προσκυνεῖ, προσπίπτει, ſaith Heſychius and Phavorinus, it ſignifies to fall down, as ſuppliants doe to any.

b. Ὅρα μηδενὶ εἴπῃς. V. 4. See thou tell no man] What was the reaſon why Chriſt ſo oft commanded the concealing of his Miracles, and of his being the Meſſias, will beſt be conjectured, by conſidering the ſeveral places, where this is mentioned. Firſt here to the Leper cured by him, See thou tell no body v. 4. then Mat. 9. to the blind reſtored to ſight, he charged them, ſaying, See ye tell no man v. 30. And as yet there is no reaſon diſcernible in the Contexts, unleſſe perhaps in this latter, when they obeying not his command, but his fame ſpreading, the Dæmoniacks coming to him, he cures them, which the Phariſees hearing of ſay, He caſts out Devils through the Prince of Devils v. 34. For 'tis poſſible that Chriſt foreſeeing the Phariſees perverſeneſſe, and blaſphemy, and that they would proceed to the crucifying of him, in ſtead of being convinced by his Miracles, did in mercy to them, and to leave them the excuſe of ignorance, Luke 23. 34. Acts 3. 17. forbid the divulging them, leſt they ſhould come to the eares of thoſe that would make ſo ill uſe of them. Next; c. 12. 16, He charged them that they ſhould not make him known. Whom did he charge? Mar. 3. 12. the words are ſet immediately upon the mention of the Devils falling down down to him, and saying, Thou art the Son of God. But that being but a paſſage which comes in incidentally upon the mention of his caſting out Devils, among his other cures, which he wrought on many, v. 10, 11. 'tis not neceſſary that the αὐτοῖς them muſt belong to the Devils immediately precedent, but may belong to the πολλοὶ many, or multitude, that were cured by him; or if to the unclean ſpirits, then ſtill thoſe muſt ſignifie the men that were poſſeſs'd with them, or elſe how could they fall down before him? v. 11. and ſo 'tis poſitively ſaid v. 12. that he charged them, that is, either the ὄχλοι πολλοὶ many multitudes, or αὐτοὶ πάντες, all they that were cured by him. In this one place two circumſtances there are, which ſeem to give ſome light to the matter in hand, concerning the reaſon of his charge to be concealed. For firſt v. 14. upon his former Miracle on the withered hand, wrought on the Sabbath day, The Phariſees went out and conſulted againſt him, how they might kill, or bring a capital charge againſt him, and when Jeſus knew this, he withdrew himſelf, v. 15. this not for fear of death, ὃ διὰ φόβον θανάτου, ſaith Origen againſt Celſus, but becauſe (his coming into the world being for the benefit of men) he would not die, ἕως ὅτε ὁ ἐπιτήδειος καιρὸς, till the convenient ſeaſon were come of dying, more for mans advantage, then he had hitherto lived. (To the ſame purpoſe is Chriſts telling his mother Joh. 2. 4. My hour is not yet come, ſee Joh. 2. a.) It follows therefore v. 15. that as great multitudes followed him, ſo he healed them all, that is, he did not ſo withdraw himſelf, as to omit doing any good, but for the preſent, ſo as to avoid oppoſition and diſputing (which he had met with, v. 2. and 10.) yea and death it ſelf, of which there was now danger, unleſſe he would either thus before-hand, or at the inſtant of danger, by miracle withdraw, or unleſſe he would make uſe of his Omnipotence to preſerve himſelf, which he would not doe, being come not to reſiſt, but to lay down his life, which yet he deferred to doe, his time being not yet come. And upon this it follows diſtinctly, v. 16. and he charged them that they ſhould not make him known, which notes that to be the reaſon of his prohibition in this place, becauſe he would decline, and fairly avoid (perhaps the diſpute with perverſe and treacherous Phariſees, aſſuredly) the Death, which they were providing for him: and ſo ſaith Origen in that place, ὡς ἀγχινὲς ὂν τὸ μετ' οἰκονομίας περιϊστάμενον τὸν κινδύνους, μὴ ὁμοίως αὐτοῖς χωρεῖν, 'Tis no degenerous thing in Chriſt to avoid dangers by providence, and not to go among them. The Second circumſtance in this place, which may help to give light to it, is the Prophecy which is cited juſt on the back of theſe words, v. 16. That it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by Eſaias the prophet, 42. 1. The ſumme of the words of Iſaiah is, that the Meſſias ſhould, when he came, in the diſcharging of his office behave himſelf very quietly and ſtilly, never ſet himſelf out magnificently (as other Princes doe) againſt all oppoſers, never uſe any ſecular force to defend himſelf, but manage it ſo as was moſt agreeable to that Goſpel which he came to proclaim, meekly and mercifully dealing with ſinners and weaklings, and never giving over till he had ſo rooted the Goſpel on earth, that it ſhould never be gotten out again, but extend to the Gentiles, and be beleived on, and embraced by them. Which Prophecy being here fulfilled, not all of it in this one interdict of his, but in the whole paſſage laſt rehearſed, doth yet ſo farre reflect on this particular, that that part of the Prophecy (of his preaching, and making known the will of God to as many as were likely to receive benefit from it, his not reſiſting, not contending with others, his meekneſſe, and not conteſting with the Phariſees) may be fulfilled in it, and ſo that may paſſe for one part of the reaſon of his prohibition; which being added to the former circumſtance, makes up this entire reaſon of his doing it, viz. Chriſt would not have his miracles divulg'd, becauſe, when they were ſo, the Phariſees ſtill came and diſturb'd him, oppoſed him (and he had not a mind to conteſt with them, and it was a great mercy to them that he would not, being likely to doe no good upon them) and would probably have proceeded to cut him off (if he did not thus withdraw, or defend himſelf) before he had done what he was ſent for, that is, preach'd the Goſpel to all the Jewes, and made it known (as it appears he did at this time, by that withdrawing, Mar. 3. 8.) to the Gentiles alſo. But beſides theſe another paſſage there is, which muſt be taken in, being of ſpecial conſideration to this purpoſe, and that is Luke 9. 21. parallel to Mat. 16. 20. and Mar. 8. 30. The matter in hand in two of thoſe places, is, Chriſts asking his Diſciples what the opinion of the world was concerning him; and at laſt, what was their own opinion, whereupon Peter anſwers, that he was the Chriſt of God, v. 20. On which it immediately follows, that he ſtraitly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing, v. 21. Why he gave now ſo ſevere an interdict of this promulgation (when his miracles, and all that he did and taught, had hitherto tended to the evidencing of this) the reaſon was certainly this, leſt the Diſciples witneſſing or proclaiming, it might be taken for a thing compacted between them; And thoſe that were not wrought upon and convinced by his miracles, would be more likely to be alien'd by this. And beſides Chriſt knew that he was to be rejected, and to ſuffer death (and ſo it follows in all the three Goſpels) and conſequently not to be beleived on by the chief of the Jews. And ſo the proclaiming of his Divinity, till they had that great addition of his Reſurrection, to adde to their own teſtimony, was not yet ſo ſeaſonable. This was the occaſion of the like ſpeech Mar. 9. 30, where paſſing through Galilee (where formerly he had freely preach'd and done miracles) he now was not pleaſed that any man ſhould know it: For, as it follows v. 31. he ſaid to his diſciples, The ſon of man is deliver'd into the hands of men, &c. And this very thing Chriſt in effect tells the Phariſees themſelves, for when they deſire a Sign from him, that he was the Meſſias, he tells them, that they ſhall have no other ſign but that of the prophet Jonah, Mat. 12. 39. which referring clearly to that of his riſing from the grave the third day, ſignifies that he would uſe no more means now to convince them, till by his Reſurrection from the dead, his Divine power, and the completion of the types and prophecies in him, ſhould be moſt convincingly made known to them, and this I conceive to be the reaſon of his then prohibiting them to tell that he was the Meſſias, becauſe having been thus long rejected by the Rulers, &c. (and the Prophecies of his dying, containing a prediction that they ſhould ſtill reject, and at length put him to death) it was in all reſpects moſt fit, that the moſt convincing evidences of his being the Meſſias (of which the Apoſtles had ſtore, particularly, and above others, Peter, and James, and John had that of the voice from heaven, at the Transfiguration, and would in all reaſon adde them to evidence that truth, and not content themſelves with the bare affirmations that he was ſo) ſhould be reſerved and not yet publiſh'd, till after his death and reſurrection, that ſo his riſing from the dead being added to his former miracles, and to his infinite meekneſſe and charity, demonſtrated by his death, might be able to convince the moſt pertinacious, obdurate heart, which certainly would not now (having ſo oft reſiſted the like) be perſwaded by his miracles or preaching, much leſſe by the teſtimony of his own Diſciples, but might afterwards poſſibly be wrought upon, (as indeed ſome of them were, A great multitude of the Prieſts, Acts 6. 7.) by the evidence of his Reſurrection, and they that were not, are left utterly unexcuſable. And thus in the Parable, Luke 19. The King takes poſſeſſion of his kingdome, that is, Christ goes to heaven before he proceeds to execution againſt his enemies that would not have him reign over them; v. 15.27. According to this it is, that at the Transfiguration c. 17. when thoſe three Apoſtles had received that clear teſtimony by a voice from heaven, This is my beloved ſon, &c. he commands them to tell it no man (not abſolutely, but with this particular reſtraint, which implies the cauſe of it) till the ſon of man be riſen from the dead, telling them withall, as here, that it was prophecied of him, that he muſt ſuffer, &c. ſo Mar. 9. 12. In which paſſage the three Diſciples being taken up alone into the mount with him, and commanded to tell it no man, the phraſe No man will moſt probably be interpreted in the greateſt latitude, [no not to the reſt of the Diſciples] and the reaſon of that ſtrict prohibition will be this, that the deſigned uſe of this Viſion being the working of faith in the obdurate, and the ſeaſon of making that uſe of it being not yet come, till after the Reſurrection, it was uſeleſs to be revealed to the whole number of the twelve, who beleived already, and ſo needed it not for themſelves, and were not to be permitted to preach it to others, if they had known it.

c. Ib. Shew thy ſelf to the Prieſt] The Leper continued without the camp or city: On the day of his cleanſing he was led to the outſide of the camp, and in the latter ages, to the gate of Jeruſalem and the Prieſt went out to meet him, and performing ſome rites for him, afterwards received him into the city or camp, and by degrees into the Sanctuary. This was the form or manner of ſhewing himſelf to the Prieſt, (who, as the πασφόροι among the Ægyptians was exerciſed in all kind of knowledge, particularly in that of being able to judge of diſeaſes in the body) and this ſhewing was neceſſary to every one that had been leprous, though never ſo perfectly cured, Levitic. 4. 2. and therefore Christ in obedience to the Law, here requires it of him.

d. Ib. For a teſtimony] The phraſe εἰς μαρτύριον αὐτοῖς, for a teſtimony to them, may poſſibly connect with λέγει ὁ Ιησοῦς, Jeſus ſaith, in the beginning of the verſe, and λέγει αὐτῷ, he ſaith unto him Mar. 1. 44. not with προσέταξε Μωσῆς, Moſes commanded next before it. Or which is more probable, it may ſtand alone by it ſelf after all; and that not only the comma after Μωσῆς, but alſo the ſenſe makes probable, viz. that this whole action of Chriſt in curing the Leper, and ſending him to the prieſt, &c. was for a teſtimony unto them, that is, to the multitudes there, v. 1. (and ſuppoſed Mar. 1. 39. though not expreſs'd) that he was the ſon of God. For the Jewes themſelves confeſſe that Leproſie is the finger of God, a diſeaſe peculiarly of his ſending and removing, and that 'tis not lawful for the Phyſician (or any but the Prieſt by God appointed, and directed in his courſe) ſo much as to attempt the cure of it. Thus ſaith R. Menachem in Lev. 13. And therefore in the anſwer to John Baptiſts queſtion, whether Chriſt were the Meſſias, or no, one part of it is, that the lepers are cleanſed, that being as peculiar an act of Gods, as that the dead are raiſed, in the following words, Mat. 11. 5. So 2 Kings 5. 7. the King of Iſrael being ſent to by the King of Syria to recover Naaman of his Leproſie, He rent his clothes, and ſaid, Am I a God to kill and make alive, that this man ſends to me, to recover one of his leproſie? But if the Comma after Μωσῆς be conceived not to belong to that place, either in Matthew or Mark, then no queſtion it muſt referre to Moſes's order to the Leper of ſhewing himſelf to the prieſt, and offering a gift, for that was by the Law deſigned as a clear μαρτύριον or teſtimony, that the cure of Leproſie was a peculiar work of Gods; 'Tis true indeed there is another ſenſe, of which the words are thought capable, that his ſhewing himſelf to the Prieſt, and being by him examined and pronounced cleane, might be a ſufficient teſtimony to the man, that the cure was perfectly wrought, and no impoſture in it, or again a teſtimony to the Preiſt, either of Chriſts being the Meſſias, who had wrought that cure, or of his not oppoſing the Law, by ſending his patient to ſubmit to thoſe Ordinances which the Law in that caſe provided. But the former interpretation ſeems rather to be the importance of the place, becauſe of the ἀυτοῖς in the Plural, the multitude, to whom the teſtimony was deſign'd, and not in the Singular to him, either the Prieſt or Leper. And for the laſt, that of the Prieſt, it ſeems alſo to be reſiſted by the former part of the verſe, where the command to tell no man, will not be obeyed, if he ſo tell the Prieſt, that it be by him taken notice of that the cure was wrought by Chriſt, which it muſt be, if it were a teſtimony to him and the reſt, and would probably have brought that danger, that Chriſt ſeem'd willing to avoid. See Note b.

V. 6. Tormented] Βασανίζεσθαι doth not alwayes ſignifie torment, or ſharp pain; for here the Palſie is not ſuch, but any great diſaffection or diſeaſe of body, or commonly any puniſhment; As v. 29. and ſo c. 18. 34. Βασανισταὶ lictors, gaolers, according to that of the old Gloſſary, Βασανίζω, not only crucio, torqueo, to torment, but coerceo too, agreeable to that of impriſoning. e. Βασανίζεσθαι

V. 10. Faith] There are five acceptions of the word πίστις Faith in the New Teſtament. Firſt, the Faith, or beleiving that Chriſt was able to cure diſeaſes, &c. So here, and c. 9. 22. Acts 14. 9. and under this head the Faith of the Diſciples, by which they beleived Chriſt ſo far, as that by his delegated power they were able to doe the like miracles, Mat. 17. 20. & 21. 22. Mar. 11. 24. 1 Cor. 13. 2. and perhaps c. 12. 9. where faith as a χάρισμα, or gift of the Spirit, is joyned with the gift of healing. f. Πίστις.

Secondly, the belief of all that is revealed by God, and that is in effect the true religion, either before Chriſts birth, (and then 'tis the faith of God) Heb. 11. 3. 30, 31. and referred to v. 6. Or after, and then 'tis the faith of Chriſt, Rev. 14. 12. Or beleif of the truth, that is, that truth now revealed by Chriſt, 2 Theſſ. 2. 13. and when this is not ſo complete as it ſhould be, for want of light, then 'tis weak faith, or weakneſſe in faith Rom. 14. 1. To this many places belong, 1 Theſſ. 3. 2, 5. 2 Theſſ. 1. 3. Jam. 2. 1. Jude 3. Rom. 1. 5. Acts 6. 7. and 14. 22. So Luke 18. 8. where by reaſon of the perſecution of that faith, Chriſt foretels, that there ſhall be (at his coming to act vengeance on his enemies) very little Faith upon the earth, that is, in the land of Judæa and Samaria. So Luke 22. 32. And as this Chriſtian faith contains in it doctrines in oppoſition to the Moſaicall law, to 'tis uſed Rom. 3. 27, 28. c. 4. 15. As it comprehends Chriſts precepts, ſo 'tis Rom. 16. 16. and as promiſes, ſo 'tis uſed Gal. 3. 14. 1 Cor. 15. 14. Heb. 11. 1. And this laſt branch of it comprehendeth Hope alſo, whoſe object are thoſe Promiſes, and ſuppoſes, and includes a ſincere care of performing the condition now required under the Goſpel, without which as the promiſes belong not to any, ſo the Faith is but an imperfect and falſe Faith, which will never avail any.

Thirdly, the dictate of Conſcience, rightly perſwaded or aſſured of the lawfulneſſe of what a man doth, and that either to one particular action, Rom. 14. 22, 23. or univerſally to the Generall current of the life, Heb. 10. 22.

Fourthly, in a more limited ſenſe 'tis a Confidence in prayer, that what we ask, as we ought to doe, we ſhall receive, (Jam. 5. 15.) and as an aſſociate of that, depending on Gods proviſion for things of this life, the want of which is called ὀλιγοπιστία, littleneſſe of Faith, Matth. 6. 30. this being one promiſe of the Goſpel, that they who ask ſhall receive, and that all theſe things things (the neceſſaries of life) ſhall be added to them, that firſt ſeek the righteouſneſſe of Gods kingdome, or of the Goſpel.

Fiftly, Fidelity, and that either in God making good his promiſe to us, Rom. 3. 3. 1 Cor. 1. 9. & 10. 13. 1 Theſſ. 5. 24. Or in man toward other men, Gal. 5. 22. ſervants toward maſters, Tit. 2. 10. ſo πιστὸς the faithfull ſteward, Matth. 25. 21. Luke 14. 17. 1 Corin. 4. 7. Or of men toward God, 2 Tim. 4. 8. where keeping the faith, after fighting, and finiſhing the courſe, muſt needs be conſtancy and fidelity, (ſee Note on Jam. 1. a.) from whence the word πιστὸς moſt commonly draws its ſignification, being frequently taken not for beleiving but faithfull: ſee Heb. 2 17. & 3. 2. 1 Tim. 1. 12. Revel. 2. 10. and ſo ἄπιστος is ordinarily unfaithfull, Luke 12. 46. all one with hypocrites, Matth. 24. 51. In this acception it is that it notes ſincerity of reſolution of Chriſtian life, which God, that ſees, accepts, though for want of occaſion, or tryall, as yet it be not expreſs'd in action, and ſo approved to men: So 1 Pet. 1. 7. and Phil. 1. 29. and thus when Abraham's faith was tried, firſt by a hard command of going out of his country, then by an incredible promiſe of a Child from barren old Sarah, then again by a hard command of ſacrificing his Son, theſe three being but trials of his faith, upon which it was approved to be ſincere (and ſo he juſtifi'd) 'tis now apparent, that before theſe tryals he had faith, which then, before it was tryed, was nothing but this reſolution of Obedience, &c. or a ſincere giving himſelf up to God in præparatione animi, in purpoſe of mind, or reſolution; and if it had fail'd in any of thoſe tryals, would then have loſt its acceptance with God, but failing not, was approved. This, I conceive, is the faith which in S. James muſt, when opportunity ſerves, be ſhewed or demonſtrated by workes, James 3. 18. and if in that caſe it doe not, is a dead faith, v. 20. but ſuppoſing it ſincere, though yet not tried, then it is that which I now ſpeak of, and is then oppoſed to Works, not as thoſe note 1. the ceremonies of the Moſaicall Law, or 2ly, pertect, unſinning obedience, but as they ſignifie actuall performance. To this there is a place of a venerable ancient Writer, Cyrill of Jeruſalem, which is very appliable, who having ſaid of the Theif on the Croſſe, θέλῃ δικαιοφαγῆσαι ὁ λῃστὴς, ἀλλὰ φθάμβάνῃ ὁ θάνατος, he was willing to doe well, but death prevented him, anſwers him preſently in the perſon of Chriſt, οὐ τὸ ἔργον φθαμένω μόνον, ἀλλὰ τὴ πίστιν ἀποδέξάμαι, The work is not the only thing which I expect (or which I ſo require, that nothing elſe will ſerve the turn) but I have accepted thy faith. By which it appeares, that Faith in his acception is that faithfull reſolution then begun, though through want of life no Works followed it. Thus when Faith denotes profeſſion of faith (or of ſome duty to be performed by a Chriſtian, as 1 Tim. 5. 11.) this is either ſincere, and then accepted, as in that Theif (and is then oppoſed to Works, only as a leſſe to a greater, or imperfectius magis perfecto, the more imperfect to the more perfect, James 2. 22.) or unſincere and hypocriticall, and is then oppoſed to Works, as falſum vero, falſe to true, and ſo * faith and life are ordinarily oppoſed in the Fathers.

Beſides theſe five, the word is alſo ſometimes uſed in a looſer ſenſe, for beleiving the doctrine of God and Chriſt, howſoever acquir'd; whether from ſenſible experience, Jam. 2. 19. or from ocular demonſtration, Joh. 20. 25. or from relation, as when 'tis ſaid to come by hearing.

h. ἀνάκλισις. V. 11. Sit down] The cuſtome of ἀνάκλισις, accubitus, lying along at meat, ſo uſual among the Græcians and the Romans, though it be not mention'd in the Old Teſtament (but on the other ſide Tables were in uſe, at which they ſate, ἐκάθης, Eccluſ. 31. 13. and ſo ſaith * Philo diſtinctly of Joſeph's brethren, ἐκάθισε they ſate, μήπω τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐν τῇ συμποσιακῇ Ῥωμαίοις κατακλίσει χρωμένων, the cuſtome of lying along at meat, being not then come in among men) yet under the time of the New Teſtament (and before) it was come in among the Jewes alſo; Many places there are in the New Teſtament, where this uſe appears, and that both within dores, on beds, and abroad (in the fields, and in * Gardens) on the ground, ἐπὶ χόρτῳ χλωρῷ, Mar. 6. 39. upon the green graſſe, which is v. 40. deſcribed by ἀνάπτσον πρασιαὶ πρασιαὶ, they lay along rank by rank in ſeverall areolæ or beds. For ſo are πρασιαὶ φυλετῶν χερσὶς τετράγωνοι (ſaith the Scholiaſt on * Homer, upon ἔνθα δὲ κοσμηθ' πρασιαὶ) four-ſquare diviſions, which from thence we vulgarly call Beds in gardens, becauſe they were ſo uſed, as the κλιναὶ beds in the houſes (ſee Note on Mar. 6. 40.) The manner of this lying at meat is deſcribed by many, and ſhall no farther be recited here, then as will be uſefull to explain ſome paſſages in the Evangeliſts. The chief perſon lay at the head of the bed, (which the Evangeliſts call πρωτοκλισία lying firſt, the chief or firſt place of dignity) with his feet behind the back of the next to him, (by which advantage it was, that the woman came behind and waſh'd and kiſs'd Chriſts feet) ſo that the hinder part of the head of the ſecond lay in the boſome, or touched the breaſt of the firſt. Thence we read of John, John 13. 23. ὢν ἀνακείμενος ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ Ἰησοῦ, ἢ ἐπιπεσὼν ὅτι τὸ στῆθος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, v. 25. he lay in the boſome, and leaned on the breaſt of Jeſus, (viz. at ſupper time, Joh. 21. 20. compared with v. 1. and 4, and 12.) that is, lay next to him. An argument both of John's dignity (which I ſuppoſe the reaſon that he mentions not his name when he ſpeaks of it himſelf, v. 23.) as when Lazarus is ſaid to be in Abraham's boſome, that is, at that ſupper of the Lamb next (in dignity and height of glory) to the Father of the faithfull, Luke 16. and 2ly of Chriſts ſpecial love to him, as the cuſtome was for the moſt tenderly beloved, the Wife, &c. in ſinu virorum diſcumbere, to lie at meat in the boſome of the husband, ſaith * Cicero and Zonaras of Heliogabalus, ἐν κόλποις αὐτῶν ὡς ἐρωμένη ἐκοιμᾶτο, ſhe ſupt lying in his boſome as his beloved, and in * Juvenal,

And ſo Joh. 1. 18. when the only, that is, beloved, Son of God is deſcribed, 'tis with this mark upon him, ὁ ὢν εἰς τὸν κόλπον τοῦ πατρὸς; He that is in the boſome of the father, that is, in reference to this cuſtome, he that is next unto him, and ſo knowes moſt of his mind, as is intimated Joh. 13. 24. By all this 'tis cleer what is meant by ἀνακλιθήσονται μετ' Ἀβραὰμ &c. in this place, (which Euthymius expreſſes by ἀνακλιθήσονται ἐν τοῖς κόλποις τοῦ Ἀβραὰμ &c. lying in the boſome of Abraham &c.) viz. The Gentiles coming in to partake of that ſpirituall feaſt of the Patriarchs (who were the firſt to whom this Meſſias was promiſed, and to whoſe poſterity he was accordingly firſt raiſed up, Acts 3. 26.) when the ſons of this kingdome, that is, the Jewes themſelves, to whom theſe priviledges were deſigned and promiſed, are caſt out into an eſtate of obduration and deſtruction, as it there followes.

h. Κλαυθμὸς V. 12. Weeping] That κλαυθμὸς is deduced from κλαίω clamo, to crie, there is no doubt, and that both of them ſignifie (more then weeping or ſhedding of teares) crying out, and ejaculation, ſee Numb. 11. 10. (where 'twas that which was heard by Moſes) Job 30. 13. the voice of them that wayle, or crie out, in lamentations, Ezr. 3. 13. The noiſe of the weeping, or wailing of the people, and ſo Iſa. 65. 19. Jer. 31. 16.

As

Βρυγμὸς. As for βρυγμὸς which followes, though by that which Hesychius saith of βρύχω (ὀδῶσι πίζουσα ζόφον ἀπολεῖν, ὡς ἐν ῥίγει συμβαίνῃ) it might be thought to signify chattering of teeth, proper to a state of cold, and agreeable to the second notion of Hell, by some mention'd from Job 24. 19. Gehenna nivis, the hell of snow, as the other is Gehenna ignis, the hell of fire, yet the notion of βρύχω Act. 7. 54. for anger, or rage, which is proper to that of gnashing the teeth, and the mention of fire joyned with it, Mat. 13. 4. & 50. which cannot agree with chattering, do sufficiently justify the ordinary rendring, gnashing, or grinding of teeth, as in pain or rage is usuall.

i. Ἀδυνίας ἴλασε. V. 17. Took our infirmities] This place of Scripture cited here by the Evangelist out of Is. 53. 4. is principally fulfilled in the sufferings of Christ on the Crosse, where he bare our sins in his own body, that is, suffered the punishment of them; and 'tis so applyed 1 Pet. 2. 24. Yet here 'tis applied also to Christs healing the sick, and with a kind of Sympathy bearing their corporall Infirmities, and removing them from the patient (and both these kinds of bearing our diseases were requisite in our perfect high Priest, Heb. 5. 1. & 4. 15.) by which 'tis apparent that the same prophetick scripture may truly and fitly belong to two or more events, and beside the first literall, have a double remarkable πλήρωσις, or eminent completion.

k. Ἀντανάκλασις. V. 22. Dead] There is a figure in Rhetorick, called ἀνταναάκλασις, whereby it hath been usuall in all sorts of Authors to affect to use the same word twice in the same place, though it be oft-times in a different sense. In the holy writers there are frequent examples of this. Psal 18. 26. With the froward thou wilt shew thy self froward, where frowardnesse, or peevishnesse, being a fault, and piece of stubborn, ill nature, cannot properly be affirmed of God, to whom yet those words belong (as appears by the next words, And the afflicted people thou wilt save v. 27.) The only meaning is, that those that deale frowardly or stubbornly with God, shall be punished by him, and that there expres'd (by this figure now mentioned) [thou shalt shew thy self froward] only by reason of the word froward preceding. So in the Prophet, If ye walk contrary to me, I will also walk contrary to you, where walking contrary in the first place is their obstinacy, or frowardnesse against God; in the second, Gods punishing, sending judgements on them, thus expres'd by this figure. So Jer. 33. 17. upon the mention of the word liberty follows Liberty to the sword &c. that is, destroying, quite contrary to the liberty before spoken of. So Mat. 5. 19. Whosoever shall break one of these least commandements (the iota or title mentioned before) &c. he shall be least in the kingdome of God, that is, indeed shall not be admitted at all, which by this figure is thus expres'd, in relation to what went before, He shall be the least, as, he breaks the least; without which, that would not have been the style in all likelyhood. Thus Isai. 65. 11. Ye are they that furnish the drink-offering to that number, Therefore will I number you to the sword, &c. Thus Mat. 12. 50. upon mention of his mother and brethren seeking him, which was literally true of Mary &c. Christs reply, is in another, not a literall sense, Whosoever doth the will of my father, the same is my brother, and sister and mother. So 1 Cor. 8. 2. speaking of the knowing of God, in the vulgar ordinary sense of knowing, he adds v. 3. but if any man love God, he is known of God, in another notion of knowledge for approbation, and in the same kind again, Gal. 4. 9. Now after ye have known God, or rather are known of God, and Rom. 14. 13. Let us no longer judge one another, that is, censure, separate from communion, but rather judge this, quite in another sense, as Judging signifies thinking fit and resolving, and Rev. 22. 18, 19. ἐάν τις ἐπιθῇ If any man shall adde to these things, ἐπιθήσει ὁ θεὸς, God shall adde to him the plagues &c. and so ἐάν τις ἀφαιρῇ, If any man shall take away, God shall take away his part out of the book of life. Agreeable to these is this phrase here, on mention of the dead father preceding, Let the dead bury the dead, but follow thou me, that is, (not, let the dead, but) let others do that office, interre the dead, but thou, that art a consecrated person, must do that, to which thou art consecrated, which in all probability, if it were not a proverbiall speech known among them, was yet the imitation of some other proverb as, Like to like, the living to the living, the dead to the dead &c. which are not always to be required to the literall sound of the words, wherein they are expres'd.

l. δαιμονιζόμενοι, ἐκ τῶν μνημείων. V. 28. Tombs] 'Twas usuall for the Devils to abide in tombs to confirm in men that vain perswasion of the souls of men (after Death) being turn'd into Devils (see Hieron. Magius miscellan. l. 4. c. 12.) and for divers other ends, for which the solitude of such places was advantagious to them, none using to come thither, but to bury their dead.

m. Γάδαρα. V. 30. Swine] That there were Swine among the Gadarens, contrary to the Jewish customes, will not bee strange, when 'tis remembred that Gadara is by Josephus numbred among the ἑλληνίδες πόλεις, Grecian Cities, which Pompey took away from the Jews (see Is. Causab. ad Baron. p. 219.) and that the greatest part of the inhabitants were Syrians, not Jews, by the affirmation of the same Josephus, l. 2. de Bello Judai. c. 33. See Constant. l' Empereur de legibus, p. 181.

6. That Chriſt in this ſtate of exinanition, hath authority to forgive ſins here, to men that lie under puniſhment of them, and conſequently to deliver from their bond thoſe that were deliver'd up to Satan, and ſo tormented by him. (This power given to Chriſt on earth in the commiſſion received from his Father, v. 8. to be from this time continued on the earth, and accordingly committed by Chriſt, at his departure, to the Apoſtles, Joh. 20. (and in them to their ſucceſſors) that what they forgive on earth, ſhould be forgiven in heaven, and the bonds looſed.)

37, 38. There are great ſtore of thoſe that are willing to receive inſtruction, but few to give it them aright, And therefore it is the duty of all Chriſtians that have any care of the ſoules of their brethren, to pray (according as the four ember weeks have ſince been appointed in the Church) that God will ſend (ſee note i.) orthodoxe, and skilfull labourers, for the uſe of his Church, to convert, and inſtruct thoſe that are ready for it. (This very fitly at this point of time, immediately before Chriſt proceeds to ordination of the twelve, c. 10. 1.)

37. Then ſaith he unto his diſciples,] The harveſt truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few.

38. Pray ye therefore the lord of the harveſt, that he will ſend forth labourers into his harveſt.]

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. Er.

V. 3. Within] The particle ἐν (and ἐνδὸς) is oft uſed in the ſacred writings, not for within but amongſt, ſo c. 16. 7. where their διαλογισμὸς, or diſpute was not mental but verbal, for 'tis added λέγοντες ſaying, and many the like. One eminent place there is Ex. 17. 7. εἰ Θεὸς ἐν ἡμῖν; is the Lord among us? and from thence 2 Cor. 13. 5. Do you not diſcern your ſelves, that Jeſus Chriſt ἐν ὑμῖν ἐστι; is amonſt you? Do not the many miracles of Chriſt done before you, give aſſurance, that Chriſt is among you? But yet here it may be in the other ſenſe, ſo as εἶπον ἐν ἑαυτοῖς, ſaying within themſelves, be all one with ἐνθυμήσεις their thoughts and thinking in their hearts, v. 4. ſo v. 21. ἔλεγε ἐν ἑαυτῇ is, without doubt, ſpeaking within her ſelfe.

b. Τελώνιον

V. 9. Receit of cuſtome] Τελώνιον ſignifies a Publicans ſtall, and the Syriacke read בית מכסא the houſe of the Publican, literally a tole-booth, the Engliſh tole coming from the Greek τέλος, and booth being the Hebrew בית very little varyed.

c. Τελῶναι

V. 10. Publicans] Τελῶναι Publicanes were infamous perſons among the Jews, not only becauſe they dealt, and (by neceſſity of their trade) converſed with the Gentiles (whence perhaps the ἁμαρτωλοὶ ſinners, joyn'd with them, note heathens, call'd ſinners of the Gentiles, Gal. 2. 15. and as Publicans and ſinners here, ſo we read publicans and heathens, c. 18. 17.) but alſo in reſpect of their calling, that of hiring the tributes at a price, and raiſing gain to themſelves by exaction, τελώνης ἐργασία ἀχρεῖος, the Publicans trade is filthy and ſordid, ſaith * Artemidorus, joyning with them κατήλυς, λῃστὰς, ζυγοκρυσὰς, πορδαλοκοπὰς, thieves, cheats, &c. and Theophraſtus putteth together πορνοβοσκῆσαι καὶ τελωνῆσαι, keeping whores and being publicans: and ſo that of the Poet,

Πάντες τελῶναι, πάντες εἰσὶν ἅρπαγες,

All Publicans are theives, all rapacious, or robbers, And ſo ſaith * Muſonius, that Theocritus being demanded what was the cruelleſt beaſt, anſwered, Of thoſe on the mountains, the Bear and Lion, but of thoſe in the City τελῶναι καὶ συκοφάνται, Publicans and Sycophants: and the Hebrews have a proverb, Have not a wife out of a family in which there is a publican, becauſe they are all מוכסין that is, publicans theives wicked ſinners. According to this is Zacheus's confeſſion of his former life, Lu. 19. 8.

d. Ἰδιωτισμὸς λόγου.

V. 14. Why] Among the Idioms or peculiar formes of writing obſervable in the ſacred writers this may be one, That when one thing only appeares by the context to be deſigned and meant another thing is yet delivered, as preparative to that, that by it, either by way of Compariſon or Oppoſition, &c. the one principal thing deſigned may be more ſet out. Thus Exod. 20. 9. 10. in the fourth commandement, in which the Sabbatick reſt is the only thing deſigned, that is introduced with a ſixe daies ſhalt thou labour, and do all that thou haſt to doe, which being not the matter of that Commandement, is there ſet only to prepare for the enſuing reſt, but the ſeventh day is the Sabbath &c. and muſt not be extended any farther, and is beſt interpreted by way of Compariſon, thus, As thou haſt ſix days allowed thee to labour &c. So the ſeventh muſt be looked on as a reſt to that God, which hath been ſo liberal to thee. So here the diſciples of John deſigning to ask one queſtion, why Chriſt and his diſciples faſt not, what is the reaſon of that, 'tis not to be thought, that they would ask concerning their own faſting, being well enough ſatisfied of the reaſon of that, viz. the practiſe of all pious Jews for a long time, and yet in this other queſtion firſt asked, and ſet as preparatory to the other [why doe we and the Phariſees faſt oft, and thy diſciples faſt not?] which cannot therefore be better interpreted then thus by way of Compariſon

Comparison, Why doe not thy disciples fast as well as we? So Mar 12. 10. If a woman shall put away her husband, and marry another, she commits adultery, Where it is not to be thought in the power of a Wife to put away her Husband, but only of the Husband to put away the Wife, as being superior, and having authority over her, but because it is possible for a woman, the wife of one, to yeild her selfe to be married to another, and in what case soever she doth so, she committeth adultery, that being the thing there in hand, designed to be spoken of by Christ; the former of putting away the husband is mentioned without any weight set on it, to prepare for the latter important part, and is onely set to continue the Opposition with that which had proceeded, the husbands putting away his wife, v. 11. So Eph. 4. 26. Be angry and sin not, let not the sun go down on thy wrath, where 'tis not the Apostles meaning so much as to permit anger, but that is only set down, as a preparative to the consequent [not sinning] that is, moderating that passion, and not letting it dwell upon us, which is the only thing in that place designed to be commanded us. So Ja. 1. 9. Let the brother of low degree rejoyce, or boast, that he is exalted, and, or but, the rich that he is brought low, where the matter of the discourse from v. 2. being exhortation to rejoyce in afflictions, inforced by the advantages of them v. 3, 4. and back'd with directions how to practise it, by praying to God for wisedome, v. 5. and perseverance in the faith, required to the obtaining answer to his prayers, v. 6, 7, 8. (and so still kept to the same matter of rejoycing in afflictions) it followes v. 9. Let the brother, that is, the Christian, of low degree rejoice, that he is exalted, which is not at all to the point in hand, but only as it prepares for that which followes (by way of opposition to it) but let the rich rejoyce, or boast, in his being made low, which cannot better be interpreted according to the sence than thus, As glad as a poor man would be of being made rich, so glad let the rich be of his being brought low. So Rom. 6. 17. where giving God thanks that they had received, and obeyed the Christian faith, he prepares for it with that which would not probably have been matter of his thanksgiving [God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin] were it not to introduce the only designed matter, that followes [but ye have obeyed from the heart the form of doctrine delivered to you.]

e. V. 15. Children of the bride-chamber] Those which were the speciall guests of a marriage-feast, were by custome to go and fetch the Bridegroom, and wait on him to the marriage feast, as we see the practise of it 1 Mac. 9. 37. so Mat 25. 1. the ten virgins took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom, and those that were ready at his coming, v. 10. went in with him εἰς γάμον, that is, to the marriage-feast: (for so the the word γάμος and γάμοι, which we render marriage, signifies, Mat. 22. 3. Jo. 2. 1. not a marriage, but a marriage-feast in Canah of Galilee. So there were in Homer three sorts of feasts, of which γάμος was one,

Εἰλαπίνη, ἠὲ γάμος ἐπὶ εὐ ἔρανος πάρ δ' ὅδε. Odyss. δ. 224. and Ἢ γάμῳ, ἢ ἐράνῳ, ἢ εἰλαπίνῃ πεδαλύμῃ, Odyss. λ'. 415 whereupon saith Eustathius, ἡ δὲ εἰλαπίνη, καὶ ὁ γάμος καὶ ὁ ἔρανος ἔδη εἰσὶ τῆς δαιτὸς, These three are severall species of feasts. So γάμους ποιεῖν in * Philo, so nuptias celebrare in the Civill law, the marriage festivity.) these speciall guests which attended these Nuptiall solemnities, are call'd παράνυμφοι, and πάρεδροι in * Phavorinus, and here the sons or children of the νυμφῶν, (that is, τόπος ἐν ᾧ οἱ νυμφίοι) the place, in which the Bridegroom and Bride are; These I suppose are the φίλοι νυμφίου Joh. 3. 29. the friends of the bridegroom, which, saith Phavorinus, τῷ οἰκήματι ἅμα τῇ νύμφῃ καὶ τῷ νυμφίῳ ὀχοῦνται, are carried in the same chariot with the bride and bridegroom, or else goe with them πεζῇ on foot, and of these some performed some nuptiall offices to the bridegroom, (as to be the Kings friend, 1 Kin. 4. 5. is a speciall office of neerenesse about the King.) So we find in * Julius Pollux, παλεῖται δὲ τῶν νυμφίου φίλων θυρωρὸς &c. One of the bridegrooms friends is call'd the Doorkeeper. Of these it is here said, that as long as the bridegroom is with them, that is, as long as the marriage-feast is celebrating (parallel to which is the time of Christs abode on this earth, marrying himself to his Spouse, this Church of his) It is not imaginable that they should mourn or fast, but when this marriage-feast was turned into a funerall obsequy, then should they fast in those daies. See more in Note on Joh. 3. 29. b.

V. 17. Bottles] The use of ἀσκοὶ skins for the keeping f. or carrying of wines, is ordinary in authors, Ἀσκῷ ἐν ἀιγείῳ in Homer, in a goats skin, Odyss. ζ. 78. see Casaubon on Athenæus. So in Spaine the wine is carried in borachoes, bags made of hog-skins, and the whole skin of a hog made up close to put wine in. Ασκὸς

V. 18. Rules] There was among the Jewes, the g. lesser, or the greater Sanhedrim or Consistory, Mat. 5. 22. The former consisting of 23 Judges in every City, the latter of 72 in Jerusalem. The greater Sanhedrim was made up of the chief Priests and Elders or Presbyters of the people (call'd oft the Elders of Israel) and the Scribes of the people, Jud 5. 11. (or in the Chaldee paraphrase, the Scribes of Israel) they of the lesser consistory were call'd Rulers, as here. See Note on Mar. 5. c. Ἀρχων

V. 23. Minstrels] This custome of having musicall instruments in funeralls came to the latter Jewes from the rites, and manner of the Gentiles. For though in the * Misna, Rabbi Jehuda saith, that at the funerall of the wife there should be instruments at least, besides the person which began the lamentation; yet this testimony of his is but of the latter times, such as this in this verse. And in the Old Testament there is no mention of any such custome. They were wont indeed to mourn for the dead, Ecclus. 22. 10. and to commend them, thereby to excite the living to the imitation of their virtues, or that they may lay it to heart, Eccl. 7. 2. (And so 'twas at the death of Tabitha, where the widows wayled and shewed the coats and garments, which her liberality had provided for the poor in her life-time) and many other ceremonies they used, as you may find Ezech. 24. 17. and Jer. 16. 6, 7. As 1. Tearing their flesh, 2ly Shaving their heads bald, 3ly. the Neighbours sending in good cheer, which is in Ezechiel, eating the bread of men, or (as אנשים would be better rendred) of mourners, and in Jeremy (not tearing, but) * breaking bread to the mourner, to comfort him, and, as it followes, giving the cup of consolation to drink, so saith * Josephus of Archelaus, πενθήσας ἡμέρας ἑπτὰ τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὸ ὁπλάδιον ἑστίασιν πολυτελῆ τῷ πλήθει παρασχών, he mourned seven daies for his father, and made a sumptuous funerall-feast for the multitude, and he addes that this custome among the Jewes was the impoverishing of many, and that upon a kind of necessity; for if any man omitted it he was accounted no pious man. So the meat of mourners, Hos. 9. 4. and πένθιμον νεκρῷ, the funerall feast, in the Epistle of Jeremy, v. 32. and to that perhaps belong the θέματα βρωμάτων παρακείμενα τάφῳ, the messes of meat set on the sepulchre, Ecclus. 30. 18. But all this while no mention of instruments of musick in funeralls, among the ancient Jewes of the old Testament: But on the other side the use of musick in lamentation is mention'd among the ἄκαιρα, unseasonable things, Ecclus. 22. 6. Songs of lamentation they had. Jer. 9. 17. Amos 6. 15. Jer. 34. 5. Jer. 22. 18. but these were perform'd only by the Voice, not by Instruments, saith * Schickard. This custome of Instruments in funeralls was heathen, and came in but late among the Jewes, Among the heathen there is frequent mention of it, both among the Romans, under the ſtyle of † Sicinnium, and in Apuleius, monumentarii choraulæ, and among the Grecians under that of τυμβάυλοι, and in Ariſtot. l. 5. *de gen. As for (that which here follows the mention of minſtrels) the company keeping a ſtirre, That belongs to the γόοι and ὀδυρμοὶ the wailing of the reſt of the company, and may be explained by an expreſſion in Homer, where after θρηνῶν ἐξάρχους, the beginners of lamentations, followes

——ὀπὴ ᾗ τενάχοντο γυναῖκες,

the women or the company ſtoodabout wayling. The* Muſicians beginning, and all that were preſent following in the θρηνωδία, which † Lucian calls τὸν περὶ τ᾽ ἀυλὸν τερετισμὸν, the beating of their breaſts to the muſicall inſtrument. And that this was the cuſtome about Chriſts time is clear by * Joſephus, who ſpeaking of the taking of Joppe by Veſpaſian, ſaith that the Jewes mourned for it thirty daies, and adds πλείους μισθῶσε τοὺ ἀυλητὰς οἳ θρήνων ἐξῆρχον αὐτοῖς, they hired Muſicians, who began the lamentations to them. This following in the lamentation (which was done by the Voice only) is expreſs'd by ἔκλαυσαν καὶ ἐκόψαντο, Lu. 8. 52. crying and wayling, and by that you will underſtand the meaning of that Proverbiall ſpeech, Mat. 11. 18. ἐθρηνήσαμεν καὶ οὐκ ἐκόψασθε we have begun the lamentation to you, and you have not followed it by wayling, but ſo as referr'd not to the heathen or latter Jewiſh cuſtome, where there was uſe of Inſtruments, but to the pure ancient Jewiſh cuſtome, where, as was forementiond the lamentation was not begun with muſicall Inſtruments, but only Voices of old women, which in a * ſad modulation ſtrove to extort lamentation from thoſe that were preſent. Which cuſtome, it ſeems, the children in the ſtreets were wont to act or imitate. Thus much for the uſe of this cuſtome in the New Teſtament.

i. Ἐκβάλλειν

V. 25. Put forth] The word ἐκβάλλειν which in ordinary Greek authors, and many times in the New Teſtament, ſignifies to caſt out by violence, doth ſeverall times alſo, in the New Teſtament, ſignifie in a ſofter ſenſe, only to ſend or bring out. So not only in this verſe, and the places parallel to it, in the other Goſpels, but in this chap. v. 38 ὅπως ἐκβάλλῃ ἐργάτας, that is, ἐκπέμπῃ not caſt, but ſend forth labourers, ſo c. 12. 20 ἕως ἂν ἐκβάλῃ τὸν κρίσιν, untill he ſend forth judgment, and v. 35. ἐκβάλλει ἀγαθὰ καὶ πονηρὰ, ſends or brings forth good and evil things, and c. 13. 52. ὅστις ἐκβάλλει ἐκ τοῦ θησαυροῦ, whoſoever brings forth out of his treaſure. So Lu. 10. 35. ἐκβαλὼν δύο δηνάρια, he took out two pence, and Joh. 10. 4. ὅταν τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα ἐκβάλῃ, when he brings out his ſheep, for it is added immediately, he goes before them. Thus נפק ſignifies in Syriack, both to goe out, and to be caſt out, and Mat. 8. 12 where the Greek reads [ἐκβληθήσονται] ſhall be caſt out] the Syriack hath נפקין which is ordinarily rendred exibunt, ſhall goe out, and agreeably to this promiſcuous uſe of thoſe words, we may obſerve Rev. 14. that πέμπειν to ſend v. 15. is βάλλειν to caſt v. 16. in the ſame matter. See chap. 12. 20

k. Ἐμβριμώμενος

V. 30. Charged them] The word ἐμβριμῶσθαι that is here uſed, is rendred by Phavorinus ἐπιτιμῆσαι, κελεῦσαι, προστάξαι μετ᾽ ἐξουσίας to charge, to command, to appoint with authority, and Ἐμβριμώμενος· μετ᾽ ὀργῆς καλῶν commanding with auſterity, threatning, ſpeaking angrily, and Heſychius, μετ᾽ ἀπειλῆς ἐπιτάσσων, commanding, or charging with a threat. Thus again in Phavorinus, Ἐμβρίμησις ἡ ψυχῆς λογικῆς τὸ θυμικὸν μέρος ἐνέργεια, 'tis an act of the iraſcible part of the reaſonable ſoule, that is, a Rationall earneſtneſſe, or vehemence, not a paſſionate, and ſo 'tis Mar. 1. 43.

l. Διδάσκειν

V. 35. Teaching] It was the manner among the Jewes for divers men to contribute their talents to the expoſition of the leſſon which was read. This ordinarily belong'd to the ſons of the Prophets, who were brought up in learning the Law, and at thirty years old might be made Doctors (at which time, being then of Doctors ſtanding, ſaith Irenæus, Chriſt began to preach, and not before; and proportionably Presbyters were not made in the ancient Church till that age) and continued in that notion, or the other of Scribes, till they obtain'd the Spirit of Prophecy at Gods hands, till which time they did ordinarily expound Scriptures, though not by Revelation. Anſwerable to which was that cuſtome or practiſe among Chriſtians mention'd 1 Cor. 14. 29. And thus might Chriſt, without pretenſion to any extraordinary power or authority, expound in their Synagoues, which, being the Doctors work, is here call'd Teaching, and differs (in the Chriſtian uſe of the word in the New Teſtament) from κηρυσσὼν preaching (which followes) and εὐαγγελίζων publiſhing, or preaching, the Goſpel, and μαθητεύειν parallel with it (as appeares by comparing Mat. 28. 19. with Mar. 16. 15.) gathering of Diſciples, in other places. All theſe being the publiſhing ſomewhat to thoſe, to whom 'twas Newes (as here the Goſpel of the kingdome, that is, the doctrine of Chriſtianity) the other (διδάσκειν) inſtructing congregations, that already profeſs'd that doctrine, which is therefore by the Doctor onely farther explain'd to them. And ſo Act. 5. 42. where you have διδάσκοντες and εὐαγγελιζόμενοι, teaching and preaching, the firſt referrs to the ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ in the Temple, the 2d to the κατ᾽ οἶκον in ſomewhat more private places (ſee Note on Act. 1. c.) the firſt to thoſe that were inſtructed in the doctrine of Chriſtianity already; the ſecond to thoſe that had not already received it, and ſo Act. 15. 35. In proportion to which was that difference in the Chriſtian Church betwixt the Evangeliſt, and Doctor, or Teacher, the firſt telling them the good newes, and planting the Goſpel, the other watering or inſtructing them farther in it, and ſo the Word and Doctrine are different, 1 Tim. 5. 17. the firſt without the Church to unbeleivers, 2 Cor. 5. 19. Mat. 13. 19. Mar. 4. 14. c. 2. 2. Act. 4. 4. and 6. 2. 1 Pet. 2. 8. the ſecond in it, or to thoſe that were already converted to the Faith.

m. Σκύλλομαι

V. 36. Fainted] The Greek copies doe vary in this place, ſome reading it ἐσκυλμένοι, ſo the ancient Greek and Latine MS. and that in Magdalen College in Oxford, and ſo both Chryſoſtome, and many very ancient Copies have it, and then it would be rendred [toſs'd.] So the old Gloſſary σκύλλομαι, jactor, or elſe [wearied] σκύλλω fatigo, ſaith the ſame, and ſo the Greek and Latine MS. fatigati: ſo from Herodian H. Stephanus concludes in his Preface to Herodian. And ſo 'tis ſurely uſed in that author, l. 4. σὺν ἱππεῦσιν ὀλίγοις (ἵνα μὴ πάντα ἡ στρατὸν σκύλῃ) τὴν ὁδοιποιείαν ἐποιεῖτο, he took his voyage with a few horſemen, that he might not tire the whole army, and lib 7. σκύλας δὲ καὶ ὑβρίσας, after he had tired them with long journeys and abuſed them. And ſo [a] St. Chryſoſtome οὐκ ἂν ἔσκυλά σε τὴν ἀλαβείαν, I would not have wearied you with ſo long a voyage. So [b] σκυλῆναι ἕως ἡμῶν to take ſo wearifome a journey as it muſt coſt thee to come to us: In all which it denotes the laſſitude that comes from travell. Or again, troubled vexed, moleſted, as it is Mar. 5. 35. why troubleſt or moleſteſt thou the maſter? Thus in * St. Chryſoſtome πολύσκυλτος is πολύπον& πολυμέριμν& πολυμέριμνος full of labour and care; And in the ‖ap. Euseb. l. 4. c. 15. Epistle of the Church of Smyrna ἀσκύλτως is used for πόνως, ἀκόπως ῥᾳδίως easily, without trouble or labour. And then ἐῤῥιμμένοι joyned with it, will agree 'Ριπτέω. with it very well, for that signifies jactati, tost; and so ῥιπτασμοὶ among the Physicians, are the tossings of the sick and tumblings on their beds. But our ordinary 'Εκλύεσθαι. reading is ἐκλελυμένοι, which signifies loosed one from another, dissolved, not keeping together in companies; so saith Hesychius, ἐκλελυμένον, and after ἐκλελισμένος, (it should sure be ἐκλελυμένος in each place) ἐξεστραμμένος, turn'd out of the way, gone astray, which is the thing here proper to sheep wanting a shepherd, and is the notation of διεσκεδασαν dispersion or disbanding, Act. 5. 36. 'Tis true the word doth sometimes note a dissolution of spirits, (whether through fasting or going too much) a fainting, (as when 'tis joyned with κάμνειν, Heb. 12. 3. and Gal. 6. 9.) 2 Sam. 17. 29. ὁ λαὸς πεινῶν καὶ ἐκλελυμένος &c. The people is hungry and weary, or faint and thirsty in the wilderness. And so it may signifie c. 15. 32. I will not send them away fasting, μήποτε ἐκλυθῶσιν, lest they faint by the way. But the similitude of the sheep without a shepherd, inclines to the former notion of ἐκλυόμενοι, dissolved, straying one from another, if that be the right reading of it.

use at present; as on occasion he should send them out to any city, and after his death, by going and preaching the Gospel over all the cities of Judæa, against which time he now gave them command, saying, (when you goe about that work,) Preach the Gospel first to the Jewes strictly taken, the cities of the seed of Abraham through all Judæa, and till you have first preached through all their region (see Act. 13. 46.) goe not to any of the cities that border upon Galilee, nor to Samaria, nor to any other city from them. See note on c. 4. e.

7. And as ye goe preach, saying, [The kingdome of heaven is at hand.]

7. A remarkable visitation from heaven approacheth, as of notable punishments upon the unreformed, so of deliverance and protection to the penitent among you that shall timely receive the Faith of Christ.

8. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give.]

8. And wherever ye come make use of the power which I now give you, with the same frankness and liberality that is used toward you, work all manner of healing merciful miracles wheresoever ye come, to all that beg them from you.

9. Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brasse in your [e] purses.]

10. Nor of victuals, nor cloaths to carry with you, nor of any thing for your defence by the way. For taking so much pains for the benefit of others, ye may very reasonably expect to be entertained for all necessaries by them who profit by you.

11. And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, enquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence.

11. Whensoever therefore you come into a town or village, inquire what pious person there is dwelling there, and there fasten your station, and eat and drink what they set before you, Lu. 10. 7. and goe not from that house to any other while you stay in the town.

12. And when ye come into an house, [salute it.]

12. Say, Peace (that is, all kind of prosperity) be to this house.

13. And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it; but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you.]

13. And if those of the house be qualified to receive it, your blessing shall rest upon it, but if not, your blessing shall return upon you, and they shall receive no advantage (but the contrary) by your coming among them on a design of so much charity.

14. And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, [when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.]

14. Depart from them, and use that expression of shaking off the dust from your feet, as a testimony to them, that in their rejecting, or not receiving of you, they have rejected the only remaining means of their salvation, and as a testimony against them that will one day be brought to give in a sad evidence, the dust shaken off from your feet, (as it signifies that you have been there, and thus been fain to depart from them) will fall very heavy upon them.

15. Verily I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodome and Gomorrha in the day of judgment, then for that city.]

15 I assure you, the punishment or destruction that will light upon that city shall be such, that the destruction of Sodome shall appear to have been more tolerable then that. See note on c. 3. c.

16. And therefore though ye may be allowed to be as prudent and wary as may be to preſerve your ſelves, becauſe they among whom you goe are ravenous as wolves, yet ye muſt moſt ſtrictly preſerve your mildneſſe and meekneſſe.

|| Mild, meek wrathleſſe,

17. Your greateſt danger will be from the Men, as they are called 1 Pet. 2. 4. thoſe brought before them, who if your offences be not conceived capitall, ſhall ſcourge you (according to Deut. 25. 2.) in their aſſemblies.

18. But if they deſire to have you puniſht capitally, they will remove you from thence to the Roman governours, requiring you to be put to death (as 'twas with Chriſt Joh. 18. 30.) And this carrying you from the Jewiſh to the Heathen, from one Tribunal to another, will be a means to proclaim and teſtifie the Goſpel to Gentiles, as well as Jewes.

18. And ye ſhall be brought before governours and kings for my ſake, for a teſtimony * againſt them, and the Gentiles.]

* to them, αὐτοῖς.

19, 20. Make no proviſion beforehand what anſwers ye ſhall give, ye ſhall at the time be directed what anſwers to make. And how ſuſpicious ſoever ye may be of your own abilities, yet this need not trouble you, for God will enable you to ſpeak that which is moſt fit and proper to be ſpoken by you, and ſure they that have God to enable and direct them, need not fear they ſhall want anſwers.

19. But when they deliver you up, [take no thought how or what ye ſhall ſpeak, for it ſhall be given you in that ſame hour what ye ſhall ſpeak,

20. For it is not ye that ſpeak, but the Spirit of your Father, that ſpeaketh in you.]

21. And one Chriſtian (at leaſt ſuch as pretend to be ſo) ſhall accuſe and deliver up another to the perſecutors, and forgetting all natural affection, the neareſt kindred ſhall miſchief one another, and cauſe them to be put to death. See c. 24. 9, 10. & 2 Tim. 3. 3, 4.

21. And the brother ſhall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child, and the children ſhall riſe up againſt their parents, and cauſe them to be put to death.

22. And the Jews, whereſoever you come, ſhall perſecute you for preaching of Chriſt; but there is a fatall day approaching for theſe Jewes, and they that in deſpight of all theſe perſecutions, v. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22. ſhall ſtick faſt to their Chriſtian profeſſion, they ſhall, beſide their crown in another world, have a remarkable deliverance here out of that deſtruction, which univerſally lighteth upon all others.

22. And ye ſhall be hated of all men for my names ſake; but he that [h] endureth to the end ſhall * be ſaved.]

23. But [when they perſecute you in this city, flee ye into another: For verily I ſay unto you, You ſhall not have gone over the cities of Iſrael, till the ſon of man be come.]

24. The diſciple is [i] not above his maſter, nor the ſervant above his Lord.]

24. For you to expect this ill uſage among men, ye may judge by what ye ſee already, and ſhall more largely hereafter diſcern to befall me, The diſciple cannot in reaſon expect to be better uſed then his maſter, nor the ſervant then his Lord.

25. The moſt that a diſciple or ſervant can aſpire to, is to come to his maſters perfection, Lu. 6. 40. And if they have called me Belzebub, how much reaſon have you to expect, that they ſhall deal with you, as with the wicked'ſt Apoſtates in the world, revile you proportionably, in your places and orders?

25. It is enough for the diſciple that he be as his maſter, and the ſervant as his Lord: If they have called the maſter of the houſe Belzebub, how much more ſhall they call them of his houſhold?]

26. Be ye therefore courageous, not terrified by any thing that can befall you, this fear or foreſight of the danger muſt not make you conceal any thing that I have taught you. See Mar. 4. 22.

26. Fear them not therefore; for there is nothing covered that ſhall not be revealed, and hidden that ſhall not be known.]

27. And therefore what I ſay now in parables to you, doe ye courageouſly publiſh to all, and what I more privately impart to you as my diſciples, and not to the multitudes, c. 5. 1. doe you ſtand on the top of the houſes, and proclaim from the battlements to the people in the ſtreets, as publickly as ye can.

27. What I tell you in darkneſſe, that ſpeak ye in light: and what ye hear in the [k] eare, that preach ye upon the houſe tops.]

k.

28. And never be afraid of any man, armed with the moſt power or malice, for the utmoſt he can doe, is to kill your bodies, but your ſouls he cannot touch. And what an improvidence would it be in you, if to eſcape thoſe terrors ye ſhould neglect your duty, and ſo incurre that farre greater danger from God, who hath imployed you, whoſe puniſhments are farre more terrible, caſting unprofitable ſervants bodies and ſouls into eternal miſery and torment.

28. And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the ſoul; but rather fear him which is able to deſtroy both ſoul and body in hell.]

29. Beſides conſider, that all the power of men whom ye can fear, is reſtrained and bounded by God, on whoſe meſſages you goe, if he ſee it moſt for his glory and your good to permit them to kill you, what reaſon can you have to be afraid of death, and if he ſee it not fit thus to permit, be confident they ſhall never be able to touch you. 'T is not all the malice of men that can extend farther then Gods providence ſees fit to permit and order, even in the leaſt matters.

29. Are not two ſparrows ſold for a [l] farthing? and one of them ſhall not fall to the ground without your father.]

l.

30. God hath the knowledge and care and over-ruling of all the leaſt things that belong to you, or ſhall befall you.

30. But the very hairs of your head are all numbred.]

31. This is full ground of all confidence and courage to you, your lives are dearly valued by God, and will not by him be negligently or prodigally waſted.

31. Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value then many ſparrows.]

32. ſhall courageouſly preach my doctrine, when the preaching of it is perſecuted, and when any particular duty taught by me, and required by me to be performed by all Chriſtians, is ſo oppoſed by the world, that the practiſing it then may bring the utmoſt hazard upon him, ſhall then conſtantly adhere to that precept, and ſo confeſſe and honour me, how dear ſoever it coſt him, I will be ſure to own, and honour, and ſtick to him, declare thoſe performances of his to his honour, before my Father in heaven, from whom he ſhall have the acclamation and reward of a good ſervant.

32. Whoſoever therefore [ſhall confeſſe me before men, him will I confeſſe alſo] before my Father which is in heaven.

33. renounce the faith of Chriſt, or obedience to him in time of danger, he muſt expect to be renounced by me.

33. But whoſoever [ſhall deny me before men, him will I alſo deny] before my Father which is in heaven.

34. Think

34. Think not that I am come to ſend peace on earth; I came not to ſend peace but a ſword.] 34. Doe not deceive your ſelves with an imagination, as if the effect or deſign of my coming into the world, were to ſecure unto the Chriſtian profeſſion a perpetual enjoyment of worldly quiet and proſperity upon earth, when all the malice of wicked men and devils are ſet againſt it, but rather reckon beforehand of perſecution as your portion, and expect that your perſeverance and conſtancy in this profeſſion may and very often will bring great outward calamities upon you for a ſeaſon, even unto the killing of ſome of you.

35. For I am come to ſet a man at variance againſt his father, and the daughter againſt her mother, and the daughter-in-law againſt her mother-in-law,] 35. The farre more generall effect of my doctrine will be, (or upon the publiſhing my doctrine will enſue) all manner of contention, quarrels and variance betwixt the deareſt and neareſt friends, either about acknowledging the truth of it, or adhering to it in time of danger.

36. And a mans foes ſhall be they of his own houſhold.] 36. And the nearer men are to others in kindred, &c. the more bitter will their hatred be againſt them (as againſt blaſphemers, &c.) upon their receiving my doctrine, eſpecially when it comes to be perſecuted.

37. He that loveth father or mother more then me, is not worthy of me, and he that loveth ſon or daughter more then me, is not worthy of me.] 37. And he that preferres the advantages which he can and is like to receive from his parents, or any that are deareſt to him, before thoſe he expects from me, or that values their kindneſſe or good opinion more then mine, is no fit perſon for my ſervice, no way qualified to be a diſciple for me, for it is certain all ſuch worldly intereſts will ever be ſoliciting againſt me.

38. And he that taketh not his croſſe and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.] 38. Nay I muſt plainly tell you, that he that doth not provide for the utmoſt that can come, that is not content to ſuffer death it ſelf (and therein to doe what I doe before him) rather then doe any thing contrary to Chriſtian duty, is not competently qualified to be a diſciple of mine.

39. He that findeth his life ſhall loſe it, and he that loſeth his life for my ſake ſhall find it. 39. This comfort mean while ye have, that as he that uſeth any way of compliance with the perſecutors, and ſo eſcapes their malice, and ſaves his life, ſhall gain little by this, but be involved in the deſtruction which awaits them, ſo on the other ſide he that ſhall hazard the utmoſt, that he may ſtick cloſe to me, ſhall be likely to fare beſt even in this world. For thus I foretell you it will be, ſome to comply with the perſecuting Jewes, and to eſcape their perſecutions will renounce Chriſtianity, and feign themſelves zealous Jewes, and ſo when the deſtruction falls upon the Jewes, as it certainly ſhall moſt heavily, they ſhall be involv'd in that deſtruction, and that is all they ſhall get by that compliance, and puſillanimity: Whereas at the ſame time they that comply not, and ſo venture all that the Jewes malice can doe againſt them, ſhall by the deſtruction of their perſecutors be reſcued from that danger, and live to ſee a peaceable profeſſion of Chriſtianity, or if they doe not, have the loſſe of a ſhort temporary life rewarded with an eternal.

40. He that receiveth you, receiveth me, and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me. 40. And therefore both to arme you againſt this great error and to ſatisfie one objection more which will be apt to riſe in your hearts, (viz. that if Chriſtian doctrine will be ſo perſecuted, you have reaſon to expect that it will be look'd on ſtrangely by all others, and that no body will dare to receive you into their houſes) I now tell you, that how great ſoever your perſecutions are, and how dangerous a thing ſoever to profeſſe to be a follower of Chriſt, yet ſhall no man have reaſon to fear the entertaining of you, for the ſame protection that waits over you, v. 39. and the ſame reward that attends you, v. 32. ſhall alſo await thoſe that are thus kind, as to receive you, It ſhall be as if they had entertained not only Angels but Chriſt, and God himſelf, they ſhall be farre the ſafer, not in more danger for ſuch gueſts, according to that ſaying ſo ordinary among the Jewes, that every mans Apoſtle is as himſelf. (See note on John. 20. b.) what is done to ones proxy, is interpreted as done unto himſelf.

41. He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet, ſhall receive a prophets reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, ſhall receive a righteous mans reward. 41. He that entertaineth (ſee note on 1 Tim. 1. c.) a Prophet in the name of him that ſent him (one Prophet coming in the name of another Prophet, as Elizæus in the name of Elias, and the Apoſtles in the name of Chriſt) or in that one conſideration becauſe he is a Prophet, or he that doth ſupport and enable a prophet to doe his work that ſent him, he ſhall receive the ſame reward that he ſhould, if himſelf had been ſent to propheſy, (gain thereby an intereſt in his work, and ſo in the reward due to it) yea the ſame that he ſhould have had, if he had received him that ſent him, even Chriſt, and God which ſent Chriſt. See v. 40. And ſo likewiſe he that entertains any holy man ſent by another to plant holineſſe among men, ſhall receive the benediction, Gen. 30. 27. that attends the having a righteous man in ones houſe, or that of Lots entertaining the Angels, the meſſengers of God, or of Rahabs receiving the Spyes, that is, ſhall himſelf be delivered by that means when others are deſtroyed.

42. And whoſoever ſhall give to drink to one of theſe little ones, a cup of cold water only, [in the name of a diſciple,] verily I ſay unto you he ſhall in no wiſe loſe his reward. 42. In this notion, becauſe he is a diſciple of Chriſt, (as Mar. 9. 41. in my name becauſe you are Chriſts.)

a. Ἐκβάλλειν σημαίνει, διδασκαλικὸν ῥῆμα.

V. 1. Caſt them out] The Devils poſſeſſing men in thoſe dayes, which was much more ordinary before the coming of Chriſt, and about that time, then it hath been ſince (Chriſt having much retrench'd and reſtrain'd Satans power) had generally corporeal diſcernible effects attending it, diſeaſes of all kinds, Epilepſies, &c. And agreeably thereto, the Apoſtles delivering men up to Satan, is ſaid to be εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς to the deſtruction of the fleſh. And therefore before any ſuch diſeaſe could be cured, the Devil muſt be caſt out. And accordingly here the ſame power is given to the Diſciples, to caſt out Devils, and to heal diſeaſes.

b. Πέτρα.

V. 2. Peter] His name was Simon, but is now Joh. 1. 43. alter'd by Chriſt into כֵּיפָא which in Syriack ſignifies (as it is rendred in Greek) πέτρα a ſtone. Πέτρα, ſaxum, cautes, ſilex, ſaith the old Gloſſary, it ſignifies a ſtone, or rock, or flint, but in this place no more then a foundation-ſtone (for ſuch the Apoſtles were, Epheſ. 2. 20. Rev. 21. 14.) as that is laid upon the corner ſtone, Jeſus Chriſt. And upon that and other the like (the reſt of the Apoſtles ſtyled twelve foundations, Rev. 21.) all beleivers, as living ſtones, are built, 1 Pet. 2. 5. This Greek word πέτρα in the Feminine is exactly all one with πέτρος in the Maſculine, as may appear not only by Mat. 16. 18. where that which is in the Greek thou art πέτρος, and upon this πέτρᾳ, &c. is in the Syriack, thou art Kipha, and upon this Kipha, &c. but alſo by other good authors in the Attick Dialect, particularly Homer, who four times uſeth πέτρος for a ſtone, or petra. Ἰλ. ϑ. 'tis taken for a great ſtone, μέγα ἔργον, ſuch a weight as two ordinary men could not have carried, and yet is taken up in Æneas's hand (χερμάδιον) to throw at Achilles. In two other places, Ἰλ. ή. 'tis μυλοειδὴς πέτρῳ not μυλίᾳ a mill-ſtone, for it was ſuch as one flung at another, but from the figure & weight of it, (that it was προγγίλῳ) only a very great one again, πολὺ μέϊζονα λᾶαν, not ſimply an huge ſtone, an immoveable rock, &c. but comparatively very big for that uſe of throwing. In the fourth place, Ἰλ. φ'. it is a ſtone which he could, and did take in one hand, ἑπέρηφι, ſaith he. So Rom. 9. 33. πέϛα and λίθῳ, rock and ſtone, are as perfectly all one as φέϱσκομμα and σκάνδαλον, ſtumbling and offence, and both diſtinctly to be rendred not rock, but ſtone, ſuch as men are apt to ſtumble at. And ſo more clearly, 1 Pet. 2. 7. where the ſtumbling ſtone (πέϛα σκανδάλε) is made uſe of in the building, as a corner-ſtone. So Mat. 27. 51. the πέϛαι which are rent in ſunder are the ſtones of the Temple. (the ſeveral parts of which are there enumerated, the veyle, the ground, the ſtones, the timber, and the bodies of the interr'd.) And therefore for any concluſion from the Critical notation of the word πέϛα here, that it ſhould ſignifie a rock, and not a ſtone, I ſuppoſe no ground can be fetch'd from hence; πέτϱα and πέτϱῳ being in the Grammar notion abſolutely the ſame, and both of them ſet ſometimes to ſignifie ſuch a ſtone, as is made uſe of in a building, and is joyn'd it ſelf to the corner-ſtone, as here to Chriſt Jeſus, thereby helping to ſupport the ſuperſtructure, which is raiſed on it, as may appear both by the circumſtances of the context, Mat. 16. (where in reference to this name of his, Chriſt ſaith he will build his Church ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ πέτϱᾳ upon this ſtone) and by Eph. 2. 20. where the Apoſtles are look'd on, as this foundation of the building (the Church) and Rev. 21. 14. as twelve foundations of it. 'Tis true indeed that in ſome other places Πέτϱα doth ſignifie a rock, as that notes a great immoveable mine of ſtone, as c. 27. 60. where the λατομεῖν hewing or cutting the tomb in (or as S. Mark reads, out of) the πέτϱα, notes it to ſignifie a mine or rock of ſtone, in or out of which that tomb was cut out whole, or in one entire piece, and ſo πέτϱα Luke 8. 6. on which the ſeed fell, might poſſibly be an entire rock without any earth or moyſture in it; but Matthew and Mark read ἐπὶ τὰ πετϱώδη, on earth which is ſtony, on ſtony ground, not making it one entire ſtone, but which had ſtore of ſtones in it. So Mat. 7. 25. the houſe founded, and v. 24. built ἐπὶ τὴν πέτϱαν, upon a rock; Where it muſt be obſerved what place the πέτϱα hath there in the building, and 'tis clear, that it is not there (as here) any part of the foundation, but as the ground whereon the whole building (foundation and all) is layd, as in the Antitheſis, v. 26. the ſand is the ground on which the other houſe is built. The houſe builded and founded upon a rock had its corner-ſtone, and all the reſt of the foundation cemented to a rock, or naturall mine of ſtone; and that made it ſo firm, that unleſſe the cement ſhould fail (which is not there ſuppoſed) or the rock move, that houſe could not move neither; but the other being built upon the ſand, (and therefore ſaid but to be built, whereas the former is ſaid to be built and founded) could have no foundation on ſo fluid a bottome as ſand, to which nothing can be faſten'd, and that is the cauſe that it fell ſo ſoon. In theſe three places, and perhaps 1 Cor. 10. 4. πέτϱα may ſignifie a rock, and accordingly the Gloſſary renders it cautes, as well as ſaxum. But in this, and the other places (when Peters title is concern'd in it) it cannot ſignifie a rock, either as that is abſtracted from building (for this here referres to building) or as that is ſuch on which the whole building (foundation and all) is founded, as Mat. 7. for that muſt ſuppoſe Peter antecedent to Chriſt himſelf (as that rock is to the whole foundation, and ſo to the corner-ſtone it ſelf, that houſe being not only built, but founded on the rock) which is too abſurd to be aſſerted or confuted. Thus much of the word Πέτϱῳ, which thus became that Simons ordinary title, or agnomen, by which he was principally known and recorded to poſterity, Simon or Simeon being, till his coming to Chriſt, his ordinary name.

V. 4. Canaanite] Many Greek copies have Καναίτης, others Καναναῖῳ, and Καννᾶῳ The word comes not from the name of a place, as a πατϱονυμικὸν, but from קנאה and קנאות zeale, from whence is Καννᾶς Ζηλωτὴς (which with the Greek termination ῳ, is directly Καννᾶῳ) a Zelote. The Syriack hath קניא Kenonoyo, which ſeems to be the verſion of Καναναῖῳ. The matter is clear, that this Simon, Luke 6. 15. and Acts 1. 13. is called Ζηλωτὴς the Zelot: And Καννίτης and Ζηλωτὴς are as perfectly the ſame, as Cephas and Πέτϱῳ, Tabitha and Δόρκας, and the like. Of theſe Zelots ſo famous among the Jews, many mentions we have in ſacred Writ. Phinees is looked on as the firſt to whom that name was competible, for his ſlaying the uncleane paire in the very fact, which Mattathias in his dying ſpeech calls his ζηλῶσαι ζῆλον, having zeal, 1 Mac. 2. 54. And after him Elias in his apprehending the prophets of Baal, and ſlaying them 1 Kings 18. 40. which again Mattathias calls ζηλῶσαι ζῆλον νόμε, having zeal for the law, v. 58. And ſuch was this Mattathias, and his ſon Judas, &c. which without any external calling took upon them to deſtroy the profaners of the Temple, putting in their colours theſe words, מי כמוכה באלים יהוה that is, Who is like thee among the Gods, O Lord? or as others read it, באלוהי יהודה Who is like thee among the Princes of Judah? From the initiall letters whereof מכבי they ſeem to be ſtiled Maccabees, which though literally it do not, yet in effect denotes Zelotes. But Ferrarius in his Nomenclat. Syr. tranſlates the very word ζηλωτὴς, æmulator, Maccabæus, writing it with Koph which is not anſwerable to the Hebrew Caph, which others generally uſe in this word. In after times from theſe beginnings great diſtempers and flames broke out. A multitude of men under pretence of being zealous for the Law and honour of God, under the name of ζηλωταὶ Zelots, committing all the riots and bloodineſſe imaginable. See Joſephus ἁλώσ. l. 4. c. 11. where he ſaith of them, that they killed many of the chief men of the nation, and ſtill when they did ſo, boaſted of themſelves ὡς ἐυεργέτας καὶ σωτῆϱας τῆ πόλεως γενημένες, that they were become the benefactors and Saviours of the people. Whoſe inſolence meeting with the timidity and baſeneſſe of the peoples minds, advanced ſo farre, ὡς ἐπ' αὐτοῖς εἶναι καὶ τὰς χειροτονίας τῶν ἀϱχιεϱέων, that they took upon them to chuſe and ordain the high Prieſts, contemning the rules of birth by which thoſe were to ſucceed, and conſtituting ignoble obſcure men in thoſe places, that by that means they might have abetters and partners of their villanies. Theſe, ſaith he, c. 12. impoſed this name of Zelote upon themſelves ὡς ἐπ' ἀγαθοῖς ἐπιτηδεύμασιν, as if their undertakings were good and honourable, and not (as indeed they were) ζηλώσαντες τὰ κάκιστα τῶν ἔϱγων, καὶ ὑπεϱβαλλόμενοι, emulous of the worſt deeds imaginable, and even out-ſtripping all. Of theſe (as a Sect having its original from Judas Gaulonita and Sadduchus,) Bonavent. Corn. Bertram. in the end of his Book De pol. Jud. thus ſpeaketh, Zelotarum ſecta Judæis ipſis omnibus perniciosiſſima, ut quæ Judæorum omnium excidium, totiúſque reipublicæ Judaicæ proſtrationem non modò accelerarit, ſed & eam tam miſeram & calamitoſam effecerit. The ſect of the Zelots was moſt ſadly pernicious to the Jewes themſelves, and did not only accelerate the total deſtruction of them, and the proſtration of the whole Jewiſh common-wealth, but withall made it ſo miſerable and calamitous when it came. Which ſtory of the Zelots in Joſephus agrees very well to this time, wherein Chriſt lived, and ſo there is little doubt, but that this Simon was himſelf one of this Sect, and ſo call'd by that title, Simon the Zelote.

Ib. Iſcariot] This title of his may either be taken from his country whence he came, a man of Carioth, Ἰσκαριώτης (according (according to which it is that the antient Greek and Latine MS. generally reads ἀπὸ Καρυώτου A cariota, from Carioth,) Or elſe from the Syriack, which calls a wallet or purſe Secariat, and then סכריוטא Secariota, or Iſcariota may ſignifie ὁ ἔχων τὸ γλωσσόκομον, him that hath the wallet, which was the office of this Judas.

c. ζώνη

V. 9. Purſes] The word ζώνη, that literally ſignifies a girdle, both in Greek and Latine authors, ſignifies alſo a purſe, either becauſe that was wont to be ſowed or faſten'd to the girdle, or becauſe the girdle being a looſe thing, like a ſcarfe, tyed about the middle, they uſed to wrap up their money within it; and ſo the gold and ſilver and braſſe (for ſuch were the Roman aſſes and quadrantes) in their zones, are three ſorts of coines made of thoſe three metals, the braſſe being coines of the leaſt value for the leaſt commodities, or for common uſes and exchange, as gold and ſilver for higher purpoſes; and ſo under the prohibition of all theſe is forbidden all greater or leſſer proviſion of money, to be carried out with them. Theſe they are forbidden κτήσασθαι to poſſeſſe, that is, to acquire, or any way to provide for themſelves againſt this journy; for ſo the word ſignifies to get, to purchaſe, Acts 22. 28. and not only to poſſeſſe. Κλάομαι, acquiro, ſaith the old Gloſſary, Κτησάμενος adeptus, indeptus, and accordingly in Demoſthenes 'tis ſet oppoſite to φυλάττειν, to keep, Olynth. 2. So in Muſonius, * Ὅσα κτήσασθαι δύσκολα thoſe things that are acquired with difficultie are diſtinguiſhed from φυλάξαι μὴ ῥάδια, ſuch as are hard to keep. This making proviſion of money for their journey, as they that goe on their own buſineſſe are wont to doe, is forbidden the Apoſtles, who going on Chriſts errand are to expect and confide to be provided for by him, and ſo alſo for victuals, which ſure is meant here by πήραν the ſcrip which was uſual for travellers, or any to carry victuals in. Thus 2 Kings 4. 42. that which we read eares of corn in the huſk, the Greek read παλάθας ἐν τῇ πήρᾳ αὐτοῦ, eares in his ſcrip or ſachel, thus rendring the Hebrew צקל, which ſome taking for a veſtment, rendred it there a huſk, as the garment of the corn, but ſurely not rightly; for that was ſufficiently ſaid in the eares of corn precedent. The Hebrew צקל is directly our Engliſh, ſachel, and as there the eares of corn were brought in the ſachel, and the bread (the twenty barly loaves) beſides, ſome other way, ſo Mark 6. 8. (the place parallel to this here) 'tis ſet diſtinctly, μὴ πήραν, μὴ ἄρτον, neither ſachel, nor bread, neither other kind of victuals in the ſcrip, nor ſo much as bread. The word πήρα is only thrice more in the old Teſtament, in the Apocryphal book of Judith c. 10. 5. πήραν ἐπλήρωσαν ἀλφίτων, ſhe filled the ſcrip or bag with parched corn, and c. 13. 10. πήραν τῶν βρωμάτων the ſachel of victuals; and ſo again, v. 17. And ſo in all the places it notes a portage for victuals carried out with them, not as ſome have conjectured πλωχῶν πήρα, the poor mans, or beggars ſcrip (which ſaith the proverb, ἃ πίμπλαται, is never filled, and again, πλωχῶν ἀλάδες ἀεὶ κεναὶ, the poor mens ſachels are alwayes empty) for ſure Judith with her Maid went not, like beggars, with empty ſachels, but, as it appears c. 10. 5. with rich proviſion along with them, and ſo the ἄρτον bread added to πήραν the ſachel in S. Mark enforces, the bread being certainly carried out with them, and the ſcrip to the ſame purpoſe that the bread, that is, both of them for proviſion for the way. To that of asking or begging by the way, others have with more probability applied that of the ῥάβδον ſtaffe, that follows, making that the character of a poor man or beggar. So the Germans bættel ſtab, is their begging ſtaffe, ſaith * Stuckius, (the word bætten, ſaith he, coming from the Greek αἰτεῖν, to ask or begge) and his beſt teſtimony is that of Juvenal, A tegete & baculo, to ſignifie from begging. As for that of Jacobs ſpeech of himſelf, Gen. 32. 2. with my ſtaffe I went over Jordan, (that is, alone, without any companion) and Ulyſſes in Homer returning to his country with his σκῆπτρον καὶ πήραν, his ſtaffe and ſcrip, Theſe doe not conclude for him; becauſe Jacob doth not affirm that he begg'd, but that he travailed a ſingle perſon, in oppoſition to the two bands, with which he returned: and ſo Ulyſſes is expreſs'd by the Poet, not as a mendicant, but a ſolitary perſon, in oppoſition to the greatneſſe in which he had formerly been. It is therefore more reaſonable to reſolve, that the ſtaffe is here look'd on (as our Saviour prohibits it) as an Inſtrument of defence or offence, to ſecure them from aſſaults or dangers by the way, from which God is to be truſted to defend them, without any proviſion on their part. Thus in the ſtory of Bel and the Dragon v. 26. Daniel undertakes to kill the Dragon ἄνευ μαχαίρας καὶ ῥάβδου, without ſword or ſtaffe, and Ezech. 21. 21. the Greek uſes ῥάβδον for חץ, an arrow or ſharp inſtrument ordinarily rendred βέλος a dart, and when they render מקל by it, it then goes oft for a weapon of defence, as againſt a dog, 1 Sam. 17. 43. And that it is to be taken here in this notion may probably appear by Luke 22. 36. where Chriſt referring to this direction of his for the Diſciples journey, I ſent you without purſe, ſcrip, ſhooes, he ſaith, to expreſſe the diſtreſſes that are now like to befall them, But now he that hath a purſe, let him take it, and likewiſe his ſcrip, (now permitting what he had before prohibited) and he that hath no ſword, let him buy one, in which words the ſword ſeems to be ſet down in the place of the ſtaffe, which is there omitted, and ſo concludes the uſe of the ſtaffe here to be the ſame in general, as of the ſword (viz. for defence from aſſaults) though the ſword be more advantageous for that purpoſe. One thing only I ſhall have need to adde, that the Staffe was alſo among them as among us, the companion of the way, either as an help and ſuſteiner of weak travailers (and accordingly Exod. 21. 19. περιπατήσῃ ἔξω ἐπὶ ῥάβδῳ walk abroad upon his ſtaffe, and Zach. 8. 4. where the Hebrew is משען fulcrum, a ſtaffe to lean on, or univerſally for all, when מטה is rendred by it, and when 'tis ῥάβδος ἡ ἐν χειρὶ, the ſtaffe in the hand, oft-times in the Old Teſtament. In which reſpect perhaps it is that Mar. 6. 8. where this very commiſſion is recited, they are commanded to carry nothing with them εἰ μὴ ῥάβδον, but a ſtaffe; Which places, though they appear contrary one to another, are yet thus reconcileable, that they were not like ſollicitous perſons to carry the former kind of ſtaffe, that for defence, but the walking ſtaffe they might, like ordinary travellers (and accordingly Luke 9. 3. μήτε ῥάβδους neither ſtaffes, and ſo the Plantine Edition reads it here) in like manner as in Marke they are allowed to be ſhod with ſandals (ὑποδεδεμένους σανδάλια) for the journey or travaile, and yet in Matthew they are forbid κτήσασθε ὑποδήματα to poſſeſſe ſhooes (that is, provide or carry along with them any other then thoſe ſandals, which they wore) which 'twere a piece of ſollicitude to doe. That all theſe were the ordinary viaticum for travailers (and accordingly are here forbidden by Chriſt, who means that they ſhall not need any ſuch proviſion) will appear by Maimonides in Halacha Beth Habbechira, c. 7. where ſpeaking of them that came up to Jeruſalem, and forbidding them to come into the Temple in their travelling guiſe, he expreſſeth it thus, No man may come into the mount of the Temple with a ſtaffe, or ſhooes, or with a wallet, or with money folded up in a wallet.

* Antiq. conviv. l. 2.

V. 16. Be ye] One idiome of the ſacred Writers may be here taken notice of, who by words Imperative, having the form of Precept, doe oft-times mean no more then either Prediction of what will befall, or elſe Permiſſion of what may lawfully be done by them. So here in the next the 17th verſe, προσέχετε ἀπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, take heed of the men, is no Command of caution f. Ἰδίωμα λόγου or prudential behaviour toward the Jewish Sanhedrin, nor was it so understood by the Apostles, who many times did avowedly professe Christ before them, when it brought the utmost peril upon them; and that they should be so used by them, is here foretold in the latter part of the verse, they will deliver you up to the Councels, and they will scourge you in their Synagogues, that is, ye shall be deliver'd up and scourged by them, and so that is all that is meant by προσέχετε ἀπὸ τ. a prediction that their greatest danger is from them. So Mat. 23. 32. καὶ ὑμεῖς πληρώσατε, and doe ye fill up the measure of your fathers, a Prediction what they would, no kind of Command, what they should doe. So c. 24. 16. Let them that are in Judæa flee unto the mountains, let him that is on the house top not descend, &c. and v. 20. Pray ye, that your flight be not in the winter, all in form of precept, yet none but the first of them is so much as an Admonition, (and that only of Counsell, prudentially what was best for them) all the rest are but so many forms of Predictions, of the suddain and horrible dangers that should overtake all that continued in Judæa, when that day of vengeance came. So Luke 21. 19. ἐν τῇ ὑπομονῇ ὑμῶν κτήσασθε τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν, In your patience or perseverance possesse ye your souls, or lives. Possesse ye, that is, there is no such way to keep or preserve your lives, as persevering, faithful adherence to Christ. So v. 28. When these things begin, ἀνακύψατε καὶ ἐπάρατε τὰς κεφαλὰς, look up, and lift up your heads, that is, by those signes ye may know, that the worst of your danger is then over, and your redemption draweth nigh. So Luke 22. 36. Let him that hath a purse take it, and he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one, Where sure there is no Command of arming themselves, or buying swords, (if there had, it would have been necessary to have had as many swords, as men, whereas 'tis plain v. 38. that two are said by Christ to be sufficient for the whole company: and after, when Peter drew, and smote with one of them, he was sharply reprehended for it,) but only a Prediction of the dangers they should run; &c. So 1 Cor. 7. 23. μὴ γίνεσθε δοῦλοι ἀνθρώπων, be not ye made the servants of men, which is no Precept against a Christians serving another man, but only a liberty, or Permission that he may lawfully keep, or enjoy his freedome, if he have it by birth, or donation, but not a Precept imposing a necessity on him that he must. By all which examples it may be conjectured, what weight must be laid upon the γίνεσθε φρόνιμοι ὡς ὄφεις, be ye wise, or prudent, as serpents, not that it is a Precept of the serpentine wisdome, guarding and securing themselves, for sure 'twas lawful for them, in the preaching the Gospel, voluntarily to run the utmost hazards, but either by way of Prediction, that the wolves, among whom they came, would be very ravenous and so their danger great, or else by way of Permission that (provided they keep themselves perfectly innocent) they might be as wary and prudent as they pleased.

Ἀκέραιοι. V. 16. Harmless] For the notion of the word ἀκέραιος, the Origination of it must be considered from κεραίζειν to butt, or strike, or wound with the horns; from hence, saith [a] Eustathius, comes ἀκέραιος, and consequently (saith he) it signifies ἁπλῆς καὶ περιθύμου, καὶ μή πινα κεραίζων simple and mildly disposed, and not butting or using of horns against any body. So [b] again, τὸ κεραίζειν, φθορὰν ἁπλῶς καὶ βλάβωσιν λοιὰ, παρὰ τὰ κέρατα, ὅθεν φασὶν, ὁ ἄθυμος καὶ ἀόργητος, ἀκέραιος λέγεται, ὥσπερ μηδένα κεραίζων, ὅ ἐστι βλάπτων, the word so derived signifies wrathlesse, angerlesse, as one that useth no horns, hurts no body: And this notion perfectly agrees with the nature of the Dove, which, say the Naturalists, hath no gall, is never angry, nor hurts any, and so in all reason is to be resolved the meaning of it in this place. So [c] Cæsarius μηδενὶ βεβλαμμένον καλῶς ἀνταμειβόμενοι, not retributing evil to any man, φασὶ γὰρ ἄκακον τὴν περιστερὰν, καὶ μηδ' ἔχειν χολοδόχον ὄργανον, for the Dove hath no malice in it, hurts nothing, having not the Organ of choler in it.

V. 22. Endureth to the end] To endure to the end doth here cleerly signifie a persevering constant adherence to Christ, in despight of all the persecutions that shall befall them for the name of Christ. And for an encouragement to that, is here added the promise, that this shall be the most probable course, in the event, to escape not only eternall wrath, but even present destruction here. This will appear by the context which runs thus, The Apostles are appointed to go preach first to the Jewes peculiarly, and not to any others, till they have done with them, v. 5. they are foretold what usage they shall meet with among them, scourging and killing v. 17. and as a means to escape the sharpnesse of this ill usage among them, is their flying from one city to another, v. 23. which will save or deliver them for the time, and before they shall have gone over all the cities of Israel, that fatall destruction, or coming of the son of man v. 23. shall be, and so shall supersede their farther cruelty upon them, and withall involve all those, who, to save themselves, shall deny and forsake Christ. See v. 39. and Lu. 9. 24. That this is the meaning of σωθήσεται here, as 'tis in many other places, will appear both by Mat. 24. 13. where the same words are again used in that very businesse, and by Mar. 13. 13. which is parallel to that place; And there these words but he that endureth to the end, shall escape, are attended immediately with the mention of the abomination of desolation, in stead of which S. Luke sets the encompassing of Jerusalem with armies (see Note on Mat. 24. 3.) and the advice to them, which are in Judæa, to flie to the mountains, which is a character, by which we may discern to what the escaping doth belong; And that σωθήσεται is not alwaies to be interpreted of eternall salvation, but of temporall escaping (any more then σωτηρία doth Acts 7. 25. where 'tis cleerly the deliverance of the Israelites out of Ægypt by Moses) and is directly answerable to the Hebrew reciprocall, ומלט and הנצל which Gen. 19. 19. and in other places we render escaping, will appear hereafter on occasion of the phrase [οἱ σωζόμενοι] Act. 2. 47. and Lu. 13. 23. and 1 Pet. 1. 5. and 2 Pet. 1. 3. And this verse being thus understood, will be all one with that famous prediction, of the Bird in the Capitol, ἔσται πάντα καλῶς (see Snetonius in Domit. c. 23.) spoken surely for the comfort of Christians then, in respect of their persecutions, but wrested to Trajan and Adrian, by the Historian.

h. Ὑπομείνας εἰς τέλος. Σῴζεσθαι. Σωτηρία.

V. 24. Not above] This is a Proverb, or known saying among the Hebrewes; Aben Ezra on Hos. 1. 2. sets it down in Hebrew, thus, דיי לעבד להיות כרבו It is enough, or sufficient, for the servant to be as his master, that is, he hath no reason to expect any better portion, hath all reason to be content with that. Many other such proverbiall speeches there are, falling from Christ, (as purposely making use of what was good among them, their customes, their proverbs, their formes of prayer and benediction) So that of Mat. 7. 2. In the measure you mete, it shall be measured to you again. For so in that part of the Gemara call'd Sanhedrim we find במדה שאדם מדד בה מודדים לו In the measure that a man meteth, they shall mete to him in that. See c. 19. note b. and 2 Thess. 3. b. and Rom. 2. a.

i. Παροιμίαν Ἑβραϊκήν.

V. 27. Hear in the ear] This phrase of hearing in the ear will be best explain'd by referring to the custome of the Jewes mention'd by the Rabbins, who affirm that the Masters among the Jewes were wont to have their Interpreters, who (as the ὑποφῆται of the Oracles) did receive the Dictates of the Masters, whisper'd in the eare, and then publickly propose them to all; the Masters dictating softly, but the Interpreters delivering them aloud. Of this Elias Levita speaks in his

k. Ἀπὸ τοῦ οὖς εἰς τοῦς.

Thisbi

Thisbi, on the word תרגם, and ſaith that the Interpreter is mention'd Exod. 4. 16. he ſhall be to thee as a mouth (where the Targum reads לתורגמן, the word which is among the Chaldees the title of an Interpreter) and adds that every Pſalme that is inſcribed משכיל, was received from a Maſter, and dictated by an Interpreter. So 'twas an enſigne of a Maſter, to have an Interpreter. In the Excerpta Gemaræ, tract. de Sanhed. c. 1. §. 7. Dixerunt Jehudæ interpreti Reſh Lachiſh, adſta illi in concione, adſtitit, & ſe inclinavit juxta illum, & iſte nihil ei dictavit, Judah the interpreter of Reſh Lachiſh ſtood by him in the aſſembly, and bow'd himſelf to him, and dictated he nothing to him. And in Barachoth, c. 9. Rector Univerſitatis eris, adſtabítque tibi אמורא, thou ſhalt be ruler of the Univerſity, and ſhalt have by thee an Interpreter. This Chriſt applies to himſelf and the Diſciples, making himſelf the Maſter, dictating to them the words of life, the New Covenant, which they conſequently are bound κηρύσσειν to proclaim to others, as ſo many κήρυκες, aloud, publickly, on the houſe-top, and not, for fear, keep in any part of it. As for the phraſe on the houſe-top, that is taken from the cuſtome of their flat buildings, plain on the top, with battlements about them (ſee Note b. on c. 4.) by which means it was both ordinary and very convenient, when any thing was to be proclaimed to the people, to doe it from the top of the houſe, ſtanding on the battlements. So in Hegeſippus there is a remarkable place, cited by * Euſebius, When, ſaith he, by the preaching of James the brother of the Lord, and Biſhop of Jeruſalem, many of the chief of the people beleived in Chriſt, many of the Phariſees and other ſects which beleived not, came to him and perſwaded him that he would unſeduce the people, and to that end, at the Paſſeover, when all the people came up to Jeruſalem, they intreat him thus, σῆσον ἐν ὀπὶ τὸ πτερύγιον τ ἱερῦ, ἵνα ἄνωθεν ἦς ὀπτανὴς, κ ἡ ἐυακουσὰ ζω παντὶ τῷ λαῷ, ſet thy ſelf upon the battlement of the Temple, that from above (that is, by the advantage of place, as the Latine interpreter reads it, de ſuperiore loco) thou mayeſt be conſpicuous (or, known who thou art, becauſe by the title of James the Juſt he was ſo reverenced by all the nation, and known by them generally) and thy words eaſily heard by all the people. And accordingly ἔσησαν ὀπὶ τὸ πτερύγιον τῦ ἱερῦ they ſet him upon a battlement of the Temple, in the very ſame phraſe, that is uſed of the Devil to Chriſt c. 4. 6. in order to the βάλε ζεαυτὸν κάτω, caſting himſelf down; To that the ſetting him on the top of the battlement (and not within, ſo as to lean over it) was ſure moſt proper, and ſo 'tis certain, that is the meaning of it c. 4. and by conſequence (the phraſe being to a letter the ſame) in the ſtory of James in Hegeſippus alſo where accordingly it followes, ἀναβάντες κατέβαλον δίκαιον, they went up and caſt him down (and ſo Euſebius cites it there out of Clemens, ἀπὸ τ πτερυγίς βεβλῆσθ, he was caſt down from the battlement) though it ſeems κλαβληθεὶς ὐκ ἀπέθανε, he died not with the fall. From this circumſtance of that ſtory it is moſt probably concluded, to be the cuſtome for thoſe that proclaim'd any thing from the houſe-top, to ſtand on the top of the battlements (which accordingly were of a ſufficient breadth to ſtand upon) and not ſo to ſtand within, as to ſpeak over it.

CHAP. XI.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND it came to paſſe, when Jeſus had made an end of commanding his twelve diſciples, he departed thence [to teach and to preach in their cities.] note on c. 9. 1.) in the cities whither he now removed.

1. To give inſtructions, and teach the Goſpel (ſee by Chriſt, though (Joh. 1. 34.) he had been ſufficiently convinced that Chriſt was the Meſſias, and after the teſtimonies given by him (Joh. 3. 32. 36. cannot be imagined to lie open to any doubtings, Yet to ſatisfie and confirm his diſciples, which were in danger to be thus aſſaulted, being tempted with their Maſters impriſonment and danger, hereupon he ſent two of his diſciples to know of Chriſt if indeed he were the great Meſſias or no, that when he was cut off his diſciples might not be ſhaken in their belief of Chriſt, but adhere and cleave faſt to him.

4. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Goe and ſhew John again thoſe things which ye doe hear and ſee.

4, 5. To this Jeſus anſwered by giving them the character of the Meſſias, as it lies in the Prophets of the old Teſtament, of opening the eyes of the blind, &c. (All which they now ſee verified in him) and to thoſe other parts of curing diſeaſes and raiſing the dead he added this farther branch, that the humbleſt and meaneſt perſons, thoſe of the loweſt condition, have the glad tidings of the Goſpel preach'd to them, as good a ſhare in this bleſſed meſſage as the beſt, and peculiarly they above others are affected and wrought on by the preaching of it.

6. And bleſſed is he, whoſoever ſhall not be * * offended in me.] c.

6. And for that which concerns their doubting of what before they had beleived, and that founded on John's preſent condition, Chriſt adds (over and above the words of the Prophets) Bleſſed is he who doth not forſake, or fall off from me in this time (or by occaſion) of temptation, or affliction, (ſuch as now John is in, and) ſuch as ſhall oft befall Chriſtians in this world, Chriſts office being not to deliver all men in this world out of ſuch, but to ſhew them the way to ſuffer patiently, and to conquer by ſuffering.

7. And as they departed, [Jeſus began to ſay to the multitudes concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderneſſe to ſee? a reed ſhaken with the wind?]

7. Jeſus thought fit, upon this occaſion, to give the people a right notion of John the Baptiſt, which conſequently would give them a more perfect knowledge of himſelf, Johns office being wholly ſubſervient to the revealing of Chriſt. Thus therefore he began to them, What was it that ſo many of you went out into the wilderneſſe to behold? was it a reed, ſuch as the wind playes with there in the wilderneſſe, any trifle of ſo little moment and ſo ordinary to be ſeen there? Sure your going out to him was not on ſo childiſh an errand.

8. But

8. Or was it any glorious gallant perſon in ſplendid array? ſure ſuch an one you would not have look't for in a deſert, but a court, and you know 'twas quite contrary of him, You found him in an auſtere habit and diet, and therefore you cannot now imagine that he is troubled with the confinement or danger he is in ſin, ſo that he ſhould preſently be caſt into doubts, or be changed ſo ſoon to ſo much weakneſſe of faith from ſo much ſtrength. Certainly he that lived in a wilderneſſe and obſerved that habit and diet there, is not now troubled at all that he is from Herods court caſt into priſon.

8. But what went ye out for to ſee? A man cloathed in ſoft rayment? Behold, they that wear ſoft cloathing, are in kings houſes.]

9. No, 'tis certain you went out to him, as to a prophet, and of him I muſt tell you, that he is a great Prophet, nay of a pitch beyond all the prophets that ever went before him, a direct herald, and harbinger of Chriſt.

d. 9. But what went ye out for to ſee? A prophet? yea, I ſay unto you, and [d] more then a prophet.]

10. For himſelf was prophecied of by the other Prophets, that he ſhould be the forerunner of the Meſſias, and when he came, he did accordingly, pointing at him, This is he &c. Joh. 1. 30.

c. 10. For this is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I ſend my meſſenger before [c] thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee.]

11. Of him I ſhall freely ſay, that among all the Prophets or ſpecial perſons which ſince the beginning of the world have been by God ſent to any office in his Church, John Baptiſt is abſolutely the greateſt, honour'd with more ſignall revelations, then any of the old prophets, Joh. 1. 32. ſeeing the holy Ghoſt come down upon me &c, And yet let me tell you, that an Apoſtle of mine, the meaneſt or leaſt of them, whether in reſpect of revelations (having to thoſe of his, many others ſuperadded) and the power of miracles, which John had not, Joh. 10. 41. and the holy Ghoſt viſibly deſcending on them, or whether in reſpect of office, ſent by Chriſt to teſtifie his reſurrection, to convert firſt, and then to rule the Church after me, is to be look't on, as a far greater perſon, and more honourable officer, then John Baptiſt, who is no prophet himſelf, but only the forerunner, and ſo diſciple, ſervant of a prophet.

11. Verily I ſay unto you, Among them that are born of women, there hath not riſen a greater then John the Baptiſt; notwithſtanding he that is leaſt in the kingdome of heaven, is greater then he.]

12. And yet after all this, ſo acknowledg'dly true of John, it is moſt ſadly conſiderable, how after all Johns preaching of me, and all Judæas going out to him, c. 3. 5. (and even the Phariſees and Sadduces many of them v. 7.) and their being baptized of him into the beleif of the Meſſias (firſt preached, and then pointed out by him, and teſtified, This is he) yet from that time till this, all this while to this houre, ſcarce any, but the multitude, and meaner crowd of the Jewes, come into the Goſpel, together with the Publicans, and Sinners, or Gentile men among you, who are looked on by the Jews, as thoſe, which have no right to the Meſſias, and ſo as violent perſons, invaders, intruders. The wiſe and learned among you, who could not but know him to be a prophet, and conſequently in any reaſon ſhould have given the readieſt obedience to his doctrine, and ſo according to his direction have beleived in me (as finding him ſo diſtinctly foretold by the prophets, as the forerunner of the Meſſias) doe not receive either of us. They were the men, which received not the Baptiſt, c. 21. 24, 32. whereas all beſide them (as tis there ſaid v. 25.) the multitudes, Lu. 3. 10. the publicans v. 12. the ſouldiers v. 14. were very obſervant diſciples of his; and in like manner ever ſince, the multitudes, and the publicans, from whom 'twas leaſt to be expected, they have beleived on me, but the principall men, Phariſees, and Doctors &c. they oppoſe and blaſpheme, v. 18. 19. And thus, as when a houſe is broken up by thieves, thoſe of the family are deprived, and all is parted among invaders, ſo is it now, the eminent Jewes are deprived of all their part in the Goſpel, and only the more ignorant multitude, and the publicans, &c. they divide it among them.

f. 12. And from the daies of John the Baptiſt * untill now, the kingdome of heaven [f] ſuffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.] * as yet, ἕως ἄρτι.

13. For the Law and Prophets all of them, that is, the Writers of the Old Teſtament, had a propheticall relation to the Meſſias, darkly and afarre off, deſcribed Chriſt, in types and predictions, and ſo continued to doe, till John came, but he, beyond them all, by way of indication, pointed at him, as actually preſent, whom all others foretold as future, and at a diſtance.

13. For all the prophets and the law prophecied untill John.]

14. And whether you will or will not receive him, take it how you will, This is that Elias prophecied of in Malachy, to uſher in a new ſtate, and the Meſſias the prince of it.

14. And if ye will * receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come. * receive him, this ἐξεσθαι, δεχεσθαι.

15. And the embracing of his doctrine or meſſage, is a matter of huge concernment, and they that doe not embrace it, will not excuſe themſelves from the crime and puniſhment of obſtinate wilfull blindneſſe.

15. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.]

16, 17. the chief men of this age among the Jewes, the Phariſees, &c. Their dealing with John and Chriſt is juſt the ſame, that ye have ſeen boyes, playing in the ſtreets, ſportingly complain of, telling their fellows, that they will doe nothing as they ſhould, neither follow them in their mirth, nor their ſadneſſe. For juſt ſo theſe, whatſoever kind of meſſages God ſends to them, they reſpect and obey them not, nay ſome great exceptions ſtill they have to the meſſengers, to contrary ſorts of them, contrary exceptions, firſt one exception they have to John, and then another, quite contrary, to Chriſt.

g. 16 But whereunto ſhall I liken [this generation? It is like unto s children ſitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellowes,

17. And ſaying, we have piped unto you, and ye have not dauced, we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented.]

18. If John uſe a diet more auſtere then ordinary, then they that are the wiſe men among you, Phariſees, Doctors of the Law, look on him, as a mad man, a melancholy, hypocondriacall perſon. See Joh. 7. 6.

18. For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they ſay he hath a devil.]

19. And if Chriſt come, uſing the ordinary diet of men and eating promiſcuouſly with all company, they cenſure him as a looſe perſon, and a favourer of ſuch. And ſo Chriſt and his forerunner, the Baptiſt, and in them two, the wiſedome from above, divine knowledge, or the Goſpel of Chriſt, is by this means juſtified, teſtified, approved to be that, which the Goſpel of Chriſt was foretold to be v. 5. (contrary to the wiſedome of the world,) embraced generally by none, but the meaneſt, and moſt deſpiſed, the Publicans and people, and they generally receive it.

19. The ſon of man came eating and drinking, and they ſay, Behold a man gluttonous, and a wine-bibber, a friend of Publicans and ſinners; * but wiſdom is juſtified [h] of her children.] * and ye.

20. the places of note, cities or townes, or regions, wherein he had done the greateſt miracles in moſt abundance, that after all this they did not amend their wicked lives according to his doctrine.

20. Then began he to upbraid [the cities wherein moſt of his mighty works were done, becauſe they repented not.]

21. Wo unto thee Chorazin, wo unto thee Bethſaida; for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in [Tyre and Sidon] they would have repented long agoe in ſackcloth and aſhes.

22. The judgment or puniſhment which befalls meer heathen cities, ſhall be eaſier, or leſſe, then that which expects you.

22. But I ſay unto, you [It ſhall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, then for you.]

23. And

* or, goe down, for the Gr. and Lat. MS. reads καταβήση, descends.

23. And thou Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt * be brought down to [1]hell: for if the mighty works which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodome, it would have remained untill this day.]

23. And thou Capernaum the place of my abode, which haſt been ſo honour'd, and favour'd by me, beyond all other places, and haſt received ſuch ſpiritual advantages, ſhalt be brought to deſtruction and deſolation ſuddenly, humbled as low as thou wert highly advanced; for if the miracles done in thee, on deſign to reform thee, had been done in Lots time for the reforming of Sodome, and Gomorrah, Sodome would certainly have reformed, and ſo ſhould not have been deſtroyed. i.

24. But I ſay unto you that it ſhall be more tolerable for the land of Sodome, in the day of judgment, then for thee.]

24. And therefore you in all reaſon are to expect a ſadder deſtruction and vaſtation, then that which befell Sodome, and Gomorrah.

25. At that time Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, I thank thee, O father, Lord of heaven and earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto babes.]

25. About that time it was that Jeſus upon ſome occaſion taken, probably that of v. 19. founded on the cloſe of v. 5. (his being received by the meaner, and refuſed by the higher ſort,) brake out into an affectionate expreſſion of thanks to God, that thoſe myſteries of the Goſpel, which the wiſe men of the world deſpiſed, (and were thereupon given up by God to their own wilfull blindneſſe) were yet by him revealed to the meaneſt and moſt ignorant, that is, that God had ſo diſpoſed the way to heaven, that the moſt ignorant, and moſt humble, not the moſt illuminated, and moſt proud were moſt ready to receive and embrace it.

26. Even ſo, Father, for ſo it ſeemed good in thy ſight.]

26. This is an act, ſaid he, of thy free and undeſerved mercy, O Lord, to ſome, and of thy juſt deſertion to others.

* none εἰδὼς

27. [k] All things are delivered unto me of my father, and * no man knoweth the ſon but the father: neither knoweth any man the father, ſave the ſon, and he to whomſoever the ſon will reveal him.]

27. All that come to me, and believe on me, are by my father (enlightening and ſtirring up their hearts, and uſing all powerfull means to that end) brought and delivered unto me, and none acknowledgeth me but the Father, and thoſe, who by the miracles &c. which my Father enableth me to doe, are attracted to me, As on the other ſide, none acknowledgeth the Father in that manner, as he now requires to be acknowledged, but the Son, and he that believes his preaching of him. Wherefore k.

29. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, * for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye ſhall find † reſt unto your ſoules.

29. Put off your preſent ſervitude, and exchange it for my yoke, exemplified to you by my ſelf in mine own meekneſſe and humility, and you will find a ſtrange exchange, refreſhment in ſtead of wearineſſe, which came from your former courſe.

30. For my yoke is [1] * eaſie, and my burthen is light.]

30. For my ſervice is a good, deſireable, excellent ſervice, and the commands, or tasks that I require you to perform, are very tollerable, and eaſie to be performed. l.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Ἐρχόμενος.

V. 3. He ſhould come] The Prophecyes of Chriſt as the Meſſias of the Jewes, by them expected, (and alſo of the Gentiles, though by them not ſo diſcern'd) were ſo plain in the Old Teſtament under the title of Shilo coming &c. and yet the perſon or name of him ſo unknown, that he was by them wont to be expreſs'd by ſome circumlocutions, particularly by this of ὁ ἐρχόμενος he that cometh, as it appears by the continuing that phraſe both here, and Heb. 10. 37. Mat. 21. 9. Lu. 7. 20. 13. 35. Joh. 12. 13. and Lu. 19. 38. by ἐρχόμενος βασιλεὺς the coming King (and ſo the ſtate of Chriſtianity is βασιλεία ἐρχομένη the coming kingdome, Mar. 11. 10. and in Iſ. 9. 6. μέλλων αἰὼν the age to come, in the Septuagints rendring) by which is diſtinctly meant the Meſſias entring on thoſe great offices, to which he was deſign'd and deſtin'd by God. So alſo οἰκουμένη μέλλουσα, Heb. 2. 5. the world to come, and δυνάμεις μέλλοντος αἰῶνος, Heb. 6. 5. the ſtate and power of grace, or Chriſtianity. And of this the Baptiſt here asks the queſtion; by this means to help his Diſciples to a more explicite conviction and aſſurance of the truth of it, that whatſoever befalls him they may cleave faſt to Chriſt. Μέλλουσα οἰκουμένη, κ'τ'λ.

b. Idioma λόγου. Metonymia effectus.

V. 5. The poore &c.] It is an idiome ordinary in theſe Books of the Old and New Teſtament, that Paſſive verbs (by a Metonymie of the effect) comprehend and import the reality of the effect of the paſſion, or a willing reception of the impreſſion, that is, note the Patient not onely to receive influxes from the Agent, but to be effectually chang'd by the paſſion. So Iſaiah 65. 1. I am ſought of them that asked not for me, Where 'tis cleer that ſeeking, and asking for are all one. Aske and ye ſhall have, ſeek and ye ſhall find, ſaith our Saviour, directly in the ſame ſenſe; And therefore it cannot be imagined how they that have not asked for God, he may yet be truly affirmed to be ſought by them. It remaines therefore that to be ſought muſt here be underſtood cum effectu, ſo as to have the effect of finding attend it, and ſo 'tis diſtinctly interpreted by that which follows, I am found by them which ſought me not; Where, as ſought me not is equivalent to asked not for me, ſo I am found is directly all one with I am ſought in the begining of the verſe. And accordingly Rom. 10. 20. where theſe words of the Prophet are cited, in ſtead of I am ſought of them the Apoſtle reads I was made manifeſt unto them. So ἐξέστραπται turned out of the way, Tit. 3. 11. ſignifies not only the being perſwaded, and turned, and perverted by another, but the having really received the impreſſion, being effectually wrought on and corrupted by ſeducers. So πειραζόμενος to be tempted Gal. 6. 1. is to be wrought on by temptation, or elſe the poſſibility of it would not be uſed, as an argument to inforce ſo much Chriſtian care, and meekneſſe toward him, who is overtaken in a fault. So σκανδαλίζεσθαι to be ſcandaliz'd is to be wrought on (brought into ſin, actually diſcouraged in the waies of godlineſſe) by the ſcandall laid in his way, (as in this very verſe) and ſo here εὐαγγελίζεσθαι to be Evangeliz'd is to be wrought on by the preaching of the Goſpel (not only to have it preach'd to them) which is peculiarly obſerved of the poor, humble-minded man, of whom 'tis therefore ſaid, under the embleme of the little children, that of ſuch is the kingdome of heaven; the Chriſtian Church is made up of ſuch (ſee Jam. 2. 5.) whereas the proud reſiſt, and deſpiſe, and ſtand out againſt it. The vulgar Latine have rendred agreeably to this ſenſe, Evangelizantur pauperes, the poore are Evangeliz'd. Another ſenſe there is, whereof the words are capable, thus, that the promiſes of Chriſt, and all the good-newes and beatitudes of the Goſpel pertain to the poor, humble ſoul. So Heb. 4. 2. ἐσμὲν εὐαγγελιζόμενοι ſeems to ſignifie, The promiſes of the Goſpel were offer'd to us. But this will be contain'd under the former ſenſe; for if they have the Goſpel preach'd Ῥαιδιουργίαν λόγου. Πειράζεσθαι. Σκανδαλίζεσθαι. Εὐαγγελίζεσθαι.

preach'd to them, and are effectually wrought on by it, then ſure the Goſpel pertains to them. The true and compleat ſenſe of the phraſe will thus beſt be fetch'd out, Theſe two verſes, fourth, and fifth, are Chriſts way of anſwering John, and aſſuring him that he is the Meſſias, by giving him the characteriſticall marks of the Meſſias in the Prophets, and ſhewing him how viſibly they belong to him. The places in the Prophets, on which he pitcheth, are chiefly theſe three; firſt Iſa. 29. 18, 19. where the Greek read ἀκούσονται ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ οἱ κωφοὶ . in that day the deaf ſhall hear, καὶ ὀφθαλμοὶ τυφλῶν ὄψονται, καὶ ἀγαλλιάσονται οἱ πτωχοὶ διὰ κύριον ἐν εὐφροσύνῃ, and the eyes of the blind ſhall ſee (on occaſion of which he farther adds what was then frequently done of the ſame kind) the lepers are cleanſed, and the dead are raiſed, and the poor ſhall rejoyce becauſe of the Lord with mirth. The ſecond is Iſa. 21. 1. The Lord hath anointed me εὐαγγελίσασθαι πτωχοῖς —καὶ τυφλοῖς ἀνάβλεψιν to proclaim glad tidings to the poor, and recovering of ſight to the blind. The third is Iſa. 35. 5, 6. Then the eyes of the blind ſhall be open'd, and the eares of the deaf ſhall heare, the lame ſhall leap, and the tongue of the dumb ſhall ſing. By the two former the ſenſe of εὐαγγελίζονται will be gueſs'd at, one whereof makes it the mark of the Meſſias to preach to the poor, and ſo in the rendring of this place here this Active office of Chriſt muſt be taken notice of, and then the reall Paſſive ſenſe alſo, as it belongs to us, muſt be ſuperadded to it, proportionable to the poors joyfull receiving the Goſpel, in Iſaiah. So Pſal. 68. 10, 11. Gods providing for the poor, is expreſs'd by the Lord gave his word, great was the multitude of preachers, and that referrs to the firſt part, the preaching to them. And to the ſecond, that of their receiving it, ſee Zeph. 3. 12, 13. the afflicted poor people ſhall truſt in the name of the Lord, &c. ſee alſo Zach. 11. 11. The Hebrew edition both of Munſter, and Mercer, reads עניים יאשרו the poor are made bleſſed: But 'tis probable that that is a miſreading for יבשרו they are Evangeliz'd, in either of the former ſenſes.

c. Σκάνδαλον

V. 6. Offended] The uſe of the word σκάνδαλον ſcandall in the Sacred (being ſeldome, or never found in the ancient Profane) Writers, is once for all to be obſerved. It is either Naturall (as generally in the Old Teſtament) or Metaphoricall, (as chiefly in the New) It Naturally ſignifies three things, 1. a trap, a gin, or ſnare to catch any thing: So in the Greek tranſlation of Pſal. 69. 22. the word is uſed (being joyned with two other words which ſignifie * ſnare and gin) and therefore in the place of Rom. 11. 9. where the ſame words are cited out of the Septuagints tranſlation, and not out of the Hebrew text of the Pſalme, it ſhould be rendred by Analogie, not ſtumbling block, but gin, or ſome other word belonging to this ſignification. In this ſenſe it is uſed 1 Mac. 5. 4. where it is all one with ſnare, and it is farther interpreted by, laying wait by the way to catch them treacherouſly. So again Wiſd. 14. 11. the word is uſed and explained by another word, ſignifying a trap or ſnare, the very ſame that is uſed in the Pſalmes and to the Romans. Secondly, It ſignifies any obſtacle, or hindrance laid in a mans way, by which the paſſenger is detained, or ſtopped, peculiarly a ſharp ſtake, ſuch as in time of warre men were wont to put in the fields, where their enemy ſhould follow, to wound their feet or legs in the paſſage: againſt which being ſo ordinary in warre, they anciently uſed greaves of braſſe, to defend their feet, or legs, 1 Sam. 17. 6. Thus is the word σκάνδαλον uſed, Judith 5. 1. where we render it impediments, a word ſomewhat to generall to ſignifie thoſe ſharp ſtakes, or other inſtruments to wound or gall the paſſengers, which are known by the name of gall-trappes. 3ly, The word ſignifies a ſtone, or block in the way, at which men are apt (if they be not careſull, or if they goe in the dark) to ſtumble and fall: and thereupon in the Old Teſtament it is taken for a fall, and ſo ſomtimes for ſin, the fall of the ſoule, as Judith 12. 2. in which ſenſe I conceive, 'tis uſed Judg. 8. 27. where 'tis rendred a ſnare, that is, a ſin enſnaring, or occaſioning ruine. Beſide theſe three ſignifications there is no other ſave once, Pſal. 50. 20. for ſlander, or calumny, or defamation. Now for the uſe of the word in the New Teſtament, the firſt place in which we find it is Mat. 13. 41. the Angels ſhall gather out all ſcandalls, in a ſenſe borrowed from the ſecond ſignification of a ſharp ſtake, which he who hath once met with, and been galled by it, is wont to gather up, and caſt into the fire, as there it follows the Angels for our ſakes ſhould doe, v. 24. (to which S. Paul alſo ſeems to allude 2 Cor. 11. 29. in putting ſcandalizing, and burning together) and denotes ſimply whatſoever may wound or gall us in our Chriſtian courſe, and by that means cauſe us to ſlacken or give over, or lie down in the ſervice of Chriſt. So Mat. 17. 27. Chriſt payes tribute, that he may not offend the Jewes, that is, that they might not think him a contempter of the Temple, to which the tribute was due, and ſo forſake, and not believe in him, that he might not diſcourage them from following him. So Mat. 15. 12. The Phariſees hearing a doctrine that gall'd them particularly, ἐσκανδαλίσθησαν, were offended, and forſook him, that doctrine drave them away from following him, So Mat. 18. 7. it muſt needs be that offences come, of Hereſies, and exemplary ſins. So Mat. 18. 6. He that ſhall offend one of theſe little ones, that is, he that ſhall occaſion their falling off into any ſin, or by contemning them, diſcourage them from the ſtudy of piety. So Chriſt crucified is ſaid a ſcandall to the Jewes, that is, they that followed him with the multitudes, when they ſaw him crucified, were quite diſcouraged, and fell away from him, reſolving that he was not the Meſſias: To which belongs this place here, and Lu. 7. 23. Bleſſed is he that ſhall not be offended in me, that is, ſhall not be gall'd, and diſcouraged, and ſo fall off by ſeeing the ſufferings that befall me, and await my diſciples or followers. So again Mat. 13. 57. Mar. 6. 3. it is ſaid that the conſideration of his known and mean birth occaſioned their being offended at him, that is, their deſerting and not believing on him, when the miracles which he had done inclined them ſomewhat to a valuing of him. So Joh. 6. 61. when Chriſt talks of eating the fleſh of the ſon of man, they were offended, that is, that ſpeech carnally underſtood, either that Chriſt was to die (which the eating his fleſh preſuppoſed, and they did not like to hear of, dreaming of a temporall glorious Meſſias) or that they were to turne Canibals, and eat mans fleſh, diſcouraged them from following him, at leaſt from taking him to be the Meſſias. So Gal. 5. 11. perſecution is called the ſcandall of the Croſſe, or that, upon which ſo many are diſcouraged from profeſſing the crucified Saviour, according to that in the parable of the ſower, Mat. 13. 21. Mar. 4. 17. upon the coming of perſecution preſently he is offended, that is, gall'd, and falls off, and Mat. 24. 10. on the ſame occaſion and in the ſame ſenſe. So Mat. 26. 31. Mar. 14. 27. this night (to wit of my attachment) ye ſhall all be offended becauſe of me, that is, fall back and forſake me: and ſo in S. Peters anſwer v. 23. Although all men ſhould be offended, yet will I never be offended; upon which, that which Chriſt replies (before the cock crow, that is, before morning, thou ſhalt deny me thrice) is an interpretation of the word offended, and ſhewes that to be offended is to deny Chriſt. And ſo Joh. 16. 1. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you, that ye ſhould not be offended; where Chriſt foretells the perſecutions that ſhould befall them that they might be forewarned too, and not fall off when they befall them. And thus Rom. 14. 13. where πρόσκομμα ἢ σκάνδαλον are joyned, the

* Παγὶς καὶ θήρα

first signifies the ſtumbling block, the 2d the gall-trap, the firſt apt to keep one from coming to Chriſtianity, the ſecond to drive one away, to diſcourage in the courſe, both which the Jewiſh Chriſtians then did by binding the Gentile converts to the Moſaicall Law, and the Gentile converts alſo by deſpiſing the ſcrupulous Jewes. And the ſame is the importance of v. 21. where ſtumbling and ſcandalized are put together. Other places there are which muſt be interpreted by bringing the Metaphore from the firſt of the three ſenſes, as it ſignifies a ſnare, or gin. So Mat. 16. 23. Thou art an offence unto me, that is, by expreſſing thy deteſtation againſt my ſufferings, thou laboureſt to bring me into an horrour, or fear of ſuffering, and ſo in effect tempteſt me to ſin. In the ſame ſenſe is that Rev. 2. 14. of Balaam, who taught Balak βαλεῖν σκάνδαλον, to lay a ſnare for the children of Iſrael to entice them by their daughters to Idolatry, and by Idolatry to intrap and deſtroy them. In this ſenſe ſcandall is ſo perfectly all one with temptation, that, as a * learned man hath obſerved, the Æthiopick Interpreter of the New Teſtament, in ſtead of ſcandall puts a word that ſignifies * temptation, and the ſame that in the Lords prayer is put for temptation : In this ſenſe is that of the eye, and foot offending us, Mat. 5. 29. 18. 8. Mar. 9. 47. that is, when mans eye, or any other member of his body proves a ſnare to him, an inlet to temptation. A third ſort of places there are that referre to the third mention'd acception of the word as it ſignifies a ſtumbling block; ſowhen the word ſtone is joyned with it, or the Greek word which ſignifies ſtumbling. So Rom. 9. 33. Chriſt is called a ſtumbling block, a rock of offence, that is, an occaſion of fall, or ſin in many, and conſequently of increaſing their condemnation, as he ſaith, if he had not come, &c. they had not had ſin, that is, had not been ſo great ſinners, had not been guilty of the great ſin unbelief, and crucifying of Chriſt. So 1 Pet. 2. 8. Chriſt is called a ſtone of ſtumbling, & rock of offence, at which to ſtumble is to be diſobedient to Chriſt: ſo again 1 Cor. 8. 9. ſtumbling block to the weak, and ſo v. 13. To this may belong that other place 1 Joh. 2. 10. where that phraſe, there is no ſcandall in him, ſeems to ſignifie, falls not into thoſe ſins, that ignorant men, or uncharitable (who are ſaid in the Antitheſis v. 11. to walk in the dark) are ſubject unto. By this brief view will appear the ſeverall acceptions and notions of this word in all the places of the New Teſtament. As for the bleſſedneſſe, which is here attributed to thoſe which are not ſcandalized at Chriſt, diſcouraged or gall'd by the perſecutions, which befall Chriſt and his followers, this is here ſuperadded by him to the other parts of the Character given him in the Prophets, purpoſely in conſideration of Johns preſent condition, now being in priſon, which might occaſion ſome doubts to his Diſciples, whether Chriſt, whoſe forerunner he was, were indeed the Meſſias, or no.

* Lud. de Dieu.

d. V. 9. More then a Prophet] There were, ſaith Maimonides, among the Jewes eleven degrees of Prophecy, of which (ſaith he) only Nine were of true genuine Prophecy, or properly ſo called; the other two being ſublime tranſcendent ſorts, ſomewhat more excellent then ordinary Prophecy. One of theſe he there defines to be that, which comes on the man without dream, or extaſie, the ſpeaking by the Holy Ghoſt. Of this ſort was John the Baptiſt, who was clearly told by the Father (Mat. 3. 17. Joh. 1. 33. and by the deſcent of the Spirit of God) and accordingly proclaim'd as clearly to others, that Chriſt was the lamb of God, &c. ſo farre that he is ſaid to ſpeak only as a witneſſe, not as a Propher, Joh. 1. 7. In this reſpect it is, that he is called by ſo many other ſtyles, The voice of one crying, Mar. 1. 3. a proclaimer, a herald, v. 4. a meſſenger of Gods, v. 2. μέγας a great, illuſtrious perſon, Lu. 1. 15. and one filled with the Holy Ghoſt, and by way of excellence, the prophet of the moſt high, v. 76. but never ſimply a Prophet, unleſſe it be Lu. 7. 28. where yet the words may be beſt rendred thus, that no prophet borne of a woman is greater then John the Baptiſt, where Baptiſt, not Prophet, is his only title (and therefore in the 11th verſe of this Chapter, the word Prophet is left out of the expreſſion) only a compariſon made betwixt him and all the Prophets, and ſo Lu. 16. 16. where 'tis ſaid, that the prophets continued till John, not including him in that number, but referring him to the higher claſſis of a forerunner of Chriſt, or a preacher of the Goſpel; for ſo it followes, From that time the kingdome of God, that is, Chriſtianity is preached, and to the ſame ſenſe it is, that here he is ſaid to be one, or ſomewhat περισσότερον προφήτου, ſuperior to a prophet, viz. in reſpect of the clearneſſe of Gods ſhewing Chriſt to him, and his revealing him to others, pointing at him, ἰδὲ behold. But yet becauſe this office of forerunner was the office of Diſciples (ſee Mat. 26. 18.) and conſequently John was only a Diſciple, and Meſſenger imployed by Chriſt, therefore being compared with the Apoſtles, who were to be rulers of the Church, it is here ſaid; that the leaſt of them is greater then he, deſigned to a more honourable imployment. Περισσότερον προφήτου

e. V. 10. Before thy face] That which is here before thy face, is in Malachy c. 3. 1. before my face, and ſo the e- Πρόσωπόν σου.
by it appears that Chriſt (here referred to in the thy) is there all one with God the Father; or yet farther, that the face of God, ſignifying often his coming, or his preſence (and ſending before his face, ſending an harbinger or forerunner in a journey, Luke 9. 52.) this coming of Chriſt into the world, is the coming of God himſelf, this preſence of his on the earth, the preſence of God himſelf, and ſo the ἱλαστήριον or covering of the Arke noting the preſence of God appears to have been meant as a type of Chriſt, Rom. 3. 25.

f. V. 12. Suffereth violence] Βιάζεται notes a thing Βιάζεται being taken by one that hath no legall acknowledg'd right to it, βιαίως κρατεῖ, ſaith Heſychius, it is taken and violently poſſeſs'd (βία ſignifying ἡ ἐκ τῆς δυναστείας ἀδικίαν, ſaith Phavorinus, injuſtice by over-ruling power.) Thus when the people of Iſrael were forbidden to goe up to Sinai, their going up thither is in the Greek expreſs'd by βιάζεται Exod. 19. 24. Thus in the * Talmud, Two men had an inheritance equally divided betwixt them, and one of them carried his own part away, and his fellows too, therefore they called him בן הרמצן the ſon of violence, a violent dealer, the very βιασὴς here. Thus the kingdom of Heaven being as an Inheritance provided for all Jews and Gentiles, and the Jews being in a manner the elder brother, the Goſpel being firſt by appointment preach'd to them, the chief cities thereof, Corazin, Bethſaida, and Capernaum, nay Jeruſalem it ſelf, have not been ſo careful to look after it, eſpecially the principal perſons among them, Doctors and High-Priests, &c. but continue to contradict and oppoſe it, and then the multitudes and meaner ſort of the Jewes, the people, which, ſay the Doctors, know not the Law, and are accurſed, and thoſe that dwelt in Idumæa, Tyre and Sidon, (ſee cap 12 15. compared with Mar. 3. 8.) and of Galilee, ſo deſpiſed by the Phariſees, that they ſaid proverbially, no good thing comes out from thence (and beſides them, the Publicanes and Sinners) that carry all away, and proportionably are called here βιασταὶ, violent perſons; and the Goſpel, which primarily, and (as 'twas by them conceived) legally belonged not to them (and therefore 'tis one of the Phariſees argumen's againſt Chriſts being the Meſſias, Have any of the Rulers or Phariſees beleived on him? but theſe people, &c. and another, that he eat with Publicans and Sinners) is now wholly encloſed and engroſs'd by them. That this is the meaning of the verſe, will appear by what follows, where 'tis ſaid over again in other expreſſions. Parallel to v. 11. (where the office of John is extoll'd) is v. 13, 14. which diſcriminates him from the Law and the Prophets, that is, all that went before him, and points him out as the famous Ἠλίας ὁ μέλλων, Elias that was to come; and parallel to this twelfe verſe, (which, I ſay, contains the Doctors and Rulers contemning, and the multitudes, and Publicanes, and peoples receiving the Goſpel) is v. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24. But that which will make this moſt manifeſt is, that Luke 7. (where the ſtory of the Baptiſts ſending to Chriſt, and Chriſts teſtimony of him, and the parable here immediately following of piping and mourning is ſet down) in the very place of the words of this verſe (which are not there repeated by him) he ſets down theſe, καὶ πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἀκούσας καὶ οἱ τελῶναι ἐδικαίωσαν τὸν Θεὸν, &c. And all the people (that is, the common ſort) and the Publicans juſtified God, having been (or in that they were) baptized with the baptiſme of John, but the Phariſees and the Lawyers, that is, the chief men, thoſe of the Sanhedrim or Conſiſtories, the Rulers, or men in authority among them, rejected the counſel of God toward themſelves, having not been (or, in that they were not) baptized of him. And if it be objected that many of the Phariſees and Sadduces came to his baptiſme, Mat. 3. 7. the anſwer is clear, that by Phariſees, &c. there are meant ſome of the people that were of thoſe ſects, and by the Baptiſts wondring, and asking who had forewarn'd them to flie, &c. 'tis clear, that the reſt of them, the greateſt and moſt conſiderable for number or quality, did not come; and as clear it is, that thoſe were the men that ſaid of the Baptiſt, he had a devil, v. 18. of this chap. becauſe thoſe were they, that call'd Chriſt glutton and wine-drinker, a friend of publicans and ſinners; and therefore when S. Luke repeats the words of this verſe (out of the place) c. 16. 16. it is πᾶς βιάζεται very one (that is, the meaneſt, not the chief of the Jewes, and not only Jewes, but Publicans, &c.) forceth into it, robs the Rulers and Doctors of it, and thoſe words are there ſaid to be uſed by Chriſt, directly in reply to the Phariſees, who mock'd and rejected his doctrine, ver. 14.

V. 16. Children] It was the cuſtome of Children among the Jewes in their ſports to imitate what they ſaw done by others upon greater occaſions; And particularly the cuſtomes in Feſtivities, wherein the Muſician beginning a tune on his inſtrument, the company danced to his pipe; and ſo likewiſe the cuſtomes in Funerals, wherein ſome old women beginning the mournful ſong (as the præficæ among the Latines) the reſt followed lamenting and beating the breaſts, Alas my brother! Ah his glory! &c. (of this cuſtome in funerals, ſee note on c. 9. h.) Theſe did the children act and perſonate in the ſtreets in play, and when one had begun to act the Muſicians part, or another the old womans part, and the reſt did not follow him in theirs, then was the occaſion of this ſpeech which is here mention'd, We have piped, &c.

g. Παιδάρια ἐν ἀγορᾷ.

V. 19. Juſtified.] The Scripture notion of the word ἐδικαιώθη (as of the Hebrew צדקת and the Syriack אודקת Ezdadkat, which are here uſed,) is known and vulgar, juſtified, approved. And if that be here received, then the καὶ and ו the ordinary Copulatives, which are uſed both here, and Luke 7. 35. muſt either be rendred but as thoſe Copulatives, eſpecially the Hebrew ו, ſometimes are, or elſe this other importance and connexion with the Antecedents they may have. The men of this age, that is, the Rulers, and Phariſees, and Doctors, which reject the counſell of God toward them, that is, Gods wiſe and various methods of reducing them, Luke 7. 30. doe quarrel and complain and except againſt all that is done, either by John or Chriſt, v. 16. 17, 18. and by doing ſo, bear a teſtimony that this is the true wiſdome of the Father, which according to predictions was to be refuſed by all the great ones, and approved and entertained only by the meaner ſort, the Publicans and the people, which in this part of the hiſtory are by S. Luke ſaid to have juſtified God, Luke 7. 29. Πᾶς ὁ λαὸς ἀκούσας καὶ οἱ τελῶναι ἐδικαίωσαν τὸν Θεὸν, all the people that heard, and the Publicans, juſtified God. And then the υἱοὶ σοφίας children of wiſdome, here are thoſe that receive it, that pretending leaſt to the wiſdome of the world, have yet humility enough to receive this true wiſdome which comes from above, when 'tis offer'd to them. And all theſe, as S. Luke reads v. 35. doe approve or juſtifie this wiſdome, this counſell, theſe moſt gracious and wiſe proceedings of God toward them. This rendring of the place is ſure moſt agreeable to the Scripture ſtyle, and acception of δικαῶν, and alſo with the ordinary rendring of καὶ, (not but, but) and, and therefore is to be preferred as the cleareſt interpretation. Yet if the uſe of δικαῶν among antient Greek authors ſhould be conſider'd, another rendring there might be, which would be competible with the καὶ and, as that ordinarily ſignifies, and agreeable to the Context alſo. Phavorinus and Suidas, two learned Grammarians, render δικαῶ, καταδικάζω to condemn, and δικαίωσις, κατάκρισις, condemnation; and ſo Thucydides uſes it, l. 3. ὑμᾶς αὐτοὺς μᾶλλον δικαιώσετε, you ſhall rather condemn your ſelves; and ſo the Greek Scholiaſt there underſtands it, and explains it by δικαίως καθ' ὑμῶν ἀποδείξετε ὅτι τυραννικῶς ἄρχεσθε, you ſhall demonſtrate againſt your ſelves that you reign tyrannouſly, that is, you ſhall condemn your ſelves. So again l. 8. p. 499. τῶν δεομένων ἅτε ζήτησις ἦτε δικαίωσις ἐγίγνετο, where the Scholiaſt ſaith, δικαίωσις ἀντὶ τῆς κόλασις, ἢ εἰς δίκην ἀπαγωγὴ, ἢ ὑπὸ κρίσις, it is taken for puniſhing, impleading, judging. So in Heſychius, Δικαιῶσαι, κολάσαι, to puniſh (as the Judge doth when he gives ſentence of puniſhment) and ſo Harpocration obſerves it, to ſignifie oft in Thucydides, Ὁ μέντοι Θουκυδίδης πολλαχοῦ τὸ δικαίωσιν δεῖν τῆς κολάσεως τάττει, and ſo Julius Pollux too, and ſo Syneſius uſes it, Ep. 44. μεγίστη ὄντως ἀγαθὸν τὸ μὴ ἁμαρτεῖν, δεύτερον ἀγαθὸν τὸ δικαιωθῆναι, The greateſt good is, that men offend not, the ſecond, that they be puniſh'd who doe; which appears to be the ſenſe by the τίσις and ποιναὶ, that preceded. Thus doe our Northern and Scotchmen uſe the phraſe to be juſtified for to be hanged, and our Common-law forms of commiſſion to the Judges, are Præcipimus tibi, quod tu juſticies, we command thee that thou ſhalt juſtifie, in condemning, as well as abſolving. Should this notion of the word be here thought appliable, then the ſenſe would be this, At the coming and preaching of Chriſt, and that wiſdome from above, to the Jews, the learned, and chief and wiſeſt among them, thoſe of the Sanhedrim (which by an Hebraiſme may be called the children of wiſdome) either wiſemen, or thoſe which of all others pretended moſt to divine knowledge, that is, the Phariſees, Doctors of the Law, &c. Luke 7. 30. rejected Chriſt, and all the wayes of preaching the Goſpel to them, and this they did univerſally, all, ſaith S. Luke (not all the Jewes, but) all the wiſemen, all the ſons of wiſdome, Luke 7. 35. Theſe, though in reaſon they ſhould have acknowledg'd Chriſt before all others, he being wiſdome it ſelf, and they the great pretenders to divine wiſdome, did yet prove the greateſt enemies, oppoſers, exceptours, arguers, quarrellers, againſt it, held out moſt impenitently, v. 21. and which way ſoever the addreſſe was made to them, they had ſtill exceptions againſt it, v. 18, 19. and at length (in the Attick ſenſe of the word δικαῶν) cauſed him to be condemn'd and put to death, executed the wiſdome of the Father, Chriſt himſelf. But the former appears (by comparing it with S. Luke) to be the ſenſe of it.

h. Δικαιώθη.

V. 23. Hell] Ἅδης doth not ſignifie here the place of Hell, but a ſtate of periſhing or diſſolution; And becauſe this is the firſt place, wherein the word is uſed in this

i. Ἅδης.

this book, It will not be amiſſe more largely to clear the notion of it. Among profane writers it is clear, that the word ſignifies not the place of the damned, no nor any kind of place, either common to both, or proper to either bliſſe or woe, but only the ſtate of the dead. Thus in * Cornutus, ἐν ᾅδῃ οἰκεῖν, is interpreted by ἐν ἀσαφεῖ κεῖσθαι, to be no body knows where, according to the definition of death in Job c. 14. 10. man giveth up the ghoſt, and where is he? and agreeable to the Etymologie of the word, ᾅδης quaſi ἀειδής, an inviſible ſtate, (and ſo in the Rhetors, * Severus Sophiſta, &c. 'tis generally call'd not Ἅδης, but Ἀΐδης) And therefore, ſaith he, the meaning of that fable of Hades ſtealing Ceres's daughter, is the periſhing of Corn in the earth, ὁ γινόμενος ἐπὶ χρόνον τινὰ τῶν σπερμάτων κατὰ γῆς ἀφανισμὸς, the diſappearing of the ſeeds in the earth for ſome time, which word ἀφανισμὸς (directly the ſame with ᾅδης) is taken abſolutely for death, 2 Mac. 5. 12. and is the periphraſis of death in the Pſalmiſt, before I goe hence, and be no more ſeen, and ſo Heb. 8. 13. that which grows old, is ἐγγὺς ἀφανισμοῦ, neer to diſappearing, or death. So * again Ἅδης is called Πλάτων, the rich man, ὅτι μηδέν ἐστιν ὃ μὴ πλουτεῖον εἰς ἑαυτὸν καταγκται, καὶ αὐτῷ κτῆμα γίνεται, becauſe there is nothing which doth not at laſt come to it, and become its poſſeſſion. The ſame is meant by him, when he defines Ἅδης the laſt ayr that receives ſouls, not referring to any particular place, but that ſtate of the dead which the Atheiſt, Wiſd. 2. calls the vaniſhing as the ſoft ayre; ſo Heraclitus περὶ ἀπίστ. ſpeaking of the helmet of Hades, which makes men inviſible, he ſaith it is τὸ τέλος the end, or death of every man, εἰς ὃ ἁπλῶν τελευτησάντων ἀόρατος γίνεται, to which he that comes becomes inviſible. Thus in thoſe which are call'd the Sibyllin Oracles (if they were not written by a Chriſtian) upon occaſion of this cloſe, ——πρὸ δ' ἄρ' ἔκτεινεν Ἅδης, Hades received them, this account is given of Ἅδης,

Ἅδην δ' ἅπαντες καλέσαντο, ἐπεὶ πρῶτος μόλεν Ἅδης
Γαμάμενος θανάτῳ, γαῖαν δὲ μιν ἀμφεκάλυψε.
Τοὔνεκα δὴ πάντες οἱ ὀπιχθόνιοι γεγαῶτες
Ἀνέρες εἰν Ἀΐδαο δόμοις ἶσαι καλέονται.

Where 'tis clear that Hades is the common ſtate of the dead, when their bodies are laid in the grave, the condition not only of the wicked, nor only of the godly, but of the πάντες ὀπιχθόνιοι all mortall men, who, as there follows, εἰν Ἀΐδαο μολόντες τιμὴν ἔσχηκαν, when they were gone to Hades were honour'd by us. So in Philemons Iambicks,

Καὶ γὰρ καθ' ᾅδην δύο τρίβους νομίζομεν,
Μίαν δικαίων, χἀτέραν ἀσεβῶν ὁδόν.

There are two paths in Hades, one of the righteous the other of the wicked. In the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament, the word is uſed accordingly, of Jacob, Gen. 37. 35. καταβήσομαι πρὸς τὸν υἱόν μου πενθῶν εἰς ᾅδου, I will goe (not to the Grave, for he thought his ſon devoured by wild beaſts, but) to Hades, that is, out of this life to my ſon mourning. So Eſth. 13. 7. εἰς τὸν ᾅδην καταβάντων ſignifies to die, v. 6. to be kill'd; for that heathen King cannot be thought to dream of Hell. So Bar. 3. 19. καταβῆναι εἰς ᾅδου is joyned with ἡρανίσθησαν and ſo ſignifies death, being there ſet to note the vaniſhing tranſitory eſtate of men, who die, and are ſucceeded by others. So 3. Mac. πλησίον ᾅδου, μᾶλλον δὲ ἐπ' αὐτῷ βεβηκότες, They that are neer Hades, or the ſtate of the dead, or rather are come at it. So when Acts 2. 27. out of Pſal. 19. 10. we read of the ſoul in Ἅδης, as the ſoul ſignifies the living ſoul, ſo Hades muſt be the ſtate of the dead, the ſtate of ſeparation of ſoul from body. So Apoc. 6. 8. after the mention of death is added, and Hades, that is, continuance in death, of both which together 'tis accordingly ſaid, that they had power to kill with ſword, &c. and c. 20. 14. Death and Hades are caſt into the Lake of fire, and v. 13. gave up thoſe that were in it, which ſure cannot be ſaid of hell, from whence there is no releaſe. So Eccluſ 48. 5. he that raiſeth the dead from death and Hades, ſure raiſes not out of hell; and ſo in the Song of the three children, Gods delivering them from Hades. And when Eleazar 2 Mac. 6. 23. deſires his friend to bring him on his way to Hades. So 2 Eſr. 4. 41. In Hades the chambers of ſouls, are like the womb of a woman, deſiring to powre back the ſouls that are departed from the bodies, to their wonted abodes again, as a woman that is come to her time deſires to bring forth. Thus every where doth this word ſignifie a ſtate of death, deſtruction (denotes no place either of ſouls, heaven, or hell, or of bodies, the grave, but) the ἀφανισμὸς inviſible ſtate. That the Writers of the Church had this notion of the phraſe in the Creed, may be diſcerned (among many) by this place in Theophylact in Rom. 4. 25. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχεν ἀπέθανεν, εἰκότως καὶ ἀνέστη· πῶς γὰρ ἔμελλεν ἐγκαθεῖρχθαι τῷ Ἅδῃ ὁ ἀναμάρτητος; Seeing he died, having no ſin, it was reaſon he ſhould riſe again, for how ſhould he that was ſinleſſe be detained by Hades? where being detained by Hades is by the oppoſition to riſing again, explained to be no more then continuing in the ſtate of the dead: So the ſame Theophylact on Epheſ. 4. 9. interprets the lower parts of the earth to be Hades, and that in the ſame notion, as when Jacob ſaith, You will bring my old age with ſorrow, εἰς Ἅδου to Hades, (not to hell certainly) and as it is all one with εἰς λακκὸν to the pit, in David. Thus the Arabians uſe Al-Barzach for that ſpace or ſtate which is betwixt this life and the next, the time of Death and the Reſurrection, and every one that dies is ſaid to go Al-Barzach. And as in other places it is peculiarly the ſtate of ſeparation of ſoul and body, belonging to particular men, ſo in this place being ſpoken of a city, 'tis a ſtate of deſtruction and deſolation, to which that may as properly be ſaid to deſcend (being a ſtate of humiliation, or bringing low) as if it were a place to which a locall motion belonged. For ſo of Jacob it is ſaid (and in the other premiſed examples) καταβήσομαι εἰς ᾅδου, I ſhall goe down to that ſtate of death, which therefore probably is the right reading here (according to the antient Greek and Latine MS. καταβήσῃ, and not καταβιβασθήσῃ) humbled to this low eſtate, as before lifted up to heaven.

V. 27. All things] The word πάντα all things here, though it may poſſibly ſignifie either all power given to Chriſt, or all things belonging to his office, yet by the Context it rather ſeems to belong to Perſons, then Things, for of thoſe he peculiarly ſpeaks under the title of babes, v. 25. thoſe ſingle-hearted plain perſons that beleived on him (for whom he there thanks God, as here he ſaith, they are given unto him) And the Neuter gender will be no hindrance to this, being ordinarily uſed in this manner for Perſons: ſee c. 18. 11. where that that is loſt, is theſe little ones v. 14. and whatſoever v. 18. is whomſoever, and ſo c. 16. 9. So 1 John 5. 4. Apoc. 21. 27. Heb. 7. 7. 19. and c. 12. 13. k. πάντα.

V. 3. Eaſie] The word χρηστὸς ſignifies ἀγαθὸς good, and ſomething more, good in the higheſt degree, and is rendred gracious 1 Pet. 2. 3. Κύριος χρηστὸς, the Lord is gracious, the Septuagints render it Pſ. 34. 8. O taſte and ſee, ὅτι χρηστὸς ὁ Κύριος, that the Lord is gracious, & ſo τὸ χρηστὸν Θεοῦ, Rom. 2. 4. the bounty of God, that which is immediately before, ὁ πλοῦτος χρηστότητος, the riches of his bounty; & proportionably here Chriſts yoke, the precepts, which he layes on his Diſciples (being of all other the very things moſt agreeable to our humane, rationall nature, and which by them, which did not think men bound to doe them, have yet been counted moſt excellent in them that did practiſe them, and which, if the one cuſtome of ſin did not make us incompetent judges of it, would appear to us the fitteſt for our turnes, the moſt pleaſurable, profitable and honourable of all things) are here ſaid by him to be, l. χρηστός.

not only a good, but a gracious, benigne, bounteous yoke, that any man is the better for taking on him, and if he conſider'd it well, he would put it on of his own accord, preferre it before liberty, or any other ſervice.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XII.

1. On the morning of the Sabbath day, before the time of the publick ſervice, through corn-fields, and his diſciples, being hungry, pluckt the ears of corn, thereby to break their faſt, which among the Jewes was not cuſtomary, till the publick offices were paſt, (ſee note a.)

1. AT that time Jeſus went [on the ſabbath day thorow the corn, and his diſciples were an hungred, and began to pluck the eares of corn, and to eat.]

2. Thereupon, the Phariſees taking notice of it,

2. But when the Phariſees ſaw it, they [ſaid unto him, Behold, thy diſciples doe that which is not lawful to doe upon the ſabbath day.

3. 4. Remember the ſtory of David 1 Sam. 21. 6. and by that you will diſcern that the caſe of hunger was excepted and reſerved in the law concerning holy dayes, or things;

3. But he ſaid unto them, [Have ye not read what David did when he was an hungred, and they that were with him?

4. How he entred into the houſe of God, and did eat the ſhew-bread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the prieſts?]

For there David and his company being preſs'd with hunger were by the Prieſt allowed to eat the ſhew-bread, which being conſecrated did particularly belong to the Prieſt, Lev. 24. 9. yet might, it ſeem (by the intention of the law-giver) be by him imployed in any charitable uſe, for the releif of others, as long as there were more ready conſecrated for the ſacred uſes 1 Sam. 21. 5. And accordingly though the Prieſt pretended not to diſpenſe with any (ſo much as ritual) part of Gods Law, (as appears by the exception interpoſed by him v. 4. if the young men have kept themſelves from women) yet he doubts not to give them freely of the conſecrated bread; thereby aſſuring us, that it was as lawful for the Prieſt to give ſome part of the conſecrated bread to releive the hungry, as to eat it himſelf, and ſo that in the Law of holy things not being touched by any but the Prieſts, the caſe of hunger or diſtreſſe was reſerved, in which it might by the Prieſt be lawfully given to others.

5. in the Moſaical law of the Jewes religion, (ſee note on Mat. 5. g.)

5. Or have ye not read [in the law, how that on the ſabbath daies the prieſts in the temple profane the ſabbath, and are blameleſſe?]

how, when it is for the ſervice of the Temple, the Prieſts uſe the Sabbath, as another day, doe works about the ſacrifice on that day, which, were it not for that end, were unlawfull?

6. And therefore if the Temple, and the neceſſities of (who is greater then the Temple)

6. But I ſay unto you, that in this place is one greater then the temple.]

the ſervice thereof might give ſuch a diſpenſation to the law of the Sabbath, much more Chriſt, and the neceſſity of nature, and the ſervice due to Chriſt from his Diſciples.

7. And if you were not mercileſſe men, and ſo unlike

7. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy and not ſacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltleſſe.]

that which God likes beſt in men, if you did conſider that which is ſo viſible in all Gods word, and methods, that God likes mercy toward them that ſtand in need of it, better then the offering to him the richeſt ſacrifices, you would rather have made a fair conſtruction of this action, which their neceſſity renders juſtifiable, and would be ſo acknowledged by any that had humanity or bowels in them, then, under pretence of zeal to the Sabbath, thus falſly charge the innocent.

a. 8. As for the ceremonial obſervance of the Sabbath, which you think is broken in this, God never required it in caſes of this nature of neceſſity, and the like. And therefore the ſon of man, that is, Chriſt, which is here, and who as he is greater then the Temple v. 6. ſo is the Lord alſo of the Sabbath, and for whoſe ſervice that is done, which is here done by the diſciples, may certainly now with all reaſon permit them to preferre their health or life before the exact performance of the ceremonies or reſt of that day.

8. For the [a] ſon of man is Lord even of the ſabbath day.]

9. And when he was departed thence, he went into their ſynagogue.

10. Is healing, and doing cures on the Sabbath day one of thoſe permitted things, of which thou ſpeakeſt? If he ſhould ſay it were, this they knew would (though the former would not) bear an accuſation in their Sanhedrim, being by them at that time counted utterly unlawful.

10. And behold, there was a man which had his hand withered, and they asked him, ſaying, [Is it lawful to heal on the ſabbath daies? that they might accuſe him.]

11. In the ſmalleſt matter, if it be but of one ſheep, the practiſe is ordinary among you now, according to your preſent interpretations of the law, if that fall into a ditch, to dragge it out, to ſave it from drowning on the Sabbath day.

11. And he ſaid unto them, [What man ſhall there be among you, that ſhall have one ſheep, and if it fall into a pit on the ſabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out?]

12. 'Tis therefore in all reaſon lawfull to work a cure on a man, to perform a charitable deed of ſaving life, &c.

12. How much then is a man better then a ſheep? [wherefore it is lawful to doe well] on the ſabbath daies.

And he commanded, that this ſhould not be celebrated, proclaim'd abroad, that no acclamations ſhould be uſed toward him, deſiring quietly to diſcharge his office of doing good, and healing, without more notice taken of him, and conſequently more conteſtations with the Phariſees, who, he ſaw, would not be wrought on by him, but deſired only matters of accuſation, and advantage againſt him, v. 10. even to put him to death, v. 14.

But he that ſhall reſiſt the Spirit of God, manifeſtly ſhining in theſe miracles wrought by Chriſt, to the aſtoniſhment and conviction of all, but Phariſees, v. 23. and ſhall impute thoſe miracles to the devil, which, by what hath been ſaid, ſufficiently appear to be the works of Gods own power, If he repent not particularly of this, and come in, and acknowledge Chriſt, thus revealed and manifeſted to him, there is no pardon or mercy to be had for him, neither in this age, nor at the coming of the Meſſias (by him ſuppoſed yet future) or, neither in this life, where he ſhall be puniſhed with ſpiritual death, Gods withdrawing of grace, nor in the other, where eternal death expects him.

33. For indeed they that doe this, that impute the miracles, which by the power and finger and ſpirit of God are wrought by me, unto the devil, muſt, according to the old known rule of judging the tree by the fruit, be underſtood to affirm the ſame ill of him (that is, the holy Ghoſt) whoſe productions theſe miracles are, as they affirm of the miracles themſelves, by pronouncing theſe to be diabolical, they do by implication pronounce the holy Ghoſt to be an infernal ſpirit, and ſo God to be the devil, which is the higheſt, and the moſt irremiſſible blaſphemy imaginable.

38. Then certain of the Scribes and of the Phariſees anſwered, ſaying, Maſter, [we would ſee a ſign from thee,]

39. 'Tis the ſign of a wicked infidel people to be alwayes unſatisfied, after ſo many miracles and manifeſtations, (ſufficient to prove me the Meſſias) ſtill to be requiring more, without ever being moved with what you have already; For ſuch as you there is but one ſigne, or token, or miracle behind, that of my reſurrection from death, after ye have crucified me; whereby you ſhall have my office aſſerted, after I am gone, and find Jonas's drowning and wonderful reſtoring from the whales belly, to have been a type of me, and that a moſt ſignificant one.

39. But he anſwered and ſaid to them. [An evil and adulterous generation ſeeketh after a ſign, and there ſhall no ſign be given to it, but the ſign of the prophet Jonas.]

n. 40. For as Jonas lay buried in the whales belly three daies, ſo ſhall Chriſt continue in the grave part of three natural dayes, or ſhall die in one day, and riſe again the third day after it.

40. For as Jonas was three dayes and three nights in the whales belly, ſo ſhall the ſon of man be n three daies and three nights in the heart of the earth.]

41. And they that are not convinced and brought to repentance by my reſurrection, and the preaching of my Apoſtles, which ſhall be conſequent to that, their ſin and condemnation ſhall be much greater then that of the Ninivites was, for upon Jonas's recovery from the whales belly, and coming to preach to them, they repented, Jon. 3. whereas the reſurrection of Chriſt, and miſſion of the Spirit, and preaching of the Apoſtles over all Judæa after that, is a farre greater way of conviction, then that recovery and preaching of Jonas.

42. The Queen of the ſouth ſhall riſe up in the judgement with this generation, and ſhall condemn it; [for ſhe came from the uttermoſt parts of the earth to hear the wiſdome of Solomon, and behold, * a greater then Solomon is here.] * ſomewhat more, πλεῖον 43, 44, 45. But to you that having received ſuch means of converting and bringing you to repentance, ſuch miracles, and particularly caſting out devils, v. 22. (which occaſion'd all the diſcourſe ſince, and to which this is annext Lu. 11. 24.) have not yet walk'd worthy of them, I ſhall now apply this parable, v. 43, 44, 45. the meaning of which is, That this nation (out of which I came to caſt out the power of Satan, and to bind the ſtrong man, and take from him his uſurped poſſeſſion and goods for their proper Maſters uſe) doth appear ſo farre to reſiſt all my methods, as to blaſpheme that holy Spirit, by whom I work v. 24. and then what is to be look'd for, but that the Devils ejected (either by your own children, or) by me in my Fathers name, either out of any ſingle perſon, or nation, finding no where elſe in the heathen world, ſuch pleaſant deſireable habitations of reſt and contentment, as here among you (as a well watered ſeat is the moſt pleaſant) ſhall try their utmoſt to re-enter here, and when they come to doe ſo, finding that Chriſt hath not gotten any admiſſion, they ſhall with many more worſe then themſelves, make entrance, and take a durable poſſeſſion again, and ſo the ſtate of this people is like to be more deſperately damnable, then before I came among you it was, or then, if Satan had never been caſt out, it would have been.

43. When the unclean ſpirit is gone out of a man he walketh through drie places, ſeeking reſt and findeth none.

44. Then he ſaith, I will return into my houſe, from whence I came out. And when he is come, he findeth it empty, ſwept and garniſhed.

45. Then goeth he, and taketh with himſelf ſeven other ſpirits, more wicked then himſelf, and they enter in and dwell there, and the laſt ſtate of that man is worſe then the firſt. Even ſo ſhall it be alſo to this wicked generation.]

46, 47. Whilſt he was on this ſevere diſcourſe ſo ungrateful to many of his auditors, it happened that his mother, the bleſſed virgin Mary, and ſome others of his neareſt kinred were waiting without to ſpeak with him, and upon this occaſion one of his auditors, either to trie what he would ſay, or perhaps to interrupt him in his ſpeech, told him that his mother and kindred waited for him.

46. While he yet talked to the people, behold, his mother and his brethren ſtood without, deſiring to ſpeak with him.

47. Then one ſaid unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren ſtand without, deſiring to ſpeak with thee.]

48. But

48. But he anſwered and ſaid to him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren?

49. And he ſtretched forth his hand toward his diſciples, and ſaid, Behold my mother, and my brethren.

48, 49. To which he preſently replied (to ſignifie this office of his, to declare the will of his Father, to be dearer to him then all relations, and withall to ſhew, that obedience to God was the thing above all others moſt welcome to him) in theſe words, Who is my mother, &c. that is, Ye are deceived in me, bare natural or ſecular reſpects ſway not with me in compariſon to the gaining of proſelytes to heaven.

50. For whoſoever ſhall doe the will of my Father which is in heaven, the ſame [is my brother, and ſiſter, and mother.]

50. becomes thereby the child of God, and conſequently by that means the brother and ſiſter of Chriſt, and beſides, Chriſt is alſo formed in him, and ſo he is the mother of Chriſt, anſwerable to the Virgin, in whom Chriſt was conceived. And therefore I doe moſt juſtly ſet that valuation on him, and in that reſpect more tend the teaching of ſuch, and converſing with them, then the paying a civility to thoſe, who are in carnal reſpects neareſt to me.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

V. 8. Son of man] That by the phraſe the ſon of man in this place is not meant Man in common, (as
a. Τῆς ἀνθρώπου. ſome very learned men have thought) but peculiarly Chriſt, is more then probable, not only by theſe words a greater then the Temple is here (aſſuming a greater liberty for his Diſciples from his preſence, and the neceſſity of their ſervice to him, then belonged to other ordinary Jews in all caſes, or then the Temple could give any ſervants of the Temple) but alſo by the uſe of this phraſe of ſon of man for Chriſt in Daniel, c. 7. 13. and in every other of the 88 repetitions of it in the New Teſtament. And although by the words, as they are in S. Mark, c. 2. 27. the contrary ſeemeth not improbable, where the ground of Chriſts affirming that the Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath, is becauſe the Sabbath is made for man, as if the Sabbaths being made for man did conclude him Lord of it, and conſequently that he was Lord, for whom it was made, that is, Man in common, and not Chriſt; yet to this the anſwer is ready, that the caſe of which Chriſt there and here ſpeaks, being for the neceſſary uſe, and good of man, plucking and eating for neceſſity, and preſervation of life, That may be very fitly referr'd to by Chriſt, when he ſaith The Sabbath is made for man ſo that the Κύριος τοῦ σαββάτου. phraſe for man ſhall ſignifie for the good of man, & import that the Sabbath being deſigned for the good of man, could not reaſonably be conceiv'd to oblige him to any thing ſo contrary to that, as is ſtarving, or debilitating of nature (ſo as to render him unable to diſcharge the duty of the calling.) And from thence that former concluſion of mans being Lord of the Sabbath will not follow, becauſe man is not Lord, or free diſpoſer of all thoſe things that are for his good, (for even all the morall precepts of God alſo are for mans good, and the King is ſaid to be for thy good; yet is not he ſubjected to thee, as to a Lord, no more then the morall law can be diſpens'd with by thee) The only proper concluſion from this notion of the Sabbaths being made for man will be this that he that made a poſitive law, did not oblige to the obſervance of it in ſuch caſes which are for the good of man, as works of mercy (which being part of the morall eternall Law, he preferres before the performance of theſe poſitive Lawes, which reſpect his own ſervice v. 7.) and ſo that the Law of the Sabbath at the very making of it was not deſign'd to have force in it to bind men to ſtrict reſt in ſome caſes, as thoſe v. 5. of the neceſſary ſervices of the Temple (and what is done here was for the ſervice of Chriſt, who is greater then the Temple) And ſo ſtill Chriſt, that ſon of man, who comes to doe good in the world, is in any reaſon ſo Lord of the Sabbath, as that he may uſe it, which way he will, for the uſe and good of man, and thus God did alwaies appoint it to be uſed ſo as the Reſt might be broken, when any Morall good requir'd it. And ſo likewiſe the ſtrict abſtaining from eating till the ſixt houre, or till their ſolemn ſervice was performed, which is ſaid to have been obſerved among the Jews upon their Sabbaths, at leaſt their great daies, and that cuſtome referr'd to by S. Peter, Act. 2. 16. when, it being the day of Pentecoſt, as this alſo was (ſee note on Lu. 6. a.) he proves that they were not drunk, as they were accuſed, becauſe it was yet but the third not the ſixth hour of the day, before which they knew they did not uſe to eat or drink; And this ſeems to be the quarrell that the Jewes had here to the Diſciples, that, on the Sabbath day, they eat before the time, not that the reſt was broken by rubbing the eares of corn. Of this therefore ſaith Chriſt, that were it never ſo much a part of the law, or cuſtome of the Sabbath, yet in caſe of neceſſity, which implied charity, it was not of force; And thus the Jewes, to whom Chriſt ſpake, underſtood his ſpeech, as appears by the queſtion that next follows v. 10. whether 'twere lawfull to heal on the Sabbath day, that is, whether in this caſe (of curing) God had permitted working, or doing any thing on the Sabbath, which Chriſt anſwers diſtinctly, that the life or ſafety of one ſheep (according to their own doctrines) much more of a man, is to be preferr'd before the obſervation of the Sabbath. One other ſenſe is affix'd to theſe words, as if by this phraſe of the Son of mans being Lord of the Sabbath, Chriſts power of aboliſhing the Sabbath were here aſſerted by him. But to this I conceive, this place doth not belong. For although there is litle reaſon to doubt of Chriſts having this power, yet if Chriſt had ſpoken upon that head, of his power to aboliſh the Sabbath, then 1. he would not have defended his action by that which was already (while that law was in force) continually practiſed among them which of you having &c. And 2. if he had once aſſerted the abolition of the Sabbath, the Phariſees would have needed no other leſſer argument, nor conſequently have asked that other queſtion, to get matter of accuſation againſt him v. 10. To which again Chriſts anſwer is the ſame, as to the former: For to both his only anſwer is that God preferrs acts of Charity before the outward ſtrictneſſe of Sabbatick reſt. To that belongs his ſaying Joh. 5. 17. that his Father worketh till now, and he worketh, that is, that God the Father at the creating of the world did not ſo reſt on the ſeventh or Sabbath day, but that he worketh ever ſince in the acts of conſervation and providence, as he did then in creating on the ſix daies, and accordingly in imitation of him, v. 19. Chriſt may fitly doe the like, doe cures, that is preſerve, &c. As for any diſtinct text in the Goſpels for Chriſts abrogating the Judaicall Sabbath, there is no more reaſon to expect it, then the like for Sacrifices, or Circumciſion, or the Judaicall Prieſthoood, the ſubſtance being come, and the Temple, and that people deſtroyed, the ceremonies or ſhadowes, Col. 2. 16, 17. as farre as they were ſuch, ceaſed of their own accord, and no farther are they now abrogated, having never been obligatory to any, but that people.

V. 18. Choſen] Αἱρετίζω ſignifies ſo to preferre before all others, as to chooſe, or aſſume to any office, I take to my ſelf,
b. Αἱρετίζω. προσλαμβάνω, or ἄιρω πρὸς ἐμαυτὸν, in Phavorinus; but in Iſaiah, whence this verſe is cited, 'tis ἀνλιήψομαι to ſuſtain, which ſeems rather to belong to it, that of choſen being after mention'd there, and rendred ἀγαπητὸς beloved here.

Ib. Judgement] The word κρίσις in this place ſeems to ſignifie the whole Goſpel, the true religion, the true way of worſhipping & obeying God, the whole will of God under the Goſpel, and either is to be rendred Truth out of the Hebrew משפט, Iſ. 42. 1. And either way it here ſignifies the Goſpel, and ſo v. 20. alſo. c. Κρίσιν

V. 20. A bruiſed reed] The reed is the weak, infirme man, the bruiſing of that reed, is his falling into ſin, and the flaxe on fire that is burning in the illychnium, or lampe (ſee Iſa. 43. 17. Jud. 15. 14. 16. 9.) is the man again, the ſmoaking flax, (τυφόμενον) is when the flame is out, or burns darkly for want of oyle, and yet there remains ſome fire in the flaxe, and that ſmoakes, or ſhines dimmely, inſtead of flaming; and anſwerable to that is the man, in whom Grace is decayed, but yet not deſperately or irrecoverably gone out, ſome ſparks of good being ſtill left in him: and this perſon, in this eſtate, Chriſt is ſo farre from deſtroying, or triumphing over, that he doth moſt tenderly cheriſh and labour to reſtore ſuch an one in the ſpirit of meekneſſe, to a firme habit of Chriſtian practiſe again. This is Chriſts practiſe at his coming into the world, as deſigning to plant (not the unſinning, legal, perfect, but) the ſyncere, Evangelicall righteouſneſſe through the world, which is the meaning of the phraſe that followes untill he bring forth (or, ſend forth) judgment into victory; the Hebrew Iſ. 42. 3. is he ſhall bring forth, and the word untill is taken out of v. 4. where the ſame ſenſe is repeated again, & judgment again ſignifies the Goſpel, that is, Chriſtian, Evangelicall righteouſneſſe (ſee Note c.) and though εἰς νῖκος in the old Teſtament ſignifies for ever, Lam. 5. 20. 2 Sam. 2. 26. Job. 36. 7. Jer. 5. 3. Am. 1. 11. yet that is, when it renders לנצח which ſignifies both to victory, and to eternity, but here (ſeeming to be the Epitome or breviate of the following words, v. 4. he ſhall not fail nor be diſcouraged, it moſt probably ſignifies victoriouſly, and notes that the Goſpel ſhall be ſo ſet up over the world, that he ſhall not faile, or be diſcouraged, that is, either 1. the bruiſed reed ſhall not faile, or be broken worſe then it is, nor the flaxe be diſcouraged or quench'd; or elſe 2dly, the Meſſias ſhall not faile &c. till he have ſet judgment on the earth, that is, till he have ſet up the profeſſion of the Goſpel in the world, among the Heathen, if the Jewes will not receive it. By this rendring of it 'twill appeare what is the meaning of לאמת in the Hebrew of Iſaiah, and εἰς ἀληθῆ (for ἀλήθειαν) in the Septuagint; ſure, that κρίσις εἰς ἀλήθειαν, judgement in truth ſhould be ſet for true judgement, and rendred ſo, he ſhall bring forth true judgment, and ſo 'twill remain, that εἰς νῖκος ſhall be the ſumme of the following words, v. 4. he ſhall not faile nor be diſcouraged, till he have ſet judgment on the Earth, and ſo the conſequents both in Iſaiah and here will be the ſame, There, and the Iſles ſhall wait for his law; here, and in his name ſhall the Gentiles truſt. d. Κάλαμος συντετριμμένος Λίνον τυφόμενον Εἰς νῖκος

Ib. Not breake] It is the cuſtome of all writers, very frequent in the ſacred dialect, to uſe phraſes whereby they underſtand much more then they doe expreſſe. e. Ἴδιωμα λέξεως an example of it we have in this verſe out of the Prophet, where Chriſts not breaking the bruiſed reed ſignifies his great mercy, and kindneſſe in repairing and reſtoring and curing the bruiſed weakling, and ſo his not quenching the ſmoaking flax, is his enlivening, quickening, enflaming that fire or ſpark of grace or goodneſſe, which was almoſt quench'd. So ἀργὸν ῥῆμα idle word v. 36. is much more then idle, vain, even blaſphemous ſpeeches. So Eph. 5. 11. where the Gentile foule abominations taken up by the Gnoſticks, are called ἄκαρπα ἔργα τῆς σκότους, unprofitable works of darkneſſe, meaning ſurely not that they brought in no profit or advantage, but the greateſt danger, and miſchief in the world. So ἀχρεῖος δοῦλος is a wicked and not only an unprofitable ſervant. So in Philoxenus's Gloſſary, Nequam ἀχρεῖος, and Nequitia ἀχρειότης, and ſo in Cyrils Greek Gloſſary: So in Heſiod, ἀχρεῖον ἀνὴρ an unprofitable man is he that neither underſtands himſelf nor heeds others, the moſt ſenceleſſe, wretchleſſe perſon: Of the ſame nature is illaudatus, unpraiſed, in Latine, of which ſee A. Gellius l. 2. c. 6. where he proves that word to ſignifie omnium peſſimum ac deterrimum, the worſt and baſeſt of all. And ſo l. 7. c. 11. he makes ἄπιστον ἀκόλαστον, ἄχρειον, ἄχρηστον, κακότροπον, μιαρὸν ἤθεσιν, intemperate, unprofitable, uſeleſſe, ill-mannerd, deteſtable, to be all one, the interpretation of the Latine Nequam, a wicked man, but literally good for nothing. So ἄνομος which properly ſignifies without law, and ἀνομία, a breach, or commiſſion, againſt the law, is oft ſet to ſignifie the higheſt degree of obdurate prophane ſinning, 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. being there ſpoken of Simon Magus the moſt blaſphemous apoſtate. So though παραβαίνειν literally ſignifies to tranſgreſſe and may belong to the leaſt ſin, as being a variation from the ſtrict rule of the Law, yet παραβάτης, he that tranſgreſſes 2 Jo. 9. and ſo παραβάτης tranſgreſſor (ſince the ſolemn title of Julian) ſignifies an Apoſtate. So 2 Tim. 3. 3 ἀφιλάγαθοι, thoſe which doe not love the good is ſet to expreſſe the moſt virulent haters of the orthodox pious Chriſtians. So 1 Cor 13. 6. where 'tis ſet down as the character of the charitable man, ὐ χαίρει ἐπὶ τῇ ἀδικίᾳ, he rejoyceth not in iniquity, the meaning is, he is very much troubled, and ſorrowfull, ſo v. 5. ὐ φυσιῶται, the charitable man is not puft up ſignifies much more then ſo, that he is extremely humble. So in the third commandement of the Decalogue, where 'tis ſaid of the perjured perſon, that the Lord will not hold him guiltleſſe, that ſure ſignifies, that God will look on him, and deal with him as a moſt guilty puniſhable perſon. And ſo 1 Pet. 1. 18. ματαία ἀναστροφὴ vain converſation, is moſt vitious, and enormouſly ill, and Rom. 1. 16. ὐκ ἐπαισχύνομαι I am not aſhamed, is, I rejoyce and glory in the Goſpel of Chriſt. And Rom. 8. 8. They that are in the fleſh, (that is, thoſe that follow their carnall appetites, in deſpight of the Law, cannot pleaſe God, that is, are very farre from pleaſing, being in profeſt enmity to him v. 7. muſt needs be hated and oppoſed by him. And v. 12. We are debters not to the fleſh to live after the fleſh that is, we are farre from all obligation to goe on any farther in any carnall courſe, 'tis more then time to give over that, as 1. Pet. 4. 3. the time paſt of our lives may ſuffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, that is, 'tis abundantly ſufficient, much more then enough, to have ſpent ſo vilely. So Rom. 13. 10. where it is only ſaid of Charity that κακὸν ὐ κατεργάζεται, it worketh no evil to the neighbour, the meaning certainly is, that 'tis ſo farre from doing ſo, that it worketh all the good it can, or otherwiſe it would not thence be concluded, that it were πλήρωσις τοῦ νόμου the filling up, and improving, of the law. V. 24. Beelzebub] Beelzebub in Hebrew בעל זבוב, is rendred by the Greek of the Old Teſtament Βαὰλ μυῖαν, the prince of the flie or flies, the god of Ekron 2 Kin. 1. 2. and v. 6. being indeed an Idol, that the inhabitants f. Βεελζεβούβ.

inhabitants of that city in Palæstine worshipped, and conceived to have power over all hurtfull flies, and to drive them out of their region. That this was the heathen Jupiter is not improbable, the title of μύαγρος, μυώδης, ἀπόμυιος, ἀπομυαῖος, μύαγρος and μυοδήκτας being bestow'd on him by the Heathens, that is, he that caught, or, drove away flies. This Idol in * Pliny is call'd Achor Deus from Accaron or Ekron the name of that city, and, as he saith, the Cyrenæans, when any plague of flies comes on them, sacrifice and pray to him, and on that they die presently. This is here called Prince of Devils, that is, one that hath power over them (as 'twas, it seems, beleived) able to throw them out of those that were possess'd with them, (whole legions together) like swarms of flies, which, with their Prince or chieftain, fly about in the upper and middle region of the ayre; This gives the reason of their speech here, why they conceived Christ to cast out Devils by Beelzebub, because Beelzebub they thought to have that power, and therefore to have the name of Ruler, or Prince of Devils, and Christ visibly casting them out, they thought he operated by this power.

V. 27. Your children] Your children here signifie either your Disciples, that is, spirituall children, or your countrey-men, that is, children of your nation naturally, and so he means the Jewes, who did pretend at least to exorcise and cast out Devils, in the name of the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob, which was their ordinary form of Exorcisme; and which, it seems, the sons of Scheva were willing to change into the name of the Lord Jesus, in imitation of the Apostles Act. 19. 13. So in Justinus against Trypho the Jew, If, saith he, you invoke the name of any of your Kings, or just men, or Prophets or Patriarchs, the Devil will not obey you, but if you call upon the God of Abraham &c. and so exorcise, ἴσως ὑποσταγήσεται, perhaps he will obey; So saith Irenæus, By the invoking of the most high, and almighty, even before the coming of Christ, men were delivered from the wicked Spirits, and à Dæmoniis universis, from all kinds of Devils; And so Tertull. contra Marcion. expounds this passage in S. Luke that Christ affirms himself to cast out Devils by the same power, by which their children did, in virtute scilicet creatoris, by virtue of the Creator. That there was this custome among the Jewes (and so long continued) of charming and incantations, may farther appear by the latter remainders, (being, as appears by the Christians recouncing them, abuses of the true) which we find in the forms of renouncing Judaisme, in the Liturgies of the Greek Church; where, after the mention of the severall feasts and Sabbaths, is added καὶ τῆς γονλείας, καὶ τῆς ἐποδαΐας, καὶ τοῖς φυλάγμασι, καὶ πᾶσι (not as 'tis read by Goar out of Allatius his Manuscript, and that of Cryptoferrara, φυλακτηρίοις by him rendred observationibus, but without question) φυλακτηρίοις ἀποτάσσομαι, I renounce all charms and incantations and defensatives, &c. The Phylacteries there renounced being not those (mention'd in this Gospel c. 23. 5.) worne about them as remembrances of a part of the Divine law, but such Antidotes as we now speak of, which they carried about them, to defend themselves from Witchcraft, and Fascinations, whether they were some written Characters, or the names of God, as the God of Abraham, the Lord of Sabbaoth, &c. From the Jewes the Ægyptians borrowed their magicall practises, saith Orig. cont. Cels. l. 1. and l. 4. ὧν πλεῖστον δύνανται τὰ ὀνόματα ζωαπτόμενα τῇ τῶν Θεῶν θεραπείᾳ, ὡς ὁ μόνον παρὰ τοῖς ἔθνεσι χρηστὸς ἐν τοῖς θεοῖς εὐχαῖς, καὶ ἐν τῷ καλεπάδην δαίμονας, τῷ, Ὁ Θεὸς Αβραὰμ, ὁ Θεὸς Ισαὰκ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ιακὼβ, ἀλλὰ καὶ σχεδὸν καὶ πάντας παρὰ τοῖς ἐποδαῖων, καὶ μαγεύων πραγματευόμενος· ἐνείσκεται δὲ ἐν τοῖς μαγικοῖς συγγράμμασιν ἡ τοιαύτη τῶν Θεῶν ἐπίκλησις καὶ παράληψις τῶν Θεῶν ὀνομάτων, &c. The names of Abraham &c. join'd with the name of God is not only of force in the Jewes prayers, and exorcisms, but almost all others that dealt in conjurations use them: and from thence the Ignorant sort came to take Abraham for the name of a God, saith S. Chrysostome, because of the form Θεὸς Αβραάμ, by them thus easily mistaken. So in like manner the words Zebaoth and Adonai were ordinary among them, saith Origen l. 4. and * Iamblichus calls these Assyria nomina, that is, Hebrew names, as when Themistius saith the saying of, The Kings heart is in the hands of God, is taken out of the Assyrian books, he clearly means the Hebrew, the Book of the Proverbs, and the letters now used for Hebrew letters, are properly the Assyrian, which in their captivity they compelled them to use, in stead of their own ancient letters, which only the Samaritane retaineth. The same Incantations were by them also used in curing diseases, as I remember there is a famous one in Trallian for the cure of the Gowt, and Pausanias in his description of the rites of the Pyretheia (mention'd by Strabo l. 15.) saith that in Lydia the Magician having laid wood on the altar, first puts a Mitre on his head, then ἐπίκλησιν ὅτε ὁ Θεῶ ἐποιδὴ βάρβαρος, καὶ ἀδαμῶς ζωὴ τοῖς Ελλησιν, calls upon some kind of God in a barbarous form, not understood by the Grecians, ἐποιδὴ ὁ ἀπολεγόμενος ἐκ βιβλίου he reads his charm out of a book (we might render it literally, out of the Bible) ἀνὰ ὃ πυρὸς ἀνάγκη πᾶσα ἀφθῶαι τὰ ξύλα (as in the story of Elias) and presently the wood is set on fire, Eliac. a. Such formes as these 'tis not improbable that God was sometimes pleased to prosper, when he was particularly call'd on, as the one true God, as he had revealed himself to his own people, and not as one of the false Gentile gods, and when 'twas thus, 'twas sure the power of the true God, and not any virtue in the words, that did it. This Christ uses as an argument ad homines, that they who themselves profess'd to cast out Devils by the God of Abraham, had no reason to say Christ did it by the Prince of Devils.

* De Myst. l. 8. c. 4.

g. Τοὺς υἱοὺς ὑμῶν

V. 32. Speaketh a word] It is ordinary in the Hebrew dialect for speaking to signifie doing, and word to signifie thing, and so here to blaspheme or to speak a word against the son of man, and again against the Holy Ghost, is to oppose and resist them. Now the phrase Son of man, here belongs unto Christ, as he appear'd in the weakness of humane state, the son of Mary, considered without any such light shining in him, to convince all men that he was the Messias, viz. Christ abstracted from the great power of his doctrine and miracles, which when they did appeare, convinced the Auditors to an acknowledgment, that never man spake as he spake, and the beholders here, v. 23. and elsewhere, that sure he was the Messias. This power (of his doctrine and here particularly) of his miracles, is in the parallel place Luc. 11. 20. called the finger of God (which what it signifies is cleare by Exod. 8. 19. when that is said to be truly the finger of God, that is, a work of Gods own power, which the Magicians by their sorcery were not able to doe) and here v. 28. the spirit of God: which two phrases finger of God, and spirit of God, appeare by these two parallel places compared, to be all one and consequently To oppose, or to speak against the πνεῦμα ἅγιον the holy spirit, or the πνεῦμα Θεῶ Spirit of God, is in this place to oppose the power, and convincing light of these miracles of his, which manifested him to act by the power of God, & so were the Testimonies of God himself, that Christ was, what he affirm'd himself to be, the Messias promised. And that shews the ground of difference betwixt these two sinnes, speaking against the Son of man, and speaking against the Holy Ghost; the first was the not beleiving him to be the Messias, when, though he affirmed himself to be so, yet there was not that convincing light, and manifestation of his being so, but the

h. Βλασφημίαι ῥῆμα τι ὑμᾶτ

second was resisting this light thus brightly shining in him, acknowledging the miracles which he did, Joh. 11. 48. but rather then they would acknowledge them to be done by God (because if they did that, they must receive him as the Messias, which they would not doe, because he was not such an one, as they had fancyed, and desired he should be, a temporall deliverer) affirming them to be done by the Devill v. 24. which being their onely possible evasion, (and that here confuted by Christ by three arguments, the first v. 26. the second v. 27, 28. and the third v. 29, and 30.) he now tells them, that this, if they continue in it, must needs bee a wilfull blindnesse, and so not capable of that excuse of ignorance or blinde zeale, of which the former sinne was capable.

i. Ἀφεθήσεται αὐτῷ

Ib. It shall be forgiven him] The difference of these two sinnes being set downe, (note h.) it followes now that the former of these was a sinne, for which under the Law of the Jewes there was place for sacrifice, and and so for forgivenesse (upon a generall confession of all unknowne sins, and asking pardon for them of God) It did not incurre that sanction of Death, or Excision from the people, and proportionably (in the Christian anagogy) it was in the number, or of the nature of those sins, by which the sinner, if before living spiritually, doth not ipso facto become spiritually dead, nor incurre present obligation to death eternall, but by Christs sacrifice is preserved from it; and if before he were spiritually dead, yet is not this such, as is to him imputed, so as to fill up the measure of his iniquities, and bring utter desertion upon him, but (as a sin ἀκουσιαδείσης ψυχῆς or unaffected ignorance, Num. 15. 28.) is accordingly pardonable by a generall repentance (such was that of Nathaniel Joh. 1. 45. Can any good come out of Nazareth? which was speaking a word against the son of man, and yet easily pardonable.

k. Οὐκ ἀφεθήσεται.

Ib. It shall not be forgiven] As that former kind of sin was capable of mercy, so this second was of a farre higher nature, none of those ἀγνοήματα Ignorances, for which only sacrifices were appointed under the law, Heb. 9. 7. Num 15. 18. but parallel to those, for which there was no Sacrifice accepted (see Heb. 10.) but just vengeance and punishment under the Law, to which death without mercy was to be expected on the impenitent opposers, the ὑπεναντίοι and ἀντιλήπτορες adversaries and despisers, Heb. 10. 27, 28. Those that sin thus, are the soul that doth ought presumptuously, or with a high hand, Num. 15. 30. (a hand lifted up, saith the Hebrew, a hand against Gods finger, Lu. 11. 20. or against the holy Spirit here) and so that reproaches the Lord there, as the spirit, Heb. 10. 27. (which is just the βλασφημία or blaspheming the spirit here, and so the Hebrew נאץ reproach there is rendred blaspheny by the Greek 2 Kin. 19. 22.) and so must be cut off from the people; And proportionably now under the Gospel such a sin as this shall not be forgiven: the offender thereby, if he were before spiritually living, certainly dyes spiritually, and so is cut off from Gods true Israel (and by the Apostles and the Churches discipline is to be cut off from the congregation by censures) the sacrifice of Christs death, typifyed by the legall sacrifices, doth not obtain, that such sinners should not fall into present spirituall death, and present obligation to eternall death, nor doth the spirit of meeknesse, but the rod of Excommunication belong to such. Or if the offender were not before spiritually living, this addes unto his dead works, and so brings on him a new obligation to eternall death; Though the sacrifice of Christs death, if they repent of such sin particularly, and actually, (God giving them space of life to do so) may and certainly doth raise them up from this spiritual death, and obligation to eternall, by Justification. But without such particular speciall repentance from their sin particularly retracted, they shall continue in death spirituall here, till they fall into eternall hereafter, which is now by Christ most clearly revealed against all wilfull sin continued in impenitently, though it were not before so clearly revealed under the Law. The issue of this whole matter, as farre as concern'd the Pharisees there, was this, that unlesse their sinne were particularly retracted by repentance, and Christ received, and acknowledged upon these miracles of his, or afterwards by the conviction, which the Holy Ghost should work upon the crucifiers, they can never have pardon or remission, not that they that were here guilty, should never after repent, or upon repentance be accepted; This is not said here or in any other place, but rather the contrary is every where affirmed in the Scripture, which offereth Repentance to all (and that so really, that by the grace of Christ, and the Holy Ghost assisting his word they may receive it) and promiseth pardon to all, be they never so great sinners, so they doe amend their lives sincerely, and lay hold on Gods mercy in Christ; and this is particularly apply'd to those Pharisees, by force of Christs prayer for his crucifiers (which was certainly heard) Father forgive them, that is, deny them not the means of forgivenesse, (the power of Repenting) and forgivenesse if they shall repent; And accordingly the Apostles after teach that God had exalted Christ to his right hand to give repentance unto Israel, Act. 5. 31. that is, to all Israel, Act. 2. 36, and 38. and particularly those crucifying rulers, Act. 3. 17. whose ignorance is there, as on the crosse by Christ, urged to make their case the more hopefull, not that it was not notoriously vincible and criminous, but that they had not yet received all those means, and methods of the Holy Ghost for their conversion, the greatest of all being yet behind, the raising up Christ from the dead, to be such a sign to move them, as Jonas was, whereupon v. 38. &c. he tells them, that that only sign more they should have (though they were a malitious and adulterous generation) and when that was witness'd by the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles, and the preaching, and miracles wrought by that descent, then they that come not in to Christ, shall never be forgiven, nor be capable of any farther means of working Repentance in them, this being indeed the last that should ever be allow'd them.

l. Ἄφεσις εἰς μέλλοντα δίδωσι

Ib In this world &c.] This phrase seems to referre to a perswasion of the Jewes that some sins which could not be forgiven upon their sacrifices (whether their daily sacrifices, or that on the great day of Expiation) and so are irremissible ἐν τούτῳ τῷ αἰῶνι, in this age, might yet be remitted, and pardon'd ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι, in that to come, which sometimes signifies among them the age of the Messias, sometimes the state after death, (see note on Lu. 1. 0.) But of this sin unrepented of, saith Christ, there is no place for any such hope; That opinion of yours, that every Jew hath his part in the age to come, as that notes the age of the Messias (there being now no farther Messias to be look'd for by you) shall stand you in no stead, if you stand out impenitently against all this light and manifestation of divine power, now evidently testifying, that I am the Messias. And for the state after death, when that comes and your sentence is once past, there will be small hope of relief, or release for you.

m. Ἀργὸν ῥῆμα

V. 36. Idle word.] The word ἀργὸν may bear proportion in sense to the Hebrew שוא, which signifies vain indeed, but frequently false, because that which is false wants the solidity and substance of Truth. So ματαιον λόγον καὶ ψευδῆ, vanity and lyes, Prov. 30. 8. Or as the Greek ἀργὸς is derived, quasi ἄεργος, when the words are without deeds agreeing to them. Thus κενὸς λόγος vain speech, Eph. 5. 6. is, not unprofitable, but false speaking, such as with which they are advised, that they be not deceived. But 'tis farther observable from the Scripture style, mention'd Note e. (which (which uſes to ſignifie more then the words literally import) that the word ἄκαρπος unfruitful Eph. 5. 11. and μάταιος vain doe ſignifie not only the negation of, but contrariety to all profit, that is, the greateſt wickedneſſe. and ſo may ἀργὸς here. The advice of Pythagoras, Αἱρετώτερόν σοι ἔστω λίθον εἰκῇ βάλλειν ἢ λόγον ἀργόν, Let it be more deſirable to thee, or chooſe rather to caſt a ſtone at an adventure, then an idle ſpeech, where it is evident that λόγος ἀργὸς is at leaſt a raſh ſpeech, and ſuch, as from which a man himſelf, or others may as probably receive ſome conſiderable hurt, as from a ſtone raſhly caſt we have reaſon to expect. And accordingly in this place R. Stevens mentions another reading, πονηρὸν, in ſtead of ἀργὸν, every wicked word. Thus will the ἀργὸν ῥῆμα be the ſame with πονηρὸν evil things v. 35. and thus it may referre to the notion of πονηρὸν ῥῆμα uſed for reproach and contumely, c. 5. 11. for ſuch was that againſt Chriſt v. 24. that great contumely and falſity of his caſting out Devils by the Prince of Devils That it is ſome grand crime, not every word which tends not to ſome ſpecial end of Chriſtian edification, appears by the next verſe, where they are affirm'd to be ſuch, as for which under Chriſt men are ſure to be condemn'd, and not by evil works or actions only.

n. τρεῖς ἡμ. καὶ τρεῖς νύκτας.

V. 44. Three dayes &c.] That Chriſt was not in the earth three nights, it is clear, and therefore the way of interpreting this place muſt be taken from a figure, which expreſſes one whole thing by two parts of it. Thus the heaven and the earth in S. Peter 2 Pet. 3, 7. (ſee Note e.) ſignifie the world; And the natural day, conſiſting of night and day, and beginning among the Hebrews at Evening, is here meant by this phraſe night and day, and ſo Chriſt is ſaid to be three dayes and three nights in the earth, though the firſt natural day he was not in the grave any part of the night, but the latter part of the Friday, all Saturday, and ſo much of Sunday as untill the Sun approached their Horizon. The reckoning of Daies by the Jewes was by the νυχθήμερον evening and morning, which made up the naturall day, ſo among the Athenians alſo, ſee A. Gellius l. 3. c. 2. And as it is practiſed in the buſineſſe of Circumciſion, which was preciſely obſerved the eighth day, if the child were born in one day, though but half an hour before the end of it, that is, before the beginning or evening of the next, that half hour was counted for one of the eight daies (becauſe, ſay they, legall daies are not accounted from time to time, or from houre to houre) ſo is it here, that part of Friday wherein he was buried, was the firſt day of this number. Thus when Lu. 9. 28. 'tis ſayd, about eight daies after, Mat. 17. 1. and Mar. 9. 2. 'tis after ſix daies, that is, after ſix daies complete, the firſt and the laſt being not complete, and ſo though numbred by one, yet omitted by two Evangeliſts, and accordingly the ſpace of theſe very three daies, of Chriſts lying in the grave untill his reſurrection, are, when 'tis prophetically mentioned by Hoſea, c. 6. 2. ſaid to be after two days: So a luſtrum and an Olympiad, though they contain but four complete yeares are yet ſaid to be five yeares, after the manner of our accounting a tertian, and a quartan Ague. See Nebriſſenſis quinquag. c. 25. and If. Caſaubon againſt Baron. p. 16.

But the ſowing of ſeed among thorns denoteth him, that heareth the Goſpel, but the ſollicitude and care of preſerving the things of this world (and of getting of riches) being in his heart, where the word is ſown, ſuffocates it, and ſo renders the word in him unfruitful, makes him live never the better for being a Chriſtian.

a. Διδόναι ἑκατόν. V. 8. Hundred fold] That great proportion of an Hundred fold in the harveſt is no ſuch prodigious encreaſe, as men imagine. For though it were ſtrange that to the number of the buſhels of ſeed, there ſhould be an hundred times ſo many brought home by way of increaſe, becauſe a great deal of the corn that is ſowed, miſcarries, and comes to nothing, yet it is eaſie to obſerve, that from one ſingle corn (which is here referr'd to by the ὁ μὲν ἑκατὸν, &c. and ἓν in Mark, that is, one, an hundred) there oft comes ſo many branches, and ſtalks, and grains in all thoſe ſtalks, as may eaſily and ordinarily make up the number ſometimes of thirty, ſometimes of ſixty, nay ſometimes of an hundred fold, though the truth is, the hundred fold is the liberalleſt proportion, and ſo is ſet down as the higheſt degree of fruitfulneſſe in the good ground. See c. 19. 29.

b. Ἔχῃ. V. 12. Hath] The word ἔχειν ſignifies here, (as 'tis plain by the parable,) to uſe, to occupy, to traffick with grace, to take that care of it, which belongs to ſo great a treaſure, ſo ſaith Phavorinus in the word ἐυνοῦχος; ἔχειν τὸ σπουδαίως ἔχειν φασὶ καὶ φυλάττειν. To have is uſed for to take care of, to keep, thus perhaps may κάειν ἔχειν ſignifie Heb. 12. 28. though it be capable of another rendring, as there we ſhall ſee.

c. Συνίημι. V. 19. Underſtandeth] Συνίημι ſignifies ordinarily laying to heart, thinking on, conſidering, ξυνέηκε, Συνέλαβε, ſaith Didymus, and ſo Συμβάλλω Luke 2. 19. ſeems all one with it; and ſo Suidas, Συνίημι δὲ τὸ νοῶ, to conſider or think on, and σκόπει, βλέπε, Συνίει, and Heſychius, Συνίασιν, νοοῦσιν. So Ὀδύσ. ὁ. Σιγῇ νῦν ξυνίει καὶ πέρπο, Conſider and pleaſe thy ſelf in private. And ſo Prov. 21. 12. the Septuagint renders Maſchil by Συνίει, and ſo Pſal. 106. 7. and ſo here v. 15. conſider and turn, anſwerable to Ezech. 18. 28. becauſe he conſidereth and turneth away from his ſins.

d. Ἐκεῖ. Ib. This is he] That the ἕτος δέ παρεὶς ſignifies literally not Him that receives the ſeed, but that which is ſown, either ὁ σπόρος the ſeed in S. Luke, or ὁ λόγος the word or the like, appears both by the parable, in which anſwerable to it is the ἃ μὲν ἔπεσε, &c. ſome fell, that is, in ſowing fell, and alſo more particularly by the parallel place, Luke 8. 11. where 'tis ſaid, that ὁ σπόρος ἐστὶ λόγος, the ſeed is the word, and v. 14. inſtead of the παρεὶς ſown, is the τὸ πεσὸν, that which falls, which muſt needs be the corn, and not the ground, and in S. Mark c. 4. 19. 'tis clearly the corn (and not the man or the ground) that becometh unfruitful, and therefore 'tis clear that as ἕτος he referres to the whole precedent oration, when any one heares, &c. ſo the παρεὶς ſown is the whole of that part of the parable, the ſeed, and the ground, and the ſowing, and the fowles picking it up, all together, and then ἐστὶ ſignifies is denoted by. Only 'tis true, that in the following expreſſion ἕτός ἐστιν ἀκούων, this is he that heareth. &c. the word is is taken a little otherwiſe, and the phraſe ſignifies, this is it, (that is, the ſeed ſown in that ground, or in complexo, the ſeed with its ground, is it) which denoteth, or by which is denoted he that heareth, &c. By both which 'tis obſervable, that in the Scripture Dialect, the word ἐστὶ is or ἕτός ἐστι, this is doth either, as S. Auguſtine ſaith, ſignifie ſignificat, ſignifies, or ſignificatur, is ſignified, that is, denotes one thing which is anſwerable to another, whether it be the ſign, or the thing ſignified, ſometimes the ſigne, as v. 19. the ἕτός ἐστιν ὁ παρὰ τὴν ὁδὸν παρεὶς, this is it that is ſignified by the ſeed ſown by the path ſide, and ſometimes the thing ſignified, as v. 20. ἕτός ἐστιν ὁ τὸν λόγον ἀκούων, this is it which ſignifieth him which heareth the word, &c. and ſo v. 22. and 23.

e. Ἐχθρὸς ἄνθρωπος. V. 28. Enemy] The phraſe ἐχθρὸς ἄνθρωπος, literally enemy man, is here an Hebraiſme, the like as we ſhall find Heſt. 7. 6. the man adverſary, or adverſary man, is this wicked Haman. And ſo it reſtrains not the word here to a man, but leaves it in the latitude, that ἐχθρὸς alone would be, a man, or devil.

f. Ἐρεύξομαι. V. 35. Utter] The word ἐρεύξομαι muſt be rendred, I will poure out, for, ſaith Heſychius ἐρεύξει, βρύσεται, it ſignifies to ſend forth, ſo as a fountain doth water, or as a Tree its juyce or moyſture. Thus נבע (which Pſal. 19. 3. and ſo Pſal. 119. 171. and Pſal. 145. 7. is rendred ἐρεύγομαι) ſignifies ſcaturire, or exundare, to pour forth water from within it, as here the κεκρυμμένα, what was before kept cloſe within.

g. Γραμματεὺς Μαθήτης. V. 52. Scribe] The γραμματεὺς Scribe, here ſet oppoſite to μαθητὴς diſciple, ſignifies him that is skilful in the the Mosaical Law (as the disciple is he that hath thereto superadded the knowledge of the Gospel) or any man consider'd as furnished with sacred instructions, and observations out of the Law, and the Prophets, and their μυσταγωγίας, any skill in the mysteries of the old Testament, or Jewish religion; who when he becomes a Disciple, or turns Christian, he becomes furnish'd with the mysteries of the New Testament; By this means he is here said to be like the house-keeper, who for the maintaining of his family all the year long, is supposed to have a repository for provisions (which is here call'd his θησαυρὸς or store-house) and there to have layd in provisions of both sorts, new and old, the new of daily purveyance, and the old which we call the store. And being thus furnish'd, when any entertainment is to be made, he brings forth, and useth what is necessary of both. So for the furnishing a table he brings forth his hot and cold meat, that which is new dress'd, and that which remains of former meals. And so in all other parts of Oeconomy, New and old garments in the wardrobe. Thus doth this knowing Jew, being now farther instructed by Christ, lie under an obligation of performing, as occasion requires, all actions both of Morall and Christian virtues, but first and especially of Christian, which are the new, here first named, though the μαθητεύθεις was last, by way of ἐπάνοδος, in other places frequently observable. See Note on chap. 7. b.

Paraphrase.

1. AT that time Herod the Tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus,

2. And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist, [he is risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works doe shew forth themselves in him.]

2. though John the Baptist, when he lived, did no such miracles, yet being put to death, and God thinking fit to raise him from death again, 'tis reasonable to expect that God will assist him with a miraculous power to assure men that he was sent from God, his rising from the dead is so strange a thing, that it must needs be attended with other miracles.

3. For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias sake his brother Philips wife.

4. For John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her.

5. And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him [as a prophet.]

10. And he sent, and beheaded John in the prison.

11. And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damosell: and she brought it to her mother.

12. And his disciples came and took up the body and buried it, and went and told Jesus.

12. And John's disciples took care of his burial, and (probably) continued with that being done came to Jesus, whose forerunner John was, and told him what had befaln John, and him as his disciples.

13. When Jesus heard of it, [he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart; and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities,]

13. that the same might not befall him, before he had fulfilled his office, for which he was sent, (see c. 12. 15.) he departed by ship from thence, taking none but his Disciples with him, and went to a place which was not inhabited, and when the people heard whither he was gone, they took a compasse by land, and came to him thither.

14. And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and [was moved with compassion toward them, and] he healed their sick.

14. was so kind, as not to conceale himself from them any longer, but came to them, and when he was come,

15. And when it was evening, his Disciples came to him, saying. This is a desert place, [and the time is now past] send the multitudes away, that they may goe into the villages and buy themselves victuals.

15. the time of evening when every one gets him to his Inne and provides for his supper is already past,

16. But Jesus said unto them, They need not depart, give ye them to eat.

17. And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves and two fishes.

18. He said, Bring them hither to me.

19. And [he commanded the multitudes to sit down on the grasse,] and took the five loaves, and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven he [c] blessed, and brake, and gave the loaves to his Disciples, and the Disciples to the multitude.

19. he appointed the Apostles Mar. 6. 39. to dispose them meal-wise on grasse-plats there, c.

20. And they did all eat, and were filled; and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full:

21. And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, [besides] women and children.

21. not counting

22. And straightway Jesus constrained his Disciples to get into a ship, and to goe before him unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away.]

22. Upon this the multitudes designing to take him and proclaim him King, John 6. 15. he presently sent his Disciples before him by sea to the wildernesse, Mar. 6. 32. (which was on the same side with Bethsaida and Capernaum, whither it seems they went, Joh. 6. 17.) that so he might quietly dismisse the multitude.

23. And when he had ſent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain apart to pray: and * when the evening d was come, he was there alone.

d. * The evening ending.

24. But the ſhip was now in the midſt of the ſea, toſſed with waves for the wind was contrary.

25. And [in the fourth watch of the night] Jeſus went out unto them, walking on the ſea.

26. And when the Diſciples ſaw him walking on the ſea, they were troubled, ſaying, It is [a ſpirit;] and they cryed out for feare.

27. But ſtraightway Jeſus ſpake unto them ſaying, Be of good cheer: It is I, be not afraid.

28. Give me thy commiſſion, and then I know I ſafely may.

28. And Peter anſwered him, and ſaid, Lord, if it be thou, [bid me] come unto thee on the water.

29. And he ſaid, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ſhip, he walked on the water to goe to Jeſus.

30. But when he ſaw the wind boyſterous, he was afraid, and beginning to ſink, he cryed, ſaying, Lord ſave me.

31. why did thy minde ſtand divided, flote between faith and diffidence? why didſt thou ſtagger? why didſt thou diſtruſt my power, when I had bid thee come to me?

31. And immediately Jeſus ſtretched forth his hand and caught him, and ſaid unto him, O thou of little faith, [wherefore didſt thou doubt?]

32. Chriſt and Peter.

32 And when [they] were come into the ſhip, the winde ceaſed.

36. And beſought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment, and as many as [touched] were made perfectly whole.

Annotations on S. MATTHEW, Chap. XIV.

a. Προβιβάζω

V. 8. Inſtructed] The word προβιβάζω, ſaith Budaus, hath a peculiar notion for a Client inſtructing an Advocate in his cauſe, telling him the heads of his defence, and ſo it may properly ſignifie here, and ſo the Vulgar reads præmonita, that Herodias inſtructed her daughter, admoniſhed her before hand, what ſhe ſhould propoſe to the King by way of requeſt; ſo in Xenophon Απομνημ. α. the Maſters having ſhewed their Scholars how to do their buſineſs, καὶ τῷ λόγῳ προβιβάζειν do alſo by words premoniſh them. But beſides this, Heſychius renders προβιβασθεὶς, πεσαχθεὶς, and in the old Gloſſary, προβιβάζω promoveo, proveho, and Suidas, προβιβάζεις, πείθεις, παρασύρεις, in all of theſe to ſtirre up, perſwade, inſtigate. The Interpreters of the Old Teſtament uſe it for שנן to ſharpen, Deut. 6. 7. and that belongs to the ſame ſenſe.

b. Ἐλυπήθη ὁ βασ.

V. 9. Was ſorry] Of Herods ſorrow many motives, and reaſons might be collected; One leſſe obſervable might be, becauſe this was his Birthday feaſt; On ſuch dayes they were wont to make merry, and entertain the people, and make it Holy-day from all ſecular employments, and they tooke ſpeciall care to avoid all ill omens, to have no quarrels nor contentions, no pleadings in foro, (Natalem colimus, tacete lites, Mart. l. 10. 87.)

but eſpecially no ſhedding of blood, no executions, counting it unfit to deprive any of life, that day, wherein they received theirs (Ἐγὼ δὲ ὦ μηδένα κολάζειν τῶν καλαχείτων ἄχρις ἂν ὀπφανῆς, γενέθλιοι, καὶ πανηγύρεις, &c. διεξέλθωσι, ſaith Philo againſt Flaccus; and if any hanged on the gallowes, or croſs before, they were then to be taken down. This was done by the Pagans, leſt they ſhould offend, or ſadden or diſpleaſe their Genius; and Herod being more then half a Pagan, might well have this cauſe of grief, and ſo be troubled to doe this on John Baptiſt this day. But beyond this, two other reaſons of Herods ſorrow are ſet down by the Evangeliſts, on Mar. 6. 20. where 'tis ſaid Herod feared John, and look'd upon him as a juſt and holy man, and thereupon reformed many things upon his inſtance and took pleaſure in hearing him, and that is mention'd as the obſtruction of Herodias's deſigne of killing him, v. 19. A ſecond reaſon is here mention'd v. 5. he feared the multitude, becauſe they counted John as a prophet, he was afraid to meddle with him becauſe of his popularity, (as the Phariſees were, c. 21. 26.) Both theſe had an influence on Herod, and cauſed this reluctancy to his execution.

c. Εὐλογεῖν

V. 19. Bleſſed] That εὐλογεῖν to bleſſe ſignifies to give thanks, is ſufficiently known; And the ſame is otherwiſe exprels'd by praiſing, glorifying, ſinging, confeſſing, calves of lips, but eſpecially giving thanks, and two of them together, ἐν χάριτι ᾄδοντες, Col. 3. 16. with thansgiving ſinging or praiſing. The only difficulty here is, whether the Verb εὐλόγησε, he bleſs'd be to be rendred ſo, as to joyne with the bread and fiſhes, or with the word God underſtood, that is, whether it be, he gave thanks, to God, or he bleſſed the bread, &c. praying for Gods bleſſing upon them. The ſenſe in either notion will be much the ſame; For if he bleſſed, or gave thanks to God, he is to be ſuppoſed alſo to have pray'd for his bleſſing upon them, and ſo if he gave thanks, or pray'd for bleſſing on them, it muſt be to God that this was perform'd. But the uſe of the phraſe in the New Teſtament inclines it (both here and Mar. 6. 41. and 8. 7.) to the latter notion, that of bleſſing the bread, giving thanks for it; For ſo 1 Cor. 10. 16. where it hath an Accuſative caſe joyn'd with it, it is ποτήριον the cup, or pot, the cup of bleſſing ὃ εὐλογοῦμεν which we bleſſe, which makes it neceſſiary to render the word in that place, not to give thanks ſimply, but to bleſſe, that is, by giving of thanks, to ſeparate or conſecrate it to a holy uſe, as when Gen. 2. 3. 'tis ſaid of God, that he hallowed the ſeventh day, and bleſſed it. Thus 1 Sam. 9. 13. we read εὐλογεῖν τὴν θυσίαν to bleſſe the ſacrifice, that is, by giving thanks to God to conſecrate it. And ſo Lu. 9. 16. 'tis clearly (without the notion of any extraordinary Conſecration) of the Loaves and Fiſhes, εὐλόγησεν αὐτοὺς, he bleſſed them, and and brake &c. And this is ἁγιάζειν to ſanctifie with prayer &c. 1. Tim. 4. 5. which belongs to the uſe of every creature, and not only of thoſe which are conſecrated to a peculiar uſe in the ſervice of God.

d. ὀψία

V. 23. Evening] The different ſignification of ὀψίας γενομένης, the evening being come in this verſe, from the ſame phraſe v. 15. may be obſerved; For betwixt that and this, the people were ſet to ſuppet, and riſen again, the Diſciples ſent to take boat, and the multitudes diſmiſs'd by Chriſt, and all that being done, Jeſus goes by himſelf to the mount to pray, and then after that it followes, ὀψίας δὲ γενομένης, the evening being come. The ſure way of underſtanding this muſt be by comparing theſe paſſages with the relations of the other Evangeliſts; S. John aſſignes not any part of the day to the former part of the action, but to the latter he doth, Joh. 6. 16. ὡς δὲ ὀψία ἐγένετο when the evening was come, S. Mark in the firſt place hath a different phraſe, ἤδη ὥρας πολλῆς γενομένης much time being now ſpent c. 6. 35. and S. Luke another, ἡ δὲ ἡμέρα ἤρξατο κλίνειν c. 9. 12. Now the day began to wane. In the latter place, S. Marke reads with S. Matthew, ὀψίας γενομένης evening being come, and S. Luke proceeds not to that part of the ſtory. By this it is cleare, that the latitude of the word ὀψία, which we render evening, is it which muſt reconcile the ſeeming difference. The evening and the morning were the firſt day, ſaith Moſes, and ſo 'tis clear that the ὀψία ſignifies all from the beginning of the evening, till the next morning, the ſpace of the Suns being ſet, as the morning is of the Suns being up. So Mat. 28. 1. ὀψὲ δὲ σαββάτων the evening of the Sabbath is immediately attended with τῇ ἐπιφωσκούσῃ εἰς μίαν σαββάτων, the light of the morning of the firſt day of the week, and here the firſt thing, after this laſt ὀψίας γενομένης, is the fourth watch in the night, that is, toward morning. According to this latitude, the declination of the day, the Sun-ſetting in S. Luke, and the, much time being ſpent in S. Marke, is by S. Matthew call'd ὀψία, v. 15. And the night time (for ſo it was, when they were a rowing in the river, and he at his prayers in the mount) is by all the three Evangeliſts, that mention it, call'd ὀψία too. See note on Mar. 14. c.

e. Γενναρὲτ

V. 34. Geneſaret] The place called כִּנֶּרֶת in Joſuah (and uſed by the Hieruſalem Targum Num. 34. 15.) was after commonly call'd Genezar, ſaith Joſephus, from the Chaldee גַּנּוֹסַר. which was the rendring of that Hebrew; from both which put together, ariſeth the word here, Genezareth, that is, the valley of branches; and this as the title of the whole province, which contain'd in it the Lake ſo call'd, and the City in the tribe of Nephthaly, which Herod adorn'd with magnificent buildings, and call'd it Tiberias in honour of Tiberius Ceſar, and accordingly the Lake of Genezareth is ſometimes call'd the Sea of Tiberias.

CHAP. XV.

Paraphraſe.

1. THen came to Jeſus Scribes and Phariſees which were of Jeruſalem, ſaying,
2. Why doe thy diſciples tranſgreſſe the tradition of the elders? for they [a] waſh not their hands [when they eat bread.]

2. before meat, as the Jews think themſelves obliged to do. a.

3. But he anſwered and ſaid unto them, Why doe you alſo tranſgreſſe the commandement of God by [your traditions?]

3. the obſervance and practiſe of thoſe things, which are not taught by God, but by your ſelves delivered to your diſciples? Sure this muſt be acknowledged by you a great fault, who expect to have all your own ordinances obſerved ſo punctually.

4. For God commanded, ſaying, Honour thy father and mother, and he that [b] curſeth father or mother] let him die the death.

4. uſeth them ill in words or deeds, that lightly regards them, that refuſeth to doe ought for them; v. 9. b.

5. But ye ſay, Whoſoever ſhall ſay to his father or his mother, It is a [c] gift by whatſoever thou mighteſt be profited by me,

5, 6. But contrary to this, your tradition is, that if a man can anſwer his parents, when they need any relief, and tell them, ſaying, I have bound my ſelf by an oath that I will c.

† It is an interdict, or he is obliged.

6. And honour not his father or his mother, † he ſhall be free. Thus have ye made the commandement of God of none effect] by your tradition.

not doe any thing to the releif of my father and my mother; or, as ſome will underſtand it, O Father, that by which thou ſhouldeſt be releived by me, is a gift already devoted to God, and cannot without impiety be otherwiſe employed, and by this piety to God, I may be as profitable and helpfull to thee, for God will repay it upon me and thee in our needs, he is under obligation not to give it his father, or (as ſome would have it in purſuance of the latter interpretation) He hath ſaid enough to his parents, or, he ſhall be free from that obligation to relieve them. (See note on 1 Pet. 3. d.) Here is a clear example to demonſtrate that you that ſtand ſo for the obſerving of your traditions, doe make no ſcruple to evacuate the obligation of Gods commands.

7. Ye hypocrites, well did Eſaias prophecy of you, ſaying,
8. This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips: but their heart is farre from me.

* injunctions, ἐντάλματα.

9. But in vain doe they worſhip me, teaching for doctrines the * traditions of men.]

9. The ſervice which they performe to me is little worth, and likely to receive a ſlender reward, when my commands are not heeded by them, but their own conſtitutions ſet up in ſtead of them, ſee Mar 7. 7. and Heb. 8. note. a.

10. And he called the multitude, and ſaid unto them, Hear and underſtand.]

10. And leaving the Phariſees with ſome diſlike, he calls the multitude, (who while he talk't to the Phariſees, ſtood at ſome diſtance) and ſpeaks more hopefuly of, and cheerfully to them, ſaying, To this matter of waſhing before meat, ſo inſiſted on by the Phariſees, do you conſider what I now ſay.

11. Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man, but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man.]

11. Not that which is eaten, but that which is ſpoken polluteth any man.

12. Then came his Diſciples, and ſaid to him, knoweſt thou that the Phariſees [were offended] when they heard this ſaying?

12. galled and diſcouraged from receiving thy doctrine. d.

13. But he anſwered and ſaid, Every † [d] plant which my heavenly father hath not planted, ſhall be rooted up.]

13. To this he gave no other reply but this, All ſuch as they, which come with ſuch prejudices, as the Phariſees do, that prefer their own injunctions before the commands of God, v. 9, 'tis to be expected, that the telling them the truth will aliene them. All ſeed but that which falls on the good ground, and is there radicated in humility and piety, ſuch as my father owns the planting of, ſhall certainly come to nought. And conſequently ſo muſt all faith in theſe opinionative men, and therefore 'tis not ſtrange if they be galled, and depart from me, upon the noting and reproving of their errors.

14. If this have galled and diſcouraged and drove them from me, let them go, They are ſtupidly and perverſly ignorant themſelves and take great pleaſure to be accounted Doctors, and Rabbi's, inſtructors of the ignorant, and what can be the effect of this, but that the leaders, and they that are led by them, ſhall together ingulfe themſelves in perdition.

14. Let them alone, they be blind leaders of the blind, And if the blind lead the blind they ſhall both fall into the ditch.]

15. Tell us the meaning of

15. Then anſwered Peter, and ſaid unto him, [Declare unto us] this parable.

16. And Jeſus ſaid, are ye alſo * yet without underſtanding?

17. every thing that we eat, firſt comes from without, and ſo is no part of us, is not imputable to us in reſpect of the principle, and then doth but paſſe or travell through us, is ſoon diſpatched, and thrown out of the body again, and ſo be it never ſo groſſe, never ſo unclean, it cannot pollute the eater, at leaſt not comparably ſo much as that which hath the originall from our ſelves, and hath ſome ſpace of permanency there.

17. Doe not ye yet underſtand, that [whatſoever entreth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is caſt out into the draught?]

18. But unclean, unſavory ſpeeches 'tis cleer that they proceed from the heart, and thoſe that are there, that is, in the heart, that ſpring from that fountain, which we are moſt concerned to keep pure, and which is moſt truly and properly ours, and imputable to us, thoſe are the ſort of things that may moſt reaſonably be deemed to defile any man.

18. But thoſe things which proceed out of the mouth, come forth from the heart, and they defile the man.]

e. 19. For out of the heart proceed e * evill thoughts, murthers, adulteries, fornications, thefts, falſe-witneſſe, † blaſphemies.

* wicked machinations, or, deſignes.

† raylings, or, ſlanders, βλασφημίαι.

20. but ſo meerly corporeal and external a thing as omitting to waſh before meat, cannot be thought to defile any man.

20. Theſe are the things which defile a man. [But to eat with unwaſhed hands defileth not a man.]

21. Then Jeſus went thence, and departed into the coaſts of Tyre and Sidon.

f. 22. an heathen woman born in Phenice, hearing of his miracles, and that he was now come thither, came to him on purpoſe.

22. And behold [a f woman of Canaan came] out of the ſame coaſts, and cryed unto him, ſaying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou ſon of David, my daughter is grievouſly vexed with a Devill.

23. entreated him (ſee note on Joh. 4. b.) ſaying, doe that for her that ſhe deſires, that ſhe may be quiet.

g. 23. But he anſwered her not a word. And his diſciples came, and [beſought him ſaying, g Send her away,] for ſhe cryeth after us.

24 my miſſion is purpoſely to the Jewes, to reduce them to repentance, and ſo to ſhew my miracles among them.

24. But he anſwered and ſaid, [I am not ſent but to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael.]

25. fell down and beſought him.

25. Then came ſhe and [worſhiped him,] ſaying, Lord help me.

26. to work theſe miracles and cures on an heathen, which were deſtin'd to Gods people the Jewes.

26. But he anſwered and ſaid, It is not meet [to take the childrens bread, and to caſt it to dogs.]

h. 27. I beſeech thee Lord, for although it be as thou ſaiſt, yet 'tis ordinary that the dogs of thy mercies to the Jewes.

29. And Jeſus departed from thence, and came [nigh unto the ſea] of Galilee, and went up into a mountain, and ſat down there,

30. deaf, and, by that, dumb, men that had loſt their limbs, and many more ſick of other diſeaſes.

30. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them thoſe that were lame, blind, [dumb, maimed, and many others] and caſt them down at Jeſus feet, and he healed them.

31. And they all whether Jewes or Gentiles, aeknowledg'd this to be a wonderfull work of mercy wrought by the God of Iſrael, and ſuch as no other God was able to doe.

31. Inſomuch that the multitude wondred, when they ſaw the dumb to ſpeak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to ſee, [and they glorified the God of Iſrael.]

32. Then Jeſus called his diſciples unto him, and ſaid, I have compaſſion on the multitude, becauſe they continue with me now three daies, and have nothing to eat, and I will not ſend them away faſting, leſt they faint by the way.

33. And his diſciples ſay unto him, Whence ſhould we have ſo much bread in the wilderneſſe, as to * fill ſo great a multitude?

* feed, or ſatisfie, χορτάσαι

34. And Jeſus ſaith unto them, How many loaves have yee? And they ſaid, ſeven, and a few little fiſhes.

35. And he commanded the multitude to ſit down on the ground.

36. And he took the ſeven loaves and the fiſhes, and gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his diſciples, and the diſciples to the multitude.

37. And they did all eat and were * filled; and they took up of the broken meat that was left ſeven baskets full.

* ſatisfied, ἐχορτάσθησαν

38. And they that did eate, were four thouſand men, beſides women & children.

39. And he ſent away the multitudes, and took ſhip, and came into the coaſts of i Magdala.

Annotations

a. Νιπτῶνται χεῖρας

V. 1. Waſh not their hands] A cuſtome this was taken up among the Jewes, and ſo ſtrictly commanded one another, that he that ſhould not obſerve it, was thought guilty of an heavy crime, and a capitall. So ſaith Rabbi Aquiba, He that takes meat with unwaſh'd hands, is worthy of death, and therefore having, in priſon, water given him for his uſe, to waſh, and to drink, having by accident ſpilt one half of it, he waſh'd his hands in the remainder, thinking it more neceſſary to doe ſo, then to drink, and to die, then to violate the traditions of his Anceſtors. Hence is that of another Jew, Rabbi Joſe, that to eat with unwaſh'd hands, is all one as to lie with a whore.

b. Κακολογῶν

V. 4. Curſeth &c.] The words of this ſecond Text, being by our Saviour taken out of Exod. 21. 17. and ſet down punctually out of the Septuagint, κακολογέω, according to the ſcope of Chriſt, muſt have the extent of the ſignification of the Hebrew radix, קלל, and therefore it ſignifies 1. Poſitively, doing, or, ſpeaking injuriouſly to any, and 2ly, Privatively, lightly regarding, in words, or deeds, and ſo not maintaining them in their need. For as this is the thing to which Chriſts ſcope directs the ſignification of it here, ſo קלל the word uſed in all the Texts, to which this referrs, Exod. 21. 17. Levit. 20. 9. Prov. 20. 20. ſignifies vilipendere, contemnere, parvi facere, to ſlight, and contemne, and ſet at nought (as in Pihel moſt uſually maledicere) So Ezech. 22. 7. πατέρα καὶ μητέρα ἐκακολόγησαν, ſay the Septuagint, where we rightly render it, ſet light by father and mother, and although every part of 'this was not ſo farre meant, Exod. 21. 17. as to bring temporall death on all, that did thus neglect their Parents, yet it is thus fitly extended by Chriſt in the following words, as bringing danger of eternall death on thoſe, who though they did not in plain words curſe their parents (which the Phariſees told them, was all that was meant by that text) would not yet doe ought for them, and ſo in S. Pauls judgment, 1. Tim. 5. 8. were worſe then infidels. It is here farther obſervable, that ὁ κακολογῶν ſignifies here indefinitely, every man, whoſever he be, not accepting any, under what vow ſoever, for ſo 'tis in Lev. 20. 9. איש איש ἄνθρωπος ἄνθρωπος, ſay the Septuagint, every man, or what man ſoever.

c. Κορβᾶν δῶρον.

V. 5. Gift] A ſolemn form of Devoting there was among the Jewes, called ἐυχὴ ὠφελείας, and though very contrary to charity, yet frequent among them, to bind a man's ſelf by vow, or execration, that he will in nothing be beneficiall to his neighbour, his parent &c. ὅρκῳ ἢ ἀγχιστεία πεύμενος ἢ ἄθων, ſaith Philo, he confirms by oath the barbarouſneſſe and ferity of his diſpoſition. And this was called by them Corban, and is often in this ſenſe to be met with in the Miſnaioth, and in Maimonides, and is the word uſed in Mar. 7. 11. and as all one with δῶρον a gift here. And what hath thus paſſed under their vow, is, ſay they, אשור, that is, utterly forbidden or unlawful, or אשור כקרבן unlawful as Corban, which being conſecrated, muſt not be touch'd, or imployed to any other uſes: Which therefore in all probability is the word omitted in the Ellipſis, which others ſupply by ἀναλωθῇ ἔσται, he ſhall be free, but ſhould rather be, he is obliged, may not give his Father. So that the plain meaning of the place is, A Father being in want requires releif of his Son; the Son anſwers that he hath vow'd he will not, and ſo that to him it remains not lawful to relieve him: And the Phariſees approve of this practiſe, that he may thus evacuate his duty to his parent, and, though quite contrary to the precept of honouring and releiving them, yet it was by them thought obligatory to the fruſtrating of that commandement, and many caſes are ſet down wherein it doth ſo, in Maimonides and the Rabbins. See Mr. Pococke Not. Miſcell. p. 414. and ſo this without queſtion is it, which is here charged on the Phariſes by Chriſt; But that which is more ordinarily received by the Ancients, and which Origen had from an Hebrew, is, that Corban and δῶρον are (in the ſence of it Lev. 1. 2. and 7. 14. &c.) a gift conſecrated to God, and ſo ſaith Theophylact the Phariſees (covetous greedy perſons) perſwading children to give nothing to their parents, but to conſecrate all to the treaſury of the Temple, taught them to ſay, O Father, that which thou deſireſt to be profited by me (that is, releived) is a gift, that is, conſecrated to the Temple, and ſo they divided with the children all that they had, ᾧ ὅτι γονεῖς καταλιμπάνοιλο ἀσπρόμοσοι, the poor old parents were left without any releif in their old age. This interpretation is probable alſo, yet appears not to be agreeable to the Jewiſh practiſe, for among them are no foot-ſteps of any cleaving to God, or conſecrating, in this matter, as the teſtimonies produced by Mr. P. doe evidence. However it be, the words in Greek have an Ellipſis, moſt fitly to be ſupplied, as was ſaid by אשור an interdict, or it is unlawfull to breake my vow, and not as others ſupply it by adding, ſhall be guiltleſſe, or, ſhall be free, that is, from the obligation or puniſhment attending that prohibition, or, there is no more required, or, this is enough, or the like.

d. Φυτεία

V. 13. Plant] The word φυτεία plantation here ſignifies not one ſingle plant, but a garden, or nurſery of plants; And ſo fitly belongs to a multitude of men, a ſect, or ſort, as here of the Phariſees v. 12. which followed Chriſt, and heard his doctrine. The only difficulty is, what is meant by ſuch a plantation being planted, or not planted by God. And that will be beſt conjectured from the Context. At one ſaying of Chriſt, the Phariſees were ſcandalized, gall'd, and diſcouraged from following him, or entertaining his doctrine, v. 12. And when Chriſt is told of this, his only anſwer is, Every plantation which is not planted by God, ſhall be rooted out, Where as their being ſcandalized, or diſcouraged from following him, is the rooting out of his plantation, ſo their manner of following, beleiving, entertaining of his doctrine is expreſs'd by Gods having not planted that plantation. The bottome of it is, That Faith, which comes from God, as founded on his teſtimony, and terminated in his doctrine, will extend it ſelf infinitely to all that ſhall come ſo teſtified, and ſo to the whole doctrine of Chriſt, as well as to any part of it, it being certain that God cannot lie, or bear teſtimony to any, that ſhall ſay any thing falſe, and as certain, that all Chriſts doctrine, particularly this, v. 11. hath a tincture of Divinity upon it. And therefore they that profeſſe to hearken to Chriſt, and to receive his doctrine in ſome things, but not in all, to follow him a while, and then to quarrell with his doctrine, when it agrees not with their humour, 'tis hereby evident, that the Faith, which is in them, is not founded on Gods teaching, or teſtifying, (ſee c. 16. 17.) is not his ſeed received into a humble, obedient, honeſt heart, (which is a mould that receives all that comes from God, and brings forth fruit abundantly c. 13. 23.) but is founded on ſome other principle, the gratifying their humours, or intereſt &c. and accordingly as the ſeed that fell on ſtony ground, ſoon withered away, (that kind of beleiver, when tribulation came, was ſcandalized, fell off and forſooke Chriſtianity,) ſo this kind of partiall, hypocriticall faith, of them that beleive Chriſts doctrine no farther then they like it, is ſure not long to laſt, whenſoever a croſſe doctrine comes, as here they are ſcandalized, and fall off from Chriſt, the plantation, being none of Gods, is rooted out. By this will be diſcern'd, what is meant by θεοδίδακτοι, being taught of God, by having any thing revealed from God, c. 16. 17. that is, when as God by his teſtimony of Chriſt, or the holy Ghoſts deſcent on the Apoſtles, teſtifies the truth of any doctrine, ſo the humble, obe- θεοδίδακτοι

c. Διαλογισμοὶ. V. 19. Evil thoughts] Διαλογισμοὶ cannot well in this place ſignifie reaſonings, bare thoughts, without ſubſequent actions, becauſe they are here ſaid to come out of the heart, and to come out of the man, Mar. 7 20. it may therefore poſſibly be wicked talking, from λόγ& ſpeech; and not λόγ& reaſon, according to which it is that Heſychius renders it ἀδολεσχία loquacity, garrulity, and ſo 'twould accord with the mention of the mouth, v. 11, 18, 19. But it may well be that the mouth there may be uſed by a Synecdoche for the outward man, as in Mark 'tis ſet, out of the man, and then other circumſtances there are of the Context, which will, I conceive, ſuggeſt another ſignification of the word, which may be moſt agreeable to them. Our Saviour here mentions ſeveral ſins againſt the ſecond Table, againſt the ſeventh Commandment, adulteries and fornications together, and by ſetting fornications after adulteries, I ſuppoſe he means a fouler ſort of that ſin, Πορνεία. unnatural uncleanneſſe, ſuch as is meant by πορνεία in many other places. Then againſt the eighth, Thefts of all ſorts; the word κλοπας will belong to greater and leſſer kinds of that ſin, and ſo no other word is added to it. Then againſt the ninth, falſe witneſſe, and Βλασφημίαι. βλασφημίαι, that is, defamations and raylings, (as that word being annex'd to ψεύδομαρτυρίαι certainly ſignifies here; and ſo in Cyrils Lexicon βλάσφημ&, maledicus, Βλασφημία, infamia, and Βλασφημῶ, jurgo, maledico,) by which 'tis plain that he mentions the ſins againſt the ſeveral Commandments in the order wherein the Commandments are ſet; and in two of them he ſets down two ſeveral words to comprehend all the ſins againſt thoſe commandements; and the latter of the two an higher ſin then the former. This makes it very probable, that as φόνοι murthers, the breach of the ſixt Commandment, is ſet immediately before adulteries, the breach of the ſeventh, and the word murthers ſignifying the higher part of that ſin, actual bloodineſſe or killing, ſo the πονηροὶ διαλογισμοὶ ſhould be ſet to ſignifie that which is the degree next to actuall murther, and ſo note wicked machinations, or conſpiracies againſt the life of any man; and that not only from the force of the word πονηροὶ wicked, but of διαλογισμοὶ too, by which מזמה (vafricies, machinatio, ſtratagema) is rendred, Pſal. 139. which is in other places rendred ἐσχέρημα conatus, machinatio, Jer. 23. 20. and 30. 20. and ſo the ordinary Hebrew word חשב for διαλογίζομαι, is ἀρχιτεκτονέω, Exod. 31. 4. μηχανεύομαι, 2 Chron. 26. 15. μηχανικὰ ἔργα, Zach. 7. 10. Thus Gen. 6. 5. with the wickedneſſe of man which was great on the earth, and for which the flood came, (by which is to be underſtood that violence mention'd v. 11. and 13. and that blood-guiltineſſe, which is particularly forbidden the ſons of Noah after the flood, Gen. 9. 6. and hedged in with a ceremonial ordinance, v. 4.) is joyned the imagination of the thoughts of his heart, which was only evil continually, no doubt meaning theſe wicked bloody machinations; and ſo 1 Mac. 2. 63. διαλογισμὸς αὐτῶ is the heathen Tyrants bloody machination againſt Gods people. Thus Luke 6. 8. Chriſt knowing their διαλογισμὸς (where that it ſignifies not their ſecret reaſonings of thoughts, appears by the parallel in Mat. 10. 12. where they openly ask him the queſtion, Is it lawful, &c.) it muſt therefore note their treacherous deſignes againſt him, to which this queſtion was ſubſervient, that they might accuſe him. And Luke 2. 3. ὁι πολλῶν καρδιῶν διαλογισμοὶ are the ſeveral deſignes and machinations of men, which lying hid in their hearts, are by the means there mention'd, the coming of Chriſt, brought forth ἐκ τῶν καρδιῶν, out of their hearts, and ſo revealed. And thus Phil. 2. 14. διαλογισμοὶ are added to γογγυσμοὶ murmurings, and both of them together look'd on as ſins, that would much blemiſh the Chriſtian profeſſion among the enemies thereof, but above all, the uſe of the word in this ſenſe is moſt commodiouſly appliable to 1 Tim. 2. 8. where he commands all that pray in every place, to doe it, lifting up pure hands, without wrath and διαλογισμοὶ, where ſure as wrath ſignifies bloudy-mindedneſſe, malice, &c. ſo διαλογισμοὶ is the contriving of that, the deſire of which was contained in the former word, according to that of Iſa. 1. where the hands being full of blood, that is, their bloody ἐγχειρήματα (as they are all one with διαλογισμοὶ) are the things that ſo blemiſh their prayers, and make them odious in Gods ſight. 'Tis indeed in S. Mar. c. 7. 21. only κακοὶ διαλογισμοὶ, and there the order of the ſins according to the Decalogue is not obſerved, and many more are named then here; but becauſe in this place the order is more exact in all the other, it muſt be ſo in all probability in this alſo, and if the notion of διαλογισμοὶ be rightly obſerved in the other places, eſpecially in that to Timothy, then ſure κακοὶ being joyned to διαλογισμοὶ will ſignifie ſuch wicked or evil machinations, and not ordinary evil thoughts. Thus doth the word ſeem to be uſed in the Epiſtle of Clemens Romanus to the Corinthians p. 30. ὑφ' ἓν λέληθεν αὐτὸν ἡ ἐννοιῶν ἡμῶν, ὑφ' ἓν τῶν διαλογισμῶν ὧν ποιέμεθα, The machinations (meaning thereby ſeditions and factions) which they were guilty of, or which they are ſaid to have committed, or acted, which concludes the word to ſignifie ſomewhat beyond thought. Of this word ſee more, Rom. 14. Note a.

f. Καναανίτις. Συροφοίνισσα. V. 22. Woman of Canaan] This woman of Canaan is Mar. 7. 26. called a Syrophœnician, that is, as the Context here ſhewes, a Phœnician of Tyre or Sidon, for in thoſe maritime coaſts Chriſt now was, v. 20. This borders upon Syria, as we ſee in Pliny, Nat. hiſt. l. 5. c. 12. Qui ſubtiliùs dividunt, circumfundi Syriâ Phœnicen volunt, eſſe enim primùm oram maritimam Syriæ ab Arabia,—deinde Phœnicen, (as * Budæus out of an ancient copy hath reſtored that place) they that divide more ſubtily affirm Phœnice to be bounded by Syria, for that there is firſt the ſea-coaſt of Syria toward Arabia, then Phœnice, &c. And ſo * Dionyſius having reſolved of Syria, ὑπὲρ ἁλὸς ἔγγυθεν ἔρπει, that it creeps cloſe upon the Sea, addes that all the Inhabitants are not of one name, but ſeverally called,

Οἱ μὲν ἐπ' ἠπείρῳ, τύπῃς Σύριοι καλέονται,
Οἱδ' ἁλὸς ἐγγὺς ἐόντες, ἐπωνυμίην Φοίνικες.

Thoſe that are on the continent are call'd Syrians, but thoſe which are neer the Sea, have the ſurname of Phœnicians, that is. are called Syrophœnicians, not after the account, wherein the Lybophœnicians are in * Livy miſtum Afris Punicum genus, a ſort of Phœnicians mingled with the Africans, but only as bordering upon Syria, or in * ſome accounts, part of it, for ſo they that divide Syria into five parts, name τὴν παραλίαν Φοινίκην, Phœnice by the ſea ſhore, for one, and * Euſtathius ſpeaking of that Syria, which is περὶ σρεπτὴν δίνα τῆ Ἰακικῆ κόλπε, adds τετέσιν ἡ Φοινίκη, this is Phœnice, &c. Now Phœnice and Canaan are the ſame region (and the learned * Bocharts conjecture is very ingenious, that the Greek word φοίνιξ is lightly changed from בני ענק the ſons of Anac, which we know were in Canaan, Num. 13. 33.) & to the land of Canaan ארץ כנען Exo. 16. 35. is by the LXXII. rendred Φοινίκη Phœnice: And ſo Shaul Exod 4. 15. is by them called Σαὰλ ὁ τῆ Φοινίσσης Shaul of the Phœnician; but Gen. 46. 10. υἱὸς Καναανίτ& the ſon of a Canaaniteſſe woman. So when their ſcituation is ſet down, Numb. 13. 29. 'tis ſaid expreſly, the Canaanites dwell by the Sea, and that aſſures us of their inhabiting Phœnice. And therefore as the Phœnicians were famous for Merchandiſe, and cunning, and ſubtilty therein,

'tis ſaid of Ephraim, כנען He is Canaan, (we from the Chaldee render it, a merchant) the balances of deceit are in his hand, &c. ſuch it ſeems the Canaanites were to a Proverb. It was brought, ſay they, by Cadmus from the Phœnicians, theſe Phœnicians of Tyre (as

This ſame woman is by S. Mark called ἑλληνὶς a Grecian, either in reſpect of her religion, that ſhe was not of the Jewiſh profeſſion, or elſe as all that were not Hebrews were called Greeks, and as the Greeks call all other nations Barbarians, and as the Turks call ſeverall nations Frankes.

g. Ἀπόλυσον. V. 23. Send her away] The Diſciples ſpeaking to Chriſt to diſmiſſe her ſeemeth not here to mean, that he ſhould ſend her away without doing what ſhe deſired, ſend her away empty, but that he ſhould ſatisfie her requeſt, and ſo diſpatch, or diſmiſſe her (as when a Maſter bids the ſervant diſmiſſe the poor body, his meaning is, that he ſhould give him his dole) this ſenſe accords with Chriſts anſwer, which is, that he is not ſent ſave to the houſe of Iſrael, v. 24. in oppoſition to this Canaanitiſh woman, which was not ſuch, and v. 26. It is not good to take the childrens bread and caſt it to dogs, which objection of Chriſts is a reaſon, why he ſhould not preſently cure the Womans child, not why he ſhould cure it, and ſo argues the ſenſe of the Diſciples (who ſure deſire him to doe, that which he did not ſeem to intend to doe) to be, that he ſhould grant, not that he ſhould deny her.

h. Ναί. V. 27. Truth] The Greek ναὶ is here a ſign of beſeeching, not only of aſſenting, as Phil. v. 20. ναὶ ἀδελφὲ, I beſeech thee brother, let me, &c. Rev. 22. 20. ναὶ ἔρχου κύριε, Come Lord I pray thee. This uſe of the word ναὶ ſeems to be taken from the Hebrew נא which is a form of exhorting or praying, Numb. 12. 13. heal her now, O Lord, נא I beſeech thee. So Gen. 19. 7, 8. and 18. 30, 32. and ſo in the word Hoſanna. So in Euripides, ναὶ σῷς σὲ τῆσδε δεξιᾶς ἐυωλένου, and in Ariſtophanes, ναὶ ναὶ καλαδέσθων παῤῥῶν Δία.

i. Μάγδαλα. V. 39. Magdala] What the Greek here reads Magdala, the Syriack reads Magedu, the vulgar Latine, Magedan, and the antient Greek and Latine MS. ἡ Μαγαδὰν Magadan, which makes it probable, that this coaſt of Magdala, is all one with the valley of Mageddon, or Megiddo, which belongs to the tribe of Manaſſes, Joſ. 17. 11. Jud. 1. 27. where Joſias was ſlain, 2 Kings 23. 29. by Pharaoh Neco. For to this belongs the narration of that ſtory in Herodotus, l. 2. Σύεσι πεζῇ ὁ Νεκὼς συμβαλὼν ἐν Μαγδόλῳ ἐνίκησε, Neco fought on foot with the Syrians (that is, the Hebrews) in Magdol, and had the victory, and, as it follows, μετὰ τὴν μάχην Καδύτιν πόλιν τῆς Συρίης ἑοῦσαν μεγάλην εἶλε, After the fight took Cadytis (that is, ſaith Joſ. Scaliger, Cadiſh) which was a great city of Syria.

CHAP. XVI.

Paraphraſe.

1. THe Phariſees alſo with the Sadducees came, and tempting, deſired him that he would ſhew them a ſigne from heaven.]

1. Not being ſatisfied with his former anſwer of the ſign of Jonas c. 12. 39. they again require ſome farther ſigne from him, to teſtifie that the God of heaven hath ſent him.

2. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, When it is evening, ye ſay, It will be faire weather, for the ſky is red.

3. And in the morning, It will be foule weather to day, for the ſky is red and lowring. O [ye hypocrites, ye can diſcern the face of the ſky, but can ye not diſcerne the ſignes of the times?]

3. Ye hypocrites ye have skill enough to expound and interpret the appearances of the ſky, and can prognoſticate what kind of weather it will be, by what at the preſent ye obſerve in the colour of the clouds, And when my preaching in theſe words, [Repent, for the kingdome of God is at hand] and my adding miracles of all ſorts to enforce beleife on you, do not yet work on you, Is it not ſtrange that you cannot diſcern what is coming upon you? Can there be any more certain prognoſtick of approaching deſtruction then this? and are not you much more neerly concerned herein, then in rain or fair weather ye can be? Why ſhould not your ſagacity in other things extend to this alſo?

4. A wicked and adulterous generation ſeeketh after a ſign, and there ſhall no ſigne be given to it, but the ſigne of the prophet Jonas. And he left them and departed.]

4. 'Tis an argument of great perverſeneſſe and falſeneſſe in you, that when ſo many miracles have been wrought, and repentance ſo long preached among you, ye now require a ſign from heaven, to evidence that I am a true prophet, This ye would never doe, if ye were not bent againſt all reformation. And ſince ye are ſo, All that I ſhall farther add, is to put you in mind of Jonas's preaching to Nineveh, and to aſſure you, that if ye doe not now repent, ye ſhall ſuddenly be deſtroyed. And having ſaid this he departed from them.

5. And when his diſciples were come to the other ſide, they had forgotten to take bread.

6. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, [* Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Phariſees, and of the [a] Sadducees.]

* Look, and take heed, ὁρᾶτε καὶ φυλάσσεσθε.

6. Take ſpecial heed of the Phariſees and Sadducees, a ſowre and a proud ſort of people, and ſo not fitter compared to any thing then to a piece of ſowre dow, that diffuſeth it ſelf to the whole lump of bread, with which 'tis mix'd, as their diſpoſition doth to all their ſect.

7. And they reaſoned among themſelves, ſaying, It is becauſe we have taken no bread.]

7. And they underſtood not his meaning, but from the mention of leaven, groſly conceited that the occaſion of his ſpeech was, becauſe they had forgotten to bring bread along with them.

8. Which

8. What a piece of infidelity is this, thus to apply my ſpeech to the want of bread?

8. Which when Jeſus perceived, he ſaid unto them, [O ye of little faith, why reaſon ye among your ſelves, becauſe ye have brought no bread?]

9. Will you never lay to heart, or conſider? Have you ſo ſoon forgot how eaſily I am able to releive your want of bread? Ye have had two competent evidences of this very lately afforded you, five thouſand men fed with five loaves, and yet twelve baskets of fragments to ſpare after they were ſatisfied.

9. Doe ye not yet underſtand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thouſand, and how many baskets ye took up?

b. 10. And ſo four thouſand fed with ſeven loaves, and ſeven baskets of fragments remaining.

10. Neither the ſeven loaves of the four thouſand, and how many [b] baskets ye took up?]

11. How then could ye be guilty of ſo groſſe an infidelity, as to think me ſtill unable to provide neceſſaries for my ſelf and you, and conſequently to ſpeak of bread when I bid you

11. How is it that you doe not underſtand, that I ſpake it not to you concerning bread, that ye ſhould] beware of the leaven of the Phariſees and of the Sadducees?

12. Then they underſtood their miſtake, how that he had not ſpoken of bread, or leaven literally, but that he foretold them what kind of people all the Phariſees and Sadducees were, and all that were leavened or taught, or received infuſions from them, viz. that all the whole tribe of them were a ſort of hypocrites, Luke 12. 1. who pretended much piety and love of the truth, and ſo enquired after ſignes from heaven v. 1. but were indeed moſt perverſly and maliciouſly bent againſt Chriſt, and his doctrine, and would prove the moſt virulent perſecutors both of him and them, c. 10. 17.

12. Then underſtood they how that he bad them not beware of the leaven of bread: but of the doctrine of the Phariſees and of the Sadducees.

c. d. 13. And being on his way, (Mar. 8. 27.) to Ceſarea Philippi, he asked his Diſciples, What opinion have the multitude of me? doe they take me for an ordinary man? or a Prophet, or what elſe?

13. When Jeſus came into the coaſts of [c] Ceſarea Philippi, he asked his diſciples, ſaying, Whom do men ſay that I [d] the ſon of man, am?] Lu. 9. 18.

14. Some old Prophet of the old Teſtament, either riſen from the dead (as 'tis clear they expected Elias ſhould come again) or elſe that the ſoul of one of them was by way of tranſmigration (which the Phariſees had borrowed from the Pythagoreans) come into his body. See note on Joh. 9. a.

14. And they ſaid, Some ſay that thou art John the Baptiſt, ſome Elias, and others [Jeremias, or one of the prophets.]

15. He ſaith unto them, But whom ſay ye that I am?

16. To this queſtion Simon Peter particularly rendred an anſwer, Thou art the Meſſias, even the

16. And Simon Peter anſwered and ſaid, Thou art the Chriſt, the] ſon of the living God.

c. 17. This faith of thine is not built upon humane teſtimony, but upon the miracles, and doctrines, which thou haſt heard and ſeen, which are the teſtimonies of God himſelf, whereby he hath teſtified of me to thee, and ſuch as thou art, Mat. 11. 25. See note on c. 15. d.

17. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Bleſſed art thou Simon Bar-Jonah, for [c] fleſh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my father which is in heaven.

f. g. 18. And ſeeing thou haſt ſo freely confeſt me before men, I will alſo confeſſe thee, Thou art, &c. that is, The name by which thou art ſtiled and known by me is that which ſignifies a ſtone or rock, and ſuch ſhalt thou be in the building of the Church, which accordingly ſhall be ſo built on thee, founded in thee, that the power of death or the grave ſhall not get victory over it; the Chriſtian Church, now to be planted, ſhall never be deſtroyed.

18. And I ſay alſo unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this [f] rock I will build my church, and the gates of [g] * hell ſhall not prevail againſt it.] [g] Hades.

h. 19. And I will give thee (as afterwards to all the twelve c. 18. 18. and more diſtinctly Joh. 20. 23.) the keyes of the gate of this court or kingdome, the Church, of which every one of you is to be the ſteward (as the keyes of the court were given to Eliakim Iſa. 22. 22. in token of his being ſteward of the houſe, to admit and exclude whom he pleaſed) that is, both power and enſigne of power, Apoc. 3. 7. to exerciſe cenſures, and by them to exclude men in caſe of their impenitence, either by laying ſome reſtraints on them in the Church, or to turn them out of the gates of this city, and upon repentance to receive them into the Church again. And what you doe here, as you ought to doe, ſhall be valid in heaven.

19. And I will give unto thee the [h] keyes of the kingdome of heaven, and whatſoever thou ſhalt bind on earth ſhall be bound in heaven, and whatſoever thou ſhalt looſe on earth ſhall be looſed in heaven.]

20, 21. The diſciples knowing that he was the Meſſias, and having told him ſo, v. 16. he commands that this be not publickly diſcloſed (till after his reſurrection, at which time in his wiſdome he thought it moſt ſeaſonable) telling them that it was neceſſary that Chriſt ſhould be put to death, by the inſtance of the Jewiſh Sanhedrim. See note on chap. 8. b.

20. Then charged he his diſciples that they ſhould tell no man that he was Jeſus the Chriſt.

21. From that time forth began Jeſus to ſhew unto his diſciples, how that he muſt goe unto Hieruſalem, and ſuffer many things of the elders, and chief prieſts, and ſcribes, and be killed, and be raiſed again the third day.]

i. 22. God forbid, or avert this from thee, or as the Syriack reads, be propitious to thy ſelf, Lord.

22. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, ſaying [i Be it farre from thee,] Lord, this ſhall not be unto thee.

k. 23. a ſnare or ſtumbling block, moving me to that which were a ſin, if I ſhould yeild to it, and contrary to the will, courſe, and commandment of God my Father. See note on chap. 11. c.

23. But he turned, and ſaid to Peter, Get thee behind me [k] Satan, thou art [an offence unto me,] for thou ſavoureſt not the things that be of God, but thoſe that be of men.

l. 24, 25. And not only I, but all that have a mind to be my Diſciples and followers (as you profeſſe to be) muſt deny their own humane will of ſparing themſelves, indulging and favouring themſelves, and in prepatation of mind take up that croſſe, and indeed when I am gone, the ſame afflictions which befall me, ſhall purſue them. But yet of this ſtate of theirs this will be obſervable, that perſeverance in the faith will be the only way to releive and reſcue them out of their preſſures; for they that by perſecutions ſhall be brought to apoſtatize and joyn with the Jews, ſhall with them be certainly deſtroyed in that great ſlaughter of them, and he that ſhall hold out, and venture the utmoſt for the confeſſion of the truth, ſhall be moſt likely to be deliver'd, when they are deſtroyed (unleſſe when his ſuffering death is more behoofefull, as mine is now, and then he ſhall, for that enduring, be raiſed again to an endleſſe life,) ſee c. 10. 22. note h. and 2 Pet. 1. 16.

24. Then ſaid Jeſus unto his diſciples, [If any man will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and take up his croſſe, and follow me.

25. For whoſoever will ſave his life ſhall looſe it, and whoſoever will looſe his life for my ſake, ſhall find it.]

26. For what is a man profited, if he ſhall gain the whole world, and [m] loſe his own ſoul? Or what ſhall a man give in exchange for his ſoul?] 26. Nay if by denying me a man ſhould gain ſome advantage at the preſent, what a pitifull bargain would he make of it, although he ſhould gain the whole world, as long as life, (v. 25.) eſpecially eternall life were loſt by it? And what price is there imaginable to buy that back again if it be loſt, or what is there that a man would not willingly give for it? m.

27. For the ſon of man ſhall come in the [n] glory of his father with his angels; and then he ſhall reward every man according to his works.] 27. For there ſhall be a ſolemn viſitation among the Jewes, a time of judgment on them (ſee note m.) wherein there ſhall be a viſible diſcrimination between thoſe which cleave faſt to Chriſt, and thoſe which doe not, and ſo likewiſe on all mankind either in particular viſitation upon kingdomes, or at the day of doom. n.

28. Verily I ſay unto you, There be ſome ſtanding here, which ſhall not taſt of death, till they ſee the ſon of man [o] coming in his kingdome. 28. And of this coming of mine againſt my enemies, and to the releiving of them that adhere to me, I tell you aſſuredly, that ſome that are here preſent, John by name, ſhall live to ſee it, that is, that he ſhall not die till that remarkeable coming of Chriſt in judgment upon his crucifyers, the viſible deſtruction of the Jewiſh ſtate. o.

Annotations on Chap. XVI.

V. 6 Leaven of the Sadducees] That which is here the leaven of the Phariſees, and Sadducees, the infuſions of theſe upon all their followers, is Mar. 8. 15. the leaven of the Phariſees, and of Herod. And the reaſon may be, either becauſe ſome of the Sadducees were alſo Herodians, adhered to Herods party, that is, to the Roman government (ſee Note on c. 22. b.) whereas generally the Phariſees were on the other ſide, took Ceſar for an uſurper; Or elſe becauſe Chriſt mention'd all three, the leaven of the Phariſees, and of the Sadducees, and of Herod alſo, each of them deſigning ill againſt Chriſt, and his Apoſtles. a. Ζύμη Σαδδουκαίων

V. 10. Baskets] That which is here rendred baskets is not κοφίνους (the word uſed before v. 9. and in the relation of the ſtory, to which that referres, Mat. 14. 20. Mar. 6. 43. Joh 6. 13. conſtantly retain'd in all the three Evangeliſts) but σπυρίδας which is retain'd alſo in the other ſtory (to which this paſſage referres) Mat. 15. 37. and Mar. 8. 8. from whence 'tis probable that theſe two, κόφινοι and σπυρίδες, were veſſels of ſeverall quantities, and σπυρίδες much the bigger; ſo large that Saul was let down in one, Act. 9. 25. but what the bigneſſe was, or how they differ'd, will not perhaps be worth the paines of enquiry, and however the word basket (being not a note of a limited meaſure or quantity, but only of the kind of the veſſel) may well enough be retain'd in both places, b. Σπυρίδες

V. 13. Cæſarea Philippi] Καισάρεια Φιλίππου is not here ſet to ſignifie that city where Philip the Evangeliſt dwelt; Act. 21. 8. The ſtyle is of another Origination, for Euſeb. Chron. l. 1. p. 43. ſaith that Philip the Tetrarch, Herods brother, built many houſes in the city Paneas, and having ſo enlarged it, gave it a new name, Cæſarea Philippi, the firſt part in honour of the Emperour, the ſecond of himſelf. And to the ſame purpoſe Joſephus alſo. Whereas that other Cæſarea ſimply ſo call'd, without any addition, in the Acts, was built by Herod, and was in Syria, formerly call'd Stratonis turris; of that ſee Ærodius Pandect. rer. Jud. l. 5. tit. 21. c. 7. where he relates the contention between the Jewes and the Syrians before Nero for this city, the Jewes ſaid it was a city of Judea, becauſe built by Herod, and by him Jewes planted there; the Syrians that it was in Syria, and that Herod did not found, but only enlarge it, and gave it a new name, and that he built it not for the Jewes, becauſe he ſet up images in the Temple, which are not allow'd by the Jewes. Whereupon the Emperor adjudg'd it to the Syrians. c. Καισάρεια Φιλίππου

Ib. Son of man] That the ſon of man is a title of Chriſt peculiarly (though the moſt humble title, and of leaſt eminence, belonging to his ſtate of exinanition,) hath been before ſaid, note on c. 12. a. And ſo here it is ſet to ſignifie Chriſt in that humble guiſe, as a man, or according to his humanity. Where the ſetting of the words in Greek, Τίνα με λέγουσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; doth ſomewhat incline to read them ſeparately, not με ὁ υἱὸν, that I the Son of man, but με εἶναι that I am? (and then in a new interrogation, or as the top of the former) ὁ υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; the ſon of man? thus Who doe they ſay that I am? doe they ſay that I am the ſon of man? But the ordinary reading agrees better with the context or queſtion following, where, if Chriſt had firſt mention'd that phraſe as the title of the Meſſias, and thereby ſo much as by intimation call'd himſelf the Meſſias, he could not probably have ask'd them, v. 15. Who ſay ye that I am? The meaning then of the whole is this, I that have done ſuch miracles on one ſide, and ſo am the ſon of man by way of eminence, ſomewhat above other men, and yet live in ſo mean a humane condition on the other ſide, and have call'd my ſelf by no other name among you, pretended to no other title, but that of the ſon of man, Who am I taken to be? In the other Goſpels of Mark 8. 27. and Lu. 9. 18. 'tis only thus, Who do men ſay, or who ſay the people that I am? d. Τίνα με λέγουσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου

V. 17. Fleſh and blood] The phraſe σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα fleſh and blood is an Hebrew phraſe, בשר ודם, ſignifying no more then a meer man here upon the earth, one that hath aſcended no higher then the common ſtate of men. Thus 'tis ordinary in the Jewiſh Writers; Take one example for all, in Gemara Babyl. ad Cod. Berachoth, where a parable of a rich man (the firſt draught as it were, and monogramme of that which is enlarged, and fill'd up with lively colours by our Saviour, Lu. 16. 19.) is call'd משל למלך בשר ודם a parable of a King of fleſh and blood, that is, of a humane mortal King here on earth. Thus 1 Cor. 15. 50. σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα, fleſh and blood cannot inherit the kingdome of God, that is, theſe corruptible, groſs, earthy bodies of ours, till they be refined. So Eph. 6. 12. our wreſtling is not againſt fleſh and blood, that is, againſt ordinary humane enemies, but, as it follows, againſt the moſt powerfull enemies, &c. and ſo here, when Chriſt tells Peter that that confeſſion of his, That Chriſt is the Son of God, was not founded on any humane teſtimony, nor on the votes and wiſhes of men, which were not much likely to be gratified by this doctrine, but on that ſtronger of God himſelf. And ſo, when S. Paul mentions his call to Apoſtleſhip immediately from heaven, Act. 13. 2. he adds Gal. 1. 16. that he applied not himſelf to fleſh and blood, that is, to any men, to receive miſſion or commiſſion of Apoſtleſhip from them. e. Σὰρξ καὶ αἷμα

V. 18. Rock] The name of Πέτρος ſignifying a ſtone here, ſuch an one as for the firmneſſe and validity is fit to bear the greater ſtreſſe and weight in the building, is applicable to the perſon of S. Peter in reſpect of the Church. He was the Apoſtle of the circumciſion, as Chriſt himſelf was. He was already a very conſiderable Diſciple, joyn'd ordinarily with James and John in the participation of ſome favours, which others f. Πέτρος others enjoyed not, (though in Christs favour John enjoy'd the first place, Joh. 13. 25.) he twice made confession, with greatest boldnesse, of Christs being the Messias, and son of God, Joh. 6. 19. and here. And after the Resurrection of Christ, he had among the twelve the honour of his first appearing, 1 Cor. 15. 5. and proportionably was first of all to preach, and make known to the Jewes, (but so as not to exclude the Heathens) the truth of that which he here profess'd, viz. that Jesus is the Christ. In this respect it is here told him, that he should be a stone, by way of excellence (for amongst the Hebrewes all the Levites were in a common notion of this phrase call'd stones of the Temple) such as (next the corner-stone) may also be called the first stone in building the Church of Christ, (which when 'twas once built, should never be destroyed again) and that he should have a power of governing, signified by the keyes, v. 19. yet so as that other Disciples are to be look'd on as foundation-stones also, Ephes. 2. 20. Revel. 21. 14. (see note on c. 10. b.) as they are called, after the erecting of it, columnes and pillars, Gal. 2. 9. that is, principall supporters of the Church built, and principall ingredients in the building, and so also endowed with the power of governing, of binding and loosing, c. 18. 18. remitting and retaining Joh. 20. 23. all one directly with that which is here bestowed on him. So that the application of this whole speech to S. Peters person, doth not either immediately import, or by necessary or probable consequence inferre any Oecumenicall pastorall power in him (much lesse in any other person, by claime of succession from him) over other Apostles and their plantations, that is, the Universall Church of Christ, but only a reverence due to him, who was so excellent and principall an instrument in the first erecting of the Church, and, in proportion also, to his Successors in each Church by him planted, as far as they should walk in his steps. And for any other priviledges of particular See or Bishop, upon claim of succession from him, they cannot appear to belong to any one or more, above all others, by the force of this Text.

g. Πύλαι ᾅδου

lb. Hell] Hades here (according to the notion of ᾅδης for the state of ἀφανισμὸς before mention'd, note on c. 11. i.) signifies death, or grave, or destruction, and by consequence Satan also, who hath the power of these. Then for gates, they may signifie first power, force, strength, which consists in armes or weapons, which were usually kept over the Gates of the cities. Secondly counsell, contrivance, stratagems, policy, because they were wont to sit in counsell in the Gates. Thirdly wordly authority borrowed by Satan from his instruments, the heathen powers of the world, because judgment was wont to be exercised in the Gates: and so these three (τὰ πρίσματα διαβόλου in Macarius his style) being put together will conclude, that 'tis not all the power and strength, wisedome and policy, authority and Empire in the world, no not death or grave (which are proverbially irresistible Cant. 8. 6.) nor Satan himself that shall be able to destroy this fabrick now to be erected by Christ and his Apostles in the hearts of men, though that glorious Temple of Jerusalem erected by Gods own appointment shall be destroyed. Now that all this shall not prevaile against the Church, may be understood either as the Church signifies particular persons (beleivers, true faithfull Christians) of which the Church consists, or as it signifies the whole congregation and society of men: As the Church signifies the persons, so the phrase imports, that though Christians shall die, yet Death shall have no dominion over them, Christ shall break open those barres, and rescue them by his resurrection from the power of the grave; As it referres to the Church in complexo, that is, to the whole congregation of Christian professors, so it signifies a promise of Christ, that it shall never be destroyed so as to perish totally, irrecoverably, but whatsoever charge it undergoes in the world, it shall again lift up the head, and have as it were its resurrection; which promise is perform'd, if, as it decaies or perishes in one branch or part, it receive and flourish in another.

h. Κλεῖς τῆς βασιλείας

V. 19. Keys of the kingdome] What is here meant by the keyes is best discernible by Isai. 22. where God foretells Eliakim v. 20. the son of Helkiah, that he will call him, and cloath him with the robe of Shebna (which was over the houshold v. 15.) and strengthen him with his girdle, and commit his government into his hand, and lay the key of the house of David upon his shoulder, and he shall open, and none shall shut, and shut, and none shall open, By which is noted the bestowing on him the power of administring, and ruling the whole family, or house of the King, so as to entertain and admit into it, and in like manner to exclude out of it, whom he would. And accordingly this being by Christ accommodated to the Church, notes the power of Governing in it. This primarily, and independently belongs to Christ, the holy and true, which hath the key of David, Apoc. 3. 7. where a difference must be observed betwixt the Key of David, and the Keyes of the house of David: Keyes are an ensigne of power, but that power is not all of one kind, it is greater, or lesse, principal and independent, or inferior and derivative, and the several Keyes are emblemes of these severals. David we know was a King, and independent from any on earth, and consequently the Key of David notes an independent supreme power, and that applied to the Church, belongs onely to Christ, in that prophetick expression Apoc. 3. 7. But the Keyes of the house of David notes an inferior power, that of a steward in Davids familie, which being perfectly subordinate to him, hath yet the διοίκησις, the administration of the affaires of his familie intrusted to him. Now Christ is the Original, and prime fountain of all power over the whole Church, that spiritual kingdom of David, as to whom was given by the Father all power in heaven and earth, particularly that of loosing, or remitting sin on earth, Mat. 9. 6. And this is by Christ here communicated to his Apostles, and their Successors the Bishops in the Church as so many several Stewards. Hence is that of S. Chrysost περ. ἱερωσ. l. 3. That the Bishops are those faithfull servants in the parable, whom the Lord sets over his houshold, that is literally Stewards. And so this agrees perfectly with the promise of Christ, c. 19. of the Apostles sitting on twelve thrones, where the power of judging and governing in the Church, set answerable to that of the Phylarchæ or chief of the tribes, which was, among the Jewes, next unto the Regall, is directly that of the œconomus, or ruler of the Kings houshold, which is here, as in Isaiah, noted by the keyes. And this power being here promised by Christ to be conferr'd on Peter, a single person, so that whatever he bound, or loosed, was bound, and loosed by Christs affirmation, is by force of the words c. 18. 18. (before the keyes were given) whatsoever ye shall bind, and ye shall loose, and by the form of conferring it actually, Joh. 20. 23. he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive the holy Ghost, whosesoever sins ye remit they are remitted, &c. actually, and equally instated on every of the Apostles, and accordingly the fiery tongues descended, and sat upon every one of them. And so when Cephas in respect of this authority is styled Πέτρος, a stone, on which as on a foundation-stone, built on Christ the head of the corner, this holy city, that comes down from heaven, the new Jerusalem, the Church of Christ is built, 'tis also apparent that all, and every the Apostles have the same title bestow'd upon them, Revel. 21. 14. where the wall of the city hath twelve foundations, and upon them twelve names of the twelve Apostles, of which every one in respect of this power and dignity in the Church is particularly compared to a pretious stone v. 18. And when the wall of that city, the Church, exactly meted, is found to be 144 cubits, that is, twelve times twelve, 'tis cleer that an equall portion or province is assigned to each of them. To which purpose is that of Theophylact, Εἰ καὶ πρὸς Πέτρον μόνον εἴρηται τὸ, δώσω σοι, ἀλλὰ καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς Ἀποστόλοις δέδοται, though it were said to Peter alone I will give unto thee the keyes, yet they were given to all the Apostles. And Cyprian, Ep. 27. Dominus noster Episcopi honorem & Ecclesiæ suæ rationem disponens in Evangelio loquitur & dicit Petro, Ego tibi dico, quia tu es Petrus, & tibi dabo claves, & quæ ligaveris, &c. Inde per temporum, & successionum vices Episcoporum ordinatio & Ecclesiæ ratio decurrit, ut Ecclesia super Episcopos constituatur, & omnis actus Ecclesiæ per eosdem gubernetur. Our Lord Christ providing for the honour of the Bishop, and the disposition of his Church, speaks in the Gospel, and saith to Peter, I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and I will give thee the keyes, and what thou shalt bind &c. From thence by vicissitudes of times and successions the ordination of Bishops, and the disposition of the Church doth flow, so that the Church is built on Bishops, and every act of the Church is govern'd by them. And before him Irenæus, l. 5. c. 20. the Apostles delivered the Churches to the Bishops. And many the like testimonies. So Tertullian de Præscr. c. 32. Sicut Smyrnæorum Ecclesia Polycarpum à Johanne collocatum refert, utique & cæteræ exhibent, quos ab Apostolis in Episcopatũ constitutos Apostolici seminis traduces habent. As the Church of Smyrna had Polycarp placed Bishop there by John, so the other Churches are able to shew those, whom they have constituted Bishops by the Apostles, the children, as it were, of the Apostles, who are propagated by them. So S. Athanasius of the office of Bishop, that it is one of the things, ἃ ὁ Κύριος διὰ τῶν Ἀποστόλων τεθύπωκε, which Christ hath formed by the Apostles, in his Ep. to Dracontius. And S. Basil the Great, Ἐπισκοπὴ περιδέλεια Ἀποστολική, Episcopacy is the Apostolicall precedence, or authority over others. And S. Ambrose, Claves regni cœlorum in Beato Petro cuncti suscepimus sacerdotes. All Bishops (that is the notation of Sacerdotes there, such as he then was) received in S. Peter the keyes of the kingdome of heaven, de dign. sacerd. c. 6. And Theophylact, Ἔχουσιν ἐξουσίαν ἀφιέναι καὶ δεσμεῖν οἱ κατὰ Πέτρον οἰκονομικῆς ἀξιωθέντες χάριτος, They that according, or answerably to Peter, are vouchsafed the honour or grace of Episcopacy, have power to bind and loose. And generally all the ancient Writers to this purpose, even S. Jerome himself in Psal. 45. Quia Apostoli à mundo recesserunt, habes pro illis Episcopos filios, because the Apostles have departed from the world, ye have their sons the Bishops instead of them.

i. Ἱλεώς σοι

V. 22. Be it far] This form of speech, Ἱλεώς σοι is borrowed from the Hebrewes, who use it to expresse the Latine, absit, that is, amoliri malum aliquod, to signifie our desire that such a thing may not come to passe. So in the Hierusalem-Targum on Gen. 49. 22. Parce tibi Josephe, ut nè conjicias oculos, that is, God forbid thou shouldest cast thine eyes, and on Num. 31. 50. Parce nobis Moses Doctor noster, nè unus aspexit, God forbid that any of us should have look'd. See Buxtorf. Chald. Dict. rad. חוס.

k. Σατανᾶς

V. 23 Satan] The title of Satan here signifies according to the use of the Hebrew phrase, 2 Sam. 19. 22. where David rejecting the counsel of Abishai, saith, Why art thou to me this day לשטן in Satanam, for an adversary, that is, Why dost thou give me this evil pernicious counsel, and so supplie'st the true enemies, or even the Devils place to me?

l. Ἀπαρνησάσθω

V. 25. Deny himself] Denying himself is renouncing all interest, relations, engagements of his own, when they come in ballance or competition with Christ. Thus saith Porphyrie of the Gymnosophists among the Indians, that there were two sorts of them the Θεόσοφοι, Divines, by families, and the Samanæi, which were chosen; and of these, whensoever any had once taken the stole upon him, ἔτε πρὸς γυναῖκα ἔτε πρὸς τέκνα (εἰ τύχοι κεχηρεύκοι) ἐπιστρέφω, ἢ πρὸς αὐτὸν ὅλως νομίζων, ὡσὶ ἄπαξ. l. 4. p. 58, 59. he never thought of any return to wife, to children, or at all to himself again.

V. 26. Lose] Ζημιωθῆναι to have a mulct inflicted on one, is not thought very fitly to be joyn'd with ψυχὴν, the soul, as the Accusative case govern'd by it, but rather to stand as a Passive, and ἡ ψυχὴ to be in stead of καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ, and so not only to belong to the finall fatall losse, or damnation of the soul, but also to any losse, or damage that belongs to it here, as deprivation of grace, nay guilt of sin, &c. so Munsters Hebrew reads it ישא נזק בנפשו receive damage in his soul. Yet may it be read with an Accusative case following the Verb as in that place of Agathias in the speech of Phartazes to the Colchians, Τί ἢ κερδανῶμεν ἅπασαν τὴν Περσίδα, σῶμα δὲ ὅτῳ, περιλαμβάνοντες, τὰς ἡμῶν ψυχὰς ἐζημιωμένοι; What if we gain all Persia, and lose our lives, or, our soules? a place almost parallel to this. Ζημιωθῆναι τὴν ψυχήν l. 3. p. 82.

m. Δόξα

V. 27. Glory] The Hebrew שכינה the appearance of God, or, speciall presence, which is call'd his δόξα δόξα glory, consists generally in the appearance of his guard, the Angels that wait on him, as when Jacob sees the vision of Angels, he concludes, Surely the Lord is in this place. And accordingly here, Christ coming ἐν δόξῃ πατρὸς, in the glory of his father, is expres'd by μετὰ τῶν ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ, with his Angels. See Note on c. 3. k.

o. Ἐρχόμενον ἐν τῇ βασιλείᾳ

V. 28. Coming in his kingdome] The nearnesse of this to the story of Christs Transfiguration, makes it probable to many, that this coming of Christ is that Transfiguration of his, but that cannot be, because the 27th ver. of the son of mans coming in his glory with his Angels to reward, &c. (to which this verse clearly connects) cannot be applied to that; And there is another place, Joh. 21. 23. (which may help to the understanding of this) which speaks of a reall coming, and one principall person (agreeable to what is here said of some standing here) that should tarry, or not die, till that coming of his. And that surely was fulfilled in Johns seeing the πανολεθρία, or famous destruction of the Jewes, which was to fall in that generation, Mat. 24. that is, in the life-time of some there present, and is called the kingdome of God, and the coming of Christ, and by consequence here most probably the son of mans coming in his kingdome, (see the Notes on Mat. 3. 2. c. and ch. 24. 3. b.) that is, his coming in the exercise of his Kingly office, to work vengeance on his enemies, and discriminate the faithfull beleivers from them. And because the way for God to be present in one place more then another (as to the presence of a Glorious appearance or vision) is by the presence or satellitium of Angels, and because the appearing of them is call'd Schechina or δόξα glory, and again because these Angels are his officers, and employed in his service to punish (as when the Angel smites with pestilence, or discomfits the enemies armies, destroys the murmurers, and the first-born of Ægypt, and is accordingly call'd ὀλοθρεύτης 1 Cor. 10. 10. and ὁ ὀλοθρεύων the destroyer, Heb. 11. 28. and the like) therefore this coming of his is said to be in the glory of his father, with his holy angels, v. 27. as Jude 14. The Lord cometh with his holy myriads, that is, with his hosts of Angels, to execute &c. which it seems was an ancient forme of speech there cited from the book of Enoch by Gods coming with his Angels, to signifie his taking vengeance on sinners. Ἀγίαις μυριάσιν αὐτοῦ

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XVII.

1. Thoſe three of his Diſciples, which had many ſingular favours afforded them above the reſt of the twelve, Peter, and the two ſons of Zebedee, and leaving all the reſt behind, bringeth them up into an high mountain.

1. AND after ſix daies Jeſus taketh [Peter, and James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart.]

2. changed into another form, or manner of appearance (expreſſed in the following words, his countenance ſhined &c.)

2. And was [transfigured] before them, and his face did ſhine as the ſun, and his rayment was white as the light.

3. And behold there appeared unto them Moſes and Elias, talking with him.

4. Then Peter ſaid to Jeſus, Lord let us abide here, and not conſort any more with thoſe beneath us: and to that end build three boothes, one for thee and us.

4. Then anſwered Peter and ſaid unto Jeſus, Lord, It is good for us to be here: If thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles, one for thee,] and one for Moſes, and one for Elias.

5. Whatſoever he ſhall teach, is that which you are to receive as my good pleaſure, before any either of the law or prophets, Moſes or Elias then appearing, according to that prediction of Moſes himſelf, Deut. 18. 15. Him ſhall ye heare.

5. While he yet ſpake, behold a bright cloud overſhadowed them, and behold a voice out of the cloud, which ſaid, This is my beloved ſon, in whom I am well pleaſed, [hear ye him.]

6. And when Peter, and James, and John heard that voice from heaven, they were amazed and aſtonied for fear, and fell down proſtrate.

6. And when the diſciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were ſore afraid.]

7. And Jeſus came and touched them, and ſaid, Ariſe, and be not afraid.

8. And when they had lift up their eyes, they ſaw no man ſave Jeſus only.

9. Tell not that which you have now ſeen, and heard, to any man, no not to the reſt of your fellow-diſciples, (ſee note on c. 8. b.)

9. And as they came down from the mountain, Jeſus charged them, ſaying, [Tell the viſion to no man,] untill the ſon of man be riſen from the dead.

a. 10. And upon the contemplation of what here they had ſeen, and heard, theſe three diſciples asked him ſaying, If this be true that was ſaid by Moſes and Elias in the mount concerning the approach of the great and dreadfull day for the deſtroying of Gods enemies, and reſcuing his faithfull ſervants, Then what is the meaning of that which the Doctors generally teach, that Elias muſt come before that great and dreadfull day of the Lord, and the riſing of the ſun of righteouſneſſe with healing in his wings, to them that fear Gods name? Mal. 4. 2, 5.

10. And his diſciples asked him, ſaying, Why then ſay the Scribes that [a] Elias muſt firſt come?]

b. 11. 'Tis truly obſerved by them from Malachi that Elias is firſt to come, and to do his office of reſtoring and returning the Jewes to repentance (ſee Mar. 9. 12.) to preach repentance, and ſo prepare for this famous coming.

11. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, [Elias truly * ſhall firſt come and [b] reſtore all things.]

* cometh firſt and ſhall reſt. ἐρχεται πρῶτον.

12. But I ſay unto you that it is another perſon that is prophecyed of under the name of Elias, which cometh, and that perſon is come and gone already, but not acknowledged, by the principall men of the Jews, but deſpiſed by them, and put to death by Herod, and ſo Chriſt himſelfe ſhall alſo be, before this great day that now ye heare of.

12. But I ſay unto you that Elias is come already, and they † knew him not, but have done unto him whatſoever they liſted, likewiſe alſo ſhall the ſon of man ſuffer of them.]

† acknowled'gd ἐπέγνωσαν.

13. Then the Diſciples underſtood that he ſpake to them of John the Baptiſt.

14. And when they were come to the multitudes, there came unto him a certain man, kneeling down to him and ſaying,

c. 15. the changes of the moon have ſuch a power on him, that at ſuch times the divell v. 18. handleth them miſerably, caſting him into fits of the falling ſickneſſe, throwing him into the fire or water, whichſoever is next.

16. thoſe diſciples of thine that ſtayed beneath when thou wert retired.

16. And I brought him to [thy diſciples,] and they could not cure him.

17. Upon this Jeſus rebuked thoſe diſciples, accuſed them of infidelity and perverſneſſe, that when he had been with them ſo long, given them power to heale diſeaſes, and caſt out devills, and in ſome caſes preſcribed prayer and faſting, v. 21. as the means of doing it, they now neglected that means, and ſo were not able to caſt out this devill, this impotency of theirs therefore was very culpable, and ſo here charged upon them by Chriſt, and having done, he calls for the lunatick to be brought to him.

17. Then Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, O faithleſſe and perverſe generation, how long ſhall I be with you? how long ſhall I ſuffer you? bring him hither to me.

18. And when he came, Jeſus commanded, and chid that evill ſpirit that brought that diſeaſe upon him; and the devill and the diſeaſe departed from him together.

18. And Jeſus rebuked the devill, and he departed out of him;] and the childe was cured from that very hour.

19. Then came the Diſciples to Jeſus apart, and ſaid, Why could not we caſt him out?

20. I have given you the power of doing all miracles, and directed you to the means, which ye are to uſe, in the doing them, and if you did ſincerely beleive, though in never ſo weak a degree, the things that I have ſaid to you, and obeyed and practiſed accordingly, ye ſhould by me be enabled to doe any thing, that is moſt impoſſible among men, as even to remove a mountain out of the place by ſpeaking to it, (which is literally affirmed to have been done by the gift of miracles) or any thing elſe, as ſtrange, and as difficult as that.

20. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, becauſe of your unbeleife: for verily I ſay unto you, [If ye have faith as a grain of muſtard ſeed, ye ſhall ſay unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it ſhall remove, and nothing ſhall be unpoſſible to you.]

21. * How-

Now that which ye fail'd in was this, that ye uſed not faſting and prayer to this purpoſe, for that is the method that muſt be uſed to the ejecting of this ſort of diſeaſes, and of devils, viz. great intention of devotion joyned with faith, and if that be not uſed, it will not goe out, and your not uſing that means, was a want of faith in you, v. 20.

22,23. Jeſus kept himſelf as private as he could, Mar. 9. 30. telling his diſciples the reaſon of his doing ſo, becauſe having done ſo many miracles among them, and wrought ſo little effect upon them, as that he foreſaw he ſhould ſoon be put to death by them, he thought it not yet ſeaſonable to doe any more, till by the addition of his reſurrection from death, he ſhould be more likely to be received and beleived on by them. 25. And when they were retired into the houſe, and Peter was a muſing within himſelf about this buſineſſe of paying or not paying the tribute-money, and was about to ask Jeſus concerning it, Jeſus prevented, and asked his opinion, From whom, ſaith he, doe all kind of Kings exact tribute or head-money (ſo the Syriack renders it) from thoſe of their own family, their own children, &c. or from other folkes only? f.

Annotations on Chap. XVII.

a. Ἦλιον δεῖ ἐλθεῖν πρῶτον

V. 10. Elias muſt firſt come] By this queſtion of the three Apoſtles made unto Chriſt, at his coming down from the mount, may be collected what was the prime matter of the diſcourſe betwixt him, and Moſes, and Elias, v. 3. (For that their queſtion ſhould referre to Chriſts reſurrection from the dead, incidentally mentioned v. 9. is not poſſible, becauſe the Scribes did not beleive that the Meſſias ſhould die, or riſe, nor conſequently that Elias ſhould come before that.) Of this diſcourſe, what was the ſubject matter of it, there is nothing ſaid either in this Goſpel, or in that of Saint Marks, but only this, that the diſciples asked him, ſaying, Why then ſay the Scribes that Elias muſt firſt come? By the Scribes are here meant their Doctors of the Law, thoſe that were skilfull (not onely in the Law, but) in the doctrine of the whole old Teſtament, and ſo of the Prophets, among whom, Mal. 4. 5. they found, that Elias was to come, before a ſet time or period, that is before the great and dreadful day of the Lord; This therefore being it that was aſſerted by the Scribes, the great and dreadful day of the Lord, the thing, before which, ſaid they, Elias muſt firſt come, and the Diſciples queſtion, Why then do they ſay that Elias muſt firſt come? being an objection againſt what they had heard diſcourſed of in the mount, it neceſſarily follows, that that which was diſcourſed of in the mount, was the approaching of that great and dreadfull day of the Lord. Now what is meant by this great & dreadful day of the Lord appears by the firſt, 2d, & 3d verſes of that Chapt. Behold the day cometh, that ſhall burn as an oven, & all the proud, yea & all that doe wickedly ſhall be as ſtubble, and the day that cometh ſhall burn them up, that it ſhall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name ſhall the ſun of righteouſneſſe ariſe with healing in his wings, and ye ſhall goe forth and grow as calves of the ſtall, and ye ſhall tread down the wicked, for they ſhall be as aſhes under the ſoles of your feet, in the day that I ſhall doe this, ſaith the Lord of hoſts. What was the ultimate completion of this Prophecy (and of the like Joel 2. 11, 22, 23, 33. though Elias be not mentioned there) is clear enough, the eradication of the wicked obſtinate Jews, v. 1. and the delivery and preſervation of all the humble, faithful penitents out of that deſtruction, v. 2. together with the advantages, that ſhould come to the faithful by that means, as from a victory over enemies, and perſecutors v. 3. So in Joel, the fire devoureth before, and the flame conſumeth behinde, the land from a garden of Eden becomes a deſolate wilderneſſe, yea and nothing ſhall eſcape them; v. 3. and much more to the ſame purpoſe, noting the utter deſtruction of the Jews, and then, Fear not O land, be glad and rejoyce, for the Lord will doe great things, v. 21. Be not afraid. v. 22. be glad ye children of Sion, v. 23. and ye ſhall eat in plenty, and be ſatisfied, and praiſe the name of the Lord, that hath dealt wondrouſly with you, and my people ſhall never be aſhamed, v. 26. And it ſhall come to paſſe, that whoſoever cals upon the name of the Lord ſhall be delivered, for in mount Sion and in Jeruſalem ſhall be deliverance, as the Lord hath ſaid, and in the remnant whom the Lord ſhall call. Theſe two then being the parts of that great and dreadfull day, the deſtruction of the unbeleiving Jewes that ſtood out and perſecuted and crucified Chriſt and Chriſtians, and the reſcue of a remnant, the perſevering beleivers, and John Baptiſt being the Prophet, ſent into the wilderneſſe, like Elias, to foretell this deſtruction, and to preach Repentance for the averting of it, there is little reaſon of doubting, but that that Prophecy of Malachy was exactly thus fulfilled, and that conſequently this was the matter of the diſcourſe of Elias and Moſes with Chriſt, though as in a viſion ſomewhat obſcurely and darkly delivered, upon which the Diſciples diſcerning this to be the day ſpoken of by Malachy, but not diſcerning that Elias was yet come, (and ſo that that precedaneous part was yet fulfilled) ask Chriſt this queſtion, why then 'tis reſolved on by all that Elias muſt firſt come? firſt, that is, before this great and terrible day of the Lord, which they now heard was approaching, and had nothing to ſay againſt it, but the known Scripture-prediction that Elias was firſt to

ome. That which hath been thus explained from this advantage of the Disciples question, is indeed the very same with what Saint Luke (the onely one of the four Evangelists, that mentions any thing of this discourse of Elias and Moses with Christ) relates of it, c. 9. 31. ἔλεγον τὴν ἔξοδον αὐτοῦ, they related his exodus, or going out which he should accomplish at Jerusalem, which that it agrees perfectly with what hath here been said, see Note on Luke 9. c. and 2 Pet. 1. c. And for this discourse Elias indeed and Moses were fit persons to be brought in in a vision to deliver it, because Elias was he that call'd fire from heaven upon the enemies of God, and so might fitly represent the destruction of enemies, and Moses, beside the destructions wrought on the Ægyptians, and Pharaoh, deliver'd the Israelites out of that thraldome and persecution indured there, and so was fitly chosen to represent the deliverance and rescue of true patient persevering beleivers.

b. Ἀποκαταστήσει. V. 11. Restore] Ἀποκαταστήσει the word here used is rendred by Hesychius and Phavorinus, to finish or perfect. 'Tis true indeed the ordinary books read ἀποκαταπαύσει, πληρώσει, but that is a false reading, as it is evident by that which it immediately follows, ἀποκατάστασις, πληρώσις, the substantive signifies perfection, completion. According to this notation of the word, this would be the importance of the place, he shall finish or perform, establish, settle all things, both perform all that was prophesied of Elias at his coming, and cloze and shut up the first state of the world, that of the Mosaical œconomy, making entrance, as an harbinger, on the second, that of the Messias. In this sense it is, that it is said, that the law and the Prophets were untill John, noting him to be the conclusion and shutting up, finishing and closing that state, and that was to be the office of Elias; under whose name John was prefigured. And thus the word ἀποκατάστασις clearly signifies, Acts 3. 21. the establishing, setling, completing or fulfilling of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his prophets, &c. and so saith OEcumenius ἀποκατασταθῆναι, εἰς πέρας ἐλθεῖν ἅπαντα, for all things to come to an end. But 'tis also certain that this word hath another signification belonging to it, to restore or reduce. So Acts 1. 7. when the Disciples demand of Christ, εἰ ἐν τῷ χρόνῳ τούτῳ ἀποκαθιστάνεις τὴν βασιλείαν τῷ Ἰσραήλ; Dost thou at this time restore, or reduce the kingdome to Israel? (that kingdome which was prophesied of, that in the Messias's time, the saints of the most high should take the kingdome and possesse the kingdome for ever, even for ever and ever, Dan. 7. 18.) Christs answer is, that they were not to know the times and seasons, but be fitted for the ministery by descent of the Holy Ghost, and preach the Gospel over all Judæa and Samaria, &c. and by that time, Christ had said, Mat. 10. 23. that the son of man should come, that is, should really perform that which was meant by those Prophecies, which they conceived to signifie his illustrious delivering and redeeming of Israel, Luke 24. 21. and (in that of Acts 1. 7.) of his restoring the kingdome to Israel. And so for this place in S. Matthew, it must be observed, that Mal. 4. 6. where Elias's coming is foretold, 'tis there added in the Septuagint, in stead of והשיב לב he shall turn the hearts of the fathers (not to, but) with the children, ἀποκατάστησει καρδίαν, (the word here used) he shall reduce, or restore, the heart, &c. And 'tis evident that this place referres to that, though it repeat not the remainder of that verse, but only πάντα in stead of it; And doing so, it must then signifie John Baptists preaching of repentance, (which is the signification of תשובה, and the importance of that verse in Malachy,) and by that means converting them to the faith of Christ, that is, by his preaching, endeavouring, though not very succesfully to doe so. This then being the meaning of that Prophecy in Malachy of a spiritual restoring, bringing them to repentance, or preaching the doctrine of repentance to the Jews, they understood it in a more carnal sense, of restoring them to their splendid state again which they enjoyed before their captivities, and late conquest of the Romans over them. Thus is the word used by Origen against Celsus of the Jewes, θαῤῥοῦντες ἐρῶμεν ὅτι οὐδὲ ἀποκατασταθήσονται, We affirm confidently, that they shall not be restored, and Christ acknowledging the Prophecy, gives it the right interpretation, and shewes how 'twas fulfilled in John Baptist.

c. Σεληνιάζεται. V. 15. Lunatick] The word σεληνιάζεται here coming from σελήνη, the moone, is directly parallel to the English Lunatick from Luna the Moon also. Yet some mistake hath arisen from thus rendring of it. For the English word Lunacy and Lunatick is vulgarly taken to signifie a mad man, and nothing else, to wit that species of madnesse, which comes on men at such a set time toward the full of the moon, as ordinarily 'tis observable in those that have any intervals. But here it is apparent by the nature of the disaffection, and the effects of it, falling into the fire, and water, &c. that it was not any madnesse that this mans son was affected with, but a plain Epilepsy, or falling-sickness, which farther appears by the relation of this same story made by S. Luke c. 9 39. where 'tis said that the spirit taketh him (λαμβάνει, of which Epilepsy is compounded) and presently he cries, καὶ παραχρῆμα κράζει, and it agitates, shakes, boyles within him, and thereby causeth him (as the boyling of a pot) to foam at mouth, and hardly departeth from him, that is, costs him an horrible pain in coming to himself again, as in the Epilepsy 'tis observed, and συντρίβει αὐτὸν, shakes him shrewdly, works a great weaknesse on all his faculties, All clear and evident symptomes of an Epilepsy; Now the reason why this is here expres'd by σεληνιάζεται, is because this disease being in the head, as well as madnesse is, the Moon hath the same influence on one, as on the other. And generally the changes of the Moon affect those that are subject to this disease, and cast them into fits of it; Now whereas it is said here in the 18th verse, that Christ rebuked him, and the Devil went out of him, noting this person to be possess'd with the Devil, and so Luke 9. 32. the spirit takes him, and 42. the devil threw him down, cast him into a fit, and again Jesus rebuked the unclean spirit. The clear meaning of all this is, that as in those dayes it was ordinary for the Devil to have power over mens bodies, and having so, to exercise it in bringing diseases upon them, (see Note on c. 10. a.) so it was here the Devil, that possess'd him, cast him into frequent fits of Epilepsy, of which there was no way of curing him, but by casting out the Devil. See Note on Joh. 7. b. This will generally be observable in all the dæmoniacks, which appear to be, by the Devil that possesseth them, brought into some disease or other. And so when men are by the Censures of the Apostles delivered up unto Satan, 'tis said to be εἰς ὄλεθρον σαρκὸς, to the destruction of the flesh, that is, to the bringing some sore disease upon them.

d. Παραδιδόναι. V. 22. Betrayed] Some difference there is betwixt παραδιδόναι, and προδιδόναι, tradere, and prodere; the latter is ordinarily taken for treachery, falseness to him, whose part we take, whether by going over to the enemies part, or betraying secrets, but the former is somewhat more, not only to reveal those things to the enemy, that may be hurtful to the friend, but to deliver him (master, captain, friend, fort) into the enemies hand, who desires to have him and mischief him. So in * Athenæus, l. 5. of Quintus Oppius, παραδοθεὶς δέσμιος. a prisoner delivered up to custody. So Psal. 88. 8. παρεδόθην καὶ οὐκ ἐξεπορευόμην, I was imprisoned, and went not forth. And this is it that is peculiarly affirm'd of Christ here and in other places, he shall be delivered into the hands of men, and of sinners, the Roman souldiers; and Mat. 26. 3. he shall be deliver'd to be crucified. And therefore although the Engliſh word Traytor is originally all one with the Latine, traditor, and ſo to betray with παραδιδόναι here, yet becauſe the ordinary uſe of the word is for revealing of ſecrets, or advantages, &c. and is not thought peculiarly to denote that, to which the Greek here belongs, of delivering into the enemies hand, It was therefore moſt reaſonable to render it in this phraſe (not ſo ſubject by cuſtome to miſtake) to deliver up.

e. δίδραχμα. V. 24. Tribute-money] The δίδραχμα ſignifies two drachmes. The word δραχμὴ is a Greek word, firſt δραγμὴ, ſaith Julius Pollux, that is, an handful, as containing ſo many oboli æneï, pieces of braſſe money, as would make an handful, to wit, ſix. This word from the Greeks came not only to the Romans, but after the time of the Seleucidæ, to the Jewes alſo, ſo Ezr. 2. 69. we have דרכמונים, the Greek word, with a very light change, which is by the Septuagint rendred δραχμαὶ, by us drachmes. Now four Attick drachmes make one ſhekel, or ſταλὴρ, ſo ſaith Heſychius and Phavorinus, ſταλὴρ (not τετράχαλκον, as 'tis corruptly read, but) τετράδραχμον: and ſo v. 27. it appears, one ſταλὴρ was two of theſe half ſhekels, which ſerved there for two mens tributes. See Note on c. 26. d. Now the truth is, the δίδραχμον ἅγιον, he ſhekel of the Jewes, and the Alexandrians, the ſhekel of the Sanctuary is double as much as the ordinary ſhekel, or δίδραχμον. And therefore Exod. 30. 13. when there is mention of the half ſhekel, which was to be paid for the uſe of the Temple, the Septuagint reads τὸ ἥμισυ δίδραχμα the half of the didrachme, or half ſhekel, which is all one with a whole didrachme Attick. This ſumme was yearly paid by every Jew, above twenty yeares old, to the uſe of the Temple, and ſo continued till Veſpaſian transferr'd it to the Capitol, ſo ſaith Joſephus, φόρον ὃ τοῖς ὁπωσδήποτ' οὖσιν Ἰουδαίοις ἐπέβαλε δύο δραχμὰς, ἕκαστον κελεύσας ἀνὰ πᾶν ἔτος εἰς τὸ καπιτώλιον φέρειν, ὥσπερ πρότερον εἰς τὸ ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις ναὸν ἐτέλουν, he commanded that every Jew ſhould pay the yearly tribute of two drachmes to the Capitol, as they did before to the Temple in Jeruſalem.

f. τῶν υἱῶν, ἢ ἀλλοτρίων. V. 25. Owne children] That the own ſons here are not the natural ſubjects of the kingdome, and ἀλλότριοι thoſe, whom they have conquer'd, and brought under their dominions, will appear, 1. becauſe the naturall ſubjects ordinarily do pay tribute, and the law was clear, Exod. 30. 13. that every Jew ſhould pay his half ſhekel to the Temple. And 2. becauſe to the ſtate of the Jewes which now exacted this tribute (not the Publicans or officers of Cæſar, this being not collected by them, till 'twas transferred to the Capitol, that is, in Veſpaſian's time) there were no ſuch ſorts of men, that were ſo conquer'd by them, which could own that title of ἀλλόφυλοι in that notion. The words and ſenſe will be clear, if it be underſtood thus, that no King impoſes taxes on his own children, or family, but on ἀλλότριοι υἱοὶ, alieni filii, that is, the children of other men, as ἀλλόφυλος δοῦλος is another mans ſervant, oppoſed to ἴδιοι δοῦλοι, his own ſervants, c. 25. 14. (as that is oppos'd to οἰκεῖοι, or ἴδιοι, his own children and ſervants) and therefore by proportion, this tribute to the King of heaven ought not to be exacted from the ſons of that King, but from others; Some poſſibility and colour there is that this tribute here might be a Tax paid to the Romans impoſed under the form of the δίδραχμα ever ſince Pompey had overcome the Jewes, or elſe impoſed on them by Auguſtus, and a paſſage in Joſephus de Bell. Jud. l. 7. c. 10. (where he ſaith that Agrippa remitted them the tax which was yearly paid by them) makes it more probable; and it might well be that this was by the Romans impoſed under the form of the δίδραχμα, the known tax among the Jewes, as in Cicero's orations againſt Verres we every where ſee, that the Prætor of Syria required the tenths of that Province, which was we know firſt inſtituted by God to be paid the Prieſts. And ſo Chriſts pleading an immunity (who yet was to fulfill all righteouſneſſe, that is, to obſerve the Judaical law) and mentioning the Kings of the nations, is thought to encline alſo. But becauſe 1. that tribute in Joſephus, remitted by Agrippa, was paid by each houſe, not by each head, and this here is for each head, and 2^dly, becauſe, though Chriſt as man was reſolved to fulfill all righteouſneſſe, and accordingly paid this, yet as God, or here as the ſon of God, he was not bound to it, at leaſt 'twas not the cuſtome (which is all that Chriſt here ſaith) in other places for the children to pay their fathers thoſe taxes which others paid; and thirdly, becauſe 'tis not ſo much as intimated that this was paid to the Kings of the nations, but only that among them 'tis not the faſhion for Kings ſons to pay (which Chriſt only accommodates to his own purpoſe,) and fourthly, becauſe Chriſt was to live as obediently to the Roman laws (as farre as they were of force in Judæa) as to the Jewiſh, and to give example of obedience to all that are ſet over us by Gods providence (and ſo did in his good confeſſion to Pilate, and making no reſiſtance at his crucifixion,) and fifthly, becauſe there is no evidence but only conjecture, that there was any ſuch Roman tax on every head at that time, or that that was δίδραχμα, but on the contrary, the Cæſarean tribute-money is denarius a Roman coyne (ſee Note on ch. 22. c.) and if it had been Roman, it would have been gathered by Publicans, and thoſe in all probability would have been here named, whereas on the contrary the perſons are here ſtiled as by a known title, they that received the δίδραχμα. For theſe reaſons, I ſay, the former interpretation of the Jewiſh tax ſeems to be moſt reaſonable, eſpecially when 'tis not very likely that, (or imaginable how) Chriſt ſhould call himſelf a child or ſon of the Roman Emperors, to whom that tax was payed. One only queſtion may be farther asked, why the payment ſhould fall particularly on Chriſt and Peter, and not on the reſt of the Diſciples? To which I anſwer, 1. that it no way appears by Chriſts paying for himſelf and Peter, that the others did not alſo pay, and ſecondly, that it may be very probable that thoſe Receivers did at that time require it only of thoſe that dwelt at Capernaum, and ſo of Chriſt and Peter, and that the reſt paid it in their ſeverall cities.

CHAP. XVIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. AT the ſame time came the diſciples unto Jeſus, ſaying, Who is the greateſt in the kingdome of heaven?

1. Upon Chriſts mentioning his reſurrection from death, c. 17. 23. and Mar. 9. 31. which they took to be a beginning of his kingdome here, the diſciples enquire ambitiouſly (among themſelves, Mar. 9. 33.) who ſhall have the chief place of dignity in that kingdome of the Meſſias here? (ſo again on the ſame occaſion they fall on the ſame thoughts Mat. 20. 20. Lu. 22. 24. and look that way, Act. 1. 6.

2. And Jeſus] called a little child unto him, and ſet him in the midſt of them,

2. And Jeſus willing by an embleme, or viſible repreſentation to ſatisfie this queſtion of theirs as farre as was uſeful to them,

3. And ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, [except ye be converted and become as little children, ye ſhall not enter into the kingdome of heaven.

3. Unleſſe you change your inclinations and deſires, and take your ſelves off from this vain ambitious expectation and purſuit of a carnall kingdome of Chriſt, and of your receiving ving dignities and preheminencies in it, you can never be true diſciples of Chriſt, this carnal ambition, and projecting being ſo contrary to the Chriſtian temper.

4. Two things therefore I ſhall teach you from this emblem, firſt, that the ſtate of Chriſtianity is ſuch a ſtate, that he which is moſt lowly is moſt capable of eminence in it.

4. Whoſoever therefore ſhall humble himſelf as this little child, the ſame is greateſt in the kingdome of heaven.]

5. Secondly that all the lowlyeſt and meaneſt perſons are ſo dearly valued by me, that he that would do a grateful thing unto me, cannot find any fitter way to doe it then by cheriſhing, and treating kindly and tenderly any ſuch mean lowly perſon, eſpecially if it be by ſhewing kindneſſe and tenderneſſe to his ſoul, endevouring to advance that in the wayes of godlineſſe.

5. And whoſo ſhall receive one ſuch little child in my name, receiveth me.]

6. Whereas on the other ſide, he that ſhall gall, diſcourage, drive from me and the Chriſtian practiſe any ſuch meaneſt perſon that comes to me, 'twere for his advantage, that the ſtone of a mill, not ſuch as women turn with the hand, c. 24. 41. but ſo big that it is fain to be turned by an Aſſe, were hung as a weight about his neck, and he then caſt into the ſea, ſure to be hurried preſently to the bottome of it.

6. But who ſo ſhall offend one of theſe little ones which beleive in me, it were better for him that a * milſtone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the ſea.]

* milſtone ſuch as is drawn by an Aſſe, μύλος ὀνικὸς.

7. Upon this occaſion I tell you before-hand, that great falling off, and apoſtaſtiſing there will be amongſt thoſe that receive the faith, great diſcouragements to obſtruct the receiving of it, many will be ſeduced from the right way, (which is a ſad and wofull thing.) But though this be to be expected in reſpect of the wickedneſſe of ſome, and ſeducibleneſſe of others, and though it be not imaginable that the word ſhould by God be kept free from all ſuch temptations to ſin, (nay God hath thought fit to permit ſuch for the tryal and exerciſe of Chriſtians (yet will this be little matter of excuſe, but rather of aggravation of their ſin and wo, that ſhall be inſtrumental to this end, that ſhall be the authors of them.

7. Wo unto the world becauſe of offences: for it muſt needs be that † offences come, but wo to that man by whom the offence cometh.

† Scandals σκάνδαλα.

8. And therefore I now forewarne you that if any that is neareſt to you (friend, profit, pleaſure, as dear to thee as a member or any part of thy ſelf) go about to diſcourage thee in thy Chriſtian courſe, to withdraw thee either in groſſe from the Chriſtian profeſſion, or more particularly from any act of duty to the contrary ſin, thou be ſure to renounce it, part with it: (Mat. 5. 29, 30.) It being ſo much more eligible, and deſirable for thee to attain eternal bliſſe, having in thy life time been halt or maimed, that is, paſſing through ſome difficulties or auſterities, then by eſcaping thoſe difficulties to run into ſin, and ſo to hazard everlaſting fire.

8. Wherefore [if thy hand or foot * offend thee, cut them off, and caſt them from thee, it is † better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather then having two hands or two feet, to be caſt into fire everlaſting.]

* ſcandalize σκανδαλίζῃ. † good κᾶλον.

9. having here for ſome years loſt the benefit of one of thine eyes.

9. And if thine eye offend thee pluck it out, and caſt it from thee: it is † better for thee to enter into life [with one eye,] rather then having two eyes, to be caſt into hell fire.

a. 10. it is a matter of great moment, then, worthy your ſadeſt care, that you doe not undervalue or neglect the good, and advantage of any the meaneſt perſon, to whoſe reformation, or eſtabliſhment, ye are able to contribute any thing, but eſpecially that you take care leaſt by neglecting to do what is in your power to doe toward the recalling, or confirming, or elſe by any other means (though but occaſionally) ye prove the undoing of any my meaneſt ſervants, for I tell you, The Angels which are by God appointed to be their guardians on earth, have yet their continual returnes and recourſe to Gods glorious preſence, are neer and high in Gods favour, alwayes having acceſſe to make requeſts, or complaints in their behalfes, and to receive commands from him concerning them, and therefore theſe, though little in their own, and the worlds account, are not yet to be ſlighted, or deſpiſed by any, or averted from their courſe of piety by that means.

10. Take heed that ye deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones, for I ſay unto you; That in heaven their [a] Angels doe alwayes behold the face of my father which is in heaven.]

11. For Chriſt that came to reduce thoſe (ſee note on c. 11. k.) that are gone aſtray from the wayes of God, muſt be thought to require the ſame of you, to be moſt diligent and induſtrious to reduce the meaneſt perſon upon earth, that is in a courſe of any danger of ruine to the ſoul.

11. For the ſon of man is come to ſave that which was loſt.]

12, 13. For judge in reaſon, I pray, by this ordinary reſemblance, If an ordinary man on earth have a poſſeſſion on which he ſets any conſiderable value, be it an hundred ſheep, and if one of them be ſtrayed from the reſt, and that be diſcerned by him, doth he not ſet ſo great a value on that one loſt ſheep, as at the preſent to leave the whole number beſides (knowing them ſafe in the paſture or fold) and goe and ſearch diligently and ſolicitouſly for that one, and upon the finding it, is he not affected with more joy at the firſt ſight of it, then he is at the beholding his whole flock, which had never run that hazard?

12. How think ye? If a man have an hundred ſheep, and one of them be gone aſtray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and ſeeketh that which is gone aſtray?

13. And if ſo be that he find it, verily I ſay unto you, He rejoyceth more of that ſheep, then of the ninety and nine, which went not aſtray.]

14. And juſt thus it is with God, he is very unwilling that any the meaneſt perſon upon earth ſhould be loſt, that might with any care or methods of ours be recovered to piety.

14. Even ſo it is not the will of your father which is in heaven, that one of theſe little ones ſhould periſh.]

15. To this purpoſe, theſe directions I ſhall now give, which I require to be uſed in the Church for ever. If any fellow Chriſtian of thine doe thee any injury, and by ſo doing offend againſt God, thy charity to him, as it muſt be ſure to put off all thoughts of revenge againſt him, to forgive him freely, v. 22. ſo will it oblige thee to uſe all prudent methods to reduce him to a ſenſe and reformation of his fault (and by the ſame reaſon this is to be extended to all other wilfull crimes of which thou ſeeſt him guilty, thoſe being as fit to exerciſe this part of thy charity towards his ſoul, as any injury done to thee immediately) and let this be the method, firſt go and admoniſh him of it privately, ſo that it have nothing of ſhame or reproach joyned with it, and if he mend upon ſuch admonition, there's an end, thou haſt reaſon to rejoyce as at the finding the ſtray ſheep, that thou haſt been ſo happy an inſtrument of his repentance.

15. * Moreover, If thy brother ſhall treſpaſſe againſt thee, goe and tell him his fault between thee and him alone, if he ſhall hear thee, thou haſt gained thy brother.]

* But if Ἐὰν δὲ

16. But if this firſt method of thy charity ſucceed not, another eſſay muſt be made, take with thee one or two other men, either that the crime which thou layeſt to his charge, be ſo confirm'd to him by ſufficient teſtimony Joh. 8. 17. that he be no longer able to deny it (as that, which cannot be contradicted or denyed, is ſaid to be eſtabliſhed, Heb. 6. 16.) or that the authority of theſe added to that of thy private admonition, may be of more force with him, induce him to condemn himſelf, at leaſt be more likely to doe ſo, be more weighty in the preſence of two or three.

16. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witneſſes, every word may be eſtabliſhed.]

17. And

17. And if he ſhall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the Church: but if he neglect to hear the Church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man, and a Publican.]

17. But if he be ſtill refractary, either through non-conviction of the fact, or non-contrition for it, if this ſecond admonition work not on him, then make it a matter of publick cognizance, tell it to the rulers of the aſſemblies (ſaith S. Chryſoſtome, ſee Power of Keys, c. 2. §. 12.) or tell it in the preſence of all the people, that before them the Governour may rebuke him, (as Timothy is appointed to doe 1 Tim. 5. 20.) But if this laſt method ſucceed not neither, if he be ſtill refractary, thou art then to look on him as a deſperate deplored ſinner, (ſee Power of Keys c. 2. §. 9.) fit for the cenſures of the Church to overtake him.

18. Verily I ſay unto you, whatſoever ye ſhall bind on earth, ſhall be bound in heaven, and whatſoever ye ſhall looſe on earth, ſhall be looſed in heaven.]

18. Which ye therefore to whom now I ſpeak, the deſigned rulers of the Church, and your ſucceſſors the Biſhops, are in this caſe to proceed to, to uſe the Keys given to you, as Stewards of the houſe c. 16. 19. for the ejecting of ſuch, And I aſſure you, whomſoever (ſee note on c. 11. k.) ye ſhall thus caſt out of the Church on earth, ſhall, without repentance, and ſubmiſſion to your cenſures and reformation upon them, and ſincere deſire to reconcile, and approve themſelves to you, be by me excluded from heaven, Theſe cenſures of yours, inflicted by this commiſſion from me, ſhall be back'd by me, And ſo whomſoever ye ſhall upon ſincere repentance receive into the peace of the Church again, he ſhall by me be pardoned alſo.

19. Again, I ſay unto you, that if two of you ſhall agree on earth as touching any thing [b] that they ſhall ask, it ſhall be done for them of my father which is in heaven.]

19. As for the ſecond of the three admonitions, ſpoken of v. 16. (ſee note on c. 7. b.) b.

this I aſſure you, that as the aſſize of three men among the Jews had ſome power, ſo ſhall any two or three Chriſtians, joyning in ſuch a reprehenſion, be conſiderable in this matter, having the priviledge of Gods preſence (as in their prayers thus united, ſo in their united admonitions) to give them authority, aſſiſtance and bleſſing.

20. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midſt of them.]

20. For where two or three are met, or aſſembled for this piece of diſcipline, (as for any holy action beſides) there am I preſent with them in a ſpecial manner, and will not ſuffer the actions, which thus they undertake by my appointment, to be ſet at nought by any.

21. Then came Peter to him, and ſaid, Lord, how oft ſhall my brother ſin againſt me, and I forgive him? till ſeven times?]

21. When Chriſt had gone thus farre by way of returne from the laſt to the ſecond, and before he proceeded from that to the firſt, Peter interpoſed this queſtion (the anſwer to which comes home to the firſt of the three alſo) Sir, ſeeing I am bound to forbear my brother, or fellow Chriſtian, that injureth me, and not to act any revenge upon him, as we were taught by thee, Mat. 5. 39. and ſeeing now, upon admoniſhing him that hath injured me, in caſe he repent, either on the firſt, or ſecond, or third admonition, I am to proceed no farther againſt him, but forgive him, and rejoyce that I have done ſo much good upon him, v. 15. yet becauſe he that hath thus treſpaſſed, and repented once, may poſſibly treſpaſſe again, and repent again, (ſee Luke 17. 3, 4.) I deſire to be taught by thee, how oft I am to do this, to forgive him, that though he repent of his injury, aske forgiveneſſe, and promiſe to doe ſo no more (ſee v. 26. 29.) yet oft times relapſes again, How oft muſt I be thus indulgent to him and forgive him upon his requeſt? muſt I doe it often, or ſeven times?

22. Jeſus ſaith unto him, [I ſay not unto thee, untill ſeven times, but untill ſeventy times ſeven.]

22. This rule is to hold eternally, not only for a great, but an unlimited number of treſpaſſes, ſuppoſing that the treſpaſſer repent and promiſe amendment for the future, Lu. 17. 4. (otherwiſe thou art not ſo bound to paſſe by his treſpaſſe, but that thou muſt by the means preſcribed v. 15. &c. endevour his reformation, for in that caſe that is the greateſt charity he is capable of.)

23. Therefore is the kingdome of heaven like unto a certain King, which would take account of his [c] ſervants.]

23. To which purpoſe (to ſhew you how neceſſary it is for every of you to remit moſt freely the injuries that are done to you by your brethren, be they never ſo great, if you expect any remiſſion from God for your ſins committed againſt him) I ſhall give you this parable, Gods dealing with men under the Goſpel is very fitly reſembled to a King calling his ſervants to account. c.

24. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which ought him ten thouſand talents.]

24. And when he did ſo, one of his ſervants upon account was found to owe him a great ſumme caſt up by ordinary valuation to be a thouſand eight hundred ſeventy five thouſand pounds.

25. But for as much as he had not to pay, his Lord commanded him to be ſold and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.]

25. But he being not able to pay that ſum, his maſter appointed him to be uſed as debtors, which are not able to pay, are wont to be uſed among the Jews, ſold, they and their wives and their children, to be ſervants, and bondmen, 2 Kings 4. 1. and by that ſale the debt to be paid.

26. The ſervant therefore fell down and worſhipped him, ſaying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.]

26. Hereupon the indebted ſervant fell down on his face, and beſought him that he would ſtay a while, till he might be able to pay him, and not uſe this extremity towards him, promiſing, if he would doe ſo, that he ſhould loſe nothing by him.

27. Then the Lord of that ſervant was moved with compaſſion, and looſed him, and forgave him the debt.]

27. And his maſter was merciful, and quitted him of the former ſentence, v. 25. and frankly forgave him that vaſt ſumme, upon his bare requeſt.

28. But the ſame ſervant went out and found one of his fellow-ſervants, which ought him an hundred pence, and he laid hands on him, and [d] * took him by the throat, ſaying, Pay me that thou oweſt.]

* ſhook him

28. But when this was done, this ſervant, that had been thus mercifully and magnificently dealt with by his maſter, having had ten thouſand talents forgiven him, met with one of his fellow-ſervants, which ought him ſomewhat, one hundred denarii, valued to three pounds two ſhillings ſixpence of our money, a contemptible ſumme in compariſon with what had juſt now been forgiven him, and he preſently apprehended him in a moſt rigid manner, requiring him to make preſent payment. d.

29. And his fellow-ſervant fell down at his feet and beſought him, ſaying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.]

29. And this fellow-ſervant of his beſought him with as much humility to forbear him, as he had v. 26. beſought his maſters forbearance for ſix hundred thouſand times as much.

30. And he would not: but went and caſt him into priſon, till he ſhould pay the debt.]

30. And that ſervant that had had ſo much forgiven him, would not forgive ſo little, but dealt with him in the extremeſt rigor, caſt him into priſon never to be releaſed, but upon paying the whole debt.

31. For this all the fellow-ſervants that ſaw it, were much troubled, both for the unhappy lot of him that ſuffered, and the unreaſonable behaviour of him that thus dealt with him, in ſo diſtant a matter from what himſelf had ſo lately found from his maſter, and upon this they came and informed their maſter of it.

31. So when his fellow-ſervants ſaw what was done, they were very ſorry and came and told unto their Lord all that was done.]

32 O thou unconſcionable man, thou canſt not but remember, how I lately forgave thee all that vaſt ſumme owing to me by thee, (with which this of thy fellow-ſervant to thee beareth no proportion) and that upon thy bare requeſt, having no motive, beſide my own compaſſion to an helpleſſe creature, to invite me to ſo great a mercy.

32. Then his Lord, after that he had called him, ſaid unto him, [O thou wicked ſervant, I forgave thee all that debt, becauſe thou deſiredſt me.]

33. Was it not then reaſonable for thee that hadſt received pardon of ſo vaſt a debt from thy maſter, or ſuperior, to have (in like manner as I gave thee example) ſhewed pity to thy fellow-ſervant, to whom thou wert ſo much more obliged then I to thee, and to have remitted him ſo ſmall a ſumme, when I forgave thee ſix hundred thouſand times as much.

33. Shouldſt not thou alſo have had compaſſion on thy fellow-ſervant, even as I had pity on thee?]

34. Upon this, the maſter was moſt juſtly enraged againſt him, and uſed him as he had done his fellow, v. 30. and though he had before remitted him, yet upon this unworthy impious behaviour he revoked his deſigned mercy, and caſt him into priſon.

34. And his Lord was wroth, and delivered him to the e † tormentors,] till he ſhould pay all that was due unto him.

35. By this reſemblance ye ſee what meaſure ye muſt expect from God in this matter, For juſt ſo ſhall God deal with you, remit nothing of that rigour againſt you, which you uſe againſt others, deal moſt ſeverely with you, if ye doe not clearly, plenarily, and ſincerely (without any reſervation, or deſigne to have God execute any vengeance for you, or the like) forgive all injuries, how great ſoever, (being certainly farre below the proportion of yours againſt God) that are done to you by any man living.

35. So likewiſe ſhall my heavenly father doe alſo unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their treſpaſſes.]

Annotations on Chap. XVIII.

a. Ἄγγελοι αὐτῶν

V. 10. Angels] That Angels are Gods miniſtring ſpirits, and doe performe his commands in guarding his ſervants here below is the doctrine of Scripture, Heb. 1. 14. and ſo ſeverall times in the Revelation, where the ſeven Spirits c. 1. 4. and c. 4. 5. (that is, ſaith Andreas Caſareenſis, ſeven Angels) are ſaid in heaven to behold his face, in the ſame manner as is here affirmed of them. But whether the ἄγγελοι αὐτῶν, their Angels here, be to be defined ſingular Angels peculiarly deſign'd to particular perſons, is not here diſtinctly affirmed, onely that they are, as God ſees fit, employed in ſervices for the benefit of theſe little ones, that is, of Chriſtians: And of that there is no doubt. Thus ſaith Origen contr. Celſ. l. 6. Ἄγγελοι τεταγμένοι εἰς τὸ περίπεσθαι αὐτῶν, the Angels that are appointed to preſide over them, as guardians, to counterwork the treacheries and policies of Satan; That theſe are ſaid continually to behold the face of God, is, ſaith * Dionyſius Alexandr. ὅτι ἀπενίζουσι τῷ θείῳ κάλλει διὰ παντὸς, ἀδέπωλε ἐκ τῆς ὄντως ἀγαθῆς περιδείας ἐκπίπτοντες, becauſe they continually and ſtedfaſtly behold the beauty of God, and never fall off from that dignity and preferment (as Lucifer did) which they enjoy by their nearneſſe to the true, reall, eternall good. But there is beſides this, a more peculiar notation of the phraſe, as to behold the face, ſignifies to wait, attend as a ſervant, Pſal. 123. 2. as a Miniſter to be ready at hand, to doe whatſoever is commanded. Thus in Elias Levita, ſpeaking of the word Mitateron, he is, ſaith he, שר הפנים princeps facierum, Prince of faces, that is, Angelus qui ſemper videt faciem regis excelſi, &c. an Angel which always beholds the face of the high King, &c. that is, of God. And both theſe put together make up the full ſenſe of the words, which yet farther note a more eminent ſort of Angels.

* in Cat. Jobi. p. 21.

b. Αἰτήσωνται

V. 19. Shall aſke] It is ſomewhat uncertain what is the meaning of ἐὰν αἰτήσωνται here. For that it is not in the Active, which is ordinarily uſed for asking (ſee c. 21. 22.) is clear, and if it be rendred in a Paſſive ſenſe, then it will be whatſoever they ſhall be required to, and referre to the one or two, that are taken v. 16. that is, required to goe along with the admoniſher; which being here part of Chriſts inſtitution, it may conſequently be ſaid of it, as a promiſe from Chriſt, γενήσεται αὐτοῖς &c. it ſhall be unto them from my father, that is, my father ſhall give authority to that, which they being thus called, or required, συμφωνήσουσιν ſhall agree on. The reaſon of which is given v. 20. For where two or three are thus aſſembled in my name, according to my appointment, there am I in the midſt of them. This hath that degree of appearance of truth, that I thought fit here to mention it, but not ſo much certainty, as to put it in the margent, or to impoſe it as the primary ſenſe in the Paraphraſe.

V. 23. Servants] The ſervants here, that the King or Lord is ſuppoſed to call to account, ſeem to be thoſe, which are intruſted by him to negotiate for him, ſuch as are mentioned, c. 25. 14. and Lu. 19. 13. And proportionably his reckoning with them here, v. 24. is all one with that, Mat. 25. 19. and the ſame phraſe λόγον συναίρειν is uſed in both places, which in S. Luke (who calls him a King alſo, as he is here) c. 19. 5. is expreſs'd by commanding his ſervants to be called, that he might know how much every one had gained by trading, that is, what every man had gotten, and had ready, to bring him in, above the money which he received. That is there ſet down to be a very ſtrange encreaſe, one pound had been improved into ten, v. 16. another into five pounds, v. 18. and in S. Matthew, five are encreaſed into five more, two into two more. And ſo in both Evangeliſts ſome ſuch encreaſe is brought in by every one, but only by him that had laid it up in a napkin, and been perfectly idle, done nothing with it. Agreeably to this it here followes, that one of theſe ſervants, when he comes to be reckon'd with, is found upon account, to be endebted to his Lord ten thouſand talents, which at the rate of 750 ounces of ſilver to a talent and of five ſhillings an ounce, ariſes to one thouſand eight hundred ſeventy five thouſand pounds, a vaſt ſum of money. And that being required, he was no way able to make payment, and ſo was adjudg'd by his Lord (as ſuch debtors are wont) to be ſold, &c. upon this his petition to his Lord is, that he will bear with him a while, and he will repay him all, that upon account was due unto him, all the ten thouſand talents, And thereupon his Lord mooved with pity towards him not only ἀπέλυσεν αὐτὸν, releaſed him from that ſentence of ſelling and impriſoning, before decreed againſt him, but alſo remitted him τὸ δάνειον, the whole debt the ten thouſand talents, for which he was caſt into priſon. 'Tis true indeed that the word δάνειον here uſed, and rendred debt, doth alſo ſignifie uſury, or intereſt, and ſo might be thought to ſignifie here not the whole debt, but only the intereſt, that would be due for the forbearance of it for the ſpace that he now deſired. To this alſo the words of the ſervant's requeſt ſeem to incline, which were only theſe that he would have patience, that is grant him ſome time, promiſing if he would, to pay him the whole ſumme, and not deſiring the forgiveneſſe, or remiſſion of that. But although δάνειον ſometimes ſignifies uſe, yet it ſignifies a loane or debt alſo, and ſo it is expreſs'd to doe here, v. 30. 32. 34. and the Arabick reads Colla mah alaihi, all that was upon him, all that he was lyable to, or reſponſible for, now that was plainly not only all the intereſt that this deſired forbearance would ariſe to, but even the principal it ſelf. For though the ſervant doth not beg the abſolute remiſſion of that, but uſes the ordinary forme of inſolvent debtors, which deſire patience, or releaſe from priſon, and labour to encline the Creditor to that, by fair promiſes, that he ſhall loſe nothing by them, yet Gods mercy expreſs'd by this of the Lords, and the example ſet to us, in the former paſſage, v. 22. of plenary and abſolute forgiveneſſe of what is already ſuffered (and not only of what may follow) will certainly extend it to the whole ſumme, and not ſuffer it to be reſtrained to no more then the Creditors requeſt; the intereſt for forbearance. And ſo the other part of the Parable, his dealing with his fellow-ſervant doth demonſtrate alſo, for there that which he would not forgive, was (in all reaſon) anſwerable to that, which the Lord had forgiven him, (differing only in the quantity of it, ſo few denarii on eight parts of an ounce, to ſo many Talents, and anſwerable to that is the brothers treſpaſſe againſt me in proportion to thy ſins againſt God) and that is there called τὸ ὀφειλόμενον (in a word which is not capable of that ambiguity) the debt, v. 30. not the intereſt, and πᾶσα ὀφειλὴ ἐκείνη, all that debt, and therefore this is moſt reaſonably to be pitch'd on as the meaning of the place, and the Concluſion from thence, this plain truth, that Gods pardons here in this life are not to us Abſolute, while we become uncharitable to our brethren, but, according to the petition in our Lords Prayer, anſwerable to our dealings with others, and ſo conditional, and are no longer likely to be continued to us, then we perform that condition.

V. 28. Took him by the throat] The word πνίγω is not only to choak or throttle, but alſo, according to the uſe of the Hebrew בעת (which ſometimes is rendred πνίγω, 1 Sam. 16. 14. ſometimes δαμβέω, παρέλω ἐπαράσσω, σορβέω) ſignifies to pluck, to exagitate, to trouble, to hale, to ſhake, to terrifie, and ſo it may here ſignifie. d. Πνίγω

V. 34. Tormentors] Βασανισὴς, δημόσιον & ſaith Heſychius, it not only ſignifies one that explores, and examines, and puts upon the rack (in which notion it cannot be taken here)* but alſo a keeper of a common gaol, and ſo it muſt do here, the uſage in this verſe being proportionable, and parallel to that, which this man had dealt to his fellow-ſervant, v. 30. which was caſting him into priſon, untill he ſhould pay the debt, which argues the Βασανισὴς here, to whom he is delivered, to be the keeper of that priſon and no more, there being no uſe of the rack, or torment in this buſineſſe. e. Βασανισὴς

CHAP. XIX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND it came to paſſe that [when Jeſus had finiſhed theſe ſayings,] he departed from Galilee, and came into the coaſts of Judea beyond Jordan.

1. when all thoſe occaſions were over, on which he ſpake thoſe things,

2. And great multitudes followed him, and he healed them [there.]

2. no leſſe in Judea now, then before in Galilee.

3. The Phariſees alſo came unto him, tempting him, and ſaying, Is it lawfull for a man to put away his wife for every cauſe?

4. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, [Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female?

5. And ſaid, For this cauſe ſhall a man leave father and mother, and ſhall cleave to his wife, and they twain ſhall be one fleſh.]

4, 5. Ye cannot but remember the ſtrict union, and conjunction betwixt man & wife which was appointed by God in the creation, Gen. 1. 27. where as ſoon as the man and woman were created, we finde this concluſion made by Adam, (or rather the hiſtorian) Gen. 2. 24. that the man was to forſake all and cleave to his wife, and continue with her as inſeparably as with another part of the ſame fleſh, (ſee note on Lu. 16. b.)

6. Wherefore they are no more twain, but one fleſh. What therefore God hath joyned together, let no man put aſunder.

6. And therefore thus are they to be thought of, as two by God united into one, and then ſure that which hath been thus inſtituted by God, muſt not by man be altered, it ought ſtill to continue among you, as it was firſt inſtituted, 'tis utterly unlawfull (unleſſe in caſe of falſeneſſe to the husbands bed Mat. 5. 32.) to put the wife away.

7. They ſay unto him, Why did Moſes then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?]

7. To this the Phariſees objected, ſaying, What account then is to be given of that precept in the Law, wherein Moſes appointed the husband (in ſome caſes mentioned by him Deut. 24. 1.) to give a bill of divorce unto the wife, in this manner permitting him to put her away?

8. He ſaith unto them, [Moſes, becauſe of the hardneſſe of your hearts ſuffered you to put away your wives, but from the beginning it was not ſo.]

8. God in the Moſaical œconomy, knowing you Jews to be ſo imperſwaſible and obſtinately bent to your own luſts and rages, that in caſe you were obliged to live with hated wives, and not permitted divorces, it would probably cauſe in you ſome greater ſin, for the preventing hereof allow'd a diſpenſation in this point, tolerated divorces, and took ſo much pity and care of the oppreſſed hated wife, as to provide this kind of releef for her, commanding to give a bill of divorce thereby as by an act of manumiſſion to reſtore her liberty to her, with all decently to ſend her out of the family and in ſome ſort endow her: But this you ſee (v. 4, 5.) was very diſtant from the appointment of God in the firſt inſtitution of marriage.

9. And I ſay unto you, Whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and ſhall marry another, committeth adultery, and who ſo marrieth her that is put away, doth commit adultery.]

9. And accordingly I now define that whoſoever ſhall uſe that liberty ſo frequent among you, to put away his wife, for any leſſer cauſe then that of fornication, and then thinke it free for him to marry again, that man by marrying another, whilſt his wife is alive, (from the obligation to whom he is not, nor can be freed) is conſequently guilty of adultery, and ſo likewiſe he that marrieth her that is divorced, taketh another mans wife, which is adultery alſo.

10. His diſciples ſay unto him, If the caſe of the man be ſo with his wife, [it is not good to marry.]

10. Hereupon his own diſciples began to object, that if marriage brought ſuch an inſeparable conjunction with it, then ſure the inconveniencies and hazards of marriage above the advantages and conveniencies of it would be ſo great, that it were more prudent not to marry at all, then to be ſubject to ſuch poſſible inconveniencies.

11. But

11. To this objection he gave this anſwer, that all men are not capable of that prudentiall aphoriſme [that a ſingle life is more profitable and fit for their turn, then marriage] but thoſe only, whom God hath ſome way more then ordinarily fitted for it, by ſome ſpeciall gift.

11. But he ſaid unto them, All men cannot receive this ſaying, ſave they to whom it is given.]

12. For ſome live unmarried, as being naturally enabled to doe ſo chaſtly, and without great difficulty, ſome, as being by men diſabled (of which ſort there were very many among the heathens, ordinarily called Eunuches) ſome out of firmneſſe of reſolution have gotten that maſtery over themſelves, that they can live chaſtly in a ſingle life, and do ſo on purpoſe, that they may have fuller vacancy to ſet themſelves apart for the duties of Chriſtianity. Now he that finds this agreeable to his condition, and can thus conquer and ſubdue himſelfe, he may doe accordingly, if he pleaſe, and ſhall do well, and wiſely in ſo doing.

a. 12. For there are ſome [a] Eunuchs, which were ſo born from their mothers wombe: and there are ſome Eunuchs, which were made Eunuchs of men: and there be Eunuches which have made themſelves Eunuches for the Kingdome of heavens ſake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.]

13. that by impoſition of hands he would beſtow his benediction upon them. And his diſciples would have chid them away.

13. Then were there brought unto him little children, [that he ſhould put his hands on them, and pray: and the Diſciples rebuked them.]

14. their meekneſſe, humility and docility, are the temper, which of all others is moſt like that which is required of diſciples of Chriſt.

14. But Jeſus ſaid, Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me: for [of ſuch is the kingdome of heaven.

15. And uſing that ceremony of impoſition of hands, frequent among the Jews in all kind of benedictions, he beſtowed his bleſſing upon them.

15 And he laid his hands on them,] and departed thence.

16. what is the condition required of me to make me capable of Eternall bliſſe?

16. And behold, one came and ſaid unto him, Good maſter, [what good thing ſhall I doe that I may have eternall life?]

17. thy calling me good, without conceiving me to be God is not right. But for thy queſtion of the way to eternall bliſſe, this is ſoon anſwered, 'tis by obedience to Gods commandements.

17. And he ſaith unto him, [Why calleſt thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandements.]

18. Jeſus ſaid, thoſe great precepts given by God to Moſes, containing the heads of all duties both toward God and man, particularly thoſe ſix of the ſecond ſort, containing the duty toward man.

18. He ſaith unto him, Which? [Jeſus ſaid] Thou ſhalt doe no murther, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, Thou ſhalt not ſteal, Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſſe.]

19. Thou ſhalt not deſign advantage to thy ſelf by another mans loſſe, or deſire any thing that is his, but conſider his good, as well as thine own, which is the ſumme of the laſt commandement.

19. Honour thy Father and thy mother, and, [Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf.]

20. All theſe parts of duty I have ſincerely obſerved all my life, what more is required of me?

20. The young man ſaith, [All theſe things have I kept from my youth up: What lack I yet?

b. 21. If thou wilt aſcend to that higher pitch, to which I come to raiſe men, if thou wilt be a Chriſtian, then muſt thou, upon contemplation of the reward that is laid up in heaven for all that ſincerely obey me, be contented to part with all the wealth of the world, whenſoever that is required of thee, either directly (as now I command thee to ſell and give to the poor all that thou haſt, and ſo to follow me, as all my diſciples have done, though they had not ſo much to part with, as thou haſt) or by conſequence when thou canſt not obey any particular precept without danger of being undone by it.

21. Jeſus ſaid unto him, [If thou wilt be [b] perfect, go and ſell that thou haſt, and give to the poor, and thou ſhalt have treaſure in heaven, and come and follow me.]

22. When the young man heard Chriſt ſay this, he was much greived, becauſe he had a very great eſtate, and therefore ſeeing he could not be a Chriſtian at any cheaper rate, he forſook, or departed from Chriſt, would not pay ſo dear for that perfection.

22. But when the young man heard that ſaying, he went away ſorrowfull: for he had great poſſeſſions.]

23. It is very difficult for a wealthy man to undertake that condition, required of all by me, that will be Chriſtians, and come to bliſſe now under the Goſpel.

23. Then ſaid Jeſus to his diſciples: Verily I ſay unto you that [a rich man ſhall hardly enter into the kingdome of heaven.]

c. 24. The rich man ſetteth his heart upon his riches, and truſting in them, Mar. 10. 24. muſt part with as much of his humour, before he can be capable of being a Chriſtian, of performing the condition by me required to attain bliſſe, as that beaſt, Camel or Elephant &c. which is of the greateſt bulk, muſt part with, to be qualified to paſſe through the ſtraighteſt place.

24. And again I ſay unto you, [It is eaſier for a [c] camel to goe through the eye of a needle, then for a rich man to enter into the Kingdome of God.]

25. If the way preſcribed by thee to bliſſe be as ſtraight as a needles eye, who then can undertake it? who can come to bliſſe upon ſuch termes as theſe? who is there that according to this rule is qualified for ſalvation?

25. When his diſciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, ſaying, [Who then can be ſaved?]

26. look'd upon them (as exáples of the practicableneſſe of this doctrine, of forſaking, parting with all to follow him) and tells them, to encourage them, that, it ſeems, thoſe things which are in themſelves ſo hard, and ſo unreaſonable for meer men to doe, are yet very poſſible for God; and ſo this of contemning the world, working ſuch a change on a worldly mans heart, that he ſhall liberally beſtow his wealth, and not place any confidence in it, is a work, that God doth ordinarily work in mens hearts, and enables them to doe with eaſe.

26. But Jeſus [beheld them and ſaid unto them, With men this is impoſſible, but with God all things are poſſible.]

27. Then anſwered Peter and ſaid unto him, Behold, we have forſaken all, and followed thee, what ſhall we have therefore?

28. ye that are now my diſciples, and have by receiving the faith and baptiſme left all to follow me, ſhall, aſſoon as I come to my kingdome, be highly honoured and rewarded by me, or, You that have received me and followed me, and perſevered conſtant to me, continued with me in my temptation, Lu. 22. 28. ſhall in the new age, or ſtate, (taking its beginning from the reſurrection, and aſcenſion of Chriſt) have a power in the Church inſtated on you, as my ſucceſſors, ſomewhat proportionable to that of the ſeverall Rulers of the Tribes among the Jewes, (a token of which are the keyes, after given to them, and promiſed, as here, c. 16. 19.) The power which my father hath given me on earth, ſhall at my departure be inſtated upon you, Lu. 22. 29.

d. 28. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, [that ye which have followed me, in the [d] regeneration, when the ſon of man ſhall ſit on the throne of his glory, ye alſo ſhall ſit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael.]

29. And

29. And every one that hath forſaken houſes, or brethren, or ſiſters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands for my names ſake, ſhall receive an c hundred fold,] and ſhall inherit everlaſting life.

29. And whoſoever ſhall for my ſake part with any of the advantages and poſſeſſions

c. of this life, whatſoever it is, he ſhall be ſo farre from being a loſer by it, that he ſhall in this very life be by that means abundantly more richly provided for; in the ſame proportion, that he which in the harveſt hath the moſt plentifull returns to his ſeed and pains-taking. (c. 13. 8.)

30. But many that are firſt ſhall be laſt, and the laſt ſhall be firſt.]

30. But though you have advantage of other men in being thus early in Diſcipleſhip, yet 'tis very poſſible that ſome that come after you in time (as Paul) may labour as fervently, deſerve as much, and conſequently be as richly rewarded as you. (upon which followes the parable of c. 20. 1.)

Annotations on Chap. XIX.

V. 12. Eunuches] The word εὐνοῦχοι and εὐνουχίζειν have a vulgar ordinary ſignification, which is known by the Engliſh uſe of the word Eunuch, that is, in the expreſſions of the Grammarians, παῖδων, τομίας, &c. And accordingly three ſorts of them are ordinarily ſet down, 1. ἐκτομίαι caſtrati; οἱ διὰ ζιδήρου ἀκρωτηριασθέντες, 2. Σπάδωνες, οἱ ἐκ γενετῆς διδύμους μὴ ἔχοντες, and 3. Θλιβίαι and Θλασίαι, οἱ νηπόθεν ὑποβάλλοντες τὰ παιδόγονα μόρια ὑπὸ τῶν γονέων θλιβέντα, καὶ ἀχρηςωθέντα. But here the Context which ſets it in oppoſition to marrying, makes it clear, that Eunuchiſme is taken for the chaſtity of a ſingle life, howſoever acquired, whether 1. by naturall temper, or 2. by ſome outward accidentall weakning, or debilitating of nature, as was frequent among the Gentiles, in order to ſome offices and ſervices, to which men, that were thereby ſecured from deſires, were deſigned; Such, if it were done by themſelves, are called by the Apoſtles Canons, ἀυτοφονευταὶ ſelf-murtherers, ἐχθροὶ τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ δημιουργίας, enemies of Gods workmanſhip, Can. 22, 23. or 3ly, by firm purpoſe or reſolution of mind, aſſiſted by Gods grace, in order to his ſervice; ſuch were the aſcetæ, σκληραγωγοὶ τῇ ἰδίᾳ καρδίᾳ ἀγωνιζόμενοι, thoſe that impoſed hardſhips on themſelves, and combated with their own deſires. Thus in Phavorinus, the word being deduced according to ſome Grammarians from ἓυ νῶν ἔχειν, to have the mind well or wiſely diſpoſed, it ſignifies, ſaith he, ἀπηλλάχθαι τῆς ἀφροδισίων, to have nothing to doe with any thing of venery or carnality, for, ſaith he, the Ancients ἀφροδίσια ἀνόητα ἐκάλουν, call'd all things of that kind, follies; Thus we know the Scripture hath expreſs'd any ſuch unlawfull commiſſion, the doing folly in Iſrael, and ſo 'tis cited out of Ariſtophanes, ὕπνου τε ἀπέχεσθαι καὶ τῶν ἀνοήτων πάντων, to abſtain from ſleep and all fooliſh things, where yet Ariſtophanes hath only Οἴνου τ' ἀπέχε καὶ γυμνασίων, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀνοήτων, which the Scholiaſt expounds by τῶν ἀφροδισίων, τὸ δὲ ἀνοήτων αἰνίττεται, μωραίνειν, διὰ τὸ ἀφροδισιάζειν ἔλεγον, ſaith he. But 'tis poſſible that the place in Ariſtophanes is to be read ὕπνου τε in ſtead of οἴνου, and then there is no queſtion, but that ὕπνος ſleep might be a civil word for things of that nature, as in the Wiſe man, ἡδονὴ δὲ ὕπνος ſignifies.

a. Εὐνοῦχοι

V. 21. Perfect] What is the notion of τελειότης perfection here, muſt be defined by conſidering what is meant by entring into the kingdome of heaven, v. 23. For it appeareth that the not undertaking the condition required of the young man by Chriſt, to his being perfect, doth alſo exclude him from entring into this kingdome, or render him uncapable of it. Now that kingdome of heaven, ſignifying that crown of eternall life and bliſſe, which was this mans aime, v. 16. the entring into that kingdome is the undertaking the condition now required by Chriſt, or the attaining that bliſſe by performing that condition, and therefore his going away v. 22. that is, forſaking of Chriſt, cauſed by the greatneſſe of his riches, is all one with the rich mans not being able to enter into that kingdome v. 23. This again appeareth by the queſtion and anſwer enſuing, v. 25. where when the Diſciples aske, Who then can be ſaved? (whatſoever they mean by that, whether, who can be a Chriſtian? as the word rendred eſcaping or being ſaved often ſignifies, (ſee Mat. 10. h. Lu. 13. b. and Rom. 10. a.) or whether who can come to heaven?) Chriſts anſwer is, by looking upon them, &c. intimating them to be examples of this poſſibility, capable of this ſalvation, this entering into the kingdome of heaven, as having perform'd the condition requited to qualifie them for it. From theſe premiſes it ſeems neceſſary to conclude that the perfection here ſpoken of is Chriſtianity it ſelf, (and not only an heroick eminent degree of it) and that the condition here required to it is matter of command, not counſel only, and ſuch, as he that will not aſcend to, (the young man here) cannot be called or deemed a Chriſtian, cannot attain to bliſſe, as 'tis now offered under the Goſpel. From hence it followes not, that no man is ſaveable, or a Chriſtian, but he that ſells all, and gives it to the poor, and ſo followes Chriſt, for there is no command elſwhere given by Chriſt to all men to doe ſo, (and this command here given to this young man, and the like, in ſome degree, to the Diſciples, to leave their nets, that is, their whole eſtates, and follow him, obliges none but thoſe to whom it was given) but only thus, that he that loves any thing more then Chriſt, is no Chriſtian, that whatſoever Chriſt ſhall at any time by any explicite command, as here, or elſe by his providence (by making it impoſſible to preſerve my fidelity to him, or obedience to any known command of his, without parting with my wealth &c.) require of me, I muſt impartially perform it, though it be with the loſſe of my eſtate, or even of life it ſelf, and if I doe not reſolve, and undertake to doe ſo, I cannot be ſaved, I am no Chriſtian. Or if having vowed it, (as every Chriſtian doth in Baptiſme, vowing there, whenſoever the world comes in competition with Chriſt, to forſake the world and follow Chriſt) I doe not in time of tryall perform it, I forfeit the priviledges of Chriſtianity, all title to bliſſe. And this is it that maketh it ſo hard a thing for the rich man, and even ſo impoſſible for him that truſteth in riches, Mar. 10. 24. (that hath repoſed any confidence in them, that depends, or looks on them as his felicity) to enter this kingdome, to be, and continue Chriſtian, to attain this perfection or this bliſſe; for, where his treaſure is, there will his heart be alſo.

b. Τελείοτης

V. 24. Camel] It was an ordinary proverb among the Jewes that An Elephant cannot paſſe through the eye of a needle to ſignifie the moſt impoſſible thing. Thus in the Babyl. Talmud. Perek Haroe Barachoth, You perhaps are one of Pombeditha (an Academy of Jewes in Babylon) where they can make an Elephant paſſe through a needles eye; ſignifying them a vain-glorious people, that would boaſt of doing impoſſibilities, and in Gemara לא פילא דעייל בקיפא דמחטא there is no Elephant that enters by the hole of a needle. This proverb Chriſt was willing to change from the Elephant, which was a beaſt that few had ſeen, to a Camell, which was very ordinary in Syria, and whoſe bunch on his back is apt to hinder his paſſage through any narrow entrance. This being thus premiſed, as the full account of the place, it is yet farther obſervable

c. Παροιμία Εβρ: Κάμηλος διὰ τρυπήματος ῥαφίδος ἰωθεῖν

that Phavorinus on the word κάμιλος, ſaith, that 'tis not only the name of that beaſt, but ᾗ τὸ παχὺ σχοινίον, ἐν ᾧ δεσμεύουσι τὰς ἀγκύρας οἱ ναῦται, it ſignifies alſo a cable with which the mariners bind the anchors, and cites this place of the Goſpel, as belonging to that ſignification of the word; & ſo Theophyl. that 'tis παχὺ σχοινίον ᾧ χρῶνται ναῦται πρὸς τὸ βίπτειν τὰς ἀγκύρας, a cable with which Mariners uſe to caſt their Anchors. Were the word to be found in that ſenſe in other Authors, it would be an ingenious conjecture, but this word for a cable, (from which the Engliſh probably comes with a light change of [m] into [b]) is by Suidas, and the Scholiaſt of Ariſtophanes written with [ι] κάμιλος, and ſo in Heſychius (from whom Phavorinus ordinarily borrowes) for ſo ſure ſhould it be read κάμιλος (which is now καμίνος) μέρος πλοίου, And ſo this being the only place cited by Phavorinus, (and from him or with him obſerved by others) 'tis more poſſible, that it was but a conjecture of that Grammarian, and ſo of no more authority then ſuch; And therefore the proverbial ſpeech among the Hebrews foremention'd (the uſing of which was not extraordinary with Chriſt, ſee Note on c. 10. i.) to him probably unknown, but to us made clear by their writings, may remove all that difficulty, the not diſcerning of which put him upon that bolder interpretation. Mean while the application of that Proverb to the rich mans turning Chriſtian, or entring bliſſe, is no farther to be extended, then to ſignifie the greatneſſe of the diſtance, and ſo of the change or paſſage from one of theſe ſtates to the other, the rich mans truſts, and joyes, and confidences being ſo contrary to the Chriſtians, and ſo perfectly irreconcileable with them. This is ſo farre affirm'd by Plato 5. de Leg. ἀγαθὸν ὄντα διαφερόντως καὶ πάσιον εἰ διαφέροντος ἀδύνατον, 'tis impoſſible to be exceeding good, and exceeding rich, that Celſus, the heathen enemy of Chriſt and Chriſtians, ſaith, that this ſpeech of Chriſts was but a corrupting of that ſpeech of Platos, See Orig. cont. Celſ. l. 6. p. 294.

d. Παλιγγενεσία

V. 28. Regeneration] The word παλιγγενεσία ſignifies properly a new or ſecond ſtate, τὸ ἐκ δευτέρου γενηθῆναι, καὶ ἀναπλασθῆναι, ſay the Grammarians. 'Tis uſed among the Pythagoreans for the return of the ſoul, εἰς γένεσιν, when that ſoul which was once in him, that is dead, comes back to life again in another body. In ſacred Writers 'tis uſed agreeably for the reſurrection, whether that of the future being of body and ſoul, or that which Chriſt is pleaſed to make preparative to it, the ſpiritual proſelytiſme, expreſs'd by that phraſe, Tit. 3. 5. the change and renovation of the ſoul and affections in this life, and as a token and ſigne of that work of Chriſts, it is uſed for Baptiſme, that being born of water and the Holy Ghoſt, Joh. 3. And ſo hath Phavorinus obſerved, παλιγγενεσία, τὸ ἅγιον βάπτισμα λέγεται, 'tis ſet to ſignifie Holy baptiſme, (ſee Note on Mat. 3. a. and Joh. 3. a.) Farther yet, and by the ſame Analogie, it may ſignifie that ſecond or new ſtate, that μέλλων αἰών, in Iſaiah, that age to come, that is, the ſtate of the Church under Chriſt, or his ſpiritual kingdome, beginning at the Reſurrection of Chriſt, and this, either in reſpect of the beginning of it, Chriſts Reſurrection, which is fitly ſtyled παλιγγενεσία the new birth of Chriſt, or elſe in regard that all other things (that is, the generall diſpoſall of all things in the Church) are become new, 2 Cor. 5. 27. the Gentiles received into the Church, the Jewiſh Prieſthood, and ceremonies aboliſhed, &c. If this laſt ſenſe be here made uſe of, then it will be moſt agreeable to the ordinary punctation of our printed Copies which ſet a comma after ἀκολουθήσαντές μοι, ye that have followed me, and another again after ἐν τῇ παλιγγενεσίᾳ, in the regeneration, ſevering the latter from the former, and joyning it ſo with καθίσητε καὶ ὑμεῖς ye ſhall alſo ſit, &c. that what is betwixt ὅταν καθίσῃ &c. when the ſon of man ſhall ſit on the throne of his glory, ſhall be as in a Parentheſis, to explicate what is meant by that time, and what that in the regeneration ſignifies, viz. when Chriſt ſhall be gone to heaven, and all power in the Church ſolemnly enſtated on him. At which time they ſhall be placed in authority next unto him, as the four and twenty Elders, Rev. 4. 4. are next to him that ſits, in the midſt, upon the throne. And thus that which is in theſe words here propoſed to Peter and the reſt of the Diſciples, by way of reward for following him, will be exactly proportionable to that other promiſe in the ſame kind made to them in the perſon of S. Peter, c. 16. 19. For the giving the keyes there, was the enſtating on them a power in the Church, to which they were to ſucceed, under and after him, upon his Aſcenſion, which very thing is clearly expreſs'd by ſitting on ſeats, and judging the twelve tribes; The expreſſion being taken from the φυλάρχαι, or chief of the tribes among the Jewes, who had a dignity inferior, but (in that circuit) next to the Regall, to which Chriſt was by his Aſcenſion enthroned. What this dignity and power was to be, is diſcernible both by that place of the donation of the keyes, and more particularly by that, which c. 20. is added upon this very occaſion; There the ſons of Zebedee, or their Mother, in their behalf, having on this preſent promiſe of Chriſt, built an expectation of ſome earthly greatneſſe, particularly of that (ſo familiar among them) of the φυλάρχαι, the chief of the tribes, thereupon they petition, that they in the diſpenſing of theſe dignities among the Twelve, might have the πρωτεῖα (as Judah and Joſeph among the Jews) the præeminence above the reſt of the Twelve, whereupon Chriſt diſabuſes her, and ſhewes them that they were no kind of ſecular advantages (or ſuch as would be very deſirable to them) which were likely to come in to them by this meanes (ſee Power of keyes c. 5. §. 13. &c.) By which anſwer of Chriſt to the Diſciples, reflecting on the dignity and office of Judge here mention'd, it is in ſome degree evident, (what S. Auguſtine affirmeth) that the judicature here ſpoken of, is that in the Church of Chriſt; Yet becauſe it is by S. Paul alſo affirmed of the Saints, that they ſhall judge the world, 1 Cor. 6. 2. and becauſe in S. Luke c. 22. 29. there is joyned herewith the eating and drinking at his table in his kingdome, and becauſe Mar. 10. 30. (which is parallel to this,) beſide the reward in this time (this world) there is mention of the world to come alſo, and everlaſting life, therefore it will be moſt ſafe to interpret this judging here, of the Apoſtles power in the Church of Chriſt, yet ſo as may not exclude that future dignity alſo.

e. Ἑκατονταπλασίονα λαμβάνειν.

V. 29. Hundred-fold] There is a ſaying in the Alcoran very agreeable to this, Qui opes ſuas erogant in via Dei ſimiles ſunt grano, quod ſeptem ſpicas germinavit, They that lay out their riches in the way of God, are like a grain of corn which hath ſhot out ſeven ſtalks. Now ſuppoſing every of thoſe ſtalks or eares to have ten corns in it, that will be the ſeventy-fold ſpoken of, Mat. 13. But ſuppoſing fourteen or fifteen in each, (as in the moſt fruitful places and yeares it is) then it amounts to an hundred-fold, and ſo the hundred-fold, being the proportion of the moſt fruitfull meſſuage, is here ſet down as the harveſt of the Chriſtian (that ſuffers or gives for Chriſts ſake) and that in this life.

CHAP. XX.

Paraphraſe.

1. FOR the kingdome of heaven is like unto a man that is an houſholder, which went out * early in the morning to hire labourers into his vineyard.]

* at day break, ὄρθρου.

1. If you doe not perfectly underſtand what was laſt ſaid, (of the laſt ſhall be firſt, &c.) then a reſemblance of it (and in that of all Gods dealing with men in the Church) you may have in a man of an eſtate, managing it himſelf, by the manner of his dealing with his hired labourers; Firſt he went out as ſoon as it was light (anſwerable to Chriſts calling and ſending the twelve at the beginning of mens receiving the faith c. 9. 38. and c. 10. 1.) into the market place, where day-labourers were wont to ſtand, expecting imployment, to hire labourers for his vineyard.

2. And when he had agreed with the labourers for a peny] a day, he ſent them into his vineyard.

2. And having agreed with a certain number for a ſet determinate wages of ſeven pence half-peny,

3. And he went out [about the third hour,] and † ſaw others ſtanding idle in the market-place.

3. about nine of the clock in the morning.

4. And ſaid unto them, Go ye alſo into the vineyard, and [whatſoever is right I will give you.] And they went their way.

4. I will not bind my ſelf to give you the wages of a whole day for this part of it, but according as you ſhall, for the time you are in, behave your ſelves in the vineyard, you ſhall be rewarded.

5. Again he went out [about the ſixt and ninth hour,] and did likewiſe.

5. about twelve at noon, and about three in the afternoon.

6. And about the eleventh hour he went out and found others ſtanding idle] and ſaith unto them, Why ſtand ye here all the day idle?

6. And about five in the evening he went out again, and found others looking for work, willing to be employed, but not entertain'd by any.

7. They ſay unto him, Becauſe no man hath hired us. He ſaith unto them, Goe ye alſo into the vineyard, and [whatſoever is right that ſhall ye receive.]

8. So when even was come the Lord of the vineyard ſaith unto his * Steward, call the labourers and give them their hire, [beginning from the laſt unto the firſt.]

8. beginning firſt with thoſe that came in lateſt, and ſo aſcending to them that came in firſt.

9. And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a peny.]

9. And when they came to be paid that had entred laſt upon their work, he gave them a whole dayes hire, upon their good diſcharge of that one hour in the vineyard.

10. But when the firſt came, they ſuppoſed that they ſhould have received more, and they likewiſe received every man a peny.]

10. But when they came which were hired firſt, and wrought from the morning all day, they thought that they ſhould have more then they which had been leſſe time in the vineyard, but they were miſtaken in their expectation, had no more then the ſum for which they were hired.

† Maſter of the houſe, οἰκοδεσπότου.

11. And when they had received it, they murmured againſt the † good man of the houſe,

12. Saying, Theſe laſt have [a] wrought but one hour, and thou [haſt made them equal unto us, which have born the burthen and heat of the day.]

12. haſt given them as much wages as we, which have laboured all day long.

a,

13. But he anſwered one of them, and ſaid, Friend, I doe thee no wrong, didſt thou not agree with me for a peny?

14. Take that thine is, and go thy way, I will give unto this laſt even as unto thee,]

14. Be thou content with that which comes to thy ſhare, according to agreement, this man that came laſt to work (it being not his fault that he came not ſooner, but his not being ſooner call'd v. 7. and he having laboured honeſtly and cheerfully ever ſince he came) ſhall by me, who accept the will for the deed, be rewarded with the ſame reward that thou haſt.

15. Is it not lawful for me to doe what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evill becauſe I am [b] good?]

15. And ſure thou haſt no reaſon to complain. What reaſon is there that my bounty to others ſhould be matter of envy and diſcontent to thee? or that thou ſhould'ſt be the judge, how I am to deal with thy brother? Many reaſons there may be which thou knoweſt not, why they that came in laſt to the vineyard, if they were not ſooner called, or not ſo powerfully as others, ſhould be rewarded as liberally as they that have longer laboured; for a few acts of the will, if they be more intenſe and heroical, may in equitable eſtimation countervalue the work of a far longer time, as the theeves confeſſing Chriſt, when he was on the Croſſe, when his Apoſtles had forſaken him, and ſo Paul called laſt, was in labour more abundant, and ſo ranked with the firſt, and ſo many that came in to Chriſt in the cool of the day, when perſecution was over, might yet be as cordially intenſe and affectionate in his ſervice, as they that ſuffered for him, and ſo ſome that come to repentance more aged then others, and thoſe that at Chriſts preaching came in to Chriſtianity, compared with thoſe that had lived in the Jewiſh Church all their time, ſee note b.

* the called are many, but the choiſe or elect few

16. So the laſt ſhall be firſt, and the firſt laſt; for * many be [c] called, but few choſen.]

16. And thus that which was ſaid before c. 19. 30. is evident, that ſome that come after you in time, may prove as richly rewardable as you, For the known ſaying is very true, that they that have favours done them by God beyond others (as to be firſt called, was a ſpecial favour to the diſciples, of which no reaſon can be given, but Gods will) doe not always exceed all others in labour and Chriſtian diligence (as the Apoſtle S. Paul called long after, and therefore by himſelf ſtyled leſſe then the leaſt, and born out of due time, as called after Chriſts being gone to heaven, yet did labour more abundantly then all the twelve) nay ſome of them apoſtatize and fall off from Chriſt, as Judas did, and ſo of the whole nation of the Jews 'tis clear, that they were the men to whom God was firſt made known, and to whom Chriſt and the Goſpel were firſt ſent, they were firſt call'd to the faith, and firſt beleived on him, and yet few of them in compariſon continued faithful to him, but the Gentiles that are after called, doe eſpecially beleive, and ſtick cloſe to him, and conſequently are accepted of him.

c,

17. And Jeſus going up to Jeruſalem took the twelve diſciples apart in the way, and ſaid unto them,

18. Behold, we goe up to Jeruſalem, and the ſon of man ſhall be * betrayed [unto the chief Prieſts and to the Scribes, and they ſhall condemn him to death.

18. to the Sanhedrim there, who though they have not power to put any man to death, yet ſhall paſſe that ſentence againſt him, that he is guilty of death.

* delivered, up παραδοθήσεται

19. And ſhall preſſe the Roman Judge to put him to death after their manner of puniſhing the baſeſt malefactors, 19 And ſhall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, and to ſcourge, and to crucifie him,] and the third day he ſhall riſe again.

20. Upon this mention of his reſurrection, which they preſumed to be the time of his taking all greatneſſe upon him, the mother of James and John, being put upon it by them, came with them to Jeſus, and falling down to him, made a petition (ſee Power of Keys, c. 5. §. 13.) to him.

20. Then came to him the mother of Zebedees children with her ſons, worſhipping him, and deſiring a certain thing of him.]

21. Of that dignity which thou haſt promiſed thy diſciples, c. 19. 28. proportionable to that of being heads among the tribes of the Jewes, grant that my two ſons, James and John, may have the firſt places, as Joſeph and Judah had among them.

21. And he ſaid unto her, What wilt thou? ſhe ſaith unto him [Grant that theſe my two ſons may ſit the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdome.

22. Then Jeſus told the two diſciples, they begg'd they knew not what, all the dignity, ſaith he, that is to be had by being nearer to me then others, is that of ſuffering inwardly and outwardly, can you prepare your ſelves for that?

22. But Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I ſhall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptiſme that I am baptized with?] They ſay unto him, we are able.

23. 'Tis true indeed, the ſufferings that befall me ſhall befall you alſo, afflictions, and perſecutions, wherein you may rejoyce that you are made partakers with me, But for any priviledge of honour or dignity above others, they to whom my Father hath deſigned, ſhall have it, and I ſhall not goe about to change his deſignation, or aſſign it to any others, upon any abſolute unconditionate will or favour of mine, to gratifie you, or ſatisfie your importunity, but diſpoſe of it according to thoſe rules, and conditions and qualification, which my father hath ſet down, and I from him have revealed to you;

23. And he ſaith unto them, [Ye ſhall drink indeed of my cup. and be baptized with the baptiſme that I am baptized with; But to ſit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, † but it ſhall be given to them, for whom it is prepared of my father.]

† ſavé to thoſe for whom, ἀλλ' οἷς ἡτοίμα.

24. And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation againſt the two brethren.

25. thoſe that were diſpleaſed with the ambition of the other two, and ſaid to them,

25. But Jeſus called [them unto him, and ſaid, Ye know that the Princes of the Gentiles exerciſe dominion over them, and they that are great, exerciſe authority upon them.]

'Tis true that the rulers or kings of the nations are ſerved and benefited by their ſubjects, receive ſecular advantages by their preeminences (ſee note on 1 Pet. 5. a.) and the Emperours in like manner are over thoſe Kings.

26. But Prelacy and preeminence among you muſt bring along with it offices of burthen and humility, and not be after the manner of Gentile Princes.

26. But it ſhall not be ſo among you: but whoſoever will be great among you, let him be your miniſter.]

27. muſt be the ſervant of all the reſt, (for ſo the governours of the Church are to be)

27. And whoſoever will be chief among you [let him be your ſervant.]

28. Even as Chriſts kingdome here is not adminiſtred in that way, which might bring in ſplendour, or profit to him, but in a way of charity, ſerving, relieving, providing, and dying for his people, in ſtead of requiring ſuch offices from them.

28. Even as the ſon of man came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter, and to give his life a ranſome for many.]

d. 29. d And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him.

30. And behold two blind men ſitting by the way ſide, when they heard that Jeſus paſſed by, cryed out, ſaying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou ſon of David.

31. And the multitude rebuked them, becauſe they ſhould hold their peace; but they cried the more, ſaying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou ſon of David.

32. And Jeſus ſtood ſtill and called them, and ſaid, What will ye that I ſhall doe unto you?

33. They ſay unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened:

34. So Jeſus had compaſſion on them, and touched their eyes, and immediately their eyes received ſight, and they followed him.

Annotations on S. MATTHEW, Chap. XX.

a. Ποιεῖν. V. 12. Wrought] The word ποιεῖν in the New Teſtament, when 'tis joyned with words that denote time, is to be rendred, to ſtay, or to ſpend. So Acts 5. 34. βραχύ τι ποιῆσαι, to ſtay a little while. So Acts 15. 33. ποιεῖν χρόνον, to ſtay time, and χρόνον τινα, ſome time, c. 18. 23. So Acts 18. 21. ἑορτὴν ποιεῖν to ſtay or ſpend the feaſt, Acts 20. 3. ποιεῖν μῆνας τρεῖς, to ſtay three months. And ſo here it may poſſibly note the ſpace of their being and labouring in the Vineyard; though it is not improbable that the right reading might be ἐπόνησαν, laboured, which is very little diſtant from it. If it be not, yet moſt probably the word ἐποίησαν muſt be taken in that ſence of ἐπόνησαν, as viſibly it is Ruth 2. 19. πῦ ἐποίησας; where haſt thou laboured, and πῦ ἐποίησε where ſhe had laboured, and μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐποίησα with whom I laboured, where ſtill the Hebrew hath עשה labouring.

b. Αγαθὸς. V. 15. Good] The word ἀγαθὸς good hath a peculiar notion in this, and ſome other places, and ſignifies bounty or liberality, as when works of Mercy are call'd ἀγαθὰ ἔργα good works, Acts 9. 36. ἀγαθοποιεῖν doing good, Mat. 12. 12. καρποὶ ἀγαθοὶ good fruits, Jam. 3. 17. and ordinarily in the Church-writers ἀγαθουργία, working good. Thus ἀγαθὸν ἐργάζεσθαι to work good, Gal. 6. 9. and πᾶν ἀγαθὸν ἔργον, every good work, 2 Cor. 9. 8. appear by the Context to belong to works of mercy. Thus Rom. 5. 7. where the good man is ſo particularly diſtinguiſhed from the righteous man, and Tit. 2. 6. where the elder women are commanded to be ἀγαθαὶ good, that is, merciful or kind to thoſe of their family. Thus when Heſychius mentions the word χάσιθ (which is, as hath been ſaid, the Hebrew חסיד, or Syriack חסי, with the Greek termination, which ſignifies bountiful or merciful) he explains it by ἀγαθὸς, χρηστὸς, making theſe three words to have the ſame ſignification; and ſo doth the Targum render the Hebrew חסיד by

by טוב sometimes, that is, good. And so in this place the Master is said to be good, because he gave to him that had been in the vineyard but an hour, as much as was the wages of the whole day: This, though it were not matter of injury to them that had labour'd all day, because they had the full hire, for which they had contracted, is yet matter of murmuring there, v. 11. and indeed hath somewhat of difficulty in it, how to reconcile it with Gods rewarding every man according to his works, or actions, (which is everywhere said of God) and his giving a more liberal harvest to him that soweth plentifully, then to any that soweth lesse plentifully, 2 Cor. 9. 6. The way of clearing this difficulty will be by observing that this Parable here used by Christ was a Parable used among the Jewes, and therefore if any part of it were here unmention'd by Christ, and briefly referr'd to by him, the sure way will be to supply it by the Authors among them, by whom 'tis fully set down. Now this is done by Gemara Hierosol. Cod. Berachoth. Of a King and labourers hired by him, and one of them paid for a little time the whole dayes hire, whereupon the rest of them grieve and murmure, and say, We have laboured all day, and this man לא יגע, &c. hath not laboured above two houres of the day, and, say they, בטל שכרו משלם he hath received his hire in peace, that is, the full hire of a day for that small time; To these the Kings answer there is, He in that two houres hath laboured as much as you have done all the day. Here it is evident, the account of the businesse is laid upon the superabundant diligence and earnestnesse of those that came late in, which God (though not tyed by contract, as with the other; but only by promise of giving them what shall be meet, v. 47. that is, dealing equitably with them) thinks fit to reward, through his mercifull interpretation and acceptance of it, as richly, as the whole dayes labour of the others. And though the weight of the reason or answer here mentioned by Christ seem wholly to be laid upon the free will and liberality of the Lord, v. 15. and not upon their superabundant diligence, for the time that they were in the Vineyard, yet is this other reason to be supposed here also, being not by this excluded, any more then Gods rewarding according to works is excluded by his being merciful (when indeed David makes a close connexion between them, Ps. 62. 12. Thou Lord art mercifull, for thou rewardest every man according to his workes) and 'tis possible it might also be mentioned by Christ, though for brevity it be not here set down. And indeed this form of answer (here used by Christ, and set down) by way of ὕφεσις, to repell and poze the disputer (Is it not lawful, &c. Is thy eye evil, &c.) is very fit to have been procœmial to this other of the equitablenesse of the payment, in like manner, as Rom. 9. 20, 21. is preparatory to the fuller and more satisfactory answer v. 22. However this is clear, that in Christs application of the Parable to his designed businesse, this is more then intimated. For the whole parable being briefly applied in these words, οὕτως, &c. So the first shall be the last, and the last the first; the reason is distinctly annexed, For, or because many are the called, but few the chosen, Many of the called (that is, those that were hired, and admitted into the vineyard) are not the chosen, that is, are not thought fit to be rewarded at all by Christ, which à majori concludes, that some that came in later deserved as well as they that were first called in in the morning, which cannot be, but (as saith S. Paul of himself) by their labouring more abundantly for the time, then they had done which were longer there.

C. Κλητὸς

V. 16. Called] What the word κλητὸς signifies here, and how it differs from ἔκλεκτος is worth examining at large now once for all, which therefore I shall set about; The word κλῆσις and κλητὸς in the New Testament, are proportionable one to the other, and will mutually help to the understanding one the other. If we look on them in the Apocrypha, as we meet with them both in one place of the third book of the Maccabees, it will prove a useful rise; There κλητοὶ signifies guests invited to a feast, ἀρίστου τοῦ κλητοῦ ἰδὼν (as in humane Authors, ὅταν τῶν κληθέντων τις λαμπρὸς ζωοδοχῆται, Heraclitus ἐπὶ ἀπιστ. λβ. to which is opposed ἄκλητοι in Homer, and invocati in Plautus) and κλῆσις the office of inviting and entertaining them; and Judith 12. 11. a banquet or invitation. So ὁ πρὸς τὴν κλῆσιν τεταγμένος, is he that was to invite and entertain (κλητὼρ invitator in the Glosse and δειπνοκλήτωρ, see Note d.) In the Greek translation of the Canonical books of the Old Testament the word hath another notion; as when those that were pitch'd on as special men by Adonijah to be of his party, are call'd οἱ κλητοὶ τῷ Ἀδωνίᾳ, 1 Kin. 1. 49. and v. 41. the called of Adonijah, not because they had been invited by him to a feast, but such as were call'd by his name, that is, such as adhered to him. For so they that Absalom had pick'd out in the same manner to be his confidents are call'd κλητοὶ, two hundred call'd men, 2 Sam. 15. 11. So that hitherto κλητοὶ signifies those that are pitch'd on either to receive speciall favours, or over and above to be employed in special trusts, and the latter the special meaning of the word. So Aristotle in his Oeconomickes l. 2. in the passage of Antimenes Rhodius, where we find τεχνίτας κλητοὺς subjoyned to συγχάρας προσδοκίμους approved officers, where probably it must signifie special pick'd Artificers. Besides this notation of the Greek from the Hebrew for calling, there is another for celebrare to celebrate, and so the words קריאה and מקרא signifie celebrem, as well as vocatum, and is rendred ἐπίκλητος illustrious, famous, sometimes, and κλητὸς called, when it signifies ἐπίκλητος famous. Thus in the book of Exodus (c. 12. 16.) and in Levit. often, we find this phrase κλητὴ ἁγία, call'd holy, where the Hebrew read מקרא קדש, where yet we have no more reason to reprehend the Greek for either solœcisme, or mistranslation, then in the ὅσια τὰ πιστὰ for sure mercies, which yet is transcribed by S. Luke, who was skilful enough in that language, Acts 13. 34. The Greek, I conceive, is to have a sense assigned fit and proper for both the words and intention of the original, and it will be this, that such a day, the seventh or the like, shall be the called, or the solemn holy, holy signifying one set apart to a separate use, the service and worship of God, and κλητὴ the solemn or called, a special celebrity, a known day, favoured by God with that privilege above others, and both together a solemn holy, or a holy solemnity, not, I conceive, as our ordinary English reads (and the sense, though not the words, beares well enough) an holy convocation, as if the מקרא referred peculiarly to the calling or assembling the people together, but as it notes a special honouring and picking out of a day, and preferring it before others, A solemn, separate, festival day. So saith Phavorinus Κλητὴ ἡ καλλίστη (not, as the Copy hath it, καλεστὴ) ὑποχωρεῖται, ὡς τὸ αὐτὸ ἡ κλητὴ καὶ ἁγία ἡμέρα, it signifieth the best and principal day, and is the same that an holy day. And just agreeable to this notion of κλητὸς for called, or renowned, or picked out (set apart in some speciall degree, allowed some privilege, which others were not vouchsafed,) is the notation of ἐπίκλητος in the Septuagint, either as applied to a day, Numb. 28. 18. ἐπίκλητος ἁγία, just as before κλητὴ ἁγία, or as to persons, Numb. 1. 16. οἱ ἐπίκλητοι τῆς συναγωγῆς, which we render the renowned of the congregation (as in Hesychius Κλητὸς ὁ ἔνδοξος) where yet the Hebrew hath (from the same root, that before) קריאי the called, and is Numb. 26. 9. rendred σύγκλητοι βουλῆς, Senatours of the councel, or Patres conscripti, as it were. Thus farre will the Old Testament lead us into the sense of this word, and by the concent which is between the Translators of that, and the Writers of the New, κλῆσις Actively taken (as it must be, when 'tis applied to God) signifies that peculiarity of favour now vouchſafed (unto both Jews and Gentiles, but firſt to the Jews, to whom Chriſt firſt came, and the Goſpel was firſt preached) which had not before been allowed to any, a ſtate of favour vouchſafed by Gods ſpecial providence, and grace, particularly that of having the way to heaven laid open to them, in the preaching of the Goſpel. So Rom. 9. 11. Gods calling is ſet to ſignifie his peculiar favour contrary to ἐξ ἔργων, doing any thing on intuition of merit; and Rom. 11. 29. it ſignifies Gods favour in allowing the meanes of ſalvation, and place of repentance unto the Jews, and is joyned with the χαρίσματα, gifts or graces of God, particularly that of ſpecial promiſe to them (that is, to their fathers) that they ſhould not utterly be deſtroyed, of which two favours of God to that people for their fathers ſakes (1. that they ſhould not utterly be deſtroyed, 2. that the way to heaven, the knowledge of Chriſt ſhould not utterly be obſtructed to them, but that there ſhould ſtill be a poſſibility of returning) it is there affirmed that they are ἀμεταμέλητα, abſolutely immutable and irreverſible, So 1 Cor. 1. 26. κλῆσις ſignifies that invitation unto Chriſt, which, as it follows there, brought in thoſe eſpecially which were of the pooreſt ſpirits, not that others were not call'd, but that they did not ordinarily accept of the invitation. So Epheſ. 1. 18. and 4. 4. the ἐλπὶς κλήσεως hope of his calling is that Hope that reſults from the mercy of God in revealing his Son to them, or poſſibly in a Paſſive ſenſe, the Hope that was conſequent to their belonging or retaining unto Chriſt, being Chriſtians; and ſo when c. 4. 1. they are exhorted to walk worthy of that calling, that ſervice, into which they were entred. So Phil. 3. 14. βραβεῖον τῆς ἄνω κλήσεως τοῦ Θεοῦ, the reward, or crown of the ſupernal calling of God, ſuppoſes the κλῆσις or calling to be ſome ſervice of ours, to which the reward given by God the Judge is ſtyled βραβεῖον τῆς κλήσεως, the reward of the calling. So 2 Theſſ. 1. 11. κλῆσις is that great honour of retaining to Chriſt, being his followers; and that 'tis there looked on, as a ſpecial dignity, appears by the ἀξιώσῃ, which ought to be rendred, not vouchſafing, or counting worthy, but making worthy; for that is pertinent to dignities and privileges already enjoyed by any. So 2 Tim. 1. 9. the holy calling, is that honourable condition of being Chriſtians, through the free mercy of God in revealing his Son to us, not upon the intuition of any merit of ours, but by his own free undeſerved grace, call'd his purpoſe and grace in the middle of the verſe. So Heb. 3. 1. κλῆσις ἐπουρανία, the heavenly calling is the retaining to Chriſt, which is mentioned as a high mercy of which they were μέτοχοι partakers; and laſtly 2 Pet. 1. 10. where we are exhorted to make our calling and election firme, the calling is again thoſe mercies of Gods in making us Chriſtians, and the ἐκλογὴ election, either again the ſame (as κλητοὶ and ἔκλεκτοι the called and the elect are the ſame, Revel. 17. 14. both expounded by πιστοὶ beleivers, or faithful, which follow) becauſe that of having Chriſt revealed to them, this favour vouchſafed to them, was an act of Gods free choice, without any kind of merit on mans part, (and ſo the word appears to be taken, Epheſ. 1. by comparing v. 4. with v. 9. or elſe the purpoſe and mercy of Gods of rewarding beleivers eternally. And theſe are made firm, when that ſanctifying uſe is made of them, when men live proportionably to their talent given, God threatning otherwiſe to remove and withdraw thoſe mercies. By proportion with this ſignification of the Subſtantive κλῆσις calling, we muſt render κλητὸς, one that hath received this mercy, and honour of reteining to Chriſt in any higher, or lower quality. Thus κλητὸς ἀπόστολος Rom. 1. 1. and 1 Cor. 1. 1, one that hath received this ſpecial ſingular honour and mercy of Chriſt to be an Apoſtle, call'd from heaven to that office, and v. 6. κλητοὶ Ἰησοῦ, Chriſtians, though not Apoſtles, and v. 7. and 1 Cor. 1. 2. κλητοὶ ἅγιοι though not dignified ſo farre as to be his Apoſtles, yet to be his ſervants or Chriſtians; and c. 8. 21. κατὰ πρόθεσιν κλητοί, either (in proportion to 2 Tim. 1. 9.) they that are thus loved and favoured by God out of his ſpecial grace, or (according to S. Cyrill of Jeruſalem his notion of πρόθεσις in his Preface to his Catechiſmes) they that are come in to the faith of Chriſt, not only bodily as Simon Magus, but in ſincere purpoſe and reſolution of mind, (ſee Note on Rom. 8. 28.) So 1 Cor. 1. 24. οἱ κλητοὶ the called, being oppoſed to infidel Jews and Greeks, are ſervants, followers of Chriſt; ſo Jude 1. the word is uſed abſolutely and Subſtantively τοῖς κλητοῖς, to them that are called, that is, to the Saints or Chriſtians, ſanctified by God the Father, and kept by Jeſus Chriſt. Having gone thus farre, there are only three places behind; Two are thoſe, in which κλητὸς is ſet in oppoſition to ἔκλεκτος, here, and c. 22. 14. In this place 'tis clear that κλητὸς belongs to the notion of retaining unto Chriſt, entring into his ſervice in the vineyard, and ἔκλεκτος to ſome ſpecial excellence or diligence there, to which reward is conſequent. Nay κλητὸς may referre to the favour of being call'd before others, preferred before others in that reſpect, when others lie idle a great while, becauſe they are not call'd, v. 7. But ἔκλεκτοι ſuch, as to whom God hath awarded the hire or reward, which we ſee was by God (who rewards every man according to his actions, or workes) awarded as plentifully to them that came in late to the vineyard, as to thoſe that came in earlyeſt, and that ſignifies that they coming in late laboured more for the time then the other did, nay very many of thoſe that were firſt call'd, viz. the Jews, came not in at all, and ſo were not all capable of that reward; And in both reſpects, 1. of them that being call'd firſt, were yet exceeded in diligence, and ſo overcome by thoſe that came later and 2. of thoſe, that forſook their own mercy, it is there ſaid, that many are the called, but the choſen few, and the laſt ſhall be firſt, and the firſt laſt, thoſe that had been vouchſafed earlyer mercies, greater graces for the obtaining ſalvation, called before others to the Goſpel, nay perhaps allowed higher revelations here, are not yet found capable of higher rewards, greater degrees of glory hereafter. And the reaſon is, becauſe (though not this of Gods vocation, which is free, yet) that other mercy, of eternal reward, is diſpenſed ſecundùm opera, according to proportion to that uſe that is made of that grace of vocation, that is, to every man according to his works. So in the ſecond place, Matth. 22. 14. the called are thoſe to whom the firſt graces are given of inviting, and calling to Chriſt, v. 3. 4. and yet farther, of bringing in to that ſpiritual feaſt, v. 10. but then thoſe that were invited, and did not at all come in, and ſo were not worthy, v. 8. that is, capable of the farther grace of reward, or reception there, and he that coming in, came without the wedding garment, that due reformation and change of mind, required of him in obedience to that call, were not allowed thoſe higher vouchſafements, but even thoſe which they had taken from them, and they puniſhed for the abuſe of them, caſt into utter darkneſſe, where there is crying out, &c. The laſt place, Apoc. 17. 14. is very remarkable, where κλητοὶ, ἔκλεκτοι, πιστοὶ, called, choſen, faithful, are ſet down either as all one, or elſe as divers degrees of Chriſtians, and πιστοὶ the laſt or higheſt. 1. κλητοὶ reteiners to Chriſt, or to the faith of Chriſt, then ἔκλεκτοι, thoſe that had lived like ſuch, that had not in vain received the Goſpel, 3. πιστοὶ the faithful ſervants that continued faithful unto death, performed all the truſts that God had repoſed in them. By what hath been thus ſhortly ſaid, may be diſcerned what probably is the meaning of this word in the ſeveral places in the New Teſtament, which here once for all was not amiſſe to have mentioned. Of the word ἔκλεκτος ſee Note on 1 Pet. 2. c.

V. 29.] In

V. 29. In this place after v. 28. there is a large addition in the ancient Greek and Latine MS. thus, Τμεῖς δὲ ζητεῖτε ὀλιγοστεῦσαι, καὶ ἐκ μείζονος ἐλαττονεῖσθαι (either misswritten for ἔλαττον εἶναι, or ἐλαττονοῦσθαι) εἰσερχόμενοι δὲ καὶ παρακληθέντες δειπνῆσαι, μὴ ἀνακλίνεσθε (for ἀνακλίνασθε) εἰς τοὺς ἐξέχοντας τόπους, μήποτε ἐνδοξότερός σου ἐπέλθῃ, καὶ προσελθὼν ὁ δειπνοκλήτωρ εἴπῃ σοι, Ἔτι κάτω χώρει, καὶ καταισχυνθήσῃ. ἐὰν δὲ πορεύῃ εἰς τὸν ἥσσονα τόπον, καὶ ἐπέλθῃ σου ἥσσων, ἐρεῖ σοι ὁ δειπνοκλήτωρ, σύναγε ἐπ' ἄνω, καὶ ἔσται σοι τοῦτο χρήσιμον. But doe yee seek to encrease from a little, and from the more to lesser. But when ye enter, and are invited to supper, lie not down in the most eminent places, lest a more honourable then thou come in, and he that made the invitation come and say unto thee, Get thee lower, and thou be put to shame. But if thou lie along in the inferior place, and one inferior then thou come, then he that made the invitation shall say to thee, Come up higher, and this shall be for thy advantage. That some such thing was spoken by Christ upon some occasion, appears by Luke 14. 8. And of this there is no other mention in this Gospel, unlesse it be here.

CHAP. XXI.

Paraphrase.

1. AND when they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bethphage unto the mount of olives, then sent Jesus two disciples,

2. Saying unto them, Goe into the village over against you, and straightway yee shall finde an asse tyed, and a colt with her, loose [them] and bring them unto me.

2. the foale of the asse, Mar. 11. 2. and Lu. 19. 30. 1. (see c. 26. 8. and c. 27. 44.)

3. And if any man say ought unto you, ye shall say, The Lord hath need of them, and straightway he will send them.

4. All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Prophet, saying,

4, 5. Thus Christ roade not for any wearinesse (having gone formerly through all Palestine on foot, and this being now a small journey from mount Olivet to Jerusalem, but thereby (by using this that belonged to Judges, Speak you that ride on white asses) to signifie his approbation of those due acclamations which he knew would that day be given him, v. 8. as to the Messias, that so the prophecy Isa. 62. 11. and Zach. 9. 9. might be accomplish'd, wherein we read, That the King of the Jews, the Messias, should come riding upon an asses foale, which though it were a meek, was yet also a royall gesture or ceremony.

5. Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, Thy King cometh unto thee, meek, sitting upon an asse, and a colt the foale of an asse.]

6. And the Disciples went, and did as Jesus commanded them.

7. And brought the Asse and the colt, and put on them their cloathes, and they [set him thereon.]

7. set him upon the foale, see v. 2.

8. And a very great multitude [spread their garments in the way, others cut down branches from the trees, and strewed them in the way.

8, 9. while they fitted the beast for him, used this ceremony of laying garments spread in his way, a rite usuall among them at the creation of a king (2 Kings 9. 13.) others used the ceremonies used at the feast of tabernacles, cutting and carrying of boughs, and crying in Hebrew, Save now, which being here done to Christ under the title of the son of David, was their proclaiming, or acknowledging him to be the Messias, which was to come (see Mat. 11. a.) and this they did in more words, saying, Blessed in the name of the Lord be he that is thus peculiarly sent by God to bring reconciliation or peace, (Lu. 19. 38.) to us sinful men, Glory be to thee in the higest heaven, for thou art the eternal God, that dwellest there.

9. And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cryed, saying, [a] Hosanna to the son of David, * Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, Hosanna in the highest.]

* Blessed in the name of the Lord be he that cometh. εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι κυρίου.

10. And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this?

11. And the multitude said, This is Jesus the Prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

12. And Jesus went into the Temple of God, and cast out all them that sold and bought in the Temple, and overthrew the [b] tables of [the money-changers] and the × seats of them that sold Doves.

12. those which returned money by exchange.

13. And said unto them, It is written, My house [shall be called the house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of [c] theeves.]

13. The Temple shall be set apart peculiarly to Gods service, or imployed onely as a place of prayer, but your practise hath made it farre otherwise, you have made it a kind of market place, a receptacle of cunning merchants that make gain and advantage of their brethren, by attending the festivals of the temple, and selling to them that bring not sacrifices with them.

14. And the blind and the lame came to him in the Temple, and he healed them.

15. And when the chief Priests and Scribes saw the wonderful things that he did, and the children, crying in the Temple, and saying, Hosanna to the son of David, they were sore displeased.]

15. And when they of the Jewish Sanhedrim saw his miraculous cures, v. 14. and the childrens acclamations as to a King, or Messias, they were much troubled at it.

16. And said unto him, Heares thou what these say? And Jesus saith unto them, Yea, [Have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou [d] perfected praise?]

16. Doe you not remember that prediction, Psal. 8. 2. that, Out of the mouth of babes, &c. that is, from the testimony of such weak and feeble creatures, Christs divinity and power should be proclaimed, and great matters should come from such weak and mean beginnings?

17. And he left them, and went out of the City into Bethany, and he lodged there.

18. Now in the morning as he returned into the city, he hungred.

19. And when he saw a fig tree † in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and said unto it. Let no more fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And presently the figtree withered away.

† at some distance from the way, ἐπὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ, see note on Mar. 2. 6.

See Mar. 11. 13.

20. And the next morning, Mar. 11, 20. paſſing by, the diſciples ſaw it, and wondred, ſaying, How wonderful is it, that the fig tree upon thoſe words of Chriſt ſhould be withered and dead all of it thus inſtantly?

20. And when the diſciples ſaw it, they marvelled, ſaying, * How ſoon is the fig-tree withered away?]

* how is the fig tree withered preſently? ὡσὶ παραχρῆμα ἐξηράνθη.

See Mat. 17. 20.

21. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, If ye have faith and doubt not, ye ſhall not only doe this which is done to the fig tree, but alſo if ye ſhall ſay unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou caſt into the ſea, it ſhall be done.

22. But this you muſt ſet upon not in any confidence of your ſelves, but in all humility of prayer to God, and whatſoever ye ſhall thus pray for, beleiving that I according to my promiſe will grant it to you, ye ſhall certainly receive from me, ſee Mar. 11. 24.

22. And all things whatſoever ye ſhall ask in prayer beleiving, ye ſhall receive.]

23. Thou haſt no authority from the Sanhedrim to do what thou doeſt, from whence then haſt thou it? or why doſt thou teach, and do what thou doeſt without it?

23. And when he was come into the Temple, the chief prieſts and the elders of the people came unto him, as he was teaching, and ſaid, [By what authority doeſt thou theſe things? and who gave thee this authority?]

24. To this queſtion Jeſus thought fit to give anſwer by making this other queſtion, which would retort, and ſtop their mouths, as it appears it did v. 27.

24. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, I alſo will ask you one thing, which if you tell me, I in like wiſe will tell you by what authority I doe theſe things.]

c. 25. Had John the Baptiſt commiſſion from God to doe what he did, or came he only of himſelf?

25. The baptiſme of John whence was it? from [c] heaven, or of men?] And they reaſoned with themſelves, ſaying, If we ſhall ſay, From heaven, he will ſay unto us, Why did ye not then beleive him?

26. we ſhall be in danger to be ſtoned by the multitude, Luke 20. 6.

26. But if we ſhall ſay, Of men, [we fear the people,] for all hold John as a prophet.

17. Then ſure it is not needful for me to give you account of my commiſſion, or authority, when 'tis granted by you, that a man may lawfully preach, and baptize, and entertain diſciples, as John did, without the approbation of the Sanhedrim.

27. And they anſwered Jeſus, and ſaid, We cannot tell. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, [Neither tell I you by what authority I doe theſe things.]

28. But is not this a ſtrange thing that you that undertake and pretend ſo much to be Gods knowing and obedient ſervants, ſhould yet ſtand out the moſt obſtinately of all others againſt his commands and meſſengers ſent from him, when the worſt and meaneſt of men the Publicans and the multitude forſake their former wayes, repent and beleive the Goſpel? I will tell you a ſtory, or parable, There was a man that

28. But what think you? A certain man] had two ſons, and he came to the firſt and ſaid, Son, goe and work to day in my vineyard.

29. He anſwered and ſaid, I will not, but afterward he repented and went.

30. And he came to the * ſecond, and ſaid likewiſe, and he anſwered and ſaid, I goe Sir, and went not.

* or, other, for the Gr. and Lat. and moſt of the MS. read ἑτέρῳ not δευτέρῳ.

31. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They ſay unto him, The firſt. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, that the Publicans and harlots [go into the kingdome of God before you.]

31. receive the Goſpel, when ye reject it.

32. ſhewing you a way (preaching repentance as the only way) to reſcue you and your whole nation from deſtruction, and ye deſpiſed his menaces, Nay when even the Publicans and viciouſeſt people were wrought on by him, yet did not this work upon you neither.

22. For John came unto you [in the way of righteouſneſſe, and ye beleived him not: but the Publicans and the harlots beleived him. And ye, when ye had ſeen it, repented not afterward that ye might beleive it.]

33. a hollow trough, wherein they tread grapes; and built a fair lodge for the vine-dreſſer to dwell in, and having furniſh'd it ſo compleatly that no man could require any more to be done to make it tenantable, he let it out to thoſe that deal in that commodity, who for the fruit of it were to pay him a ſet price, upon agreement, Cant. 8. 11. and having ſo done, himſelf took a journey a great way off.

33. Hear another parable, There was a certain houſholder, which planted a vineyard, and * hedged it round about, and digged [a wine-preſſe in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a farre countrey.]

* ſet a mound about it and hewed a wine-preſſe, φραξεν ἀμπελῶνα καὶ ὤρυξε ληνὸν.

34. And when the harveſt time came, when they were to receive the fruit and pay the rent,

34. And when the time of the fruit drew near] he ſent his ſervants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it.

35. at another they threw ſtones, though they killed him not.

35. And the husbandmen took his ſervants, and beat one, and killed another, and [ſtoned another.]

36. a greater number of ſervants, then thoſe which he had ſent at the firſt,

36. Again he ſent [other ſervants more then the firſt,] and they did unto them likewiſe.

37. But laſt of all he ſent unto them his ſonne, ſaying, They will reverence my ſonne.

38. and then we may take poſſeſſion of his inheritance, as our owne.

38. But when the husbandmen ſaw the ſon, they ſaid among themſelves, This is the heir, come let us kill him, [and let us ſeiſe on his inheritance.]

39. And they caught him, and caſt him out of the vineyard, and ſlew him.

40. When the Lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he doe unto thoſe husbandmen?

41. And the Phariſees expreſs'd a great indignation againſt theſe falſe and bloody ſervants, affirming them worthy of utter deſtruction, that the Lord might provide him better Officers, which ſhould pay him his rent duly; though when Jeſus upon this anſwer of theirs approved the reaſonableneſſe of it, and affirmed it ſhould thus befall them indeed, Lu. 20. 16. (by which they began to diſcern, that he ſpake the parable againſt them,) they with indignation deprecate the ſentence, Lu. 20. 19.

41. They ſay unto him, He will miſerably deſtroy thoſe wicked men, and will let out his vineyard to other husbandmen, which ſhall render him the fruits in their ſeaſons.]

42. Jeſus ſaith unto them, [Did you never read in the ſcriptures, The ſtone which the builders rejected, the ſame is become the head of the corner, f this is the Lords doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes?]

42. Did you never obſerve a notable paſſage in the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 118. 22. referring f.

proverbially to ſome famous building, the Temple or the like, (wherein one ſtone which the builders had laid aſide, as good for nothing, proved at length to be very fit for the prime place in the building, the utmoſt corner ſtone) and by that Pſalmiſt applied to David (whom the princes with Saul and the chief of Iſrael refuſed, and perſecuted, but after he became king) and which yet farther prophetically belongs to Chriſt (who being refuſed and rejected a long time by the chief prieſts, and elders, and the Sanhedrim of the Jews, and by them put to death, was to riſe again, and become a glorious head of his Church?

43. Therefore I ſay unto you, [the kingdome of God ſhall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.]

43. The Goſpel and the priviledge of being the only Church and people of God, ſhall be taken from you, and given to ſuch as ſhall practiſe thoſe things which the Goſpel requires.

44. He that, on occaſion of Chriſt, ſhall by any thing g.

that befalls him, be diſcouraged, or fall into unbeleif, this ſhall be a great wounding of his ſoul, a great ſin thus to fall off in time of tribulation; but he that not out of weakneſſe, but of contumacy, ſhall reſiſt and provoke his wrath, and judgements, and ſo bring this ſtone, this vengeance of Chriſt down upon him, it ſhall come down moſt heavily, and daſh him into a thouſand pieces.

45. And when the chief prieſts and Phariſees had heard his parables, they perceived that he ſpake of them,

46. But when they ſought to lay hands on him, [they feared the multitude, becauſe they took him for a prophet.]

46. they durſt not, knowing that the people generally took him for a Prophet, that is, one that had liberty of ſpeech, and was not to be reſtrained, or apprehended, nor diſparaged by them, v. 26.

Annotations on Chap. XXI.

a. Ὡσαννα

V. 9. Hoſanna] The word Hoſanna is contracted of הושיעה נא, ſoon ſi, Save I beſeech thee, A form of acclamation, which the Jewes were wont to uſe in their Feaſt of Tabernacles, in which alſo they uſed to carry boughs in their hands, (See Nehem. 8. 15. 1 Mac. 13. 5. 2 Mac. 10. 7.) and alſo to ſing Pſalms, as it is in the Maccabees, that is, to crie Hoſanna. Both theſe of Boughs and Hymnes were uſual among the Grecians in any time of ſacred feſtivity. See Heſychius on the word Ἀσαχθῷ, which, ſaith he, is ὁ τῆ δάφνης κλάδος, ὃ κρατέχοντες ὕμνουν τὸν Θεὸν, a bough of Laurel (as here of Palme) which they held in their hands when they praiſed their Gods. From theſe two put together it is, that, as Elias Levita tells us in his Thisbi, thoſe boughs there uſed, were called Hoſannaes, and to bind up Hoſannaes, is, properly, to bind up bundles of willow-boughs, which, ſaith he, where they were to be had, were moſt uſed by them, though thoſe that are preſcribed in Nehemiah are Olive, and Pine, and Myrtle. This ceremony thus largely uſed to Chriſt, with all the ſolemnities of ſtrewing garments and boughs in the way, as at the inauguration of a King, as in Davids Coronation, Pſalm 118. 25. and Pſal. 20. 9. and as at the Feaſt of Tabernacles (by which was noted, or prefigured Gods pitching his tabernacle in our fleſh, his ἐσκήνωσεν ἐν ἡμῖν, dwelling, or pitching his tent or tabernacle, among us, Joh. 1. 14. his dwelling in the tents of Sem, Gen. 9. 17.) is a token of the peoples acknowledging him to be the Meſſias, the Shiloh, whom they expected, who is therefore expreſs'd by the ὁ ἐρχόμενος, he that cometh, that is, he that was thus ſolemnly ſent, and anointed by God (ſee Mat. 11. a) And the addition in the next words of Hoſanna ἐν ὑψίστοις in the higheſt, will be beſt underſtood by comparing it 1. with Pſal. 148. 1. (where במרום in the higheſt ſignifies poetically in the heavens, immediately precedent) and then with Luke 19. 38. where it is, peace in heaven, and glory in the higheſt, that is, glory and praiſe to him in heaven, who had uſed this means of reconciling heaven with us, that is, God in heaven to us ſinners upon earth.

b. Τράπεζα.

V. 12. Tables] The word τράπεζα table here is that from which thoſe that dealt in returning moneys, or in bills of exchange, and made advantage and gain by ſo doing, are call'd τραπεζίται Matth. 25. 27. ordinarily among Authors. Thus among the Jewes in the Gemara, Sanhedrim, c. 7. §. 11. תרבה מעיתיש לי ואין לי שלחני להרציותן, I have a great deale of money, but there is no Trapezite, or Money-Merchant, with whom I may place it. Here the Trapezite ſeems to ſignifie that ſort of men who (as Merchants among us) return money for others to ſome other place, or help them to doe it, and by ſo doing receive ſome themſelves, and help them to advantage ſometimes. Hence it was that the Iſraelites being by the Law to come up to Jeruſalem (how farre ſoever they dwelt from) and there to ſacrifice, and to offer the half ſhekel for the uſe of the Temple, Exod. 30. 13. (which by the length of their journey ſometimes they were diſabled to doe) Theſe trapezitæ ſet up their tables in the very Temple, that ſo they might traffick with all that had uſe of them, in like manner as others brought oxen, and ſheep, and doves, to ſell there to them which had not brought their ſacrifices with them. Theſe traders are here called κολλυβισταὶ, that is, men that dealt in money (for, as the Grammarians tell us, κόλλυβος for which the printed Copy of Thomas Magiſter reads κόλλυμβος) ἐιδος νομίσματος, ᾧ ὁ ἐν τῷ χαλκῷ κεχαραγμένος βοῦς, it is a piece of money with the image of an oxe upon it) and ſo alſo κερματισταὶ, Joh. 2. 14. and that is the very ſame, κέρματα being ordinarily taken for χρήματα, that is, money indifferently, and it is a miſtake of thoſe, which from the nature of this word, think it fit to tranſlate it money-changers in this and that other place, (* meaning thereby thoſe that change one piece of money into another, other coynes greater or ſmaller into that of a ſhekel) whereas it is dealing in money by way of return, or exchange. From whence it is that Heſychius puts theſe four words in the ſame ſenſe, one to explain the other, τραπεζίτης, κολλυβιστὴς, κερματιστὴς (in like manner as Thomas Magiſter renders ἀργυραμοιβὸς by κολυμβιστὴς (for κολλυβιστὴς) and explains it by καταλλακτὴς) and δανεϊστὴς, the three former uſed in the Goſpel, and all to be interpreted by the fourth, an Uſurer, that is, one that made gain by loan of money, though this were not the uſury directly forbidden by their Law, but rather a way of merchandize, giving then ſo much money here, for ſo much more in another place; where the thing that is paid for, is not ſo much the uſe of the money, as the conveying it from one place to another, or the ſaving others that trouble of conveyance. 'Tis true, κερματίζω coming from κείρω to cut or ſhave, ſignifies to divide any thing into ſmall pieces, as in Plato, mans nature, ſaith he, ſeems to me εἰς (μικρότητας κατακεκερματιδ,

For ſo ſaith Maimonides in Halacha Beth Habbechira. c. 7. no man may come into the mount of the Temple with a ſtaffe, or ſhooes, or with a wallet, or with money folded up in a napkin, (all which are contained in the Greek word σκεῦος.) And that which is obſerved in this kind of ſome Temples by Plutarch, ſeems very probably to be meant by him of this Temple of Jeruſalem, as Pe. Cunæus hath obſerved.

c. Ληςαὶ. V. 13. Theeves] By ληςαὶ theeves here are meant thoſe that by merchandize make gain of others, not thoſe that are robbers indeed; ſo Joh. 2. 16. 'tis οἶκος ἐμπορίου, a houſe of merchandize. Of this ſee our learned Countryman Mr. Fuller Miſcell. l. 4. p. 6. p. 499.

d. Κατηρτίσω αἶνον. V. 16. Perfected praiſe] The Greek κατηρτίσω αἶνον in this place, is the Septuagints tranſlation of יסדת עז thou haſt founded, or ordained, ſtrength. There is little doubt but our Saviour repeated this place, as it was in the Hebrew of the Pſalme, or in the Syriack dialect (as it appears he did in the repeating of the beginning of Pſalm 22. by the Syriack Sabacthani) and not in the Greek, and therefore the Greek made uſe of by the Evangeliſt, or his Interpreter, muſt ſtill continue to have a ſenſe that the Hebrew words will bear, and ſo belongs to the childrens ſinging Hoſannaes (for though thoſe which did ſo, were not infants or ſucklings, but as they are called v. 15. παῖδες Children, yet were they of an age farre leſſe able to judge, then the Phariſees that rejected Chriſt; and if that which was ſaid by the Pſalmiſt of very infants, were true, then much more may it be admitted of theſe) which was a teſtimony of his Divinity; and ſo was the ordaining ſtrength, that is, a ſtrong and glorious effect from weak meanes, and again the perfecting praiſe, that is, compacting, putting together a ſong of confeſſion or praiſe, (ſee 2 Cor. 13. c.) a teſtimony of him, ſuch as the Scribes and Phariſees could not think fit for him to accept, but he by remembring them of that Prophecy of the Pſalmiſt, acknowledges and owns it, as a good and valid teſtimony, and gives them reaſon to do ſo too.

V. 25. Heaven] Heaven here ſignifies God, one of Gods titles among the Hebrewes being השמים heaven. e. Οὐρανὸς.

V. 42. This] Both in the Greek of Pſal. 118. 23. and here αὐτὴ is put for τῦτο, the Feminine for the Neuter, becauſe the Hebrew זאת is ſo uſed; and ſo Pſal. 27. 4. the Greek hath μίαν ἠτησάμην, for ἓν, one thing have I aſked, becauſe the Hebrew אחת is Feminine. f. Αὐτὴ.

V. 44. Grind] Λικμᾷν here is by the Grammarians rendred τὸν σῖτον χωρίζειν, and ἀλοᾶν, and σῖτον καὶ ἄχυρα διαχωρίζειν, not only to winnow, but to threſh the corne, either by breaking it with an inſtrument, a flaile among us, or by bringing the wheel over it, or by treadiag it out, which was the cuſtome among the Jews, (ſee note on chap. 3. i.) and accordingly ἀλοᾶν, which is ſet to render λικμᾷν, is it ſelf rendred by Phavorinus, τὸ δὲ τῆς ἅλω παλεῖν, καὶ πρίβειν τὸς στάχυας, καὶ τύπλειν, to tread, or rubbe, or beat the eares of corne. Now this phraſe here applied to men (as 'tis alſo in the Prophets of the Old Teſtament, I will threſh you with a threſhing inſtrument, &c. ſeems here to ſignifie that ſad condition of the people of the Jews, all of them that ſhould hold out againſt Chriſt, Chriſt ſhall come upon that people, as with his threſhing inſtrument in his hand, c. 3. 12. ſhall break and daſh them to pieces, violently ſeparate the ſtraw from the wheat, the multitude of unprofitable, that is, unbeleiving impenitents from the little ſound corn among them; the few ſound beleivers; and then break all that ſtraw into ſmall pieces, as the manner of their threſhing was; ſee Note on chap. 3. i: So we have the word Dan. 2. 44. λεπτυνεῖ καὶ λικμήσει πάσας τὰς βασιλείας, he ſhall beat ſmall and break into chaff all the kingdomes. g. 15, 16. This parable did ſo gall and incenſe the Phariſees, which were viſibly concern'd in it, that ſeeing they had nothing to lay to his charge, they now conſult how to get ſome advantage againſt him, and to that purpoſe, knowing him to be a free ſpeaker that would not diſguiſe his thoughts for fear of any man, they ſend ſome of two contrary parties, ſome Phariſees, others that adhered to Herod the Roman Governour, that whatſoever anſwer he ſhould make to their queſtion, one party might be offended with him; and they came and asked him flatteringly, but inſidiouſly, ſaying, We know that without all fear of men, or partiality, thou wilt tell us truly what is our duty toward God. b.

21. They confeſt it to be the image or ſignature of the Roman Emperour, and Chriſt thence concluded, that they that acknowledge Cæſars ſupremacy over the Jewes ought not to diſpute, but pay him that tribute that is due to him as ſupreme, there being nothing derogatory to God in ſo doing. 29. This errour of yours in beleiving no reſurrection, proceeds from your not conſidering the ſeveral places of Scripture, nor the power of God in ordering the life to come in another manner then is uſed in this.

29. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, [Ye do erre, not knowing the ſcriptures, nor the power of God.]

30. For in the reſurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage, but are as the Angels of God in heaven.

d. 31. But to make it evident to you by that part of Scripture which hath authority among you Sadducees, that is, by the Law, by you acknowledged for the word of God, th at there is another life, it is there you know, thus written,

Annotations on Chap. XXII.

V. 2. Marriage] That γάμος and γάμοι ſignifie both in this place, and Joh. 2. a marriage-feaſt, we have before obſerved (ſee Note on c. 9. e.) that here the ἔνδυμα γάμου ſignifies the garment that was cuſtomary at ſuch feaſts, that is, a better ſort of array then thoſe that were uſed upon ordinary dayes, will be obvious to any man that is converſant in ancient cuſtomes; So in the Wardrobes of great men, there were robes to put on for that uſe, mentioned by Juvenal, when he ſpeaks of the trechedipna, that runs about to feaſts, or entertainments. Theſe were veſtes diſcubitoria, fine and florid, ſuch as Trimalcios in Petronius, in whom they are alſo called veſtimenta Triclinaria, and in Xiphilin, in the life of Adrian, σολὴ ἀμπίτις, the feſtival garment, and this, it ſeems, ſo neceſſary, (as repentance and reformation of life, the new garment, or array of the ſoul, which is here Parabolically expreſs'd by it) that without it, even they that were invited to come, were not yet permitted to taſte of the feaſt, or remain among the gueſts.

V. 16. Herodians] The Herodians were not a diſtinct ſect from the Phariſees and Sadducees (ſee Note on c. 16. a.) but ſome of them Sadducees, as appears by comparing Mat. 16. 16. with Mar. 8. 15. They are by * a learned man ſaid to be Grecians, which King Herod brought with him out of the deſert, and which became a certain Sect after that time, for which he cites Aruch; But this was by a great miſtake in him of the Hebrew יונים, as if it were Ionas Grecians, when 'tis no more but jonim doves, or pigeons, which Herod brought with him out of the deſert, and from which ſprang a certain ſort of Pigeons, (not Sect of men) different from others. The Herodians by many of the Ancients are thought to be thoſe that (conceiving the Prophecy of Jacob concerning the Scepter departing from Judah to be accompliſh'd in Herod the great, who was not a Jew, and yet ſwayed the ſcepter there) beleived him to be the Shiloh promiſed by Jacob at that time; So Epiphanius, that they were Jewes, idle, and hypocrites, that thought Herod to be the Chriſt promiſed promiſed in the Prophets. So Tertullian, Herodiani qui Chriſtum Herodem eſſe dixerunt. So Chryſoſtome on Mar. 12. ſo Theophylact, and S. Hierome, Dial. cont. Luciferianos, though in his Comment on this place, he utterly reject it. Nor indeed is it any thing probable, that now at this time, 30 years after Herods death, there ſhould remain any of this beleif, that Herod was the Meſſias; It is therefore in the next place obſervable, that the Syriack for Herodians reads Herods followers, and that may give us an hint of another interpretation, which ſeems to be the moſt probable: Of the Jewes ſome part acknowledg'd, and adhered to the Cæſarean or Roman authority, ſome part look'd upon it, as an uſurpation, and of this generally were the Phariſees. This difference or controverſie was thus occaſion'd. About 150 years before the birth of Chriſt, the government of Judea came into the hands of the Zelots or Maccabees, Among them Judas Maccabæus being in fear of Antiochus entred into a league with the Romans, which continued about 90 years. Then Hyrcanus and Ariſtobulus the ſons of Alexander falling into contention for the Kingdome, & the younger brother Ariſtobulus getting poſſeſſion of it, Hyrcanus applied himſelf to the Romans for redreſs; And by Antipaters mediation beſought Pompey (being then neer) to come with an army to his relief; Pompey did ſo, and thereupon beſieged Jeruſalem, Hyrcanus's party within ſoon delivered it up, And Ariſtobulus's party retired into that part, where the Temple ſtood, and Pompey ſtorm'd the Temple, and took it, and ſo the city came into the Romans power, and Hyrcanus was reſtored to the high-prieſthood, and Kingdome of Judea, but ſo as to hold (as he obteined) it being under the Romans protection, which they did (thoſe of them that were of Hyrcanus's party) by conſent, and not by force, by a choice which the factions among themſelves put them upon, and by way of dedition, and ſo * Joſephus plainly ſaith of the Jews, that they had made a dedition of themſelves. Mean while they of Ariſtobulus's party look'd upon the Romans as Uſurpers, and forcible poſſeſſours. And thus it continued till our Saviours time. And at this time ſome of each party, Phariſees on one ſide, and Herodians, that is, followers of Herod, on the other, came unto Chriſt, meaning to inſnare him, whatſoever he ſaid, and to take advantage either to inflame the Phariſees (which were the moſt eminent men among the Jews) if he ſhould ſay that tribute was to be paid, or to bring him into danger of Herod, and the Roman party, if he ſhould ſay, 'twas not to be paid. And though Chriſts anſwer be punctually in favour of the Roman Emperour, eſpecially to thoſe that took the tribute to be his right, yet becauſe in prudence Chriſt thought fit to give ſuch an anſwer, as might beſt avoid the oppoſite danger, this very prudence of his is after by falſe malitious perſons improved into an accuſation againſt him, Lu. 23. 2. as if he forbad to give tribute to Cæſar, ſee Mar. 12. Note a.

* De Bell. Jud. l. 1. c. 8.

c. δηνάριον.

V. 20. Superſcription] The tribute-money or denarius, that was to be paid to Cæſar by way of tribute, had on it, ſaith Occo, the picture or image of Cæſar, and in it theſe letters written, Καίσαρ Αυγουστ: Ιουδαίας ἑαλωκυίας, Cæſar Auguſtus, ſuch a year, after the taking of Judea. This latter, no queſtion, is that which is here meant by the ἐπιγραφὴ, inſcription or ſuperſcription of the coine, from whence Chriſt concludes Cæſars right by title of Conqueſt to require tribute of the Jews.

d. V. 31. Reſurrection] The argument againſt the living of ſouls now after death, and before the Reſurrection, which is taken by ſome (ſee Brevis diſquiſitio) from this place of Mat. 22. 31, 32. lyes thus: Chriſt proves the reſurrection of the dead, v. 31. by this Argument, God ſaith, he is the God of Abraham &c. long after Abrahams death, and God is not the God of the dead, but of the living, which proof being put into forme muſt lye thus, Abrahams body ſhall riſe, and likewiſe Iſaacs and Jacobs, therefore the bodies of the dead ſhall riſe; The Antecedent is proved thus, Abraham ſhall live again now he is dead, therefore his body ſhall riſe; That Antecedent thus, God is the God of Abraham now he is dead, therefore Abraham ſhall live again now he is dead. If this Antecedent were denyed, then the plain words of Scripture were denyed, and therefore the argument, or conſequence muſt be denyed, or nothing; And that will thus be proved, God is not the God of the dead who are ſo dead that they ſhall never live again, therefore it being granted that God is the God of Abraham, ſince the time of his death, it muſt follow, that, though he be now dead, he ſhall live again. Chriſts argument being ſuppoſed thus to proceed, might readily have been anſwered (by them that deny the reſurrection of the body) in caſe the continued life or not dying of the ſoul were granted; For they might reply thus, Abrahams ſoul lives all this while ſince his death, and therefore Gods being the God of Abraham, granting him to be the God of none but the living, doth not conclude that Abrahams body ſhall riſe; For he who lives in ſoul, may be ſaid to be living, though his body never riſe. Now becauſe 'its certain that Chriſts argument was a good argument, concluding unanſwerably what he meant to prove, therefore the not dying of ſouls, on conceſſion of which the refutation of Chriſts argument is, or may be grounded, is not to be thought a truth. To this objection againſt the immortality of ſouls from this manner of Chriſts arguing againſt the Sadducees, the anſwer might be eaſie enough, by remembring the diſputers, that the Sadducees, with whom Chriſt diſputed, are not ſuppoſed to grant the immortality of the ſoul, any more then the riſing of the body, and therefore this argument, of Chriſts, though it would not hold againſt him, that did acknowledge the immortality and continued life of the ſoul, without ever having the body united to it, would yet be a good argument ad homines, againſt the Sadducees, and that were ſufficient to ſalve the matter; Or ſecondly, that the reſurrection of the Body is a neceſſary conſequent to the life of the Soul, and that the proving that the Soul lives after death, is therefore uſed by Chriſt, as an argument ſufficient to inferre that the body ſhall certainly revive alſo; But this is not all, They that make uſe of this arguing of Chriſt to favour their opinion of Ψυχοπαννυχία, do miſtake the thing, that Chriſt went about to prove againſt the Sadducees; For it being certain that the Sadducees denyed all other life, beyond this that here men live in the fleſh, (affirming that there is no ſpirit, no ſoul of man ſubſiſting after death, and in conſequence to that, that the body after death rots, never to riſe again) 'tis as certain that Chriſt here confronted his argument (out of the Law, which was the only Scripture which thoſe Sadducees acknowledged) againſt this whole doctrine of the Sadducees (not only againſt one part of it, the reſurrection of the Body) and by that teſtimony of the Law (which they could not deny) demonſtrated to them that there was another life after this. Of this whole matter (not only of that which concerned the Body) 'tis cleer that the Sadducees queſtion, and objection (of the wife that had ſeven husbands) proceeded, concluding, as farre as it did conclude, (but being indeed a very weak ridiculous argument) againſt all future being; for if the death of the Husband voyded the relation between him and his Wife, as 'tis certain it did, and he and ſhe live together again any way after this life, the Sadducee thinkes that relation muſt revive alſo, and upon that his argument proceeds, and doth ſo as well (that is, equally, or no worſe) on ſuppoſition of another life of ſpirits, as of bodies ſpiritualized alſo. For if there were those relations of Husband and Wife in heaven, they would sure be there before the resurrection of bodies, as well as after, unlesse the Sadducees beleived Christs doctrine to be, that procreation (and the like, which could not be done without bodies) continued in heaven, as here on earth, which it no way appears that they did, or that that was the thing here particularly opposed by them. The only matter of difficulty now remaining is, whether ἀνάστασις, of which the Sadducees ask v. 23. and ἀνάστασις τῶν νεκρῶν, which Christ undertakes to demonstrate v. 31. doth not peculiarly signifie the resurrection of the Body. To which I answer positively, that it doth not, but denotes another life (besides this and after this) a continuing or being kept alive by God after departure out of this life; As that which is call'd Rom. 9. 17. raising up (and in Luke the phrase is ἐγείρονται, the same that there) is in the Hebrew, from whence 'tis cited, Exod. 9. 16. to make to stand, and is rendred by the Septuagint, keeping alive, or safe; And the literall notion of the word ἀνάστασις goes no farther; for στάσις is standing or subsisting, and ἀνὰ in composition signifies re or again, so ἀνάστασις νεκρῶν is the resubsistence or second state of men, that after this life consisting first of the immortality and continuance of the soule in state of separation, and at length in the reunion of the body to it, whereby it becomes perfect; 'Tis true it sometimes signifies the resurrection of the Body distinctly, but that is when 'tis joyned with the word σαρκὸς of the flesh, or σώματος of the body, or νεκρῶν of the dead, in the neuter (as νεκρὰ signifies cadavera, or dead bodies) or when without any of these, the context of the Author doth appear to restrain it to that sense, and indeed in later Eccleſiastick Writers, it may perhaps be found to be commonly used for the resurrection of the Body but all this no whit prejudiceth the notion, which I have given of it in this place, where τῶν νεκρῶν is the Masculine (as appears by comparing it with the story in S. Luke, where 'tis distinctly νεκροὶ in the parallel) and where the context doth not so restrain it, but rather enforceth the enlarging of it, in like manner as οἱ λέγοντες μὴ εἶ) ἀνάστασιν v. 23. may be the character of the Sadducees, who denied all future life or subsistence of soule, or body after death; And thus ἀνάστασις τῶν δικαίων seems to note Luke 14. 14. the reward there spoken of, being that which is opposed to our rewarding one another here in this life, and so the phrase denoting all which is not of this life, that is, that blisse, which the just enjoy after this life. And the phrase which the Jewes used to signifie this, is, the age, or world to come, which these Sadducees distinctly denied, and the Pharisees beleived and affirmed; And sure S. Paul one of those Pharisees Christianized, did reckon of this continued life of the soul, contrary to the mortality or sleeping of it, when Phil. 1. 23. he saith that he desires ἀναλῦσαι (which sure is a phrase to expresse the separation of soul and body) and to be with Christ, which I suppose must conclude a being of the soule, and that an happy one, unlesse Christ be imagin'd still to be asleep; and so again when he calls the ἐκδημῆσαι ἐκ τοῦ σώματος travelling out of the body, a travailing to the Lord, 1 Cor. 5. 8.

V. 38. Great] This Commandement by which the worship of the one God is commanded, Deut. 6. 4. is not onely one of those which were written in their Phylacteries, fasten'd on their posts, and read in their houses daily, but to note it to be the great commandement indeed above others, it is observable, that in Deut. the words in the Hebrew, which begin and end it, have the last letter written very big, and noted in the margine to be so written. e. ἡ μεγάλη ἐντολή.

V. 40. Hang] The word κρέμανται may fitly, and according to the notion and use of it in sacred Authors, and according to the importance of this place, most properly be rendred conspire or agree, for so the Hebrew קשר, which signifies an agreement of minds, a covenant, or league, Gen. 44. 30. is rendred ἐκκρέμαται, where we read, is bound up with, noting an huge kindnesse and conjunction of affections between Jacob, and Benjamin. As in Chrysostome Epist. K. σφόδρα κεκρεμᾶσθαι τῆς ἐπιστολῆς, is, earnestly to desire his Epistles. So Judith 8. 24. where we vulgarly read their hearts depend on us, 'tis most proper to render it, their hearts agree or conspire with us, or are bound up with us. So Lu. 19. 48. the people ἐξεκρέματο αὐτοῦ ἀκούων, as they heard him they took his part, were of his side, agreed with him. So in Chrysostome, Ep. ξη. Τῆς θεοσεβείας ἐκκρέμαται τῆς σῆς, καὶ ἡμῶν σφοδρός ἐστιν ἐραστής. He affects you much, and is an earnest lover of me, and Ep. ρκς. ἀγαπώντων καὶ ἐκκρεμαμένων, loving and tendring. So in * Palladius, Ἐκκρεμαμένη πάσῃ ψήφῳ τῇ κόρῃ, placing all her affection on the young maide. And so here in these two commandements all the law and the Prophets conspire, that is, the whole old Testament agrees, conspires with these, these are the summe of all that is said there. But if it be rendred hang, then the meaning will be, that all commanded in the Jewish received Scripture, depends upon one of these two, hangs on one of these great pegges, that is, is, in the last resort, reducible to one of these heads. f. 3. And therefore do ye live in obedience to all their lawful commands, in all regular subjection, and obedience. But let not their actions be your examples, for they live not according to their own prescriptions.

3. And therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and doe: but doe not ye after their works, for they say and doe not.]

4. For many severe ordinances they impose on others over and above what the Law exacts, but will not themselves be perswaded to take the least pains to doe those things, which by the clear law of God are most necessary.

4. For they binde [a] heavy burthens, and grievous to be born, and lay them on mens shoulders, but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.]

5. All that they exercise themselves in most industriously, are the performances, which will bring them in most of praise. The law which they were commanded Deut. 6. 8. to bind upon their hands &c. that is, to lay it near their hearts, to practise it diligently, they write in rolls, and hang them in their foreheads, and bind them on their wrists, &c. count them as a kinde of charmes, and make them as large as they can, to be seen of men, and one to exceed the other. And for the fringes of their garments, which they were indeed commanded to weare, Num 15. 38. Deut. 22. 12. to remember them of the law, and as a peculiar fashion to discriminate them from other men,

5. But all their works they do for to be seen of men: they make broad their [b] phylacteries, and enlarge the * [c] borders of their garments.]

they either for an oſtentation of piety which thoſe were to remember them of, or to expreſſe the greater ſtrictneſſe in ſeparating from all others, weare theſe fringes very large, And ſo whether for obſervances invented and preſcribed by themſelves only, or for thoſe which the law preſcribes, all their care is to be praiſed of men.

6. And love the uppermoſt roomes at † feaſts, and the chiefe ſeats in the ſyna-

They love to have the firſt place, if it be but at an ordinary meale, And in the Conſiſtories they are ambitious of the headſhips, and when they teach in the ſynagogues, or are there to hear others teach, and, as the manner was, ſit in chaires, while they do ſo, they are ambitious of getting the uppermoſt chaires.

7. And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.] 7. And to receive the civilities, and adorations, and commendations of men above all others, as the greateſt doctors and leaders of others; which is an evidence of their temper, what 'tis that they principally deſigne in all their religious performances.

8. But be not ye called Rabbi, for one is your maſter even Chriſt, and all ye are brethren.] 8. But doe not ye contend thus for ſuperiorities, for precedence one above another, for you are all fellow ſervants, by being fellow Chriſtians.

9. And call no man your [d] father upon the earth, for one is your father which is in heaven.] 9. And give not up your faith abſolutely to be ſwayed, d.
and ruled by any man, as children are to be ſwayed wholly by their parents bare will, and as theſe men, Phariſees &c. have their admirers and followers in religion, whereas indeed God your father in heaven is onely he, to whoſe doctrine and precepts ye owe this abſolute faith, and obedience.

10. Neither be yee called Maſters, for one is your maſter, even Chriſt.] 10. And doe not ye pretend to be leaders or teachers, but all fellow diſciples that receive the faith from me, and ſo communicate it to others.

11. But he that is greateſt among you, ſhall be your ſervant.] 11. As for any precedency or ſuperiority, which ſhall hereafter be inſtituted in the Church, ye are not to look upon that, but as an office of burthen, and duty, of watching and waiting on them, over whom ye are placed.

12. And whoſoever ſhall exalt himſelf, ſhall be abaſed, and he that ſhall humble himſelfe, ſhall be exalted.] 12. And indeed for this, this ought to be the Rule that whoſoever is ambitious of dignity in Chriſt's Church, ought never to be admitted to it, but he that ſhall thinke himſelf unworthy of it, is fitteſt to be advanced to it.

13. But wo unto you, Scribes and Phariſees, hypocrites, for [yee ſhut up the kingdome of heaven againſt men, for yee neither go in your ſelves, neither ſuffer yee them that are entring to go in.] 13. yee keep the multitude from embracing the Goſpell or doctrine of Chriſt, to which Meſſias, And not only reject of you, would willingly imbrace him.

14. Woe unto you Scribes and Phariſees, hypocrites, [for yee devour widowes houſes, and for a pretence make long prayer: therefore] ye ſhall receive the greater damnation. 14. For in ſtead of ſhewing mercy and charity to them that are left deſtitute, ye on

16. Woe unto you, yee blind guides, which ſay, whoſoever ſhall [f] ſwear by the Temple, it is nothing, but whoſoever ſhall ſweare by the gold of the Temple, he is * a debtor.] 16. Wo unto you which take upon you to be the leaders of the blind, Ro. 2. 19. f.

17. Yee fools and blinde, for whether is greater, the gold, or the Temple that ſanctifieth the Gold? 17. What a ſottiſh ſenſeleſſe folly is this, which your

For ſure the Gold of the Temple which receives all the ſacredneſſe it hath, above other gold, meerly from being the Gold of the Temple, cannot be more ſacred then the Temple it ſelf, nor conſequently the oath by the gold obliging, when an oath by the Temple it ſelf is not.

19. Yee fooles and blinde, for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that ſanctifieth the gift?

20. Whoſo therefore ſweareth by the altar, ſweareth by it, and by all things thereon.] 20. The ſwearing by the altar conteins in it that other oath, which yee take to be ſo much more obliging, that by all the free-will offerings preſented at or on the altar, and ſo cannot poſſibly be leſſe obliging then that alone.

21 And whoſo ſhall ſweare by the temple, ſweareth by it, and [by him that dwelleth therein. 21. by God, who although he have his throne in heaven,

b. Theſe rolls of parchment were by them prepared with a great multitude of ceremonies and decrees made by them of the creatures of whoſe Skins that parchment was to be made, of the Knives, with which 'twas to be cut; and a great deal more: Being made, they fitted, and applied them to the foreheads, and to the wriſts, and they were call'd by them in Hebrew, Tephillin, becauſe the ſpeciall uſe of them were in their prayers, and here φυλακτήρια, either becauſe they were to help, keep the Law in their memory, or becauſe they were a kind of amulet, or charme againſt faſcinations, and diſeaſes, againſt the malus genius, ſaith Paulus Fagius; This being the nature of the Phylacteries, a carnall obſervation of their own, ſet out with many ceremonies, and yet by them affix'd on God, as if commanded by him, The Phariſees the moſt exact among the Jewes, that would goe beyond all others in performances, and withall, the moſt oſtentatious of any, and willing to be differenced from all others, by ſuch markes of extraordinary piety, did πλατύνειν φυλακτήρια, weare theſe of a greater breadth, then any others, and are here ſaid properly to doe this, πρὸς τὸ θεαθῆναι τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, that they may be looked on by men.

c. κράσπεδα Ib. Borders] The κράσπεδα are the fringes, that God commands the people to uſe, Num. 15. 38. and weare on the borders of their garment, with a blew ribband on the fringe. And the uſe of it there aſſign'd was, 1. that they may look upon it, and remember all the Commandements of God, and doe them, 2. that they ſeek not after their own hearts, and their own eyes, after which they uſe to goe a whoring, that is, that they take not up the cuſtomes or faſhions of other nations, which they were very apt and prone to doe, ever ſince they came out of Ægypt, and therefore are by this forewarned that they keep themſelves a peculiar people to God, in outward faſhions, and conſequently in inward purity of heart (in order to which the other was deſign'd) diſcriminated from all the nations of the earth. By this it appears, how this cuſtome of the fringes differs from the other of the Phylacteries; That was wholly a tradition, and invention of the Jews, on a miſtake of Gods command, and then an enlarging of this to vanity and oſtentation; But this hath a truth in Gods precept, was really commanded by him, in order to a pious end, which end being forgotten, they wholly contented and ſatisfied themſelves in the outward obſervation of them; and the Phariſees made that as pompous as they could, labouring to exceed all other men in the bigneſſe of their fringes, or ציצית, and placing piety in that, as being moſt diſcriminated thereby from the Nations (in order to which this faſhion was preſcribed by God) and in ſome meaſure from other Jewes, which wore them not ſo bigge, and ſo are particularly in this, as in many other things ἀφωρισμένοι, according to the meaning of their name in Hebrew, vain-glorious ſeparatiſts, and are thus looked upon by our Saviour in this place.

d. Πατὴρ V. 9. Father] The Wiſeman, the principall of the ſchool of the Prophets, who had the great authority among them, no man contradicting what he ſaid, was by them then called אב Father. So Maimonides com. ad Peah, c. 5. 1. כבוד אבות והחכמים שהם אבות הכל The Parents muſt be honoured, and the wiſe men, which are the Fathers of all. and in this reſpect, and this ſenſe of the word Father among the Jewes, all Chriſtians being now taught of God by Chriſt are appointed to acknowledge no father in earth.

e. Προσήλυτος V. 15. Proſelyte] A Proſelyte, is one that being a Gentile by birth and religion, comes over to the Jewiſh religion, either in whole, or in part; For there are three ſorts of ſtrangers, and two of Proſelytes among the Jewiſh writings. The firſt ſort of ſtrangers are thoſe which continue open Idolaters, who were not permitted to live, or have any place of being in the Land of Iſrael, the 2d ſort of ſtrangers are the firſt of Proſelytes, which though they embraced not the whole Jewiſh religion of Circumciſion, Waſhing, and Sabbatizing, &c. yet renounced the Idolatry, and πολυθεότης, or multitude of the Gentile Gods, and aſſented to ſome foundations of the Jewiſh religion, which they call'd the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Adam, and of Noah, of which we ſhall have a fitter occaſion to ſay more, on Act. 15. Theſe were call'd Proſelytes of the gates, were permitted to live among them, to come into one court (the outer) of the Temple (call'd atrium Gentilium, divided by a low wall or Sept from the other, call'd by S. Paul μεσότοιχον φραγμοῦ Epheſ. 2. 14. a half-wall of partition, on which ſaith Joſephus, was written μὴ δεῖν ἀλλόφυλον ἐντὸς ἰέναι, that no ſtranger might goe into the inner court) and, in brief, were by the Jewes allowed to have portionem in vita futura a portion in the life to come, whether that be Heaven, or the Kingdome of the Meſſias, Maimon. de pœn. c. 3, §. 5. And yet of theſe 'tis obſervable, that after the Jewes came under the Roman yoke, and ſo were unable to keep their Proſelytes of the gates within their preſcribed rules, having no juriſdiction over them, their wiſe men determin'd, that they ſhould have no commerce with them, which was accordingly obſerv'd, till S. Peters Viſion (Act. 10.) aſſured the Chriſtian Jewes, that this was not required of them. The 3d ſort of ſtrangers, and 2d of Proſelytes are thoſe, which embraced the whole Jewiſh religion, ſubmitted to be Circumciſed, and to perform the whole number of the precepts of the Law; and theſe are admitted to priviledges proportionably, and differ nothing from a Jew, but only that they are not born in the land (as the Mamluchi among the Mahomedans) of whom 'tis * Juſtin Martyrs affirmation, προσήλυτος ὁ θελήσας, ὡς τῷ λαῷ προσκόψειν, ἔστιν ὡς αὐτόχθων, the circumciſed proſelyte is as one that was born in the land. To which purpoſe they apply that of the prophet, The ſtranger, προσήλυτος ſaith he, that is, the Proſelyte, ſhall be joyn'd unto them, shall be joyned to the house of Jacob, ἑνὸς καὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς προσιοῦσιν νόμου, one and the same law being given to all that are circumcised. Of this sort were the Sichemites, Achior, (Judith 14. 10.) Nebuzaradan, (saith Gemara, Sanhedrim c. 11.) Urias the Hittite, and Herod the Idumæan (whose kingdome in his successors is therefore calld'd מלכות נרים the kingdome of the strangers) Nicolas, Act. 6. and these are call'd נרי צדק proselytes of righteousness, and נרי ברית proselytes of the covenant. Of these say the Jewes, that above all things they must be circumcised, and Tacitus hist. l. 5. having mention'd the Jewes custome of circumcision adds, transgressi in morem eorum idem usurpant, nec quicquam priùs imbuuntur quàm contemnere divos, &c. And, because some other nations had gotten a traditionary custome of circumcising, without forsaking heathenisme, or undertaking any degree of Proselytisme, as the Ægyptians, and from them, saith * Diodorus Siculus, the men of Colchos, and of old the Ismaelites, and now the Turkes, It is therefore resolved among the Jewes, that if any such shall become a Proselyte, though he cannot be circumcised again, yet on the eighth day of his proselytisme, some blood must be fetch'd of that part, which they call פרצת the breaking of the skinne (for a testimony of their Proselytisme) which, they confesse, Moses knew nothing of, but is an institution of their own. These Proselytes of the Covenant may perhaps be meant by the children of the Covenant, Act. 3. 25. the multitude there being mixt of Jewes and proselytes, c. 2. 5, 14. and both those spoken to in the 3d. chap. the Jews under the title of Children of the Prophets, that is, of Abraham &c. the rest under the title of Children of the Covenant, which being made with Abraham belonged not only to Israelites, but to all the kinreds of the earth, as it followes there. Now of these latter sort of Proselytes his place here seems to be understood, wherein Christ reproacheth the diligence of the Pharisees, who took such pains to make a Proselyte, that is, to bring a gentile, that was no way bound to it, to be Circumcised. and to undergoe all the Judaicall law, which God had never proposed to the Gentiles, thereby demonstrating, that it was not true purity and reformation of heathen vices, that they thought to work in their Proselytes, but did it onely to get more companions to their faction of holding up the externall ceremonies, of Circumcision against the reformation now preached by Christ. From whence it appears not onely why the Pharisees were called hypocrites for so doing, this being no way an act of piety, which they pretended to doe so zealously, but also, why the Proselyte so made by them, is said to be worse then they, or then their own children, made doubly more then they the child of hell (that is, worthy of punishment) 1. because before the coming of Christ, the Pharisees were bound to observe the whole Law, and so though Christ, the substance being come, did take it away, that is, the typicall parts of it, yet the Pharisees were more excusable, if they continued in the observation of it, whereas the Gentiles were never obliged to it, and so had not that excuse, if they should resist Christ upon that ground of his destroying the Mosaicall law, which was the great scandal against Christs doctrine. Secondly, because the Pharisees being now engaged in this faction against Christ, these new Proselytes of theirs, to approve themselves to their Masters, express'd more bitternesse against Christ then themselves had done, and by their instigation were made instruments of more mischief after to Christians. So Act. 13. 50. the Jewes παρώτρυναν τὰς σεβομένας γυναῖκας, instigated and inflamed the worshipping, that is, Proselyte women against the Apostles, and it followes, ἐπήγειραν διωγμὸν, they raised a persecution against them. So saith Justin Martyr, εἰ δὲ προσήλυτοι ὑμῖν γίνονται καὶ προσέρχονται, οὐ πρόσκεινται, ἀλλὰ διπλότερον ὑμῶν βλασφημοῦσιν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἡμᾶς τοὺς εἰς ἐκεῖνον πιστεύοντας καὶ φονεύσιν καὶ ἀικίζειν βέλονται, καὶ πάσαν δύμιν ἔχουσιν ἀσεβοῦσι, the proselytes doe not onely not beleeve, but doe, doubly to what the Jewes doe, blaspheme the name of Christ, and kill and reproach us, who doe beleive, and make all hast to be like you; The truth of this was very observable in the Gnosticks, who being Gentiles first, then Christians, at last in appearance turn'd Jewes, and then became the most bitter persecutors of the Orthodox Christians. Three other things observable, concerning these two sorts of Proselytes, will come in more naturally in other places, to which they more immediately referre.

* ἔστι δὲ τοῦτο γὰρ τῶν Αἰγυπτιακῶν ἐστι σημεῖον τὸ περιτέμνεσθαι ἀνθρώπους παραπλησίως τοῖς κατ' Αἴγυπτον, διαμένουσι δὲ τῷ νομίμῳ παρὰ τοῖς ἀποίκοις, καθάπερ καὶ παρὰ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, l. 1.

V. 16. Swear by the Temple] It seems by this which Christ here affirms of the Pharisees, that they had a tradition, that those oathes onely were obligatory, which were conceived by God or something immediately consecrated to him; meaning thereby not the Temple and Altar, which had onely an universall consecration (being set apart to his service) but other particular oblations and gifts, which were by the voluntary piety of men devoted unto him; Of this sort is the Gold of the Temple, and the Gift on the Altar, wherein, it seems, they placed a more especiall sanctity, then in the other. This Christ looks on as a pityfull nice piece of deceit, either to frustrate the obligation of some oathes (it being ordinary with them to swear per Templa tonantia, saith the Poet, by the Temple, when, it seems by him, they did not think themselves obliged by such an oath) or to make a nice distinction of sanctity, where indeed there was none, the whole sanctity of the gold, or gift flowing from the Temple or Altar, to which, and the God in it, they were consecrated. What should be the colour or pretence of this doctrine of theirs, it would be hard to guesse, unlesse perhaps it was, that they conceived the Temple, by its having been demolish'd to have lost its sanctity, and not to have recover'd it at its rebuilding, and increase by Herod; whereas the gold or the gift, which the piety of the Jewish Donour had consecrated, might be allowed by them to have that sanctity; but this being so weak a reason leaves it lyable to the censure of Hypocrisie, which Christ here layes upon it, the true cause surely being, that by perswading men that the gold and gifts brought to the Temple, were the holiest things in the world, holier then the Temple, or Altar it self, they might bring men to great liberality that way, and so make gain of their doctrine. f. Ὀμνύειν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ. Χρυσὸς ἱερὸς. Δῶρον.

V. 23. Judgement] For the discerning the meaning and difference of these three, the best rise will be from the observation of Maimonides, a sober learned Jew, Moreh Nevoc. par. 3. ch. 53. These three, saith he, are most accurately distinguish'd among the Hebrewes, משפט, חסד, צדקה, all to be met with together Hos. 2. 19. judgment and mercy and righteousnesse. The first signifies justice or equity in judging, whether it belong to reward or punishment, The second to the highest degree of mercy or bounty, that which is in Hosea farther express'd by the addition of רחמים, bowels, or tendernesse of mercy, and is the same that before we said was signified by ἀγαθότης, goodnesse, (see Note on ch. 20. 15. b.) The third denotes that virtue of honesty in all kinds, which by the law of God is due from us to our brethren, whether by way of strict justice, or of charity which is also commanded us, and is part of our righteousnesse toward our brethren, (of which we have also spoken before, see Note on c. 1. g. and ch. 6. a.) thus when John the Baptist tells all the sorts of men that came to him, what was their righteousnesse, their duties, Lu. 3. that which he prescribes to the promiscuous multitude is, μεταδιδόναι τῷ μὴ ἔχοντι το communicate, or give, to him that hath not. And * Olympiodorus g. * Cat in Job. 22.

dorum, according to the ſenſe of the Fathers, tell us, Ἀποστερητὴς ὅστις οὐ περιβάλλει ὁ μὴ ἐνδύων ἢ γυμνόν, he that doth not cloath the naked, is a defrauder, and a coveter, that is, ſinnes againſt the tenth commandement of the Law. And the whole difference of this from the ſecond, is, that in this a man performes all acts of charity required in the Law, when occaſions offer themſelves, but in the other, the mercifull man doth ſeek out occaſions, and doth more then the Law requires of him, which therefore Chriſt calls τελείωσις perfection, Matth. 5. 48. Now to the two firſt of theſe in Maimonides, the two former here κρίσις, and ἔλεος are directly parallel; κρίσις judgment, literally and clearly anſwerable to the firſt, and ἔλεος mercy to the ſecond; All the difficulty is of the third πίστις faith, which that it is parallel to, and equivalent with δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, may at firſt ſight be thought probable alſo. For the Hebrew אמת which is directly rendred πίστις, and hath the ſame importance ſome times, which we gave out of Maimonides to צדקה, is by the Septuagint rendred alſo by the very word, δικαιοσύνη righteouſneſſe, Gen 24. 49. Iſa. 38. 19. The ſame is ſometimes again rendred ἀλήθεια truth, and ſo πίστις, δικαιοσύνη, ἀλήθεια faith, righteouſneſſe, truth, are oft taken promiſcuouſly the one for the other, among the Jewes, that write Greek. So Pſal. 85. 10. we have ἔλεος καὶ ἀλήθεια, mercy and truth, Prov. 3. 3. ἐλεημοσύναι and πίστεις, mercies and fidelities; and Heſychius renders ἀληθὴς true, δίκαιος righteous, and ſo δίκαιον ſeems to be taken, Lu. 12. 57. κρίνετε τὸ δίκαιον, judge right, or true, and Lu. 16. 11. μαμωνᾶ ἄδικον, the unrighteous mammon, is ſet oppoſite ἀληθινῷ to the true riches, agreeable to that of the Targum, Ezech. 22. 27. who call it ממון דשקר the mammon of vanity, or falſity. All makes it not improbable, that πίστις faith here, ſhould be taken in that notion of צדקה righteouſneſs, and ſo rendred not faith, but fidelity. And thus Mr. Calvine hath interpreted it in this place. But upon farther conſideration it will appear, that there is no place for theſe probabilities, the expreſs words of S. Luke in ſetting down this paſſage, inforcing another interpretation of it. For Luk. 11. 42. the words are theſe, Yee tithe mint and rue, and all manner of herbes, and paſs over judgment and τὴν ἀγάπην τοῦ Θεοῦ the love of God, where, as by judgement muſt be underſtood all the duties of juſtice and charity to our neighbours (ſet down more fully in S. Matthew by judgement and mercy) and ſo under that צדקה righteouſneſs alſo is comprehended, viz. that mercy which is our righteouſneſs, (as being from us due to other men) ſo the love of God, which comprehends all the duties of the firſt table, Matt. 22. 37. is ſet down as directly parallel and anſwerable to πίστις faith, which muſt therefore neceſſarily be the beleeving in God, as that is the foundation of our love of him, as the Apoſtle affirmes. 1 Tim. 1. 5. The end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart——and of faith unfeigned. And then as the two former may be taken from Mich. 6. 8. doing juſtice and loving mercy, ſo this third may be parallel alſo to the third thing mentioned there, walking humbly with thy God; and if ſo, will give us an excellent definition, whether of the faith or the love of God, or indeed of the conjunction of them; Faith perfected by love, that it is an humble fiducial obedience unto, or walking with God, as when Enochs walking with God is by the ſonne of Syrach, Eccl. 44. 16. and S. Paul, Heb. 11. 5. out of the 72. called his pleaſing of God, and that including faith, without which, ſaith he, it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, v. 5. and that faith a beleeving that God is, and that he is a rewarder——And this faith very fitly here mentioned by Chriſt to the Jewes, who are ſo frequently and juſtly accuſed, and reprehended by him, for want of faith, or not beleeving in God, and that their guilt evidenced by their not beleeving in him, who had ſo ſignally and powerfully demonſtrated himſelf to be ſent by God. And if it be here demanded, with what propriety Faith in this ſenſe can be called one of the βαρύτερα τοῦ νόμου, the weightier things of the Law, when Faith is ſo oft ſet oppoſite to the Law, and ſo is not ſo much as a part of it, and when the Law of Moſes was but the Pædagogie to that faith, which ſhould after be revealed, the anſwer will be clear, that the Law to which Faith is oppoſed, is chiefly the Law of Jewiſh ceremonies, which being but the ſhadow of thoſe things, which are the object of the Chriſtians faith, were to be done away at the preſence of the body it ſelf, and ſo Faith ſet oppoſite to them, as perfect is oppoſite to imperfect, clear day to twilight. And of theſe alſo thoſe words are to be taken, which affirme the Law to be a Schoolemaſter, or leader of children to Chriſt, theſe being but thoſe initial elements, fitted for thoſe of tender years, and groſſer underſtandings, yet deſigned alſo to adumbrate thoſe things which are now more clearly taught us by Chriſt. As for the Law of God, as that was given to Moſes, and comprehended all the duties to God and man, 'tis evident that faith in God is a part, and weightier part of that, and ſo reducible to the firſt and great Commandment, (as that phraſe Mat. 22. 37. comprehends the whole firſt table of the Commandments) being certainly compriſed in the love of God, and ſuppoſed in it, and not onely ſo, but it is particularly contained in the firſt commandment of that firſt table, I am the Lord thy God, thou ſhalt have no other Gods but me; the former of which are federal words, and ſo are to be anſwered by our beleeving what God promiſeth in his Covenant, viz. that he is our God, a merciful and a gracious Father, and ſo to be filially depended on, truſted in, and obeyed, as well as loved by us, and the latter part commanding us to have God for our God, muſt again be interpreted to require from us a beleeving of him, both as that ſignifies a fiducial relyance, and affiance on him, a beleeving his promiſes, and as it is a beleeving whatſoever he ſhall ſay, whether bare affirmations, (our doctrinal points, either in the Old or New Teſtament, revealed to us) or more eſpecially his commands and threats, as our beleef of them is all one with fearing and obeying him, Gods veracity being one of thoſe his attributes, to which our beleef muſt be anſwerable, if we will be deemed to have him for our God. As for the promiſes of another life, which are a principal part of the object of a Chriſtians faith, if they be not thought to have been revealed under the Law of Moſes, which is conceived to look onely toward an earthly Canaan, and ſo the felicities of this life onely; This ſure is a miſtake, cauſed in many, perhaps, by not diſtinguiſhing betwixt leſſe clear revelations (ſuch indeed were thoſe under the Law, in compariſon with the luſtre that Chriſt brought into the world) and none at all; or perhaps, by moſt through not obſerving, that thoſe diviner promiſes were revealed before the Law, (and being found inefficacious among the ſenſual world, God was farther pleaſed to adde, under Moſes, thoſe earthy promiſes to attract even ſenſual men, and give them a preſent taſt of thoſe good things, which he had laid up for them that would adhere to him.) Theſe therefore being long before revealed to Adam, and Noah, and by tradition from them ſtedfaſtly beleeved by all the people of God, were ſuppoſed in the Moſaical Law, as known already, and therefore needed not therein to be more particularly repeated; Beſides, Moſes in his giving the Law to the Jewes, ſet down, over and above the Law it ſelf, a ſtory from the Creation to his time, wherein many paſſages there are, which give certain evidence of another life, and the joyes of that, as the reward of a godly living; as when of Enoch it is ſaid, Gen. 5. 24. that Enoch walked with God, and was not, for God took him, when he was but 365 years old, which muſt needs inferre, that ſomewhat extraordinary befell Enoch (which the Apoſtle calls tranſlating him, Heb. 11. 5.) and alſo that that life, to which God took him, was much more deſireable, than that which here he parted with, elſe his untimely death (farre ſooner than others there recited, both before and after him) could not be propoſed, as a reward of his walking with, that is, pleaſing, God, Heb. 11. 5. This tranſlation of Enoch then being known among thoſe in whoſe time it happened, and by Moſes recorded for all the Iſraelites to know that came after, muſt needs be to all them a teſtimony beyond all doubt of this truth, that there remained a bleſſed life, after this, for thoſe who pleaſed God. The like was that of Elias in the time of the Kings, who was viſibly carried up to heaven, and this both by the ſonnes of the prophets foretold before-hand, and teſtified by Eliſha, who ſucceeded him in his prophetick office, and was an eye-witneſſe of it. The ſame appears by that paſſage of Gods being by himſelf ſtyled, in the Law, the God of Abraham, &c. after their death, ; whence our Saviour concludes againſt the Sadducees, that Abraham lived with God, and that there was another life revealed by God in that ſtyle. To this pertains the ſpeech of Balaam, Num. 23. 10. Let me dye the death of the righteous, and let my laſt end be like his. But above all, the expreſs words of Daniel, long before Chriſt, and ſo under the Law, Dan. 12. 2. Many of them that ſleep in the duſt of the earth ſhall awake, ſome to everlaſting life, and ſome to ſhame and everlaſting contempt. And in a word, though the Law given by Moſes have not, in the letter, the mention of any other life, but that in the land of Canaan, yet all the ceremonies of the Law were principally (no doubt) deſigned to this end, to adumbrate and ſo reveale this truth unto them, and that in ſuch a manner, as was moſt for the turn of ſuch childiſh and groſs and rude minds, viz. by ſenſible repreſentations, which the Apoſtle, that well knew their meaning, interprets to this ſenſe, throughout the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, and aſſures us, that Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob expected a city that had foundations, whoſe builder and maker was God, Heb. 11. 10. meaning Heaven undoubtedly by that phraſe; And ſo of Moſes, v. 26. that he had reſpect to the recompenſe of reward, that ſure, which was after this life, (for he came not to Canaan) the pleaſures and honours of which were on this intuition, deſpiſed by him, v. 25. Thus much hath been here added on this occaſion, for the refuting the doctrine of thoſe men, who can diſcern none, but temporal, carnal promiſes, under the Law, whom for farther ſatisfaction (if it be yet needfull) I referre to the judicious and perſpicuous Treatiſe of P. Baro, De praſtantia & dignitate divina legis, (dedicated to Archbiſhop Whitgift, but firſt read in his Lady Margarete Lectures at Cambridge) Lib. 1.

h. Τάφοις κεκονιαμένοις. V. 27. Whited ſepulchres] There is little difficulty to determine what is meant by τάφοις κεκονιαμένοις, ſepulchres waſhed over with white lime, on purpoſe that they may be diſcerned by paſſengers, and avoided leſt they contract legal pollution by them; For thus the Jewes were wont to mark Sepulchres, Calcem aquâ maceratam effundit in locum immunditiei, they uſe lime macerated with water, and poure it upon the place of uncleanneſs, Tad. Tum. Met. c. 8. And Raſhi ad Gemar. Moed Kat. c. 1. f. 5. renders the reaſon, quòd ipſa alba ſint inſtar oſſium, quam ergo videntes, eo non accederent, becauſe lime is white like bones, and therefore they ſee, and go not neer it. So among the Chriſtians in * Optatus, Corpora (occiſorum) per dealbatas aras aut menſas poterunt numerari, the bodies of the ſlain may be yet numbred by the whited altars or tables, that is, by the tombs in faſhion of an altar, or table, laid over them, and whited. All the difficulty is, in what reſpect it here followes that they appear ἔξωθεν ὡραῖοι outwardly fair, when Lu. 11. 44. it is ſaid of them, that they are ὡς μνημεῖα ἄδηλα as graves that appear not. And this will be fitly ſalved, by conſidering, that this faireneſs is not all one with their being whited before, but denotes the reaſon, why they had need of being thus whited; theſe graves were, it ſeems, grown over with graſs, and ſo were undiſtinguiſhable from other ordinary ground, were outwardly as fair green graſs, as if there were no graves under, and ſo as they are properly ſaid to appear ὡραῖοι ἔξωθεν outwardly fair, ſo moſt fitly is it ſaid of them in Luke, that they are ἄδηλα μνημεῖα undiſcernable graves, or monuments, ſo that the men that go over them are not aware of their being graves, and ſo are polluted by going over them. And that makes it neceſſary that they ſhould have ſome marke ſet upon them, be waſhed over with lime, proportionable to which was Chriſts reproving of theſe Phariſees hypocriſie, that ſo as fair as they were outwardly, they might not deceive and pollute ſilly diſciples, which were not aware of their wickedneſs. See Mr. Pocock Miſcell. c. 5.

Ἄδηλα μνημεῖα.

V. 35. Zacharias ſon of Barachias] Who this Zacharias was, is queſtioned among learned men, and it falls out there were very many of the name, to each of whom ſome part of this character here ſet is competible. There was Zachary the Prophet, who beſides that he was a Prophet, was the ſon of Barachiah alſo, Zach. 1. 1. but of him no author reports that he was ſlain, and betwixt the Temple and the Altar he could not be ſlaine, becauſe the Temple in his time was deſtroyed, and ſo there was neither Temple nor Altar then; and though he were chief of thoſe which cauſed the re-edifying of the Temple, yet in that he offended not the Jews, nor in any other part of his Prophecy, nor indeed is it imaginable, that ſo immediately after they came from under the ſcourge (from the captivity) they would kill their Prophet, or defile their Temple. A ſecond Zacharias was the father of John the Baptiſt; and though the Scripture neither mention him to be the ſonne of Barachias, nor to have been killed, yet for the latter (that of his death) two traditions there are, one indeed of * Writers of no great authority, yet pretending to be very ancient, that he was killed by Herods officers becauſe he would not tell where his ſonne John was, for whom Herod ſent. And with one paſſage of that narration, viz. that his blood continued upon the threſhold like a ſtone, agrees that which is affirmed by Tertullian, contra Gnoſt. c. 10. The other is aſſerted by †S. Baſil, and before him by × Origen, and repeated in the ſame manner by † Gregory Nyſſene, × Cyrill of Alexandria, Theophylact and others, that there being a place in the Temple, where the Virgins were wont to be by themſelves, and to pray, and Mary after the birth of Chriſt, continuing to come to that place, ſhe was prohibited by thoſe that knew ſhe had a childe, but maintained by Zacharias the Prieſt, who affirmed her ſtill to be a Virgin, whereupon the men of that age ſet upon Zachary as a manifeſt tranſgreſſour of the Law, and killed him betwixt the Temple and the Altar. But this tradition is rejected by S. Jerome. And indeed which ſoever of thoſe two cauſes be aſſigned for the cauſe of his death, it will not be very proper for this place where Chriſt ſpeaks of their killing of Prophets (and ſuch this Zachary was not, but only a Prieſt) and thoſe Prophets particularly ſent to them, v. 34. 37. as inſtruments to gather them, v. 37. that is, to reduce them unto repentance by denouncing judgements againſt them; And upon this ground it is, that the learned men which believe this Zachary to be here meant, doe not yet beleive either of the two aſſigned cauſes of his death to be the true one; but his foretelling the deſtruction of the city and temple (as Stephen after did, and was ſtoned for it) and ſo executing the Prophetick office; which as it is not very appliable to this Zachary, who was no Prophet, so it also takes away all force from the authority of those antient Writers in this particular, and the tradition by them mention'd (which are the only basis whereon this opinion can stand, and in reverence to whom it is that I set down this opinion so largely) they and the tradition being as positive for that cause of his death, as that he was at all killed. There was a third Zachary, and he a Prophet, and slain by the people at Joashs command, and that for testifying against them, being sent particularly by God to reduce them, 2 Chron. 24. 19, 20. This death of his was by stoning v. 21. (as here, and stoned them which were sent unto you, as he also was said to be sent v. 19.) and that in the very place here mentioned betwixt the Temple and the Altar, expres'd thereby In the court of the Lords house, (see note k.) and of him 'tis peculiarly mentioned, that when he dyed, he said, The Lord look upon it, and require it, which makes the mention of this mans death very proper to be joyned with Abel, whose blood cryed for judgement from the ground. The most considerable objections against this interpretation are, 1. that this Zacharias was the son of Jehojada, v. 20. which is answered by those that favour it, by saying that it was very ordinary for men to have more names then one, especially those that had Jehovah in their names. Thus Jehoiakim the King is also Eliakim 2 Kings 33. 34. and so Jojakim the Priest, Judith 15. 8. is Eliakim. Thus Judas Luke 6. 16. is also Lebbaus and Thaddaus Mat. 10. 3. And, say they, 'tis possible that Zacharias might be set in this Gospel, as in Luke it is, without mention of his Father, or with mention of Jehojada, and some Scribe might set ὁ ἐν Βαραχίᾳ in the margine, taking it for Zachary one of the small Prophets, who was so, and this might afterward creep into the text. To which purpose 'tis observable that S. Jerome upon search found in the Hebrew Gospel, call'd the Gospel of the Nazarites, the name of Jehojada for this of Barachiah. A second objection against this is, that this Zacharias being slain by Joash so long agoe, could not fitly be set down as the last of that catalogue, whose blood brought down judgement on the Jews, it being in all reason that beginning so high as the righteous Abel, the speech should descend much lower then to that Zacharias, and it is not very easie to give a probable answer to, or account of this. A third exception there is farther against this interpretation, viz. that here 'tis said that they (that is, those of that present generation) kill'd him, which some have answered by saying, that that people (of whom that generation was a part, continuing in their sinnes) are the they, and that 'tis ordinary in Scripture to charge the acts of parents upon their posterity, which goe on in their sinnes. And accordingly the reason why those words, ὃν ἐφονεύσατε whom ye have kill'd, are here added and annex'd to Zacharias, might be this, because Cain indeed, who had killed Abel, was not their progenitour, and so that people could not be said to have killed Abel. But for Zacharias whom their progenitours kill'd in the discharge of his office to that people, they, who doe not yet obey his prophecy by repenting, may justly be said to joyn with them that did kill him. But there is yet a fourth Zacharias, and he, saith Josephus, l. 4. c. 18. υἱὸς Βαρούχου the son of Baruch, which might well be all one with Barachias, as we know Ananus is with Ananias, and he was slain by the Jewish Zelots ἐν μέσῳ τῷ ἱερῷ, in the midst of the Temple, and that so immediately before the siege of Jerusalem, that as Christ mentions Abel the first that was slain, so he might very fitly mention this Zacharias also, as the last instance of their bloodinesse upon holy and eminent men. This I find to have been pitch'd on in the Spanish bible of Cypriane de Valera, where upon this verse, is this note, whom ye kill'd, that is, shall kill, He foretelleth the history of Zacharias the son of Baruch, which Josephus de Bell. Jud. describeth, whereby the measure was fill'd up, v. 32. for which Jerusalem was destroyed. The only objection against this is, the ὃν ἐφονεύσατε, ὃν ἐφονεύσατε whom ye slew, whereas this man was not now slain at the time of Christs speaking; but this is readily answered, 1. that the Aorist may fitly be rendred, whom ye shall have slain, and that it must be so, because the blood of Christ, and Stephen, and James, and all that should fall by them in those forty yeares, was contained in the πᾶν αἷμα δίκαιον all the righteous blood here mentioned, as ingredients in that judgement on the Jewes. Πᾶν αἷμα δίκαιον 2dly, 'Tis ordinary in Prophecies to use the time past for the future, and so Revel. 2. 19. when Antipas is mention'd, ὃς ἀπεκτάνθη who was kill'd, (who yet was not * kill'd till after the time of that vision) 'tis clear it must be so taken. So 1 Thess. 2. 16. speaking of the destruction of the Jewes v. 15. which was not then come at the writing of that Epistle, he saith, ἔφθασεν in the Aorist, the wrath of God hath overtook them, or come hastily upon them, εἰς τὸ τέλος, to a final utter destruction, that is, their measure of iniquity is filled up, and so this destruction secured to them, as if it were already fallen upon them. And so this is the most full interpretation of the place, and clear from all difficulty. ὃς ἀπεκτάνθη * See the Præmonition Concern. the Apocalyps.

Ib. Altar] There were two sorts of Altars, one the θυμιατήριον the altar of incense, within the Temple (ἔνδον πρὸς τὸ εὐθυμιᾶν in Philo) the other θυσιαστήριον the altar of holocaust or burnt offering, that was without in the court, (ἔξω πρὸς τὰ ἱερεῖα, see Note on Apoc. 6. e.) Of both of them Philos words are perspicuous and worth setting down, Ὁ νόμος προστάξας δύο κατασκευασθῆναι βωμούς, καὶ τῇ ὕλῃ, καὶ τοῖς τόποις, καὶ τῇ χρήσει διαφέροντας, the law appointed two altars to be made, differing in matter, and place, and uses: ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἐκ λίθων λογάδων ἀτμήτων ζωηκοδόμηται, καὶ ἐν ὑπαίθρῳ πυρὸς τῆς τοῦ νεὼ περιβάσιν ἵδρυται, καὶ γέγονε πρὸς χρείαν τῶν ἐναίμων, For the one was built of choice unhewed stones, and was set in the open court by the ascent or staires of the Temple, and was for the bloudy sacrifices, ὁ δὲ χρυσῷ μὲν κατεσκεύασται, ἵδρυται δὲ ἐν ἀδύτῳ ἔσω τοῦ περιτέγους καταπετάσματος, ὃς ὑδενὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἔξεστιν ὁρᾶσθαι, ὅτι μὴ τοῖς ἀγνεύουσι τῶν ἱερέων, καὶ γέγονε πρὸς χρείαν τῶν θυμιαμάτων, The other was made of gold set in the inner court within the first veyle, which cannot be seen by any other, but only by those of the priests that are clean, and this was for the offering of incense. And so that which was said of Zacharias, 2 Chron. 24. 21. that he was stoned in the court of the house of the Lord, that is, in the court of the Temple (as ναὸς Temple here, and οἶκος house Luke 11. 51. are directly all one) might be well enough agreeable to what is here said, that he was slain betwixt the Temple, and the altar, to wit, this altar of holocaust, peculiarly θυσιαστήριον (as here) which was without in the court, and to that also belongs as properly, that which Josephus saith of the other Zacharias son of Baruch, that he was slain ἐν μέσῳ τῷ ἱερῷ, in the midst of the Temple, that is, not of the ναὸς or sanctuary, rendred temple here, but of the ἱερὸν, that is, the whole fabrick of the court, &c. Beyond this Altar and court was Salomons Porch built before the Temple, or at the entrance to it, and the space betwixt that portall and the Altar of incense was (saith Codex Middoth c. 3.) 22. cubites. Thither the Priest was wont to enter at other times with incense at that Altar to sanctifie the prayers of the people; But on dayes of Expiation, he was not to approach so farre, but without the dore of the Porch to prostrate himself (as unworthy to approach the Sanctuary) and there to confesse the sins of the people, Joel 2. 17. where the Priests are said to weep between the porch and the altar, that is, betwixt Solomons Porch and the Altar of burnt-offering in the court; where, saith Kimchi on that place, עומדים לעבוד עבודתם they stood to minister their k. Θυσιαστήριον οἶκος miniſtery, that is, to officiate there. So Joma. c. 3. §. 8. the bullock ſtood בין האולם ולמזבח, between the porch and the altar, & the Prieſt laid his hands upon him, and confeſs'd, and ſaid, אנא השם, &c. I pray thee, Lord, I have offended and been rebellious, and have ſinned before thee, I and my houſe, I beſeech thee Lord, forgive now the offences, and rebellions, and ſins, wherewith I have offended, and rebelled, and ſinned againſt thee, I and mine houſe, &c. And they anſwer, Bleſſed be the name of his kingdome for ever and ever. So Ezr. 10. 1. Ezra is ſaid on the faſt day to weep, and caſt himſelf down before the houſe of the Lord, that is, in that court before the porch of the Temple, and 1 Mac. 7. 38. the Prieſts entred in (to the court of the Temple) and ſtood between the Altar and the Temple) weeping, where though the Greek tranſlatour read κατὰ πρόσωπον τῆς θυσιαστηρίου καὶ ναοῦ before the altar and temple, yet Joſeph Ben Gorions Hebrew reads diſtinctly בין האולם ולמזבח between the porch and the altar.

V. 36. Generation] Γενεὰ generation ſignifies not a whole ſæcle, but rather the third part of a ſæcle, or hundred years, as in Homer when of Neſtor 'tis ſaid, l. Γενεὰ

the two generations ſignifie about 60. years, and ſo in * Herodotus, ἑξακόσιαι μὲν αἰῶνα ἦσαν μέσα ἔτη. 300. generations are equivalent to 10000 years, and Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 2. οἱ τὰ ἑκατὸν ἔτη βέλτιον ἐγγραπτέον γενεὰς, three generations amount to an hundred years. So Phavorinus, γενεαὶ καὶ τὰς παλαιὰς διήκοντα χρόνοις, the ancients uſed the word to ſignifie thirty years, and citing that of Neſtors age in Homer, ſaith it ſignifies, that ὑπερέβη τὰ ἑξήκοντα ἔτη, he was above ſixty yeares old. So in Heſychius the word is taken to ſignifie either the life of a man, or thirty years, or twenty five, or twenty, (as it is alſo taken for ſeven years by the Phyſitians, and for ten clearly in Jeremies Epiſtle v. 2,) where the life of a man ſignifies not the ordinary ſpace of a mans life from birth to death, for that may be ſixty or eighty yeares, but ſo as the ſpace of the life of fourteen men, children to one another, and ſucceeding one another, make up fourteen generations, Mat. 1. By all which it appeares what is meant here by the phraſe this generation, ſuch a ſpace that they that were then alive might and ſhould live to ſee it; And ſo Chriſt here foretels 1. the great perſecutions from the Jewes, and 2. the great judgements and deſtruction, that ſhould then come upon that people within few years, † about fourty ſaith Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 7. within the ſpace of the life of ſome that were then alive, as was ſaid c. 16. 28. (ſee the Note there) and is more largely ſhewed c. 24. where that which was ſaid of the deſtruction of the Jewes was occaſioned by this ſpeech of Chriſts in this Chapter (ſee Note on Lu. 18. 7. c.)

V. 39. Henceforth] Ἀπ' ἄρτι here (as in ſome other places) ſignifies not from henceforth, as it were from that very time wherein he ſpake, for 'tis clear they ſaw him after this, but as Euthymius expounds the ſame Rev. 14. 13. (whether in two or one word, ἀπ' ἄρτι, or ἀπάρτι, it is all one) within a while, after, or no long time after, which ſeems to be the ſame ſpeech which S. John expreſſes by the ἔτι μικρὸν καὶ ὁ κόσμος οὐκ ἔτι θεωρεῖ με, Jo. 14. 19. yet a little while and the world ſees me no more, and again c. 16. 16. μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με. (ſee Note on Rev. 14. 13.) ſo Joh. 1. 51. Verily I ſay unto you, ἀπ' ἄρτι ὄψεσθε τὸν οὐρανὸν ἀνεῳγότα, within a while ye ſhall ſee the heaven open'd, (which belongs not to any thing that was beginning at that minute, but within a few years after at his Aſcenſion) and the Angels of God deſcending and aſcending upon the ſon of man, which clearly belongs to that which is ſet down by way of ſtory, Act. 1. 9, 10. while they looked he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their ſight, and behold two men ſtood by them in white apparel, &c. Beſide theſe places twice more is the word uſed Joh. 13. 19. and 14. 7. where it ſeems to be taken only as an Expletive (as ἄρτι or νῦν, or as we uſe now) and no more. m. Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XXIV.

1. the magnificent ſtructures which Herod had built there.

AND Jeſus went out and departed from the temple, and his diſciples came to him for to ſhew him the [buildings of the Temple.]

2. Of all this ſtately fabrick of the Temple, which ye ſee, there ſhall within a while remain no one part undemoliſhed, but all plow'd up from the very foundation.

a. 2. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, [See ye not all theſe things? Verily I ſay unto you, there ſhall not be left here [a] one ſtone upon another which ſhall not be * thrown down.] * pluckt aſunder, καταλυθήσεται

3. When this deſtruction of City, and Nation, and Temple (the two former threatned under the phraſe of [all theſe things coming to paſſe] c. 23. 36. the latter, of not one ſtone upon another of the buildings of the Temple v. 2.) ſhall fall out, and what ſignes ſhall there be beforehand of this thy coming in judgment, and of the deſtruction of the Jewiſh ſtate?

b. c. 3. And as he ſat upon the mount of Olives, the diſciples came unto him privately, ſaying, Tell us, [when ſhall theſe things be, and what ſhall be the ſign of thy [b] coming, and of the * [c] end of the world?] * concluſion of the age?

4. To this double queſtion, (concerning the time, and the ſignes of this approaching deſtruction) and firſt to the laſt part of it, what forerunners there ſhould be of this deſtruction upon the Jews, Jeſus gave anſwer, thus, by ſaying

4. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid] unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you.

5. One ſign or forerunner is this, There ſhall ariſe among you many falſe Chriſts, Jewes taking upon them to be the Meſſias expected, and accordingly calling the people to come after them, as Aſſertors and Vindicators of the liberties of the Jewes, (ſee note d.) and each of them ſhall have many followers aſſociating themſelves to them.

5. For many ſhall come in my name, ſaying, I am Chriſt, and ſhall deceive many.]

d. 6. And a ſecond ſigne is great rumors, and diſcourſes of warres, which will be apt to fright and diſcourage you, but theſe will be Panick terrors, precurſory only to that great and ſad ruine that ſhall follow, but not yet.

6. And ye ſhall hear of warres and rumors of warres, ſee that ye be not troubled; for all theſe things muſt come to paſſe, but the [d] end is not yet.]

7. For there ſhall be a third change yet farther preparatory to it, great broyles, and civil warres, and commotions among your ſelves (ſee v. 9. and note on Lu. 21. d.) famines and peſtilences &c. thorough all Judæa.

7. For [e] nation ſhall riſe againſt nation, and kingdome againſt kingdome, and there ſhall be famines, and peſtilences, and earthquakes in divers places.]

8. Theſe are the ſignes of the approach of thoſe ſad pangs, (which ſhall bring forth deliverance to my diſciples, that adhere faſt to me, but utter deſtruction to the obdurate Jewes) yet only of the approach, for there are other forerunners ſtill behind.

8. All theſe are the beginning of * ſorrows.] * throwes, or, pangs of travaile,

9. Then ἀδίνων

9. Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you; and ye shall be hated of all nations] for my names sake.

9. For first it shall fall heavy on you Disciples; the orthodox Christians shall be every where delivered up by the unbelieving Jews to imprisonment and death it self, and be hated, and persecuted by them in all quarters of Judea, and whereever else they are dispersed (see note e.)

10. And then many shall be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another.]

10. And then many Christians shall by their sufferings be discouraged from following me any longer, and to secure themselves shall betray other their fellow Christians, and deal malitiously against them.

11. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many.]

11. And this shall be an opportunity for another sort of false teachers to arise (see note d. and 2 Thess. 2. 3. and 1 Joh. 2. note a.) the Gnosticks, followers of Simon Magus, who by two allectives first promise of immunity from the present persecutions, then by allowing carnal liberties, shall corrupt and inveagle many Christian professors.

12. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold.]

12. And by reason of the extreme sharpnesse of the persecutions, great multitudes shall fall off from Christianity to that sect of the Gnosticks, who professe not to have so much love or zeal to Christ as to acknowledge or confesse him in time of persecution. See note on Luke 2. 6.

13. But he that shall endure to the end, the same shall be saved.]

13. But the event shall prove this prudential compliance of theirs, and denying of their persecuted profession to be the greatest folly in the world, this very designe of avoiding dangers shall ingulf them into them, and (as for salvation hereafter, so) for security, sure the surest way to attain to both, is the constant adhering to Christ without wavering, (see note on c. 10. h. & v. 39.)

14. And this Gospel of the kingdome shall be preached in all the world, for a witnesse unto all nations, and then shall the end come.]

14. And after this there shall be but one prognostick more, viz. that the disciples shall depart and preach the Gospel to them that are more likely to receive it, After the Jewes rejecting the Gospel, it shall be removed from them, and preach'd to the Gentiles, and then speedily shall this destruction come, See 2 Thess. 2. 3.

15. When yee therefore shall see the [f] abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (who so readeth, let him understand).]

f.

15. And therefore to proceed from the signes to the thing it self, from the forerunners, to this actual sad coming of mine in vengeance upon the crucifiers, observe what I now say unto you; As soon as ever ye see the Roman army, which will make such an horrid vastation, that you may resolve it the ultimate completion of that prophecy of Daniel, (which belonged primarily unto Antiochus, but secondarily also to these Romans) when, I say, ye shall see this army set down in a siege, and begirting the holy city (when you read that place in Daniel, remember what I now say, and remember how pertinent it is to this purpose, though spoken also of another.)

16. Then let them which be in Judea [g] fly to the mountains.

17. Let him which is on the [h] house top, not come down to take any thing out of his house.

18. Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his cloathes.

19. And woe unto them which are with childe, and to them that give suck in those dayes.

g. h.

16,17,18,19, Then is the season for every one that is in any part of the region of Judea to get out of it (as hastily as Lot was by the Angel warned to get out of Sodome, Gen. 19. 17.) and to fly to the mountainous parts beyond Judea, or else he must expect to be destroyed in it. For this will be a very suddain vengeance, such as on Sodome, and woful to them that are not in condition to fly speedily out of it.

20. But pray yee that your flight be not in the winter, nor on the * Sabbath day.

* Sabbath σαββάτῳ

20. This will be a sad condition indeed, if it chance to fall out in the time of winter, when long and hasty journeys are most miserable; or if on a Sabbatick year, a time of the greatest scarcity (for though there was a promise in the law, on their obedience, that the Rest of the Seventh year should bring no scarcity upon them, but that the year before should be blest with a double plenty, yet now that their disobediences had ripened them for their utter ruine, the continuance of this miraculous mercy was not to be expected) for in such a year 'tis to be expected, that those, by whom ye passe, will have no more then they use for their own necessities, nothing to spare for you (at least to provide for such multitudes flying all at once (who yet must not stay to carry any thing with you, v. 17. And yet these difficulties, whatsoever they are, or can be, you must venture on, rather then stay in Jerusalem, or thereabouts.

21. For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time, no nor ever shall be.]

21. For on them that are left in Jerusalem shall fall a more miserable siege, and other consequent pressures, then ever was or shall be heard, or read of in the world.

† no flesh should escape.

22. And except those dayes should be shortned, † there should [i] no flesh be saved: but for the elects sake those dayes shall be shortned.]

i. j. k.

22. Such as if it should continue long, it would destroy every Jew that is in the land, and in all other places also. But that the prophecies might be fulfilled, which foretold that a remnant should survive this destruction, the time of this heavy distresse shall not be long, but the City being besieged, and taken, the armies of the Romans shall be gone, and the banish'd Jew-Christians, those that fled from the siege, v. 16. return quietly to their home again.

* the Christ ὁ Χριστὸς

23. Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is * Christ, or there, beleive it not.

23. Then in the time of that distresse and flight, if any shall perswade you, that here is he that shall deliver you (that is, the Messias, that shall free you from this distresse) if any shall put you in any hope of any deliverer, see that you do not heed, or follow after any such.

24. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signes, and wonders, insomuch that (if it were possible) they shall deceive the very elect.]

24. For at this third season a third sort of false Christs shall arise (see note d.) assuming to be sent by God to deliver you, and false prophets there shall be to perswade you to betake your selves to these false Christs, and these betwixt them shall pretend working of miracles, and giving you signes to draw you after them, and (coming in a nick of time so advantageous for that turn, when your danger appears to you so great and formidable, and so promise of deliverance so welcome) they will be likely to draw many after them, even the most sincere persevering Christians, if it were possible for any deceit to work upon them.

25. Behold, I have told you before.]

25. Therefore let this premonition of mine forearme and secure you against this danger.

* storehouses, cellars, places of strength, magazines, fortifications. &c.

26. Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert, goe not forth; Behold, he is in the * [l] secret chambers, beleive it not.]

l.

26. When therefore the news shall come that there is in the wilderneſse an eminent person, which will fight your battels, deliver you from the Roman yoak, such was Simon, who had gathered an army of fourty thousand, and was in the desart country of Judæa, be sure you goe not forth after him, give no ear to such rumours; Or if they shall tell you, that there is in such a frontier town, or place of defence, or in such a strong hold within within the city of Jeruſalem (for there John with his Zelots fortified himſelf) this deliverer, or Meſſias, or leader for you; depend not on any ſuch reliefe, nor forſlow your flight v. 17. upon confidence that he ſhall doe any thing for you.

27. All ſuch deceits may prove ruinous to you, for this judgment and vengeance upon the Jews ſhall come ſo, as that it cannot be avoided, but it ſhall at the ſame time fall upon ſeveral parts of the land, or in a moment, like lightning, fly from one corner to another, this day a great ſlaughter of Jews in this place, to morrow in another a great way off.

27. For as the lightning cometh out of the eaſt, and ſhineth even unto the weſt, ſo ſhall alſo the coming of the ſon of man be.]

m. 28. And there is no preventing of it by getting into any place of appearing ſafety, for whereſoever the Jews are, there will the Roman armies (whoſe enſign is the eagle, and who will have a ſagacity to finde out Jews, as the eagle Job 39. 30. hath to ſmell out carcaſſes) finde them out, and ſlaughter them.

28. For whereſoever the carcaſſe is, there will the [m] eagles be gathered together.]

n. 29. This diſtreſſe ſhall make ſhort work with this nation, For immediately upon this which I have now foretold you, the Temple, the city of Jeruſalem, and the reſt of the cities of Iudea, and that whole people ſhall be ſhrewdly ſhaken, all the whole government, Civil and Eccleſiaſtical, ſhall be deſtroyed.

29. Immediately after the tribulation of thoſe dayes the Sun ſhall be darkned, and the Moon ſhall not give her light, and the Stars ſhall fall from heaven, and [n] the powers of heaven ſhall be ſhaken.]

o. 30. And this ſhall appear to be a ſignall puniſhment upon the Jews, and they ſhall with ſorrow (though too late) take notice of it, as a notable act of revenge of the crucified Chriſt upon thoſe that were thus guilty of his death (ſee Præmon. to the Revelation.)

30. And then ſhall appear the [o] ſign of the ſon of man in heaven, and then ſhall all the tribes of the † earth mourn, and they ſhall ſee the ſon of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.]

† land, τῆς γῆς.

31. And he ſhall, as with an herald, and a loud ſounding trumpet, gather together all the perſevering beleivers, that remnant, whom he purpoſed to preſerve from this deſtruction, whereſoever they are in any part of Judea, ſee Rev. 7. 12. and reſcue them from this common calamity, ſee v. 40, 41. and Rev. 7. 3, 4, &c.

31. And he ſhall ſend his Angels with a great ſound of a trumpet, and they ſhall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other. *]

* [Between this and the 32. v. the Gr. and La. MS. inſerts theſe words, Ἀρχάμενον δὲ τούτων γινέσθαι ἀναβλέψατε &c. as it is Lu. 21. 28. And when theſe things begin to come to paſs, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.

32. Now as by the ſight of a figtree, the ſoftneſſe of the branch, and budding out proaching.

32. Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: when her branch † is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that ſummer is nigh.]

of leaves, ye know and diſcern, that the winter is now paſt, and the ſummer is nigh ap-

† is now become ſoft, and leaves ſprout forth, ἤδη γένηται ἁπαλὸς, καὶ τὰ φύλλα ἐκφύῃ

33. So in like manner reſolve ye, that theſe are moſt certain and infallible ſignes, by which when you ſee them, you may conclude that this coming of the ſon of man for the deſtruction of the Jews, and your reſcue and deliverance is neer at hand.

33. So likewiſe ye, [when ye ſee all theſe things, know that * it is neer, even at the doors.]

* he is neer, ἐγγύς ἐστι

34. Of both which I now aſſure you, that in the age of ſome that are now alive, ſhall all that hath been ſaid in this chapter, be certainly fulfilled (ſee Note on c. 23. 1. and Luke 18. 7. c.)

34. Verily I ſay unto you, [This generation ſhall not paſſe, till all theſe things be fulfilled.]

35. What I ſay is immutably firm and ſure, the whole world ſhall be deſtroyed ſooner then one word that I have now delivered ſhall prove otherwiſe.

35. Heaven and earth ſhall paſſe away, but my words ſhall not paſſe away.]

36. But of the point of time when this judgment ſhall come (ſee Note on Heb. 10. a. and 2 Pet. 3. 10.) none but God the father knows that (ſee Note on Mar. 13. b.) and that muſt oblige you to vigilancy, and may ſuſtain you in your tryals, (when you begin to faint by reaſon of perſecutions from the Jews, v. 12. which this is to ſet a period to) by remembring that how farre off ſoever your deliverance ſeems to be, it may and will come in a moment unexpectedly.

36. But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my father only.]

37. But this judgment on the Jews ſhall be like that on the old world, in reſpect of the unexpectedneſſe of it. See Lu. 17. 20.

37. But as the dayes of Noe were, ſo ſhall alſo the coming of the ſon of man be.]

38, 39. For as in the age before the deluge, the judgement had been preached ſixſcore yeares together, and at laſt Noah by building of an arke did viſibly forewarn them of the flood approaching, yet the people went on ſecure, and unmoved in their courſe, knew not ſo much as of his imbarking, till the very minute that the flood ſurprized them, and deſtroyed every perſon but Noahs family, that made uſe of the means preſcribed them by God, ſo ſhall it be in this approaching deſtruction on this nation.

38. For as in the dayes that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, untill the day that Noe entred into the arke,

39. And knew not untill the flood came and took them all away, ſo ſhall alſo the coming of the ſon of man be.]

40, 41. Then ſhall there be many acts of Gods providence diſcerned in reſcuing one from that calamity, wherein another is deſtroyed, eſpecially that of departing out of Judæa v. 16. which the beleivers generally did at Gallus's raiſing the ſiege, (ſee Note g.) the reſt ſtaying behind, and ſo being deſtroyed; Two perſons in the ſame field together ſhall be thus diſcriminated in their fate, two women grinding together, or turning of a hand-mill, one of them ſhall ſtay, and be deſtroyed, and the other that was in the ſame place, and danger with her, ſhall as by the Angel that hurried Lot out of Sodome, or otherwiſe, by ſome inviſible diſpoſition of that providence, which waits on his faithfull ſervants, be reſcued from that deſtruction v. 31.

40. Then ſhall two be in the field, the one ſhall be * taken, and the other left.

41. Two women ſhall be grinding in a mill, the one ſhall be taken, and the other left.]

* apprehended, and the other diſmiſs'd, παραλαμβάνεται ὁ εἷς ἀφίεται

42. This judgment then being ſo neer, and yet ſo uncertain when the time will be, it will become every one to be vigilant every minute, that he may be of the number of thoſe, to whom thoſe ſtrange deliverances are promiſed, that is, a faithful, conſtant, obedient ſervant of Chriſts, not tempted from his ſervice by any terrors, ſee v. 13.

42. Watch therefore, for you know not what hour your Lord doth come.]

43. For certainly any man that were thus forewarned of a thief, that would break into his houſe at ſuch a time, is mad, if he doe not provide a guard to ſecure it againſt that time.

43. But * know this, that if the good man of the houſe had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have ſuffered his houſe to be broken up.]

* this you doe know, τοῦτο γινώσκετε.

44. Therefore

44. Therefore be ye alſo ready: for in ſuch an houre as you think not, the ſon of man cometh.] 44. And then by the ſame reaſon, when the time is ſo uncertain, and the being ready at that time ſo neceſſary, you are obliged to be alway on your guard, expecting every houre.

45. Who then is a faithful and wiſe ſervant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his houſhold, to give them meat in due ſeaſon?] 45. Whoſoever of you then ſhall be intruſted by God in any office of truſt or ſtewardſhip, eſpecially in that of getting beleivers to Chriſt, and ſhall diſcharge that truſt faithfully and diſcreetly, doe that which is his duty in times of triall, and perſecution, v. 11, 12.

46. Bleſſed is that ſervant, whom his Lord when he cometh, ſhall find ſo doing.] 46. Thrice happy ſhall he bee if, when his maſter comes to viſit, he continue to be thus imploy'd, and ſo be found about the duties of his truſt, conſtant and perſevering, v. 13.

47. Verily I ſay unto you [that he ſhall make him ruler of all his goods.] 47. His Lord ſhall enlarge his truſt, and make him ſteward of all, and not only of his houſhould, either preſerve him to be a governour in his Church, after theſe ſad times are over, or otherwiſe reward him as he ſeeth beſt.

48. But and [if that evil ſervant ſhall ſay in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming,] 48. If that ſervant ſhall prove diſhoneſt and ſay or think, that Chriſt means not to come and viſit, as he ſaid he would, 2 Pet. 3. 4.

49. And ſhall begin to ſmite his fellow-ſervants, and to eat and drink with the drunken.] 49. And thereupn joyne in the perſecuting of his brethren (as the Gnoſticks did with the Jewes againſt the Chriſtians,) and indulge himſelfe preſumptuouſly to licentious living, ſee 2 Pet. 3. 3. Jude 18.

50. The Lord of that ſervant ſhall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an houre that he is not aware of.] 50. The time of viſitation ſhall come on him, when 'tis leaſt looked for, when he is in the worſt poſture to be ſurprized.

51. And ſhall p cut him aſunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.] 51. And ſhall deale with him as a falſe debtor, or deceitfull ſteward, hew him aſunder, and aſſigne him the ſame lot, which befalls the unbeleiving Jewes, Lu. 12. 46. bring the ſame deſtruction on the Gnoſtick Chriſtians, and the Jewes together, and that ſhall be an irreverſible, and a moſt miſerable deſtruction. p.

3. Αἰθ. ὅτι λίθον.

V. 2. One ſtone upon another] The full completion of this Prophecy of not one ſtone left on another, is very remarkable in ſtory, which tells us that Turnus Rufus did with a ploughſhare tear up the foundations of the Temple, and ſo not leave any part of it under ground undiſſolved, not one ſtone upon another. ſee Scaligers Canon. Iſagog. p. 304.

b. Παρουσία Χριστοῦ.

V. 3. Coming] παρουσία χριστοῦ, the preſence, or the coming of Chriſt is one of the phraſes that is noted in this book to ſignifie the deſtruction of the Jewes. See Note on c. 16. o. A threefold coming of Chriſt there is, 1. in the fleſh to be borne among us, 2ly, At the day of doome to judge the world, 1 Cor. 15. 23. and in many other places; And beſide theſe 3ly, a middle coming, partly in vengeance, and partly for the deliverance of his ſervants; in vengeance, viſible, and obſervable on his enemies and crucifiers, (and firſt on the people of the Jewes, thoſe of them that remain impenitent unbeleivers) and in mercy to the relief of the perſecuted Chriſtians. So 'tis four times in this Chap. v. 27, 37, 39. and here. So 2 Theſſ. 2. 1. and 8. when the coming of Chriſt is ſaid to deſtroy that wicked one, which it ſeems ſhould then in a ſhort time be revealed, which therefore as it agrees with the predictions here of the many Antichriſts before this deſtruction, ſo it cannot be applicable to that other coming at the end of the world. So Ja. 5. 7, 8. where the deſigne being to eſtabliſh the ſcatter'd Jew-Chriſtians, and to give them patience in their preſent preſſures, the only argument is, becauſe the coming of the Lord draws nigh, which being foretold as the ſeaſon, which he that ſurviveth ſhould eſcape (both here in this chap. v. 13. and c. 10. 22. and Mar. 13. 13.) as when their perſecutors (for ſuch were the unbeleiving Jewes) are deſtroyed, it muſt neceſſarily follow. The nearneſſe of it is therefore the beſt motive to confirme the patience of any; and is again expreſſed v. 9. by the Judges ſtanding before the gate, that is, very nigh at hand, ready to enter on the work. And ſo I conceive it ſignifies alſo, 2 Pet. 1. 16. as will appear by conſidering the circumſtances of the place (ſee Note c.) and ſo ch. 3. 4. and 12. being a coming, which was within a while to be expected by them. And ſo 1 Joh. 2. 28. there having been before mention of the ἐσχάτη ὥρα ver. 18. the laſt houre then preſent, which belongs therefore to that matter, both by the ἐσχάτη ὥρα ὅτι the then preſence of it, John being the diſciple that lived to ſee it, and by the Antichriſts again, that were to come before it. Of this coming of Chriſt it is, that Cunæus and ſome other learned men interpret the Prophecy of Jacob, of Shilos coming. For that by Judah is ſignified the Jewiſh nation, and by the Scepter, the government, or politia, 'tis clear, which yet did not depart from them at Chriſts birth, no nor at his death, till about forty years after, at which time the government was wholly taken away from that nation, and from that time to this was never in any degree recovered again, (and ſo that Prophecy then, and not till then, perfectly fulfill'd) and at the ſame time was the preaching of the Goſpel to the Gentiles, which followes in that place. Thus when Chriſt anſwer'd Peter about John, If I will &c. ch. 21. 20. (which is in effect that John ſhould live till this coming of Chriſt) 'tis clear that it muſt belong to the * deſtruction of the Jewes which John did outlive. That this is the meaning of his coming in glory with his angels, Mat. 16. 27. hath been ſhew'd already. So again Mat. 26. 64. his coming in the clouds of heaven, though it may be thought to look toward his finall third coming at the great day of doome, yet as the very Jewes have obſerv'd, that that phraſe ſignifies the infliction of judgment or puniſhment, ſo that it doth ſo there, appears by the beginning of the verſe, where, ſaith chriſt, ἀπ' ἄρτι ὄψεσθε, from now, that is, within a ſhort time, ſaith Euthymius, you ſhall ſee this, &c. To the ſame may be applied that parable, wherein the Maſter giving talents to his ſervants, bids them occupy till he Come, Lu. 19. 13. that the diſciples uſe the talent intruſted to them, to get beleivers to Chriſt in Judæa, till the time, when Chriſt thus Comes to viſit. So Lu. 18. 8. when the ſon of man comes, that is, when Chriſt thus comes to judge this nation, ſhall he find faith ὅτι ἡ γῆς in this land of Judæa? that is very little faith ſhould be found among them. The phraſe ὅτι ἡ γῆς (like as ארץ among the Rabbins) ſignifying in the ſame manner, as it doth Lu. 21. 23. that is, ἐν λαῷ τούτῳ among this people, and ſo φυλαὶ τῆς γῆς, γῆς, the tribes of Judæa v. 30. So Heb. 10. 37. yet a little while, and he that cometh, will come and will not delay, which cannot be interpreted of any other coming, but this, and had before been expreſs'd v. 25. by ἡμέρα ἐγγίζουσα the day approaching, (ſee the Note on that place) And all this agreeable to that expreſſion in S. Luke, c. 19. 15. where in the parable there is mention of the man ἐπανελθὼν returning, or, coming back, when he had received the kingdome, that is, of Chriſt returning again after his going to heaven, and that firſt to call his ſervants to account for the talents, to ſee what profit came in of all his, and the Apoſtles preaching on earth, and then for his enemies, that would not have him raign over them, that is, the Jewes that rejected and crucified him, to ſend for them, and ſee them ſlain before him. The only objection (of any appearance of reaſon) againſt this interpretation is, that this deſtruction being wrought by the Roman army, and thoſe as much enemies of Chriſtianity as any, and the very ſame people that had joyn'd with the Jewes to put Chriſt to death, it doth thereupon appear ſtrange, that either thoſe armies which are call'd Abominable ſhould be call'd Gods armies, or that Chriſt ſhould be ſaid to come, when in truth it was Veſpaſian and Titus that thus came againſt this people. To this I anſwer, 1. that 'tis ordinary with God in the old Teſtament to call thoſe Babyloniſh, Aſſyrian, heathen armies, his, which did his work in puniſhing the Jewes, when they rebell'd againſt him. As for Veſpaſian (though it need not be ſaid, and though the anſwer is otherwiſe clear, that Chriſt is fitly ſaid to come, when his Miniſters doe come, that is, when either heathen men or Satan himſelf, who are executioners of Gods will, when they think not of it, are permitted by him to work deſtruction on his enemies, to act revenge upon his crucifiers) it is yet not unworthy of obſervation, how eaſie it might be in many particulars to ſhew that Chriſt was reſembled or repreſented by that Emperour; As 1. that it was before-hand prophecyed of him, that he ſhould be Emperour, (ſee Joſephus l. 3. c. 7. ἀλαὸς. Suetonius, Tacitus, Dion) 2ly, that an oxe brake in and fell downe at his feet, in Suetonius, as when Chriſt was born in the ſtable it had been: 3dly, that he healed the blind and the lame with ſpittle and touch, So Sueton. c. 7. and Tacit. l. 4. Hiſt. 4ly, that he was moſt humble and mild, humillimus & clementiſſimus, ſaith Suetonius, a perfect image of what was moſt eminently true in Chriſt, Learn of me, for I am meek--&c. 5ly, that he ſhut the gate of Janus Temple and erected a Temple of Peace, Joſephus de Bell. Jud. l. 7. c. 24. and Baron. ann. 77. 6ly, becauſe he came out of Judæa, and was Ruler over the Gentiles, and ſo was by Joſephus beleived to be the Meſſias: 7ly, that neither he nor his ſon Titus would be call'd Judaicus (in token of their victory over the Jewes) but aſcribed all the conqueſt and whole work to God, ſaith Dio. 8ly, that he was by the Jewes themſelves taken for Shiloh, or Chriſt, becauſe at that time all the progeny of the Aſſamonæi were ceaſed. By all which it is clear how farre it would be from ſtrange how agreeable to Scripture-prophecies, which muſt be allowed to have ſomewhat of figure in them, and not to be perfectly literall) that Chriſt ſhould be deſcribed here, in the perſon of Veſpaſian, to return, and ſo to come again to avenge his crucifixion, and puniſh the Jewes that crucified him. To which purpoſe many farther parallels betwixt the ſtory of that deſtruction and the paſſages in the ſtory of Chriſt might be obſerved out of Joſephus, As 1. That in Galilee were the beginnings of theſe miſeries (Joſeph. de Bell. Jud. l. 3.) where Chriſts firſt miracles were wrought. 2. That from Mount Olivet the ſiege began, l. 6. c. 10. where Chriſt ſeems to have been v. 1. when he began to deliver this Prophecy againſt them, and neer which place it was that he was apprehended. 3ly, That the time of the Paſſover was the beginning of the ſlaughter, c. 11. and lib. 7. c. 17. as it was of his crucifixion (ſee Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 5.) 4ly, That the high and low places were made ſmooth for the coming of the Roman army and the engines, ch. 12. as was ſaid in John Baptiſts prophecy of it. 5ly, That at the coming of the Baliſtæ they cried out, Filius venit ch. 18. The ſon cometh, which is the very phraſe which we have now in hand. 6ly, That one was crucified alive before their faces, ch. 19. 7ly, That Longinus pierced the ſide of one, ch. 22. 8ly, That Titus deſired to ſave the Temple in ſpight of them c. 24. and many prodigies of this nature, which might make it more reaſonable that that deſtruction ſhould be thus ſtyled, the coming of Chriſt.

* Κατὰ τὴν παρουσίαν μὲν Ἰωάννου μέλλων διὰ τῆς Ῥωμαίων βάβδου κατάξαι, καὶ καταστρέψαι τὴν πόλιν αὐτῶν. Theophylact. in Johan. 21.

V. 3. End of the world] By what hath been ſaid of the meaning of Chriſts coming in this place, will appear alſo, what is the Συντέλεια τῆς αἰῶνος, the concluſion of the age, eſpecially if it be mark'd that in ſtead of theſe two together, S. Luke c. 21. 7. hath only ταῦτα theſe, uniting them into one, What is the ſigne when theſe things ſhall come to paſſe? and S. Marke ὅταν μέλλῃ ταῦτα πάντα συντελεῖσθαι, when all theſe things ſhall be concluded, that is, thoſe immediately foremention'd, the deſtruction of the Temple, c. 13. 4. (ſee note on Mar. 13. a.) For the word αἰὼν literally ſignifies age (ſee note on Lu. 1. o.) and is in a manner the Engliſh word with the Greek termination (and ſo is uſed ſometimes for the age of man, all one with γενεὰ, as Homer Il. γ'. μυρωδέσι αἰὼν a ſhort age) and then Συντέλεια will denote the concluſion, or ſhutting up of that age, or the Jewiſh ſtate, which was to be within that age, According to that of the Jewes, that there was a double age, the then preſent and the future μέλλων αἰὼν the age to come, Iſ. 9. 6. which they call the age of the Meſſias, And ſo this revenge upon the Jewes, the deſtruction of that people, may be ſtyled the conſummation of the age. An eminent place there is in the Book of Tobit, which will give light to this, and ſhew the ground of this phraſe in the ordinary ſpeech of the Jewes, It is ch. 14. 5. where Tobit prophecies of three periods, which ſhould fall after his time, 1. The rebuilding of the Temple, God ſhall again bring them into the land, where they ſhall build the Temple, but not like the firſt, and that ſhall continue till the times of that age be fulfilled, that is the ſecond period, the concluſion or conſummation of the age here, the end of the Jewiſh ſtate. And then after is the glorious Jeruſalem, the glorious building ſpoken of by the Prophets, & there deſcribed, v. 6. by the turning of the nations, converting of the Gentiles, and ſerving God truly, and burying their idols, which is clearly the ſtate of Chriſtianity. Thus when in Gemara, out of an ancient writing 'tis ſaid, Sanhed. c. 11. §. 29. that after 4291 years עולם יתום the age ſhall be conſummated, 'tis clear that it belongeth to this matter, not to the end of the whole world, but, as they ſay, to the daies of the Meſſias, which they uſe to call אחרים הימים the laſt daies, and ſo Heb. 9. 26. Συντέλεια τῶν αἰώνων, the conſummation of the ages, in the ſame ſenſe alſo. And in that famous place of Daniel (referr'd to v. 14.) c. 9. 27. he ſhall make it deſolate even untill the conſummation. So ch. 13. 40. Συντέλεια αἰῶνος τούτου, the concluſion of this age, that famous period of the Jewiſh ſtate, till which time Chriſt would not have the wicked hereticall Profeſſors medled with, or diſcriminated, but pure beleivers, and impure miſbeleivers permitted together, that is, the Gnoſticks (that ſoon ſprung up after Chriſts departure) and the orthodox Chriſtians. And accordingly ſo it was, Theſe abominable hereticks infeſted the Church, and ſo for ſome time continued to doe under the guiſe of Chriſtians, though their hereſie were a rapſody of Heatheniſme and Judaiſme and all vile practiſe; Only when the time of viſitation came, then they were deſtroyed with the crucifiers of Christ, and then the diſcrimination was made. Thus * Oroſius evidently underſtands it, for ſpeaking of the times before that deſtruction, Cùm Chriſtus, ſaith he, à diſcipulis interrogatus eſſet de concluſione temporum ſubſequentium, ſic ait, Audituri eſtis prælia, &c. when Chriſt was asked by his diſciples of the concluſion of the following times, he ſaid, Ye ſhall hear of warres &c. For the notion of this phraſe, Mat. 28. 20. ſee Note c. on that Chapter. The like phraſes (τὸ τέλος the end, & τέλος πάντων the end of all things, &c.) have, and ſhall be obſerved in their due places.

V. 6. End] What τὸ τέλος the end ſignifies, is expreſs'd by S. Chryſoſtome, τέλος Ἱεροσολύμων the end of Jeruſalem, the ſame that before by Chriſts coming, and the end of the age. So v. 14. Then ſhall the end come, to wit, when the Goſpel having been preached through all the cities of Judæa ſucceſſiſly, the Apoſtles turne to the Gentiles, as 'tis in the beginning of that verſe. So Mar. 13. 7. the place directly parallel to this, ſo Lu. 21. 9. alſo, and 1. Pet. 4. 7. τὸ τέλος πάντων the end of all things, that is, of the Jewiſh State, wherein thoſe of the diſperſion to whom he wrote, were ſo particularly concerned; And 'tis obſervable, that as there, when the end of all things, that is, that fatall deſtruction was at hand, there was actually ἐν ὑμῖν among them the πύρωσις v. 12. that is, a combuſtion or conflagration, to wit, that of civill broyles cauſed by the unbeleiving Jewes, and hereticall Gnoſticks, againſt the orthodox and pure Chriſtians, ſo here before this coming of the end, the nation ſhall riſe againſt the nation, &c. v. 7. that is, there ſhould be theſe civill commotions and warres among them, which did indeed ſo haſten their ruine, and make it ſo cruell, when it came. Thus alſo 1. Theſſ. 2. 16. where, upon the filling up the meaſure of their ſins, the wrath of God is ſaid to have come haſtily upon thoſe Jewes εἰς τὸ τέλος, to a παντελεσία, or totall deſtruction of them, for though it were not then actually done, when that Epiſtle was writ, yet it was ſo certainly decreed againſt them, that it is ſaid in the Aoriſt, indefinitely, it hath overtaken them already, that is, will ſpeedily overwhelme them. Thus is the phraſe uſed by Ezechiel c. 7. An end, the end is come upon the four corners of the land, v. 2. and 3. now is the end come upon thee, and v. 6. an end is come, the end is come, All to the deſtruction of the Jewes, not to the end of the whole world; ſee Note on Act. 2. 6. Now whereas it is here ſaid, that all muſt come to paſſe, but the end is not yet, it followes yet manifeſtly from hence, that the falſe Chriſts mentioned v. 5. muſt be ſome perſons, that came before that period which is here called the end, that is, before the approach of the Romans to deſtroy Jeruſalem, ſoon after the aſcenſion of Chriſt. Of this kind is that Theudas which is mentioned by Euſebius in the time of Claudius, not he that is referred to by Gamaliel Act. 5. 36. (for he is there ſaid to have been before Judas Galileus, which was in the dayes of the taxing, that is, about the time of the birth of Chriſt, ſee Euſeb. l. 1. c. 5.) but another later Theudas, which though Euſebius by incogitancy affirme to be the ſame, which is mentioned by Gamaliel before Judas, yet he out of Joſephus places him in the time of the prefecture of Fadus, that is, in Claudius's reigne. And of this Theudas ſaith Joſephus, that being a ſorcerer he perſwaded a great multitude to bring all their goods and follow him to the river Jordan, which he promiſed to divide by his commands and give them an eaſie paſſage over it, and ſaying thus, πολλὰς ἐπάτησεν he deceived many (which is the thing here affirmed of him) and he and his were by Fadus diſcomfited, and his head cut off, and brought to Jeruſalem. Such again was the Egyptian, Act. 21. 31. mentioned alſo by * Euſebius and Joſephus. And ſuch was Doſithes or Doſitheus which called himſelf χριστὸς, ſaith Origen, contr. Cel. l. 2. And indeed the reſt of the forenamed and many more, which roſe up with this undertaking, that they would redeem the Jewes out of their ſubjection to the Romans, (See Lu. 21. 8.) though they did not diſtinctly call themſelves Chriſt, yet did ſo in effect, the definition of a Chriſt being ὁ μέλλων λυτροῦσθαι Ἰσραὴλ he that ſhould redeem Iſrael, Lu. 24. 21. As for the falſe Prophets mentioned v. 11. they belong to another period of time, immediately before the fatall day, v. 14. and by that which is mentioned together with them (the Chriſtians hating and betraying one another, and many being ſcandalized, and falling off from Chriſt by that means, and the multiplying of iniquity, that is, the unnaturall dealing of thoſe fellow-Chriſtians, in ſharpning the Jewes, and bringing that heavy tribulation, and oppreſſion upon them, and the growing cold of love, that is, of conſtancy in confeſſing of Chriſt, all which was eminently fulfilled in the Gnoſticks, (that filthy ſect of Chriſtians) 'tis moſt proper to interpret thoſe Pſeudo-Prophets to be the followers of Simon Magus, to wit, thoſe Gnoſticks, which firſt ſecretly infus'd their doctrines of complyance with the Jewes, on purpoſe to avoid perſecution from them, Gal. 6. 12. and at the time of writing the ſecond Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, were then a myſtery of iniquity, that is, had not then broken out into that height, as ſoon after they did upon occaſion of the Apoſtles departing from the Jewes, and going profeſs'dly to the Gentiles, a while before the deſtruction of the Jewes, which came and deſtroyed theſe alſo, 2 Theſſ. 2. 8. And ſo 'tis here ſaid next after the mention of the falſe Prophets, and the perſecutions wrought by them, that the Goſpell ſhall be preach'd to all the world for a witneſſe to all nations, that is, that the Apoſtles ſhall give over the Jewes and go preach to the Gentiles, and then ſhall the end come, v. 14. and what that is, appears by the next words, v. 15. the abomination of deſolation, &c. that is, Jeruſalem beſieged, in S. Luke. As for the Pſeudo-Prophets and Pſeudo-Chriſts v. 24. they belong to a third time, or period immediately conſequent to the great tribulation, v. 21. upon Titus's building the wall about the city, which made the famine rage ſo horribly, and the ſouldiers firing of the Temple, which ſoon followed after. For at this point of time, * Joſephus tells us of a falſe propher, who as from God, promiſed deliverance no all that ſhould go up into the Temple, and many beleeving him, ſix thouſand were by that means burnt in that fire. Beſide this, ſaith he, there were many falſe Prophets, ſet up by the Σικάριοι ſeditious, promiſing help from God, and conjuring them neither to fly, nor think of delivering up the city, and though Joſephus mention it not, yet it ſeems by v. 24. that by evil arts they wrought ſome ſtrange feats, to gain beleef from them. Of theſe ſome exalted Simon, with his army in the wilderneſs, as the perſon by whom the work would be wrought, others directed them to John, and his faction of Zelots, which kept within the city, as it followes there v. 26. If they ſhall ſay unto you, Behold he is in the deſart, &c. For by theſe means they were ſtill kept in hope, and reſtrained both from flight and delivering the city, and ſo more aſcertain'd to all ſad diſtreſs and deſtruction finally.

V. 7. Nation] The Greek word ἔθνος here, which we render nation, and the Latine gens, (anſwerable to the Hebrew אמה are the Originals from whence the words ethnick (or heathen) and Gentile come, and by the cuſtomary acception of the words for the other nations of the world, excluſively, and in oppoſition to the Jewes then, & Chriſtians now, it comes to paſſe, that the word nations is ordinarily thought to ſignifie all other people of the world, but never the Jewes. But this is a miſtake, thus caſually & cauſeleſly occaſioned; For there were ſeverall diviſions of Paleſtine (as they were before ἔθνη πολλὰ, Deut. 15. 6. many nations and great, c. 9. 1. which were the Jewes now poſſeſs'd of), Judæa, and Galilee, & Iturta, and Abylene; And each of these is properly called ἔθνος natio, and so βασιλεία kingdome too, there being severall Tetrarchs over them Lu. 3. 1. So Eccles. 50. 26. there being mention of δύο ἔθνη two nations, Samaria is presently specified to be one of them. And so here and Lu. 21. 10. the phrase nation against nation (& in like manner kingdome against kingdome) may well denote civill intestine commotions in Palestine, perhaps one of these Tetrarchies against another, or else one of these against it self (as civill warres are intestine breaches in the same city or nation) and so certainly the very phrase is used 2 Chron. 15. 6. where as an expression of the great vexations of the Jewes v. 5. 'tis added, nation was destroyed of nation, city of city, where the Greek reads πολεμήσει ἔθνος εἰς ἔθνος nation shall fight (as here shall rise) against nation. In this sense we finde not only the word nation in the singular appropriated by some adjunct to Judea, as our nation, Lu. 7. 5. our place, and nation, Joh. 11. 48. the nation of the Jewes, Act. 10. 22. this nation, Act. 24. 2, 10. thy nation, Joh. 18. 35. and my nation, Act. 24. 17. 26. 4. 28. 19. but without any such adjunct, τὸ ἔθνος the nation, Lu. 23. 14. and Jo. 11. 50, 51, 52. and even in the Plural, the word nations used in the Prophets for Palestine; so Psal. 2. 1. the גוים, or nations, and people, that oppose Christ, are, I conceive, the Jewes in their consultation against him, and so 'tis interpreted and applyed peculiarly to them, Act. 4. 25, 27. where they are called ἔθνη, καὶ λαοὶ the nations and people, and more distinctly, v. 28. (divided from Herod and Pontius Pilate) the nations and people of Israel. And so when of Jeremy 'tis said, that he was ordained a Prophet unto the nations, Jer. 1. 5. the Jewes sure are at least one of those nations. So c. 4. 16. mention to the nations, that is, to the Jewes. For by that which followes in the next words, publish against Jerusalem, it appears to be a Prophecy against that people, so c. 25. 11. these nations, that is, the Jewes, shall serve the King of Babylon seventy years, the precise time of the Jewish captivity. So when Mat. 12. 15. 'tis said that Christ withdrew from Capernaum (and Mar. 3. 7. 'tis specified, that it was to the sea of Galilee) upon that is applyed to him by S. Matthew that of Is. 42. 1. that he shall declare judgement to the Gentiles, or nations, and in him shall the ἔθνη nations trust, that is, the Jewes in Galilee and the adjacent cities of Tyre and Sidon, &c. which came out and were healed of him, Mar. 3. 8. when the Pharisees consulted to destroy him, Mat. 12. 14. So Lam. 1. 1. when of Jerusalem 'tis said, that she was great among the nations, that signifies that city to have been the Metropolis of Judea, as is farther expres'd by the next words, and Princesse among the Provinces. And so, I suppose, is to be affirmed of the chiefe or first fruits of the nations, Am. 6. 1. and some others the like; Thus Lu. 21. 25. ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς συνοχὴ ἐθνῶν, a distresse of the nations on, or in, the land of Palestine, see Note on that place. That this is the meaning of nation here, will appear both by the completion of this Prophecy (not by warres in other parts of the world, for that was so ordinary a thing, that 'twas incompetent to be given for a signe or denotation of a particular time, but in the great commotions and slaughters (see Rev. 6. 4. Note a.) that were in Palestine, as also by the addition of famines &c. κατὰ τόπους, from place to place, which belongs to that famine mentioned Act. 11. 28. (and in Eusebius Eccl. Hist. l. 3. c. 5. out of Josephus de Bell. Jud. l. 5. in the dayes of Claudius Cæsar, which (agreeably to this prediction of Christ) was there also foretold by Agabus, and when 'tis there said that it shall be ἐφ' ὅλην τὴν οἰκουμένην, on the whole world, that must be understood (as οἰκουμένη world signifies Lu. 21. 26. and Rom. 10. 18.) the whole land of Judea, according to the manner of the Septuagint, who oft render the land (when it signifies the land of Judea) by οἰκουμένη the world. So Is. 10. 23. where for ἐν τῇ οἰκουμένῃ in the world, the Apostle Ro. 9. 28. reads ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς upon the land, so Isai. 13. 5. καταφθεῖραι πᾶσαν τὴν οἰκουμένην, to destroy the whole world, where according to the Context we read to destroy the whole land, and so again v. 9. θεῖναι τὴν οἰκουμένην ἔρημον, to lay (not the world, but) the land desolate: so c. 24. 1. See Note on Lu. 2. a. And in this sense of οἰκουμένη world, the prediction here exactly agrees with Josephus's relation of the times, who saith, μέγαν λιμὸν κατὰ τὴν Ἰουδαίαν γενέσθαι, that there was a great famine through Judea. And accordingly 'tis said in the Act. c. 11. 29. that they of Antioch sent relefe into Judea, which argues the famine to have been confined to Judea, and not extended to Antioch, see 1 Cor. 16. 1. and 2 Cor. 9. 1. And thus most probably must πάντα ἔθνη be interpreted in this chapter, v. 9. all the nations, that is, of Palestine, all the Jewes in all parts, for the Jewes were they which so hated and persecuted them (and the Gentiles comparatively did not but as they were stirred up by them) and the Apostles are not yet supposed to goe out of Palestine, but to be on their taske of preaching through the cities of Israel, till the time of Christs coming to destroy that people, Mat. 10. 23. see note on that chap. h. And accordingly 'tis possible that the 14. verse of this chapter of the preaching of the Gospel ἐν ὅλῃ τῇ οἰκουμένῃ, in the whole world, and εἰς μαρτύριον for a testimony πᾶσι τοῖς ἔθνεσι (which is there the immediate forerunner of this end, or coming of Christ to destroy the Jewes) may be so understood, as will be most agreeable to c. 10. 23. of the Apostles preaching through all the parts of that region, that is, so as οἰκουμένη and ἔθνη shall not signifie the world, or nations in the greatest latitude, but all Palestine, and the severall nations and cities in it, as we know, Gens signifies among the Latines in a very limited sense, no more then a family or kindred, and so here it may signifie all the tribes of the Jewes. But in that 14. v. it may be otherwise interpreted very fitly, that just before the coming of that vengeance on the Jewes, the Gospel shall be preached through all the world, which indeed was the naturall consequent of their having preach'd over all the regions of the Jewes successively. See more of this word ἔθνη in Note on c. 28. b. and on Rev. 11. g.

V. 15. Abomination] That the βδέλυγμα ἐρημώσεως ἑστὸς ἐν τόπῳ ἁγίῳ abomination of desolation standing in the holy place, is the Roman army besieging Jerusalem, may appear 1 by the parallel place Lu. 21. 20. where before that admonition of, then let those that are in Judea fly to the mountains, &c. (which here followes immediately, and so demonstrates it to be this very matter) these words are set, when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh. 2dly, by the agreeablenesse of the words to this sense, and consonance of them to that other expression in S. Luke. For the βδέλυγμα ἐρημώσεως doth (by an Hebraisme, imitated by the Writers of the New Testament) signifie an abominable, heathen, profane, wasting company of souldiers, or the like: so in the place of Daniel (here referred to) 'tis clear c. 9. 27. with the abominable armies he shall make it desolate, the word abominable being ordinarily applyed to the then polluted and idolatrous heathen world, of which the Romans were a principall part, whose armies were to work this desolation on Jerusalem; Agreeable to which it is what Artemidorus hath said in his Oneirocritickes l. 2. c. 20. that γῦπες vultures or Eagles (the very creatures to which in this place the Roman armies are compared v. 28.) signifie in his art ἐχθροὺς ἐναγεῖς καὶ μιαρούς, wicked abominable enemies, the very paraphrase of βδέλυγμα here, This army, by which the desolation is wrought, is therefore expres'd by this. And the standing of it in the holy place, is the situation of it about Jerusalem, for so ἐν

f. Βδέλυγμα ἐρημώσεως

signifies on or among, or close to that place, to wit, the bounds of that City, which is so oft called the holy city, or place. And so these words, though at first sight somewhat distant from it, signifie no more then that heathen army about Jerusalem. And when in S. Marke 'Οπου ὐ δεῖ. 'tis said to stand ὅπου ὐ δεῖ where it ought not, that referres to the separation made by God of the Jews from all other the heathen people, which were not to come to that place, which is therefore called holy, in respect of that separation from all others. That by this Prophecy in Daniel is meant the παντελὴς φθορὰ καὶ ἀφανισμὸς ἔχατον, the total destruction and final ruine of the Temple, see Euseb. Eccl. Hist. l. 3. c. 5.

g. φεύγειν εἰς τὰ ὄρη. V. 16. Fly to, &c.] How exactly the several passages of story in Josephus agree with these predictions, will easily be discerned by comparing them, particularly that which belongs to this place of their flying to the mountains, &c. For when Gallus besieged Jerusalem, and without any visible cause, on a suddain raised the siege, what an act of Gods speciall providence was this, thus to order it, that the believers or Christian Jewes being warned by this siege, and let loose (set at liberty again) might flie to the mountains, that is, get out of Judæa to some other place? Which that they did accordingly appears by this, that when Titus came some months after and besieged the city, there was not one Christian remaining in it. This same thing is observed by Eusebius Eccl. Hist. l. 3. c. 5. and that the people of the Church in Hierusalem (that is, the Christians there) κατὰ τινα χρησμὸν, &c. according to an oracle delivered by revelation to some honest men among them, commanding them to goe over Jordan to a city called Pella, did all remove thither, and left Jerusalem without any Christians in it at their destruction; And this he referres to read at large in Josephus, where the story is set down. The same is again related by Epiphanius, de Pond. & Mens. ch. 15. (see 1 Pet. 1. 5.)

h. δώμα. V. 17. House top] The buildings of Judæa had generally δώματα plain roofs fit to walk upon, and converse in, as cloysters paved with stones to that purpose. See Gerson tract. in Magnif. p. 975. whence, saith he, is that of the Psalmist, I am become as a sparrow on the house top, walking solitary there. Of this whole passage, that it belongs to the Jewes in Jerusalem, see Cæsarius, Dial. 4. ἀπορισ. 194. Τῶν μέλλοντας Ἰουδαίοις φυγὴν προφαίνων, &c. Christ foretelling the future flight of the Jews, commands them to fly to the mountains, for after Vespasian Titus arising, utterly demolished and depopulated Jerusalem, destroyed the Jewes, the men with the sword, the children by dashing them against the ground, cutting up them that were with child, with all kind of death and destruction blotting out those fighters against God. And it happened that the city was taken on the sabbath day, all the people staying at home to observe the sabbatick rest, and this in the winter also, and so none could avoid or escape the destruction. He that was on the house top indevoured to hide himself, and so preferring life before possessions, would not take any thing out of his house. He that was in the field, or country about, did not onely not return to his house, but fled as far as he could, seeing the burning and taking of the city.

i. Σὰρξ πᾶσα. V. 22. No flesh] By no flesh here is meant none of all the Jews, so saith S. Chrysostome, πᾶσα σὰρξ, that is, Ἰουδαικὴ, all flesh, that is, all the Jewes, That is, that the sharpnesse of this warre from the Romans without, and of the Zelots within, that killed all that were averse from warre, was such, that if it had continued, εἰ ὅτι πλέον ἐπεράτησε καὶ ἐπόλεως, if it had gone on farther against the city, all the Jews every where πρόῤῥιζον ἀπώλοιντο, had been destroyed utterly.

k. Ἐκλεκτοὶ. Ib. Elects] The ἐκλεκτοὶ here are those few, whom God had determined to preserve out of that common destruction, the beleivers among the Jewes. These are the remnant, so oft mentioned by the Prophets, that they should escape, λεῖμμα κατ' ἐκλογὴν the remnant according to the election of grace, Rom. 11. 5. So v. 7. ἡ ἐκλογὴ. this remnant of the Jews have obtained that, which the rest, being obdurate, and senseless, obtained not. Of this word see Note on 1 Pet. 2. c.

l. Ταμεῖα. V. 26. Secret chambers] Ταμεῖα saith Hesychius, signifie ἀπόκρυφα οἰκήματα, secret dwellings, possibly such where men could gather company together undiscernibly, and so raise armies secretly, as others (which designed it openly) in the wilderness, v. 5. But 'tis more likely that ταμεῖον being taken ordinarily for a magazine or storehouse, the word may so signifie here, places for ammunition, and armes, some frontier towns in the borders of that kingdome, where men and armes lay in store for defence. Agreeable to this is that of Hesychius in the word ταμίαι, that they are οἱ τὰ δημοσίων χρημάτων καὶ πάντων τῶν κοινῶν πρασσόντες, καὶ φύλακες ταμιοῦχοι, the Keepers, and Governours, and Storers of the publick moneys, and all else that was common. And accordingly the ἀπόκρυφα οἰκήματα before, may most probably denote such houses of store, under ground cellars, &c.

m. Αἰετὸς. V. 28. Eagles] The explication of this verse will depend upon two things, 1. that the Eagle was the ensigne of the Roman Militia, So saith Dion, 'twas μικρὸς, καὶ ἐν ἀμφιδέτοις χρυσοῦς, a little shrine with a golden eagle in it. And though the Persians also had the Eagle in their army, yet that was but one in the whole army, as the βασίλειον or Kings-colours, whereas the Romans had two in every legion. So in the ancient Writer of the Sibylline Oracles, prophecying of the destruction of the Roman powers, Καὶ τὸ διπτερόρων λεγεώνων δόξα πεσεῖται, the glory of the Eagle-bearing legions shall fall. To this I shall only adde that of Pliny, Nat. Hist. l. 10. Aquilam Romanis legionibus Caius Marius in secundo consulatu suo proprie dicavit; Erat & antea prima cum quatuor aliis, Lupi, Minotauri, Equi, Aprique singulos ordines anteibant; Paucis ante annis sola Aquila portari cœpta est, reliqua in castris relinquebantur, Marius in totum ea abdicavit, C. Marius in his second Consulship appointed the Eagle for the Romane Legions: Before that, it had been the first, but had four more to bear it company, the Wolfe, the Minotaure, the Horse, and the Boare. Then these four grew out of use, and only the Eagle was brought out. But Marius wholly abdicated the rest. From whence 'tis clear, 1. that all the five Ensignes in use among them, were by Marius reduced to that one of the Eagle, and so remained at the time wherein Christ spake, and indeed was not changed till Constantine brought the Crosse into their armies. 2. That that, as all the other four, was an Embleme of rapacity or devouring, which (together with their sagacity to find out, and skill to presage slaughters) was the other thing, on which I purposed to ground the explication of this verse. To which purpose (besides that observation of Jobs concerning the Eagle, she seeketh the prey (ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτῆς σκοπιάζουσι, Ιλ. ω'.) and her eyes behold afarre off, her young ones also suck up blood, and where the slain are, there is she, chap. 39. 29, 30. setting down the whole matter very exactly and punctually) I shall add some few others out of Authors. The Eagle that is there spoken of in Job, is by the Translatours rendred γὺψ, of which kind of Vultures 'tis * Lucians expression, and that proverbial, speaking of one that had a great sagacity, Σοφώτερον τοῦ γύπος ἕωλα καὶ νεκροὺς διαλάθοι, a carkasse will sooner be concealed from those Vultures. So saith * Phornutus, This vulture is a kind of bird consecrated to Mars, διὰ τὸ πλεοναζειν τὰ ὄρνεα ταῦτα, ὅπου ἂν ᾖ πλώματα πολλὰ, because such birds abound, where there are many carkasses, and they are, saith he, ἀριπρόδρομα, proclaimers of fights, and doe tell their companions of them by a kind of

* ἐγχελ.

* Θωυ. ἐν τῇ Θεολ. φύσ.

cry of theirs. So Philes in his Iambicks περὶ ζώων.

Πλὴν μαντικὴν ἔχουσιν αἱ γύπες φύσιν,
Καὶ γὰρ συμπάσχουσι τοῖς μαχομένοις,
Τῶν σωμάτων ἐλπίδι τῶν πεσουμένων,
Μεμήνασι δὲ τῇ βορᾷ τῶν λειφάνων,

These birds have a divining nature in them, By which it is that they travail as companions of armies, in hope and expectation of the carkasses that fall there, and are most ravenous in the devouring of what is there left behind. So Artemidorus in his ὀνειροκρ. l. 2. c. 20. having set down this very species of Eagles, these γύπες, to denote those detestable enemies (which even now were mentioned, as an explication of the βδέλυγμα v. 15.) οἰκοῦντας ἐν ἐν πόλει, which dwelt not in the city, he gives this reason of it, νεκροῖς γὰρ χαίρουσι σώμασι γύπες, they rejoyce in dead bodies. So * again mentioning the sig- * l. 4. 58.
nification of the severall creatures, and among them the ἁρπάζοντα φανερῶς, the open raveners (among which he reckons these) they signifie, saith he, λῃστὰς καὶ ἅρπαγας, theeves and plunderers. From whence it is that our countryman Mr. Fuller in his Miscellanies hath conjectured λάβαξον or λάβωξον (τὸ παρὰ Ρωμαίοις καλούμενον λάβωξον σημεῖον πολεμικὸν τῶν ἄλλων τιμιώτερον, in Sozomen, Eccl. hist. l. 1. c. 4.) to come from λαβρὸς, which signifies devouring or rapacious. All which being put together shews the reasonableness of this interpretation of the verse, and how perfectly agreeable it is to the Context in this place, where the last thing that was said, was, that the judgement should fall upon the Jews almost at once, in the most distant places of that nation, and that is here proved by this resemblance, that as the Vultures find out the carkasse, whersoever it is, so shall the Roman armies find out the Jews, and prey, and make slaughter of them. And although in S. Luke chap. 17. 37. it be brought in by way of answer of Christ to the disciples question [Where Lord?] that is, Where shall this visible vengeance be wrought? yet that is very agreeable with this sense also, and will hardly be capable of any other. For there should not be any determinate place for the working of this vengeance but whersoever the Jewes are, there shall they be found out and destroyed by these Roman Eagles. By all which it will become reasonable enough to apply to this finall destruction of the Jewes by the Roman Eagles, that prophecy so long before delivered by Moses, Deut. 28. 49. The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from farre, from the end of the earth, as the Eagle flyeth (the words as swift are put in by our English, and are not in the Originall) a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand. So Hos. 8. 1. as an eagle against the house of the Lord, &c.

V. 29. Powers of heaven] Δύναμις ordinarily signifieth an host or, army, and δυνάμεις οὐρανῶν, answerable to צבאות השמים the powers or the hosts, of heaven, are the Sun, Moon, and Stars, that move and shine there. These are used in Propheticall, that is, figurative writings, to denote the then Church of God, the people of the Jewes, (according as the Temple is called the Campe, and all things in it are expres'd by that Metaphor of a militia) so when Dan. 8. 10. it is said of the little horne, It waxed great even against the host of heaven, and it cast down some of the host, and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them. There is little doubt but the Jewes are meant there by the host of heaven, for otherwise it would not be very intelligible of the stars of heaven, how they should be cast down to the ground, and stamped on, save only in this sense, as Jerusalem is said elsewhere, Lu. 21. 24. to be troden under foot by the Gentiles. According to this notion of this phrase, all the rest of this verse will be interpretable, that the Sun, that is, the Temple, the Moon, that is, Jerusalem the chief city, and the Starres, that is, the rest of the lesser Cities, and so altogether making up the host of heaven, that is, the whole nation and Church of the Jewes, shall be brought down from the flourishing condition, which they had formerly enjoyed, many cities, Jerusalem particularly, utterly destroyed, and the whole people shaken, endangered shrewdly, brought neer (only a remnant escaping according to the prophecies) to utter desolation (see Isa. 13. 10. and 34 4. Ezek. 32. 7. Joel 2. 31. and Rev. 6. 13, 14. note g. and Rev. 8. note g.) And so agreeable to this exactly will that voice of Jesus the son of Ananias be, Euseb. l. 3. c. ή. Αἰ αἰ τῇ πόλει καὶ τῷ λαῷ καὶ τῷ ναῷ, Wo wo to the city, and to the people, and to the Temple.

n. Δυνάμεις οὐρανῶν.

V. 30. Signe] This σημεῖον may possibly signifie some speciall prodigy, that should fall about that time attending on that destruction. Josephus mentions many, de Bell. Jud. l. 7. c. 12. especially that of a Comet in forme of a fiery sword, which for a year together hung over the City. But this was but a presage of the fatall destruction of that city, and so, though it were a visible signe of the sonne of mans coming, that is, of the vengeance which he meant to work upon this people, and that ἐν οὐρανῷ, being literally in heaven, yet it cannot belong to this place, which sets down the consequents, which ensued μετὰ, after the distresse, and straights, of those days, that is, after the siege of Jerusalem v. 29. And therefore this signe of the son of man may rather signifie here such a manifestation of Christs presence in this punishment of the Jewes, as should convince them, that it was for their crucifying of him, that it was come upon them, and accordingly mourn (all the tribes of Israel, as it followes) &c.

o. Σημεῖον υἱοῦ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου.

V. 51. Cut him asunder] Twas the law for Debtors that were accused and cast in Judgment for falsenesse, or not performance of promise, and obligation to Creditours, διχοτομεῖδς to be cut asunder, saith Tertull. Apol. p. 22. and so proportionably Stewards, that have not performed their Masters trusts: And these are ranked with hypocrites, that is, knaves, false, deceitfull persons, expressed by S. Luke (in setting this down) c. 12. 46. by ἄπιστοι unbeleivers or unfaithfull. And the meaning of the verse seems to be this, that they which in stead of serving Christ in his Church, in bringing in beleivers to him, shall (upon the persecuting of Christians by the Jewes, and the deferring this vengeance of Christ upon that people) begin to joyne with the Gnosticks, 1. in their complying with the Jewes, and persecuting the Orthodox Christians, 2dly in indulging to the licentious practises observable among them, these Apostate false servants of Christ shall pay dearly for it shall be destroyed by Christ, like false stewards, be joyn'd with the Gnosticks (those hypocrites or unbeleivers, abominable reproaches, and stains of the Christian profession) as in their practises, so in their destruction.

CHAP. XXV.

Paraphrase.

1. At that point of time last spoken of, the heavy visitation on this people, The condition of Christians will be fitly resembled by this parable of ten virgins, which took hand-lamps, (then in use, and fit to carry abroad for night-lights) and went out to fetch a bridegroom, and the bride, and wait on them to the feast. See Note on c. 9. c. and Rev. 18. 23.

1. THEN shall the kingdome of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom.]

2. And

2. And five of them were [wiſe, and five were fooliſh.] 2. prudent, provident, and the other five improvident.

3. They that were fooliſh [took their lamps, and took no oyle with them.] 3. took with them their lamps, and oyle in them, ſufficient to maintain them at preſent, but had no proviſion, or ſtore for the future.

4. But the wiſe took [oyle in their veſſels, with their lamps.] 4. a proviſion of oyle in veſſels which they had for that purpoſe, to repleniſh their lamps, when the oyle which was in, was ſpent.

5. While the bridegroom tarried, they all ſlumbred and ſlept.

6. And at midnight there was [a cry] made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh, goe ye out to meet him. 6. a great noiſe, hurry, and proclamation,

7. Thed all thoſe virgins [aroſe, and trimmed their lamps.] 7. went to trim their lamps, and fit them for their march, but when they went to doe ſo, ſome of them had oyle, and others had ſpent it all.

8. And the fooliſh ſaid unto the wiſe, Give us of your oyle, [for our lamps are gone out.] 8. for ours is all ſpent, and ſo our lamps are gone out.

9. But the wiſe anſwered, ſaying, Not ſo, leſt there be not enough for us and you, [but goe ye rather to them that ſell, and buy for your ſelves. 9. And the wiſe anſwered them, that they had reaſon to fear, that if they ſhould be ſo kind, they ſhould deprive themſelves, and not have ſufficient for both.

10. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came, and they that were ready went in with him to the [marriage,] and the dore was ſhut. 10. place of nuptial entertainment,

11. Afterwards came alſo the other virgins, ſaying, Lord, Lord, open to us.

12. But he anſwered and ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you [I know you not.] 12. here is now no entertainment for ſuch as you, who have by your ſloth and improvidence betrayed your ſelves.

13. Watch therefore, for ye know not neither the day nor the hour, * wherein the ſon of man cometh. * Theſe words to the end of the verſe are omitted both in the Gr. and Lat. and in the Kings MS. See ch. 24. 36.

14. For the kingdome of heaven is as a man travelling into a farre country, who called [his own ſervants] and delivered unto them his goods. 14. his domeſtick officers in their ſeverall places, ſtewards, husbandmen, &c.

15. And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one, to every man [according to his ſeveral ability,] and ſtraightway took his journey. 15. what was competent for that imployment, place, office, exigence of buſineſſe intruſted to him under his Lord, and agreeable to his capacity.

16. Then he that had received the five talents, went and traded with the ſame, and * made them other five talents. * or gained other, &c. for the Gr. and Lat. and the Kings MS. reads διέθεντο.

17. And likewiſe he that had received two, he alſo gained other two.

18. But he that had received one, went and digged in the earth, and hid his Lords money.

19. After a long time the Lord of thoſe ſervants cometh, and reckoneth with them.

20. And ſo he, that had received five talents, came and brought other five talents, ſaying, Lord, thou deliveredſt unto me five talents, behold I have gained beſides them five talents more.

21. His Lord ſaid unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful ſervant, thou haſt been faithful [over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.] 21. in trafficking with theſe lower meaner things, ſee Luke 19. 17. and 16. 10.) thou ſhalt be highly dignified, Luke 19. 17. as one of them that thy Lord hath joy of, or that he delighteth to honour, Heſt. 6. 6.

22. He alſo that had received two talents, came, and ſaid, Lord, thou deliveredſt unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beſides them.

23. His Lord ſaid unto him, Well done, good and faithful ſervant, thou haſt been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.

24. Then he which had received the one talent, came and ſaid, Lord, [I knew thee that thou art an auſtere man, reaping where thou haſt not ſown, and gathering where thou haſt not ſtrewed: 24,25. I had had experience of thy ſeverity in requiring increaſe from thy ſervants far above that which thou intruſteſt to them, and I for fear of loſing my talent,

25. And I was afraid, and went, and hid thy talent in the ground, Lo, there thou haſt that is thine.] and provoking thy diſpleaſure thereby, thought it beſt to dig a hole in the earth, and there lay it up ſafe, and accordingly there is thy talent ſafe again, though without any increaſe of it.

26. His Lord anſwered and ſaid unto him, Thou wicked and ſlothful ſervant, [thou kneweſt that I reap where I ſowed not, and gather where I have not ſtrewed.] 26. Thy words acknowledge thee to have had actually in thy thoughts, that I that was one that dealt in merchandiſe, and making of gain, would expect profit of that which I committed to thee.

27. Thou oughteſt therefore to have put my money to the [exchangers, and then at my coming I ſhould have received mine own with uſury.] 27. money-merchants (ſee Note on c. 21. b.) and then at my coming home I ſhould have had mine own again, and ſome increaſe with it.

28. Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents.

29. For unto every one that hath ſhall be given, and * he ſhall have abundance, but from him that hath not ſhall be taken away even that which he hath.] 29. For to him that uſeth and improveth Gods grace, ſhall by degrees be given ſo much, that at the laſt he ſhall have all abundance, but from him that doth not ſo, that which had formerly been given him, ſhall be withdrawn. * given in all abundance, περισσευθήσεται.

30. And caſt ye the unprofitable ſervant into outer darkneſſe, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.] 30. As for him that made no uſe of (nor brought in any increaſe to his Maſter from) the talents entruſted to him, the idle diſobedient ſervant, (ſee Note on Luke 17. a.) let him be caſt out into the dungeon, never to come out again, that embleme of eternall hell, the place of all pains, and horror.

31. All this parable from ver. 13. to this place being put as in a parentheſis, Chriſt here proceeds.

31. When the ſon of man ſhall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then ſhall he ſit upon the throne of his glory.]

But when Chriſt comes to judgement, whether to execute vengeance on this people, or (of which that is an embleme) to doom every man for his future eternal being, then ſhall his appearance be glorious and full of majeſty.

32. And all the people of the Jews, beleivers and unbeleivers, and all other men that have ever lived in this world,

32. And before him ſhall be gathered all nations] and he ſhall ſeparate them one from another, as a ſhepheard divideth his ſheep from the goats.

every one having had ſome talent to trade with, entruſted to him by God, ſhall by the Angels ſent out to that purpoſe (ch. 13. 41.) be gathered before him.

33. And all the meek obedient followers, and diſciples of his he ſhall place in a ſtate of greateſt dignity and preferment, but all the unfaithfull diſobedient ſhall be caſt into judgement.

33. And he ſhall ſet the ſheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.]

34. And then as a King, or Judge ſhall he diſtribute the joyes and dignities of the kingdome of heaven,

34. Then ſhall the king ſay unto them on his right hand, Come yee bleſſed of my father, inherit the kingdome prepared for you from the foundation of the world.]

which before all eternity were deſigned to be the reward of all faithful ſervants of God.

35. According to every mans works of piety or charity performed in this life, expreſſed here by feeding and entertaining of Chriſt.

releiving, aſſiſting, providing for him, and viſiting him in reſtraint.

37. Then ſhall thoſe humble faithful diſciples of his, as not being conſcious of any ſuch acts of ſervice or charity ſhewed to Chriſt,

37. Then ſhall the righteous] anſwer him, ſaying, Lord, when ſaw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? when ſaw we thee thirſty, and gave thee drink?

38. When ſaw we thee a ſtranger, and took thee in? or naked, and cloathed thee?

39. Or when ſaw we thee ſick, or in priſon, and came unto thee?

40. to the meaneſt man alive, partaker of that humane nature, which I have honoured by my aſſuming it,

40. And the king ſhall anſwer and ſay unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, In as much as ye have done it [to one of the leaſt of theſe my brethren,] ye have done it unto me.

41. You are an accurſed number of men, adjudged to eternal hell, which was not originally created, or deſigned for you, or any of mankind, but for the Prince of Devils, and thoſe Angels that ſinn'd and fell with him, but now by your wilful defaults is become your portion alſo.

41. Then ſhall he ſay alſo unto them on the left hand, [Depart from me ye curſed into everlaſting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.]

42. And this is a moſt juſt reward for your doings, your impiety and uncharitableneſſe of all ſorts.

42. For I was an hungred, and ye gave me no meat,] I was thirſty, and ye gave me no drink,

For when I was ready to famiſh for hunger, you would ſpare nothing out of your plenty to relieve me.

43. I was a ſtranger, and ye took me not in, naked, and ye cloathed me not, ſick and in priſon, and ye viſited me not.

44. And then they as if not conſcious of this impiety, ſhall begin to expoſtulate that they never dealt thus unkindly with Chriſt, never ſaw him in any diſtreſſe without releiving him.

44. Then ſhall they alſo anſwer him, ſaying, Lord, when ſaw we thee an hungred or thirſty, or a ſtranger, or naked, or ſick, or in priſon, and did not miniſter unto thee?]

45. Then ſhall he anſwer them, ſaying, Verily I ſay unto you, in as much as ye did it not to one of the leaſt of theſe, ye did it not to me.

46. And theſe ſhall goe away into everlaſting puniſhment; but the righteous into life eternal.

CHAP. XXVI.

1. AND it came to paſſe when Jeſus had finiſhed all theſe ſayings, he ſaid unto his diſciples,

2. Which being a time of executions among the Jewes,

2. Ye know that after two days is the [a] Paſſover, [and the ſon of man is † betrayed to be crucified.]

† deliverd up to ſuffer.

Chriſt ſhall at that time certainly be delivered up by the Jews to the Romans, to dye after their manner, that is, to be faſtned on a croſſe, &c.

3. the whole Sanhedrim.

3. Then aſſembled together [the chief Prieſts, and the Scribes, and the Elders of the people] unto the palace of the high prieſt, who was called Caiphas,

4. apprehend Jeſus ſecretly, without any great noyſe, Lu. 22. 6.

4. And conſulted that they might [take Jeſus by ſubtilty, and kill him.]

and cauſe him to be ſentenced and put to death by the Romans.

5. And although it were cuſtomary to put malefactors to death at ſolemne times, Acts 12. 4.

5. But they ſaid, Not on the feaſt day, leſt there be an uproare among the people.]

that their puniſhment might be more exemplary, yet they had an exception to that, becauſe of the great opinion the people had of him, which might cauſe a ſedition among them, if 'twere done at any ſuch time of reſort, and therefore they deliberated, and had ſome thoughts of putting it off, till after the feaſt. (But it ſeems this counſel was laid aſide upon Judas's proffer, v. 15. only a fit ſeaſon was ſought by Judas, v. 16. perhaps only that of apprehending him in the night.

6. One Simon known, and diſtinguiſh'd from others by this, that he had once had a leproſie, and 'tis probable, had been cured of it by Chriſt, and ſo was a diſciple of his, a Chriſtian.

6. Now when Jeſus was in Bethany, in the houſe of [Simon the leper,]

7. There

* cruiſe. † lay,

7. There came unto him [a woman] having an [b] * alabaſter box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he † ſat [c] at meat.

7. See Note on Lu. 7. b. b. c.

8. But when his diſciples ſaw it, [they had indignation, ſaying, To what purpoſe is this waſt?]

8. one of them, by name Judas Iſcariot, (ſee c. 27. Note h. and c. 21. 2.) murmured that ſo much ointment ſhould be caſt away upon Chriſt.

9. For this ointment might have been ſold for much, and given to the poor.]

9. when it might have been ſold at a good rate, and that have relieved many poor people,

10. When Jeſus underſtood it, he ſaid unto them, [Why trouble ye the woman? for ſhe hath wrought a good work upon me.]

10. Why doe you murmure or complain of this womans action, ſeeing that which ſhe hath now done is an act of charity, or piety very ſeaſonable at this time?

11. For ye have the poor alwayes with you, but me ye have not alwayes.]

11. For you are ſure to have continuall opportunities of giving almes to the poor, but ye are not likely to have ſo towards me.

12. For in that ſhe hath powred this ointment on my body, ſhe did it for my buriall.]

12. And indeed this very act, which ſhe now hath done, is more then an act of charity, 'tis a preſage very ſignificant, that I ſhall dye, and be buried very ſhortly, for which this ointment is proper, by way of embalming.

13. Verily I ſay unto you, whereſoever [this Goſpel] ſhall be preached in the whole world, there ſhall alſo this that this woman hath done be told for a memorial of her.

13. the ſtory of Chriſts death and burial.

14. Then one of the twelve called Judas Iſcariot,] went unto the chiefe prieſts,

14. Then Judas he that had made that mutiny, and conſequently that had had this anſwer given him, in foul diſpleaſure upon this occaſion, (and knowing that they of the Sanhedrin were deſirous to apprehend him privately)

15. And ſaid unto them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? and they covenanted with him for thirty * [d pieces] of ſilver.

* or ſtaters, for the Gr. & Lat. MS. reads στατῆρας.

15. Shekels d.

16. And from that time he ſought [opportunity to † betray him.]

† deliver him up, παραδῶ.

16. ſuch an opportunity as they meant, v. 4. that is, an opportunity of taking him, when the people ſhould not be aware, to deliver him up unto them.

17. Now the firſt day of the feaſt of unleavened bread the diſciples came to Jeſus ſaying, where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the paſſover?]

17. Now on the thurſday evening, wherein the thirteenth day of the moneth Niſan was concluded, (ſee Note on Mar. 14. c.) and the fourteenth day began, the day of preparation to the feaſt of unleavened bread, whereon they put all leaven out of their houſes, that is, on the evening which began the Paſchal day.

18. And he ſaid, Goe into the city to ſuch a man, and ſay unto him, The maſter ſaith, [My time is at hand, I will keep the paſſover at thy houſe] with my diſciples.

18. The ſeaſon of my death is ſo neer at hand being likely to befall me before this Paſchal day at even, (wherein they were wont to eat the lambe) that I cannot ſolemnly obſerve the paſchal ſacrifice, I will therefore eat the unleavened bread and bitter hearbs, the memorial of the afflictions and deliverance in Egypt, at thy houſe this night. See Note on Mar. 14. c.

19. And the diſciples did as Jeſus had appointed them, and made ready the Paſſover.

20. Now [when the even was come] he ſate down with the twelve.

20. after ſun-ſet ſome time, ſee Mar. 14. c.

21. And as they did eat, he ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, that one of you ſhall betray me.

22. And they were exceeding ſorrowful, and began every one of them to ſay unto him, Lord, is it I?

23. And he anſwered and ſaid, [He that dippeth his hand with me in the diſh the ſame ſhall betray me.]

23. It is one of the twelve (ſee Mar. 14. 18, 20.) one of thoſe very perſons, that lye at meat, and eat in the ſame meſſe with me, Lu. 22. 21. according to that prophecy Pſal. 41. 9. nay he gave John a particular token, Joh. 13. 26. to ſignifie that 'twas Judas.

24. The ſonne of man goeth, as it is written of him; but woe unto that man by whom the ſonne of man is betrayed; It had been good for that man, if he had not been born.]

24. It is prophecied of the Meſſias, that he ſhall be put to death, and accordingly it ſhall be, but woe be unto that man that ſhall be the inſtrument of it, It were more for the advantage of that man, never to have been, then by this ſin to incurre that woe.

25. Then Judas anſwered and ſaid, Maſter, Is it I? He ſaid unto him, [Thou haſt ſaid.]

25. It is as thou haſt ſaid.

26. And as they were eating, Jeſus took bread, and bleſſed it, and brake it, and gave it to the diſciples, and ſaid, Take, eat, [e] this is my body.]

26. And whilſt Judas was there, before any of them were riſen from the table, Jeſus in imitation of the Jewes cuſtome after ſupper (of diſtributing bread and wine about the table as an argument of charity, and a meanes of preſerving brotherly love among them) inſtituted the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, as a conteſſeration of charity among all Chriſtians, and to that end taking bread, and giving thankes, he brake, and gave it to the diſciples to take and eat, telling them that this taking and eating was now inſtituted by him as an holy rite, and ceremony of annuntiating and commemorating his death, and a means of making all worthy receivers partakers of the benefits of his death. e.

27. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, ſaying, Drink ye all of this.

28. For this is my blood of the New Teſtament, which is ſhed for many, for the remiſſion of ſinnes.

28. For this is a federall rite between me and you, a Sacrament of that blood of mine, which I ſhall ſhortly powre out upon the croſſe; and by which I will ſeale to you a new covenant, a promiſe of pardoning the ſinnes of all that ſhall return from their ſinnes, and obey me. (See Note on the Title of theſe books.)

29. But I ſay unto you [I will [f] not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day, when I drink it new with you in my fathers kingdome.]

29. It is not long, that I ſhall abide with you, nor ſhall I again thus celebrate this, or any the like feaſt among you, till we meet in heaven, and partake together of thoſe joyes, which are wont to be expreſt by new wine figuratively. f.

30. And

30. And when they had sung an hymne, they went out into the mount of Olives.

31. Between ſupper and going abroad, Jeſus ſpake theſe words to his diſciples, Yee ſhall all fall off from me before morning, and fulfill the prediction Zac. 13. 7. which foretold that Chriſt ſhould be apprehended, and thereupon the Apoſtles, the chief of his little flock of beleivers (for ſheep he had others which were not of this flock) ſee Mar 14. 27, 28. ſhould flye away and forſake him.

31. Then ſaith Jeſus unto them, All yee ſhall be offended becauſe of me this night, For it is written, I will ſmite the ſhepheard, and the ſheep of the flock ſhall be ſcattered abroad.]

32. But though I am taken from you, and yee flye from and forſake me, yet I will not leave you ſo, I ſhall riſe from the dead, and when I am riſen, I will go into Galilee, where you may meet me.

32. But after I am riſen, I will goe before you into Galilee.]

33. Though all men fall off, and forſake thee, yet, whatſoever befalls me, I will not.

33. Peter anſwered and ſaid unto him, [Though all men ſhall be offended becauſe of thee, yet I will never be offended.]

34. before the ſpace of time be ended which men eſpecially call the cock-crowing, that is,

34. Jeſus ſaid unto him, Verily I ſay unto thee, that this night [before the cock crow, thou ſhalt deny me thrice.]
before the morning watch come, thou ſhalt three times renounce being my diſciple.

35. Peter ſaid unto him, Though I ſhould dye with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewiſe alſo ſaid all the diſciples.

36. Then cometh Jeſus with them unto a place called Gethſemane, and ſaith unto the diſciples, Sit yee here, while I goe, and pray yonder.

37. Peter and James and John, whom he moſt admitted to his ſecrets (ſee c. 17. 1.)

37. And he took with him [Peter and the two ſonnes of Zebedee, and began to be ſorrowfull and very heavy.] and was in a very great agony of ſorrow.

38. Then ſaith he unto them, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowfull, even unto death; tarry yee here, and watch with me.

39. And he lay proſtrate (which in time of great anxiety is the uſuall poſture, and a

39. And he went a little farther [and fell on his face and prayed, ſaying, O my Father, if it be poſſible, let this cup paſſe from me, nevertheleſſe not as I will, but as thou wilt.] token of the greateſt humiliation, and renouncing of himſelfe) and ſaid, My father, If all that I came about, may be atcheived without it, let this bitter potion, that is now approaching, this contumelious, and bloody death be removed from me. But if not, I more deſire the doing what thou haſt deſigned for me, then the eſcaping any kind of ſuffering.

40. And he cometh unto the diſciples, and findeth them aſleep, and ſaith unto Peter, * What could yee not watch with me one hour?

41. that ye be not encompaſt & overcome with temptations,

41. Watch and pray [that ye enter not into temptation; the ſpirit indeed is willing, but the fleſh is weak.]
For however your mind and reſolution be good, and at the time your profeſſions zealous (ſee Mar. 14. 38.) yet it appears by this preſent ſleeping of yours, that the fleſh is weak, and if ye be not carefull, ye may fall from your ſtouteſt reſolutions.

* Were you ſo unable to watch with mee one ſmall while?

42. Seeing I diſcern this to be thy purpoſe, and wiſe diſpoſall, that I ſhould ſuffer this bloody death, and that the effects thereof are ſo advantagious to the good of the world, I am perfectly content and willing to endure it.

42. He went away again the ſecond time, and prayed, ſaying, O my father, [if this cup may not paſſe away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.]

43. overcome with heavineſſe of ſleep.

43. And he came and found them aſleep again, for their eyes were [heavy.]

44. So he left them without ſaying much to them, as before, their eyes being ſo oppreſt with ſleep, that they were not in fit caſe to conſider, or anſwer what was ſaid to them.

44. And he left them,] and went away again, and prayed the third time, ſaying the ſame words.

45. You may now enjoy your drowſy humor, I ſhall make no farther uſe of your vigilance, the minute is now come upon you, that your Maſter ſhall be apprehended, and taken from you, and carried before the tribunall of the Gentiles, the Romans, (by whoſe judicature he ſhall be put to death, ſee Lu. 22. note f.)

45. Then cometh he to his diſciples, and ſaith unto them, [Sleep on now and take your reſt, behold the hour is at hand, and the ſon of man is betrayed into the hands of ſinners.]

46. delivers me up into their hands.

46. Riſe, let us be going, behold he is at hand that [doth betray me.]

47. a commander, and band of ſouldiers (See Lu. 22. f.) provided with armes for the apprehending him, ſent upon this ſervice by the Sanhedrim of the Jewes.

47. And while he yet ſpake, Lo, Judas one of the twelve came, and with him [a great multitude with ſwords and ſtaves from the chief prieſts and elders of the people.]

48. Apprehend him.

48. Now he that betrayed him gave them a ſigne, ſaying, Whomſoever I ſhall kiſſe, that ſame is he, hold him faſt.]

49. And forthwith he came to Jeſus, and ſaid, Haile Maſter, and kiſſed him.

50. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Friend, wherefore art thou come? Then came they and layd hands on Jeſus, and took him.

51. the chief Officer, the fore-man of them that had the warrant to apprehend him.

51. And behold, one of them which were with Jeſus, ſtretched out his hand, and drew his ſword, and ſtroke [a ſervant of the high prieſts] and ſmote off his eare.

52. Doe nothing contrary to law, for all that draw and uſe the ſword without authority

52. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, [Put up again thy ſword into his place; for all they that take the ſword, ſhall periſh with the ſword.] from thoſe which bear the ſword, ſhall fall themſelves by it, incurre the puniſhment of death.

53. If I would forcibly be relieved, I could have a full army, or hoſt of Angels, conſiſting, as among the Romans, of twelve legions.

53. Thinkeſt thou, that I cannot now pray to my father, and he ſhall preſently give me more then twelve legions of Angels?]

54. But

54. But how then ſhall the ſcriptures be fulfilled, that thus it muſt be?] 54. But the Prophets have foretold I muſt ſuffer, and their predictions muſt be accompliſhed.

* At that time, or inſtant, ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ὥρᾳ

55. * In that ſame houre Jeſus ſaid to the multitudes, Are yee come out [as againſt a theif with ſwords and ſtaves for to take me?] I ſat daily with you teaching in the temple, and yee laid no hold on me. 55. as againſt a malefactor, with a band of Souldiers to apprehend me? ſee 47.

56. But all this was done that the ſcriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. [Then all the diſciples forſook him and fled.] 56. The next thing done was, that upon Chriſts ſpeaking to have the diſciples let goe, they were permitted, Joh. 18. 8. and all of them having that liberty, departed from him, and that with ſo much terror, that one in the company, being a young perſon, ran away perfectly naked, Mar. 14. 5.

57. And they that had laid hold on Jeſus, led him away to Caiaphas the high prieſt, where [the ſcribes and the elders were] aſſembled. 57. the Sanhedrim was.

58. But Peter followed him afarreoff unto the high prieſts palace, and went in, [and ſat with the ſervants to ſee the end.] 58. into the outer room, where the ſervants uſed to remain, to ſee what the iſſue of the matter would be.

59. Now the chief prieſts and elders and all the councell ſought [h] falſe witneſſe againſt Jeſus to put him to death,] 59. Now the Sanhedrin uſed all diligence to get any falſe teſtimony againſt him, that were capital.

60. But found none; yea though many falſe witneſſes came, yet found they none.] At the laſt came two falſe witneſſes, 60. But none that came, was of any force, becauſe they were all but indeed ſingle witneſſes.

61. And ſaid,] This fellow ſaid, I am able to deſtroy the temple of God, and to build it in three daies. 61. And miſreported a ſpeech of his related truly, Joh. 2. 19. ſaying,

62. And the high prieſt aroſe, and ſaid unto him, [Anſwereſt thou nothing? What is it, that theſe witneſſe againſt thee?] 62. Haſt thou no anſwer to make to theſe accuſations thus teſtified by two witneſſes?

63. But Jeſus held his peace. And the high prieſt [anſwered and ſaid unto him, I [i] adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us, whether thou be the Chriſt, the ſon of God.] 63. ſpake again unto him ſaying, I lay an oath upon thee, and by that which is moſt ſacred require thee to ſpeak, and ſay freely, whether thou art the Meſſias, whom we know to be the Son of God. i.

64. Jeſus ſaith unto him, [Thou haſt ſaid: Nevertheleſſe I ſay unto you, hereafter ſhall you ſee the ſon of man ſitting on the right hand of [k] power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.] 64. As low as I am, I am he. But I tell you, within a little while you ſhall diſcern this ſon of man, whom you are now ready to crucifie as man, aſſumed into his throne, inſtalled in his heavenly kingdome. An effect of which ſhall be moſt viſible in his acting vengeance upon you, and that as diſcernibly, as if he were coming with his Angels, who uſe to appear in bright clouds. k.

65. Then the high prieſt [l] rent his cloathes, ſaying, He hath ſpoken blaſphemy; What farther need have we of witneſſes? Behold now yee have heard his blaſphemy. l.

66. What think ye? They anſwered and ſaid, he is guilty of death.] 66. What is the vote, or ſentence of the Councell concerning him? They anſwered, He is guilty of a fault, which is puniſhable with death.

67. Then did they ſpit in his face, and buffetted him, and others [m] * ſmote him with the palms of their hands.] 67. Then did ſome of the Officers of their court ſpit in his face, and buffet him, and blindfold him, Lu. 22. 64. and then gave him blowes on the face, m.

* cudgell'd him.

68. Saying, Prophecy unto us, thou Chriſt, who is he that ſmote thee?] 68. Saying, Thou who by thy title of Chriſt, pretendeſt to unction propheticall, make uſe of it for thy ſelf, and by it tell us, who 'tis that ſmites thee.

69. Now Peter ſat without in the palace, and a damoſel came unto him ſaying; Thou alſo [waſt with] Jeſus of Galilee. 69. wert a prime companion or diſciple of (ſee Mar. 3. 14.)

70. But he denyed before them all, ſaying, [I know not what thou ſayeſt.] 70. I am not guilty of what thou layeſt to my charge.

71. And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid ſaw him, and ſaid unto them that were there, This fellow was alſo with Jeſus of Nazareth.

72. And again he denied with an oath, [I doe not know the man.] 72. ſaying, I have no relation to him.

73. And after a while came unto him they that ſtood by, and ſaid to Peter, Surely thou alſo art one of them, for [thy ſpeech bewrayeth thee.] 73. Thy dialect or tone, peculiar to thoſe of Galilee from the reſt of the Jewes, betrayeth thee to be a Galilæan and Follower of his.

74. Then began he [to curſe] and to ſwear, ſaying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew. 74. to lay imprecations on himſelf.

75. And Peter remembred the words of Jeſus, which ſaid unto him, [Before the cock crow] thou ſhalt deny me thrice. And he went out and wept bitterly. 75. before the ſecond cock-crowing, which is in the middle watch, between midnight and morning, See note on Mar. 13. 35.

Annotations on Chap. XXVI.

a. Πάσχα γίνεται μετὰ δύο ἡμέρας ἀνθ' ὧν παραδίδοται.

V. 2. Paſſeover] The connexion of the parts of this verſe depends on a tradition of the Jewes, that when any were condemned to death, they were kept from execution till the ſolemn feaſt, of which there were three in the year חג המצות the feaſt of vleavened bread, or the Paſſover, חג השבעות, the feaſt of weeks, and חג הסכות the feaſt of tabernacles, in which all the Jewes came up to Jeruſalem to ſacrifice, and then did they put the malefactors, eſpecially rebels, and impoſtors, to death, in the preſence and ſight of all the people, that all Iſrael might ſee and fear, Deut. 17. 13. hence it is that this feaſt of Paſſover was waited for by the Jewes, and deſigned for this death of Chriſt, as of a rebel, and impoſtor both, one which they would fancy to be an enemy to Cæſar, and a falſe prophet, and ſeducer of the people.

b. Ἀλάβαστρον

V. 7. Alabaſter-box] What the Greek ἀλάβαστρον here ſignifies may be obſerved, and judged by the ſignification of it among the Grammarians, and in other Authors. In Heſychius, and Phavorinus, 'tis λήκυθος μύρου, μύρου, a vessel of oyle, but that not any kind of vessel, as λήκυθος signifies, but, as 'tis added, μὴ ἔχον λαβάς, λίθινον, &c. a vessel that hath no handles (which is the clear derivation of the word from α Privative, and λαβὴ a handle, saith Methodius) and made of stone ordinarily, yet not that it takes its name from the stone which we ordinarily call alabaster, but that that stone ordinarily call'd * ὄνυξ, is from this surnamed (as it were) ἀλαβαστρίτης λίθος, the stone of which the ἀλάβαστρα are ordinarily made. Hence hath Suidas defined it in plain words, ἄγγος μύρου μὴ ἔχον λαβὰς a vessel of ointment that hath no handles, which is directly opposed to amphoris, so call'd because it hath two eares or handles, which makes it clear not to be a box, as 'tis oft rendred, but βίκιον urceolus as Epiphanius calls it, and that either of stone or any other materialls. The particular form of it may be best discern'd by Pliny, Nat. Hist. l. 9. c. 35. where speaking de Elenchis, he saith, they are fastigiatâ longitudine, alabastrorum figurâ, in pleniorem orbem desinentes, long and slender toward the top, and more round, and full toward the bottome, which is the figure of the alabasters. In which respect it is, that the same Author resolves unguentum optimè servari in alabastris, that any ointment is best kept in vessels of this fashion. The Greek Translators of the Old Testament have rendred צלחת אלבסטרון 2 Kin. 21. 13. which I suppose alludes to this figure of it (not as of a dish, but a narrow mouth'd vessel) by that which followes of turning it upside down, which is the only way of emptying or getting all the water or oyl out of such kind of vessels. The same word little altered צלוחית, is 2 Kin. 2. 20, rendred ὑδρία a water-pot or vessel for those like purposes. So much for the fashion of this Vessel. For the matter of it 'tis certain, that it was commonly made of Marble, and so by Nonnus 'tis paraphrased μάρμαρον ἄγγος, a marble vessel, and particularly of the onyx, which is acknowledged by Gorrhæus and others to be marmoris species, a sort of Marble, (which by the way, will resist the opinion that we ordinarily have in this matter of the womans breaking the vessel, the marble being not so fit for that purpose, and the manner of pouring out ointment being intimated by * Pollux in his λύε τὰ ἀλάβαστρα. διάτρησον σύ open them, take out the stopple or corke out of the mouth of them, and then use a little stick, or spathula or rudicula, putting it in, and tasting the oyle, πεῖν καταχέειν, before it be poured out) but 'twas also made of Silver and Glasse, or other Metalls; so Theocritus makes mention χρυσίων ἀλαβάστρων of golden alabasters, (and so the style in Athenæus imports πιεσενεγκόντων τῶν παίδων ἐν ἀλαβάστροις καὶ ἄλλοις χρυσοῖς σκεύεσι μύρα, the boyes carrying about unguents in alabasters and other golden vessels) Epiphanius of βύκιον ὑέλινον (and the Etymologist calls it σκεῦός τι ἐξ ὑέλου a vessel made of glasse, not (as a † learned man hath been willing to guesse) after a lesse proper, but usuall manner, as when we say a boxe of gold (the name boxe or buxus referring properly to that peculiar kinde of Wood so called) but properly and naturally, the word alabaster referring only to the forme, not to the matter of it. Then for the use of these Vessels 'tis clear, 'twas for Oyle, Myrrh, Nard, or what else is usuall for anointing any. Thus * Plutarch reciting the anointng vessels, names ὄλπια καὶ κρωσσοὺς, καὶ πυξίδας, καὶ ἀλαβάστρους, and so Julius Pollux l. 6. πάσης ἀγγεῖα τοῦ μύρων λήκυθος μυρεψικὰ, καὶ ἀλάβαστρον. So Athenæus out of Alexis, οὐδ' ἠλείφετ' ἐξ ἀλαβάστρου πρᾶγμά τι γινόμενον ἀεὶ χρονικόν. He was not anointed out of an alabaster, as the custome hath been for a long time. So in Herodotus, Cambyses sent to the King of Æthiopia an alabaster of ointment; So in Martial, so in the ‖ Digests we read Vasa unguentaria & siqua similia dici possunt ut labacioristus, where no question there is a failing in the Copy, which must be repaired not by changing it into lavatioriscus, or rica, as some would have it, but into alabastrum or alabastericus, which is not very farre from the word alabacoristus, which Lazarus Bayfius saith he hath met with in some Books.

Ib. At meat] The use of this myrrh or ointment (at this time) which the woman poured upon him, was that which was usuall at feasts; That thus it was usuall in the entertainments of the Jewes, it is clear by many places, Psal. 23. 5. where, after the preparing a table, followes, thou anointest my head with oyle &c. and so when wine is said to make glad the heart of man, and oyle to make him a cheerfull countenance, and bread to strengthen, there are the three parts of a festivall entertainment, bread and wine taken in for the gladding, or refreshing, and strengthening the heart, and the oyl for the outside (exteriora oleo irrigentur, said Democritus) for the countenance, or the head rather, on which 'twas powred here, as a perfume, which was the complement of festivities. Hence it is, that amongst the stewards expenses Lu. 16. he reckons ἑκατὸν βάτους ἐλαίου an hundred measures of oyle, provided especially for such festivall uses. So 1 Chron. 12. 40. the oyle is mentioned among the festivall provision, so Philo in Leg. ad Caium p. 797. D. ἀλείμματα and ῥοφὴ anointing, and food are a description ὀθνειοτέρας διαίτης of a more delicate life; And so wine and oyle, Prov. 21. 17. as signes of one, that had lived luxuriously, and enjoyingly: The same, I conceive, to be the notion of the oyle of gladnesse, Psal. 45. 7. as referring to the oyle used in feasts (which are called gladnesse, or joy, as 1 Chron. 12. 20. there was joy in Israel) and so consequently it must be understood, Heb. 1. 9. that Christ was better dealt with by God, more royally treated, and more abundance of grace powred on him, then any other. By which also may appear what is the χρίσμα ἀπὸ τοῦ ἁγίου, unction from the holy one, 1 Joh. 2. 20. a most liberall effusion or communication of grace from the Spirit which had descended upon the Apostles. So among the Heathens * Jul. Pollux, ὅπου δὲ καὶ μύρου ἐν τοῖς συμποσίοις, ὀθνειότερον, so Athen. l. 11. out of the ancients,

Αὐλὰρ ἐπεὶ δόρπου μελίφρονος ἐξ ἔσαν ἔνλο, when they had satisfied their hunger, and thirst, Ὡραῖος παῖς ἦλθε φέρων μύρον,
A comely youth brings myrrh or ointment. So † Plutarch, ἐλαίου τε καὶ μύρου κρωσσοὺς νεανίσκοι κομίζοντες ἐλευθέροι, the young men, not the servants, but others that were free, brought vessels of oyle and myrrh. So the Scholiast on Aristophanes, οἱ καλοῦντες ἐπὶ δεῖπνον, στέφανους καὶ μύρα, &c. παρετίθεσαν, they that invite to a meale bring them forth crownes and ointments. Thus in Hesychius, on the word ἐξαλείψεσιν, It is, saith he, σκεῦος ἀργυροῦν φιάλη ἔμπλησιον, ἐξ οὗ ἐν τοῖς συμποσίοις ἤλειφον τὸ μύρον (not as 'tis corruptly read ἤλειφον τὸ μύρον) a silver vessel neer in forme to a vial (the very ἀλάβαστρον in this verse) out of which men were in feasts anointed with ointment and myrrh. Whence is that lusory or scoffing Epigram of Martial, l. 3.

Unguentum fateor bonum dedisti
Convivis, here, sed nihil scidisti,
Res salsa est bene olere & esurire,
Qui non cœnat & ungitur, Fabulle,
Hic verò mihi mortuus videtur.

And that this was poured particularly on the Head, and that for a perfume, 'tis discernible not only by Lu. 7. 46. but by the ancient Heathens also. So in Athenæus out of Archestratus.

Ἀεὶ δὲ στεφάνοισι κόμας περὶ δαῖτα πυκάζε,

'Twere infinite to multiply teſtimonies of this nature, as that in Eccleſiaſtes, Let thy garments be white, and thy head want no ointment: Yet more particulars of this action will be conſiderable, when we come to view this ſtory, as 'tis ſet down with a little variation in the other Goſpels.

d. Ἀργύρια. V. 15. Peices of ſilver] That by ἀργύρια here are meant ſhekels may be concluded not only by the reading the Gr. and Lat. M. S. which hath Στατῆρας in ſtead of it, (Staters and ſhekels being all one, ſee note on c. 17 e.) but alſo becauſe 2 Sam. 18. 12. the ten pieces of ſilver there are by the Targum rendred ten ſhekels of ſilver, or five of the double ſhekels, that is twenty five ſhillings. In proportion to which the thirty ἀργύρια here will be three pounds and fifteen ſhillings, and ſo 'tis Maimonides's obſervation (More Nev. par. 3. c. 40.) from Ex. 21. 32. that thirty ſhekels, or peices, of ſilver was the price of ſervants (A free-man being, ſaith he, generally valued at ſixty ſhekels) And ſo when in Ariſteas the price of the redemption of every captive Jew in Ptolemys time is ſaid to be 20 drachmæ, It appears by Joſephus that that is a miſtake for 120 which make thirty Shekels, every Shekel or στατὴρ being τετράδραχμον four drachmes, ſee c. 16. 27. and Note on c. 17. e. So true is that of S. Paul that Chriſt took on him the form of a ſervant, to which alſo the death of the Croſſe peculiarly belong'd among the Romans.

e. Σῶμά μου V. 26. This is my body] What is the full importance of this phraſe, τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ Σῶμά μου, this is my body, is a difficulty, which may perhaps be cleared by degrees, by premiſing theſe few obſervations. First, from the Jewiſh phraſes, and cuſtomes, that the Lamb dreſt in the Paſchal-ſupper, and ſet upon the table, as a ſacrificall feaſt, or feſtivall ſacrifice, was wont to be called גופו של פסח the body of the Paſſover, or גופו של כבש הפסח the body of the Paſcal Lamb. So in the Talmud, De Paſch. c. ult. R. M. Maim: in Hilchos Camets umatzah, c. 8. §. 1, and §. 7. So in Mekilta fol. 4. col. 1. To which phraſe or form of ſpeech among them Chriſt may probably allude, when he ſaith, this is my body, making himſelf, that was now to be ſlain for them, anſwerable to that Paſchal Lamb (as by Paul he is called our Paſſover, that is ſacrificed for us) and ſo mentioning this crucifixion of his, in that form, by which the preſentation of the Lamb on the table in the Jewiſh feaſt, whereof they were to eat by Gods appointment, was wont to be expreſs'd. Τοῦτό ἐστι This for the words Σῶμά μου my body. Secondly, for the τοῦτό ἐστι, this is, or the whole phraſe, τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ Σῶμά μου, this is my body, This ſeems to be by Chriſt ſubſtituted in ſtead of the Paſchal form הא לחמא דעניא This is the bread of affliction, which our fathers eat in Ægypt, or, This is the unleavend bread, &c. or, This is the Paſſeover, Where it is evident that that is not the identicall bread, which their fathers in Ægypt eat, but only the tranſcript of it, the commemoration of that Ægyptian ſtate of ſlavery, from which they had been delivered, and the celebration of that annual feaſt, which in Ægypt was firſt inſtituted. As when in ordinary ſpeech, on Chriſtmas, or Eaſter day, we ſay, This day Chriſt was borne, or aroſe, which example S. Auguſtine accommodates to this matter in his Epiſtles. Thirdly it muſt here be obſerved, that the word τοῦτο this (τοῦτό ἐστι τὸ Σῶμά μου this is my body) is not the relative to ἄρτῳ bread, but of the Neuter (whereas that is of the Maſculine) gender, and conſequently it is not here ſaid that this bread is my body (the body of Chriſt) but either indefinitely this, or λάβετε, φάγετε, take, eat, this is my body, this taking and eating is, or denotes my body, which is more fully experſs'd Lu. 22. 19. This is my body which is given for you, doe this in remembrance, or commemoration, of me, and ſo 1 Cor. 11. 23. Take, eat, this (not τοῦτο this bread, but τοῦτο this taking and eating) is my body, which is broken for you, doe this in remembrance of me. This is a little farther improved by S. Paul. 1 Cor. 10. 15, 16. The cup of bleſſing, which we bleſſe, that is, our bleſſing the cup in the Sacrament, and ἄρτον ὃν κλῶμεν, the bread which we break, that is, the breaking of the bread which is delivered to us to eat οὐχὶ κοινωνία τοῦ Σώματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐστι; is it not the communication of the body of Chriſt? where what was before ſaid in Chriſts words to be his body, is more manifeſtly ſaid to be the communication of his body, that is, the beſtowing it upon us, (as the communication of the Altar among the Jewes or Gentiles, is their eating of the ſacrifice, their Gods entertaining them at that ſacrificall feaſt) which, I ſuppoſe, concludes this Sacrament to be, according to the nature of Sacraments, an holy rite, a ſolemne act or inſtrument, inſtituted by God to communicate to, or conferre on us the body of Chriſt, that is, the efficacy and benefits of Chriſts death. Hence it is that this whole action is by Damaſcen called μετάληψις participation (which is all one with communication, only as one referreth to the giver, ſo the other to the receiver) δι' ἧς τῷ Ἰησοῦ μεταλαμβάνομεν, ſaith he, for thereby we partake of the divinity of Jeſus, the divine graces that flow from him, and S. Chryſoſtome, δέχεται σῶμα Χριστοῦ the body of Chriſt is received, that is, as verily as God there treates us at, and feeds us from his table, ſo verily doth he communicate to, and beſtow on the worthy receiver the body of the crucified Saviour. And if it ſhall be ſaid that this is no ſtrange thing, for that God doth ſo on every act of ſincere Repentance, of Faith, of Prayer, or other part of his divine worſhip worthily performed, and not only in this Sacrament; I anſwer, that the leſſe ſtrange it is, the more ought it to be beleived, on the affirmation of the Apoſtle, and the more certain it is, that he that being a true penitent ſinner had the benefits of the death of Chriſt beſtowed on him by God upon his firſt repentance, hath them now annunciated by God, and ſo ſolemnly and ſacramentally conferred and ſealed to him, on this prepared, and worthy approach to Gods table, and this act of worſhip duely performed, which Chriſt at his parting from the world, thought fit ſo ſolemnly to inſtitute to be for ever obſerved in the Church. But if it be conceived that in this Sacrament theſe benefits are alwaies firſt conferred, or ſo as they were not really conferred before, this is a miſtake, for he that had been baptized, is acknowledg'd (if he have not interpoſed the obſtacle) to have received them before, and he that hath frequently been a worthy receiver of this ſacrament of the Lords ſupper, and not fallen off by any willfull ſinne, cannot every time firſt or newly receive them, nay he that is a true penitent, and hath performed frequent acts of other parts of Gods worſhip, as alſo of mortification of luſts and paſſions, and of all manner of Good works, though not of this, hath, no doubt, that acceptance of thoſe other acts, and theſe benefits of Juſtification &c. beſtowed on him by God, and not all Gods favour (and theſe benefits) ſuſpended, till the firſt receiving of this Sacrament. Only in caſe of precedent lapſes, which have for ſome time caſt a man out of Gods favour, when upon ſincere repentance and reformation he is reſtored to Gods favour again, then God in this Sacrament doth ſeale anew, that is, ſolemnly exhibit theſe benefits to him. And otherwiſe, when no ſuch lapſes have intervened, and ſo there is no need of this new ſealing or exhibiting, God doth yet confirme confirme and farther ratifie, what hath been before sufficiently done. By this explication of the meaning of the words may also be concluded what are the parts of this Sacrament, viz. (the same that of every fœderall rite) two literally, and two spiritually, in each, one on Gods part, the other on ours. On Gods part literally, his entertaining and feeding us at his table, 1. *Cor.*10.21. (but that, as in sacrifices of old, first furnished by the piety of the guests) and on our part literally, our partaking of that table, that Christian feast, 1 Cor. 10. 17. Then spiritually (or veiled under this literall, visible outside of a feast) 1. Gods solemn reaching out to us, as by a deed or instrument, what was by promise due to every penitent sinner, every worthy receiver, the broken body of Christ, that is, the benefits of his Death, which is the summe of that fervent forme of prayer used by the Priest and every receiver singly, at the minute of receiving the elements in that Sacrament, and that prayer part of the solemnity of the forme of the court, by which it is bestowed. Secondly, On our part, annunciating 1. Cor. 11. 26. that sacrifice of Christs death, which (was then immediately to come, but) is now long since performed upon the Crosse. Thus the bitter herbs are זכר a memoriall, or commemoration, of the bitter Ægyptian servitude, Exod. 12. 14. the red wine לזכר for a memoriall that Pharaoh wash'd himself in the blood of the children of Israel. So that precept Exod. 13. 8. is given by Moses, that in the Passover, they should annunciate, or tell of their deliverance, and thence they call the Paschal lesson הגדה, καλαγγελίαν, annunciation. See Elias Levita in Thisbi. And this annunciation, or shewing forth, is not only in respect of our selves in beleeving, and toward men in professing our faith in the crucified Saviour, and that with a kind of glorying, or rejoycing, but also toward God, pleading before him that sacrifice of his owne sonne, and through that humbly, and with affiance requiring the benefits thereof, grace and pardon to be bestowed on us, and at the time making use of that, which is one speciall benefit of his passion, that free accesse to the Father through him, interceding for all men, over all the world, especially for Kings, &c. 1 Tim. 2. 2. which from that constitution of S. Paul to Timothy, Metropolitan of all Asia, was received into the most ancient Liturgies, and made a solemn part of the ἐντεύξεις and εὐχαεισίαι intercessions and Eucharisticall devotions of the Church. Both these parts of the Sacrament are intimated by those two phrases mention'd in the two first observations. For the presentation of the Lamb on the table, and so of the Christian sacrifice, the crucified Saviour in the Christian feast, to be eaten of by us, notes Gods annunciating and attesting to us the benefits of Christs death, and so the commemorative Paschal forme notes our commemorating and annunciating that death of his to our selves, and others. And both these are contained in those different phrases of S. Paul, both used in this matter in severall places, the former, that the broken bread is the κοινωνία communication of his body, and so the latter 1 Cor. 11. 26. As oft as you eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye annunciate the death of the Lord, what God there bestowes on you, you annunciate to him, to your selves, and to others. From both which arises the aggravation of guilt of the unworthy receiver, that he is ἔνοχος σώματος guilty of the body and blood of Christ, v. 27. that is, that Christ that died for him, and is there communicated to him sacramentally, that is, visibly exhibited in that Sacrament, and by him supposed to be annunciated to God &c. is by his being unqualified, unprepared for the receiving the benefits of his death, utterly lost, frustrated in respect of him (as the impenitent is said to tread under foot the blood of Christ, the blood is as uneffectuall to him, as what is by him thrown on the earth, and trampled on, is like to be to him) and yet farther he is said ἐαυτῷ κρίμα ἐσθίειν καὶ πίνειν to eat and drink damnation to himself, v. 29. that is, where the worthy receiver hath the benefits of Christs death communicated to him in this feast, and so eats and drinks salvation to himself, this unworthy intruder doth on the contrary bring, by that means, punishments, and, if he repent not by the admonition of those punishments, damnation on himself. As for the elements in this Sacrament, Bread, and Wine, though by the προσφορὰ offering them to God, then by the Priests consecration, benediction, calling upon God over them, they become Gods, and so are called κυριακὸν δεῖπνον the Lords supper in opposition to ἴδιον δεῖπνον, every man's own supper, 1 Cor. 11. 21. and so are changed from common Bread and Wine, yet not so as to depart from their own nature, or to be really converted into the Body and Blood of Christ, save only in a spirituall sense, and sacramentally, acording to that of Theodoret, Dial. 2. Τὰ σύμβολα τοῦ σώματος τοῦ δεσποτικοῦ καὶ τοῦ αἵματος, μετὰ τὴν ἁγίασιν μεταβάλλεται. καὶ ἕτερα γίνεται ἀλλ' ὐκ οἰκείας ἐξίσταται φύσεως, μένει γὰρ ἔτι καὶ τὴν προτέραν οὐσίας, καὶ τὴν χήμαλιν, καὶ τὴν ὄψιν, καὶ ὁρατά ἐστι καὶ ἁπτά, οἷα καὶ πρότερον ἦν. The symbols of our Lords body and blood, after the prayer of consecration, are changed and become other, but depart not from their own nature, for they remain in their former essence, and figure, and shape, and are visible, and sensible, such as before they were. And accordingly these so many words are found used by diverse of the Ancients, μεταποίησις, μεταβολὴ, μεταῤῥύθμισις, μετάληψις, μετασοιχείωσις, each denoting change, but never μετουσίωσις, transubstantiation, or the like.

V. 29. Not drink] That Christ did after his resurrection, before his ascension, eat and drink with his Disciples seems to be affirmed by many places of Scripture, and those such as are to that sense interpreted by the Ancients. Thus Act. 10. 41. S. Peter saith, the Disciples eate and drinke with him after his resurrection, and that is used by him, as a proof of the reality and certainty of his resurrection, which it would not have been if they only had eate and dranke, and he had not. Thus when Act. 1. 4. it is said that Christ was συναλιζόμενος, &c. though perhaps that may be thought to signifie no more then his having conversed with them, and not necessarily to inferre his eating or drinking, yet both the Origination of the word ἅλς salt, and the Syriack and Arabick interpretation, make it signifie all one, as if it had been συνεσθίειν, and S. Chrysostome gives his judgement of it, that by it is meant that which the Apostles Act. 10. 41. use as an argument of Christs resurrection, their eating and drinking with him. And so Theophylact, and Oecumenius, συναλιζόμενος, τυτέστι κοινωνῶν ἁλῶν καὶ κοινωνῶν τραπέζης, it signifies partaking of the table with them, and on Acts 10. 41. the Scholion is, ἐντεῦθεν δὲ ἀνάστασιν τοῦ χριστοῦ διαβεβαιοῦ ἐκ τοῦ συμφαγεῖν αὐτῷ μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν, he confirmes the resurrection of Christ by their eating with him after it, εἰ δὲ καὶ ἀναστὰς ἐποίησέ τι σημεῖον· αὐτὴ γὰρ ἡ ἀνάστασις μέγα σημεῖον ἦν· ταύτης δὲ οὐδὲν σημεῖον ἦν ὡς τὸ φαγεῖν καὶ πεῖν, for after he was risen he did not work any miracle, for the resurrection it self was a great miracle, and of that none so great an evidence as to eat and drink. So Leontius de Sect. act. 1. p. 530. C. Εἰ γὰρ λέγει φαγεῖν μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν, τοῦτο δὲ οἰκονομίαν ἐποίησεν, ὐκ ὡς τοῦ ὄντι πεινῶν, ἀλλ' ἵνα δείξῃ τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, ὅτι αὐτὸς ἦν ὁ ἀναστὰς ἐκ νεκρῶν, ὃν τρόπον καὶ τοῦ τύπους ἦλων λέγεται δεδειξέναι αὐτοῖς, that he is said to eat after his resurrection, this he did by way of œconomy, not as being really hungry, but that he might shew his disciples, that he was risen from the dead, after the same manner, as he is said to have shewed the disciples the prints of the nailes. And so * Titus Bostrensis, among the arguments Christ used to assure his disciples ples of his resurrection, laying special weight on the ἐπιζητῆσαί τι βρώσιμον, καὶ φαγεῖν, his asking for meat, and eating before them, adding, οὐδὲ γὰρ ὡς δεομένης ἔτι τροφῆς ἡ σαρκὸς αὐτῷ ἔφαγε μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν, he eat after his resurrection, but not that his flesh wanted nourishment. So John 21. 13. 'tis said of Christ, he took bread, and in like manner a fish, and Lu. 24. 30. he lay down at meat with them, and took bread, and not only gave to others, but v. 43. taking a fish, and hony combe, ἐνώπιον αὐτῶν ἔφαγεν, he eat before them all, and though there be not expresse mention there made of his drinking also, yet that affirmation of the Disciples, Acts 10. 41. referring clearly to that part of the story, and extending it self to the συνεπίομεν we drank with him, also, as well as the συνεφάγομεν, we eat with him, will be a proof and testimony of the one as well as the other. To this may be added the testimony of S. Ignatius in his Epistle to the Church of Smyrna, Μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν συνέφαγεν αὐτοῖς καὶ συνέπιεν ὡς σαρκικὸς, καίπερ πνευματικῶς ἑνωθεὶς τῷ πατρὶ, After his resurrection he eat and drank with them, as being in the flesh, although spiritually he were united to the father. This being then on these grounds supposed, there is another possible way of interpreting this place of Christ, that he would drink no more of the fruit of the vine, till he drank it new in the kingdome of his father, viz. that the state of Christ after his resurrection is called the kingdome of his father, and that upon this ground, because at his resurrection Christ the son of God was instated in his Kingly office, and all power (as he saith after that time, Mat. 28. 18.) was given unto him both in heaven and in earth, in which respect it is, that the Gospel is ordinarily called the kingdome of God, and so among the Jewes, saeculum Messiæ, the age of the Messias, and the μέλλων αἰὼν age to come, which certainly commenced at the resurrection of Christ, as at his death the former age of the Law and Prophets was consummate or ended (and that perhaps the meaning of the τετέλεσται Joh. 19. 30. It is finish'd.) To this may those words of S. Chrysostome be applyed, when he saith of Christ, making mention of the kingdome, &c. περὶ ἀναστάσεως εἰσάγων λόγον εἰς μέσον, τὴν ἀνάστασιν ἔτω τὴν ἑαυτοῦ καλέσας, that he proposes a discourse of the resurrection, and calls his own resurrection thus. Yet because 'tis possible, and probable enough, that S. Chrysostome by the phrase περὶ ἀναστάσεως means the state and time of the general resurrection, not only of Christs, but of the Disciples also to whom he speakes, and with them of all others (and then accordingly ἀνάστασις ἑωυτῆ shall not only signifie the act of his rising out of the grave, but also the future state of Christ with them together after the final judgement) and because μεθ' ὑμῶν here added may seem to referre to that sense, and again because drinking it new with them may best be taken in a figurative sense, to expresse those heavenly festivals there vouchsafed to the Saints, received into communion of those joyes with Christ, and because the space between Christs Resurrection and Ascension, is in no other place of the New Testament expres'd by this phrase of the kingdome of Christs father, and lastly because 'tis not here the kingdome of Christ (to which it was pretended that his Resurrection instated him, and yet would not be perfectly true, as that excludes, or is taken abstracted from his Ascension) but the kingdome of his father, which belongs particularly to the time after the general resurrection, 1 Cor. 15. 24, and 28. (for then and not till then is the kingdome again delivered up to the father.) For these reasons, I say, that interpretation being laid aside, there is a second that offers it self, by observing the words or word ἀπ' ἄρτι or ἀπάρτι, and rendring that within a while, as seems to be most agreeable to the use of it, v. 64. of this chapter, and c. 23. 39. and Joh 1. 52. and Rev. 14. 13. as is shewed both by * Euthymius's Scholion, and by the Vulgar Latines amodo in all the places, and so also by the Context in those places; (see Note on c. 23. m.) If this be accepted, then the meaning will be, that after a while, or within a short time he means to part with them, and then, that is, after that short time, he will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, till he meet them again in Heaven, and drink of that new wine, that is, turn this bodily into a spiritual festival, expres'd by lying, as at meat, with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdome of heaven, Luke 14. 15. As for this fruit of the vine, the corporal food, that he will then drink that with them in heaven, can no more be concluded from the, ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ἐκείνης until that day, then that Mary ceased to be a Virgin, or had children after the birth of Christ, from the ἕως ὅ until that, Mat. 1. 25. But the truth is, there is yet a third way of interpreting this verse, which by comparing it with the words in S. Luke seems much the most probable of all, that this γέννημα τῆς ἀμπέλου fruit of the vine signifies the cup in the Passover peculiarly, or the cup of Charity in the postcœnium of the Passover, wherein the Sacrament of Christs blood was founded. For that Christ was now to dye, and neither before, nor after his death and resurrection, to eat any more Passovers with them, or any more to drink this cup of Charity now designed to a Christian use, is sufficiently evident. To this therefore is agreeable what he saith Luke 22. 15. with desire have I desired to eat this passover with you, before I suffer, meaning now to transmute this cup there into that Sacrament of Charity to be observed in the Christian Church for ever after. And therefore it is observable in S. Luke, that the words are directly applyed c. 22. 16. to the Passover, I have desired to eate this passover, for I will no more eate ἐξ αὐτοῦ thereof, or, of that, that is, of the Passover, &c. and by repeating of the words again, of the cup, v. 18. it is all reason that that be rendred of the cup in the passover, or the Sacramental cup of Charity, as the former of the bread in that postcœnium. This appears to me an unquestionable rendring and clearing of all difficulties, viz. that Christ will no more use these typical adumbrations, being himself now really to perform what was adumbrated by them, to passe suddainly from earth to heaven, through a Red sea of blood, and there to complete also the mystery of the Sacrament, by uniting his Disciples one to another, and making them all partakers of his riches there. And that this is fit to be preferred before the second interpretation by the rendring of ἀπάρτι amodo within a while, will be judged by the parallel phrases both in Mark and Luke, where 'tis οὐκέτι οὐ μὴ πίω, I will from henceforth by no meanes drink, &c. Mar. 14 25. and so once in Luke also, c. 22. 16. and the second time, οὐ μὴ πίω I will not drink.

V. 30. Sung an Hymne] It was the custome of the Jewes after supper to say Grace, and then to say or sing זמירות verses or songs, especially over the Paschall lambe, saith Paulus Burgensis, at which time, saith he, they were wont to sing from the 112 to the 119 Psalm, the matter of those Psalmes agreeing perfectly with the Paschal lambe. This may have been the Hymne, or rather Hymnes, or Psalmes, which Christ sang here with his disciples; see P. Fagius in Annot. upon the Chaldee paraphrase, Deut. 8. But 'tis also not improbable, that it was some other Hymne accommodated to this particular institution of Christs, and this sung by them all, in the same manner, as we read of the Christians Hymne, Acts 4. 24.

V. 59. False-witnesse] The profes'd coming in and entertaining of false witnesses against Christ will not seem strange, if it be remembred that among the Jewes in actions against seducers of the people, or false prophets, it was lawful to say any thing whether true or false, no man being permitted to say any thing in defence of them. In the condemning of other men they expected a day and a night, to see if any thing could be produced, which might profit the Prisoner, but not in theſe caſes of falſe prophets, and ſeducers of the people to Idolatry; See P. Fagius in his Notes on the Chald. Paraph. on Deut. 13. 8. and Maimonides in Hilcoth Sanhedr. c. 11. So it is ſaid in the ſtory of Steven, they did ὑπεβάλλον ἄνδρας ſuborne men, and again ἴσης μάρτυρας ψευδεῖς v. 13. they ſubſtituted falſe witneſſes, &c. Beſides, the Sanhedrim were ſo reſolved to take away his life, that they did profeſſedly ſeek falſe witneſſe that ſhould come and ſwear any thing againſt him, v. 59. And what was here done in their proceſſe againſt him, is juſt the Antitype, or farther impletion of that which was firſt performed on Jeremy, c. 26. v. 8, 9.

Ὑπεβάλλον ἀνδρας.

i. Ἐξορκίζω

V. 63. Adjure thee] 'Twas a cuſtome among the Jews to Adjure, which was by ſome form of execration layd upon the perſon, if he did not ſpeak and anſwer truly; This among them obliged the perſon Adjured, as much as if he had taken an oath; and therefore Chriſt, though before he had held his peace, now being adjured, thinks himſelf bound to anſwer him. Many examples we have of this in the Old Teſtament, Judg. 17. 2. the ſilver which thou haſt loſt, and about which thou didſt uſe execration, that is, didſt adjure; So Prov. 29. 24. of the partaker with the thief, that is ſo ſecret, he heareth curſing, and betrayeth it not, that is, will not reveal, though he be adjured, 1 Kings 8. 31 If any man ſin againſt his brother ונשא בו אלה להאלתו and he impoſe on him an imprecation to adjure him, for ſo אלא ſignifies, Pſal. 10. 7. and is rendred by the Chaldee paraphraſe, לוטין maledictions, and ſo האלתו in hiphil is literally and critically to make ſwear, to adjure, and is expreſs'd by S. Pauls ὁρκίζω 1 Theſſ. 5. 27. I bind you under the curſe of God. The law concerning this we have Levit. 5. 1. If a ſoul ſhall offend, and ſhall hear the voice of adjuration or execration, and ſo Numb. 5. 21. where we have not ſimply האלה execration, but שבועת האלה an oath of execration.

k. Δεξιὰ δυνάμεως.

V. 64. Power] The right hand of power is the right hand of God the Father, who is call'd power by the Hebrewes; So Jarchi on Numb. 7. 10. Moſes received it not from their hands, till he was commanded from the mouth of power, and ſo the δεξιὰ μεγαλωσύνης, the right hand of greatneſſe, Heb. 8. 1. So 1 Pet. 4. 14. the ſpirit of glory, is the ſpirit of God.

Δεξιὰ μεγαλωσύνης. Πνεῦμα δόξης.

l. Διέῤῥηξεν ἱμάτια

V. 65. Rent his clothes] That rending of clothes was an expreſſion of indignation, holy zeal, and piety among the Jews, expreſs'd on ſeveral occaſions, eſpecially of grief in humiliation, and of anger on the hearing of any blaſphemous ſpeech, is ordinarily known by all. Only the difficulty here is, how this could be fit or proper for the high Prieſt to doe, which is made unlawfull for the Prieſts, Levit. 10. 6. 21. 10. Thus hath Baronius objected Annal. t. 1. An. Ch. 34. but the anſwer is eaſie, that that prohibition in Levit. extends only to the not tearing of the Sacerdotal garments, that is, of thoſe which are uſed only in the Prieſts office, Exod. 28. 32. and 39. 23. and agreeably the Jewes have a rule, Qui dilaceraverit veſtes Sacerdotales, vapulabit, He that ſhall teare any of the Prieſts garments ſhall be beaten. Beſides this, 'twas indeed alſo unlawful to enter into the court of the Iſraelites in the Temple with rent clothes, but that was unlawful to any other, as well as to a Prieſt, who differ'd not from others in this matter, ſave only in this one circumſtance, that the high Prieſt tore his garment from the bottome to the top, the reſt of the Prieſts and all others from the top to the bottome.

m. Ραπὶς

V. 67. Smote him, &c.] Ῥαπὶς is by Heſychius rendred ῥάβδος, a rod or wand, ῥαπίσαι, ῥάβδῳ πλῆξαι, ἢ ἀλοῆσαι, to ſtrike with a rod or to threſh, to uſe ſuch a ſtick as was ordinary in threſhing out corn, a ſtaffe or cudgel, & again ῥαπίζει, σκώπτει, ἀλοᾷ, παίζει μαστροῖ, τύπτει, to ſtrike, and to mock. But then the old Greek and Latine Lexicon hath it otherwiſe, ῥαπίζω expalmo, alapo, to box, or ſtrike, with the hand. And ſo * S. Auguſtine reads it, Si cùm expalmaretur voluit ſe vindicare? Would he revenge himſelf, when he was box'd? So Nonnus on John,

* To. 7 in Ep. Johan. t. 9. col. 684.

CHAP. XXVII.

1. And having retired for a while the whole Sanhedrim conſiſting of chief Prieſts and Rulers of the people &c. met together in counſel, and there decreed, that he was to be put to death, and accordingly that they would preſſe the Roman Procurator to doe juſtice on him capitally.

1. WHEN the morning was come, all the chief prieſts and elders of the people took counſel againſt Jeſus to put him to death.]

2. And accordingly as one præcondemn'd by them, they bound him and

2. And when they had bound him, they] led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the Governour.

3. caſt by the Jewes Sanhedrim, wiſh'd that he had not done it, and was exceedingly grieved and afflicted in mind,

3. Then Judas that had betrayed him, when he ſaw that he was [condemned, repented himſelf,] and brought again the thirty pieces of ſilver to the chief prieſts and elders,

4. I have committed a foul ſin, in delivering up into your hands a moſt innocent perſon to be put to death.

4. Saying, [I have ſinned, in that I have betrayed the innocent blood.] And they ſaid, What is that to us? See thou to that.

5. And when they would not receive the money, he would not carry it back again, but threw it down as a deteſtable thing, that he was reſolved to rid his hands of, and leaving it in the Temple, departed to his home, and was there ſo affected with ſorrow and horrour and deſpair, that in a fit of melancholy or ſuffocation he ſuddenly fell down upon his face, and burſt, and dyed, Acts 1. 18.

5. And he caſt down the pieces of ſilver in the temple, and * departed, and went and [a] hanged himſelf.]

* departing was ſtrangled, or fell into a fit of ſuffocation.

6. And

6. And the chief Prieſts took the ſilver pieces, and ſaid, It is not lawfull to put them into the treaſury, becauſe it is the [b] price of blood.]

6. And they of the Sanhedrim v. 3. ſeeing the money thus left in the temple, had ſome thoughts of putting it into the treaſury of the Temple, but conſidering that it was money given for the delivering one up to death, they conceived it not holy enough to be put in there. b.

7. And they took counſell, and bought with them the potters field to bury [c] ſtrangers in.]

7. And upon conſultation they decreed and reſolved in counſel, that the money (which they in this hurry did not neglect the diſpoſing of) ſhould be laid out for a pious uſe, to buy a piece of ground, which had been the Potters, for ſtrangers to bury their dead in. c.

8. Wherefore that field was] called, The field of blood, until this day.

8. This field was by the people, for all the hypocriſie of the Sanhedrim

9. (Then was fulfilled that which was ſpoken [by Jeremy the prophet] ſaying, And * they took the thirty pieces of ſilver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Iſrael did value.

* I took Zech.

9. Firſt by Jeremiah in ſome prophecy of his not now remaining, but by tradition famed to be delivered by him, and from thoſe which heard it from Jeremy, received, and after repeated by Zachary, c.11.12. (as many other things of Jeremies are, which makes the Jews ſay that the ſpirit of Jeremy reſted on Zachary) which is the reaſon, that 'tis here cited as Jeremies, and not as Zacharies. (See note on Heb.8. a.)

10. And gave them for the Potters field, as the Lord appointed me.)

11. And Jeſus ſtood before the governour, and the governour asked him, ſaying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Thou ſayeſt.]

11. And Jeſus was brought to the bar and examined, whether he were the Meſſias ſo long expected by that people, and he anſwered, Yes I am.

12. And when he was accuſed of the chiefe prieſts and elders, he anſwered nothing.]

12. And to all the accuſations ſent in againſt him by the Sanhedrim, whether by a written bill of theirs, or by ſome attorney inſtructed by them (themſelves coming not in, Joh. 18.28.) he made no kind of reply.

13. Then ſaith Pilate unto him, [Heareſt thou not how many things they witneſs againſt thee?]

13. Doſt thou not think fit to make apology for thy ſelf, hearing what charges are ſent in by the Sanhedrim, and thoſe ſufficiently teſtified againſt thee?

14. And he anſwered him to never a word, inſomuch that the governour marvelled greatly.]

14. All this would not move Chriſt to make any apology, or plea for himſelf, at which Pilate extremely wondred.

15. Now at that feaſt the governour was [d] wont to releaſe unto the people a priſoner, whom they would.]

15. Now this being the time of the yearly paſſover, a ſolemn feaſt of the Jews, 'twas cuſtomary with the Procurator to gratifie the Jews, by pardoning ſome priſoner of that nation, and that it might be the greater obligation to them, to give them liberty to chooſe whom they pleaſed, by votes of the people. d.

16. And they had then a notable priſoner called Barabbas.

17. Therefore when they were gathered together, Pilate ſaid unto them, Whom will yee that I releaſe unto you? Barabbas or Jeſus [which is called Chriſt?]

17 Which by many is taken to be the Meſſias.

18. For he knew that for envie they had delivered him.

18. That which moved him to make this propoſal, was, becauſe he knew, 'twas matter of malice in ſome great perſons among them, (wherein the multitude of the people were not concerned) that Chriſt was thus perſecuted, and ſo that the multitude might probably be pleaſed to have him releaſed.

19 When he was ſet down on the judgement ſeat, his wife ſent unto him, ſaying, Have thou nothing to do with that juſt man, for I have ſuffered many things this day in a dream becauſe of him.]

19. And this he would have been very glad of, becauſe when he was on the bench, his wife ſent him a meſſage, how ſhe had been much troubled in a dream, and by thoſe terrors incited to ſtop him from giving ſentence of death againſt Jeſus.

20. But the chief prieſts and elders perſwaded the multitude, that they ſhould ask Barabbas and deſtroy Jeſus.]

20. But they of the Sanhedrim prevailed with the multitude, that they ſhould make choice of Barabbas, and by cry and clamour require Jeſus to be put to death.

21. Then the Governour anſwered and ſaid unto them, Whether of the twain [will ye that I releaſe unto you?] they ſaid, Barabbas.

21. do you chooſe to have releaſed, or pardoned, according to that cuſtom, v.15.

22. Pilate ſaid unto them, What ſhall I do then with Jeſus, which is called Chriſt? [They all ſaid unto him,] Let him be crucified.

22. The whole multitude inſtigated by the Sanhedrim, cried out, v. 23.

23. And the Governour ſaid, Why, what evil hath he done? [But they cried out the more, ſaying, Let him be crucified.]

23. But the more Pilate ſeemed to believe him guiltleſs, the more violent were they in their clamours that he ſhould be put to death.

24. When Pilate ſaw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and waſhed his hands before the multitude, ſaying, I am innocent of the blood of this juſt perſon: ſee ye to it.]

24. When Pilate diſcerned this, that his expreſſing his opinion of Chriſts innocence did not at all allay the peoples violence, but that contrariwiſe it made them ready to mutine, put them into a rage and diſtemper, he ſolemnly called for water, and in the preſence of them all waſht his hands, deſirous thereby to free himſelf of all guilt in doing any thing in this matter, and ſaid, I will be guiltleſs, it ſhall (or, let the whole matter) lye upon you.

25. Then anſwered all the people and ſaid, His blood be on us and on our children.]

25. And the whole people cried out, let it be ſo, what ever guilt there is in putting him to death, let it lye upon us and our poſterity.

26. Then releaſed he Barabbas unto them, and [when he had ſcourged Jeſus, he delivered him to be crucified.]

26. though he had intended to inflict no other puniſhment on Chriſt, but that of ſcourging, Lu.23.16,22. (and therefore it appears, Joh.19.1. that Pilate ſcourged him long before he ſentenced him to crucifixion, v.16. nay after the ſcourging he was very induſtrious to have ſaved his life, v.4,8,12. and Mat.23.24. ſcourging is the puniſhment of ſome that were not killed) yet upon this importunity of the people, which he did not think fit to reſiſt, to that of ſcourging he ſuperadded the ſentence of death, crucifixion alſo, which was wont to have ſcourging preparative to it; ſee note on Lu.23. b.

27. The whole band that guarded the Temple, came, and ſurrounded him, as a guard to a malefactor.

29. And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand;] and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, ſaying, Hail King of the Jews.

30,31. And having thus dealt with him as a Mock-King, and derided him long enough that way, they then took the reed out of his hands, and ſpit upon him, and ſmote him on the head, and took off the robe of ſtate, and put his own cloaths on him again, by this ceremony ſignifying the dethroning him from his pretended kingdom, and then carried him to the place of crucifixion.

30. And they ſpit upon him, and took the reed, and ſmote him on the head.

31. And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucifie him.]

Annotations on Chap. XXVII.

a. Ἀπήγξατο

V.5. Hanged himſelf] What is here meant by ἀπήγξατο, or how 'tis reconcileable with what is related of Judas, Act. 1. 18. hath been a matter of ſome doubt and difficulty. That he hanged himſelf, is affirmed by many of the Ancients, Origen, and S. Chryſoſtome, and his followers, and Juvencus, and Leo, but eſpecially by the Epiſtle that bears the name of Ignatius to the Philippians, but ſure was not written by him. And ſome reverence is due to theſe authorities; Otherwiſe that which the words moſt eaſily and promptly bear, and which they might poſſibly mean by thoſe words, which we interpret to hanging, is this, that he fell into a violent ſuffocating fit of ſadneſs or melancholy, and grieved ſo exceſſively, as to wiſh himſelf dead, and then ſuddenly fell flat upon his face (for ſo Heſychius renders πρηνὴς ὅτι πρόπτωτος πεπλωκώς, only falling on the face, not down any ſteep place) and then burſt, Act. 1.18. And Phavorinus, Πρηνὴς εἰς τὴν προοδον, ὅτι στόματος, ὅτι προσώπου, it ſignifies falling forward on the mouth, on the face, and πρηνὴς κεῖσθαι λέγεται ὁ ὅτι στόμα κείμενος, ὁ δὲ ἀνάπαλιν ὕπτιος. He is ſaid to lye πρηνὴς who lyeth upon the face, and oppoſite thereto is lying on the back. This ſeems to be * Theophylact's underſtanding of it, who ſpeaking of the exceſſive ſorrow, that the inceſtuous Corinthian, if not timely abſolved, might probably fall into, expreſſeth it by εἰς ἀγχόνην ἦξη ὡς Ἰούδας coming to a ſuffocation, as Judas did. And this ſeems to have cauſed Oecumenius on the Acts, having reſolved that he died not by hanging, to fly to ſome fables of Papias, of his being ſo ſwoln, that he could not paſs by a chariot in the way, &c. In which fable I ſuppoſe there might probably be ſo much truth, that by this fit of extreme melancholy he was ſo ſwoln, that, as the Text ſaith, he burſt aſunder, and his bowels guſhed out. So in Ælian, where 'tis ſaid of Poliager, κωμῳδούμενον ἀπήγξατο, being reproach'd he was ſuffocated, that is to be interpreted by the words immediately precedent, σκώμματα μόνον ἐλύπησε πολλάκις, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀπέκτεινε, ſcoffs have not onely grieved men often, but alſo killed them with grief. Thus in * Chryſoſtome τῷ ζωῇ δὲ ὅτι ἀπάγχεσθαι, is to be ſuffocated through grief (ſtrangled as it were, or) miſerably affected with conſcience; And though it ſignifie not in this ſenſe to die, yet it doth note a violent diſeaſe, ſtifling and ſuffocating for want of vent, and affecting the patient ſo, as to produce that death, which Judas ſoon came to after this, falling upon his face, and then (as upon a violent ſtopping all natural paſſages, which the violence of deſpair had wrought in him (burſting aſunder, his guts breaking out at his navel, Act. 1.18. That exceeding horrour and grief being the only thing here mention'd, (as that which immediately followed, and came in naturally at that point of the ſtory) the death it ſelf following (it is not certain how long) after, and ſo particularly mention'd by S. Luke in the Acts, on the occaſion of the election of a Succeſſor into his place. Thus the Hebrew חנק that is rendred in the old Teſtament by ἀπάγξαι, ſignifies to be choaked, or ſuffocated, not only with an halter, but with an exceſſive grief, or trouble on the ſoul, and in the Arabick, among the Phyſicians, it ſignifies an angina, and the ſuffocating of the mother in Avicen, ſo alſo חאנק is that ſuffocation of the body in time of ſleep, which they call incubus, or the nightmare. And for the uſe of it in the Bible, 'twill be obſervable how 'tis uſed Tobit 3.11. where the woman that had been ſo reproached for killing her ſeven huſbands, hearing it, ἐλυπήθη σφόδρα, ὥστε ἀπάγξασθαι, grieved extreamly, ſo as (not to hang her ſelf ſure, for the ſtory ſhews ſhe d d not ſo, but ſo as) to fall into a deep melancholy, a ſpice of this diſeaſe of ſuffocation, a conſequent of which was her wiſhing her ſelf dead, as ſhe expreſſes it v.13. εἶπον ἀπολῦσαί με ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, I deſired that thou wouldſt take me away from the earth, and why ſhould I live any longer? v.15. and εἰ μὴ δοκεῖ σοι ἀποκτεῖναί με, If thou do not think good to kill me, &c. And though one paſſage v.10. ſeem to incline the other way, as when upon conſideration of the reproach, and ſadneſs that would come upon her father, ſhe repreſſeth her deſign If I ſhall do this, it ſhall be a reproach, &c. yet this is not of much validity, becauſe this conſideration might be made uſe of to diſpel her melancholy, that grew ſo violently upon her, and to divert her to a more profitable courſe, commending of her ſtate to God in prayer, as ſhe did v.11. and this as fitly and as properly as from the intention of hanging her ſelf. Adde to this, that ſhe that was ſo pious a perſon, and prayes ſo heartily, v.11,12. (and in that prayer confeſſes no ſuch guilt, but only, I have deſired thee to releaſe me from the earth, and in her prayer continues of that mind, why ſhould I live any longer?) cannot reaſonably without evidence be accuſed of ſo foul intentions of hanging or murthering of her ſelf. A parallel place and condition is that of Job 7.15. my ſoul chooſeth ſtrangling, there the Hebrew מחנק is by Aquila rendred ἀσχόνη, but by the Septuagint 'tis expreſs'd by ἀπαλλάξῃς ἀπὸ πνεύματός με ψυχήν μου, a kind of ſuffocating and (depriving of breath) ſtrangling of the ſoul. The ſame word is by the prophet Nahum uſed of the Lion killing his prey, מחנק *Nah.*2.12. and is rendred ἀπάνιγειν ſuffocation. The Syriack and Arabick uſe it *Mat.*13.7. of the thorns choaking the corn, וחנקה, καὶ συνέπνιξαν, and ſo *Lu.*8. and 2 *Cor.*4.8. נתחנק ſuffocated, inſtead of στενοχωρούμενοι, brought to thoſe great ſtreights or anguſtiæ, and ſo in the Syriack, *Mar.*5.13. ואתחנקו and they were ſuffocated (not hang'd, but drowned) in the water. And in this place the Syriack reads of Judas, that going away חנק נפשה ſuffocavit animam ſuam, he ſuffocated his ſoul, which ſurely may be taken in that larger ſenſe of the word, and not neceſſarily in the ſtricter for that of hanging himſelf, when the Sacred Story in another place mentions another death for him. 'Tis true, that very phraſe which is here, is uſed of Achitophel, 2 Sam. 17.23. who, as 'tis generally reſolved, hanged himſelf; but perhaps it might be probable enough that this ſtare aſſigned to Judas at this time, viz. a ſuffocation, and with it a wiſhing to die, and a huge melancholy growing into a mortal diſeaſe, might be applied to Achitophel alſo, and the rather, becauſe 'tis added, after ἀπήγξατο he was ſuffocated, καὶ ἀπέθανε and he died, which may argue, that his death ſucceeded or followed the ἀπήγξατο, not that that it ſelf was the particular notation of the kind of his death. But however there will not be altogether the ſame reaſons of applying this obſervation to Achitophel, as to Judas, becauſe Achitophels death is not in any other place deſcribed to be another kind of death, as Judas's is, viz. falling down flat on his face, and then burſting and letting out his bowels, which kind of death is that which men oppreſs'd with this diſeaſe of grief do moſt frequently fall under.

* Hom. 22. ad Antioch.

* In 1 Cor. 5.7.

b. Τιμὴ αἵματος.

V.6. Price of blood] 'Twas a cuſtome among the Jews, imitated by the firſt Chriſtians, that it ſhould not be lawfull for executioners to offer any thing, or for any alms to be received from them (the ſame alſo of money, that came out of the Publicans, or Quæſtors exchequer) ſo ſaith Clement in Conſtit. τῶν δημίων καὶ δεκλάτων καὶ πορνοβοσκῶν, that the offerings of executioners are not acceptable, or fit to be received, and ſo by analogy any money by which a life is bought, might not be put into the treaſury, it was the price of blood, and the field bought with it call'd the field of blood.

c. Ξένοις.

V.7. Strangers] The ſtrangers here may be either 1. men of other nations, and then the thing from hence obſervable is, that they would not have commerce with them, even when they were dead, and therefore provided a ſeparate place for them. Or 2ly, (which is more likely) the Jews, which coming from far to Jeruſalem to ſacrifice, &c. died there, before their return, and ſo the Prieſts took this care to provide a burying place for them; Theſe perhaps are the οἱ ἐπιδημοῦντες Ῥωμαῖοι *Act.*2.10. thoſe Jews that travelled from Rome thither.

d. Ἀπολύειν τινα δέσμιον τῷ ὄχλῳ.

V.15. Wont to releaſe] This cuſtome was no cuſtome of the Jews while the power was in their hands, but ad faciendum populum, a piece of popularity, a grace, or favour of the Procurator, brought in by Pilate, v.15. And thus the ſucceeding Emperours, Valentinian, Theodoſius, Arcadius by a general law commanded the Judges that on the firſt day of the Paſſover all the priſoners of the Jews, but thoſe which were committed for ſome certain faults, ſhould be releaſed. Of the ſame nature is the peoples demanding him to be put to death, giving their ſuffrages, v.22. and Luke 23.23. Joh 9.17. which is mentioned alſo by S. Paul, Acts 26.10. and was a Roman cuſtome, Ne poſſent Conſules injuſſu populi in caput civis animadvertere, ſaith Pomponius. See *Rewardus ad leg.*12 Tab. c.24. And it ſeemeth, it was put into the twelve tables, De capite civis niſi per maximum comitatum nè ferunto, as Tully cites it, *De leg.*l.3. All to this purpoſe, that the people had their voyce in putting any freeman to death.

e. Αἴρειν σταυρόν.

V.32. Bear his croſs] It was the cuſtome in that puniſhment of crucifixion, that he that was to be executed, ſhould himſelf carry the Croſs. So Plutarch de ſera Numin. vind. ἕκαστος τῶν κακούργων ἐκφέρει τὸν αὑτῷ σταυρόν. Hence came the name of Furcifer, grown proverbial ſince. So Artemidorus, Ὀνειρ. l.2. c.61. ὁ μέλλων σταυρῷ περιπλέεσθαι, πρότερον αὐλὸν βαστάζει. So Nonius out of Plautus, Patibulum ferat per urbem, deinde affigatur cruci: let him carry it through the city, and then be faſtned to it. This it ſeems by *Joh.*19.17. Chriſt carried himſelf, but it being ſo great a burthen (and perhaps not well ſupportable by all that were to ſuffer) they uſed ἀγγαρεύειν to preſs ſome body elſe, as a porter, or burthen-bearer, to carry it after, or near the perſon that was to ſuffer, that ſo he might have the ſolemn diſgrace, though not pain of it.

Ἀγγαρεύειν.

f. Χολή.

V.34. Gall] χολὴ here ſignifies all kind of bitter poyſonous ſpices or mixtures, which S. Mark in ſetting down this ſtory, determines to be Myrrhe. The Hebrew ראש ſignifies two things, gall, and a moſt poyſonous herb, and the Greek χολὴ ſignifying one of theſe, gall, is put (Deut. 29.18. and 32.32.) for the other, the poyſonous herb, ῥίζα φύουσα ἐν χολῇ, where the Hebrew is beſt rendred, a root ſprouting out with that moſt poyſonous herb, and ſo the word χολὴ, joyn'd with πικρίας, is uſed by S. Peter of Simon Magus (ſee note on Acts 8. d.) though Metaphorical. So again the Hebrew חמה ſignifies both anger and poyſon; and ſo from theſe uſages in the Hebrew Language, it comes to paſs very conſequently, that the word χολὴ in Greek being (as it denotes choler or anger) all one with θυμὸς wrath, both theſe words χολὴ and θυμὸς are uſed promiſcuouſly, promiſcuouſly, and both in the Old Teſtament taken generally for poyſon, which being mix'd with wine, ſtupified and aſtoniſhed the perſon that drank it, and was ordinarily given to them that were put to death. So in the laſt of the Proverbs give ſtrong drink to them that are ready to die: Where the Hebrew Sichar, ſoftned by the Greek into σικέρα ſignifies, ſaith S. Baſil, πᾶν τὸ δυνάμενον μέθην ἐμποιῆσαι all that can cauſe drunkenneſs. So Pſ. 60. 3. οἶνον κατανύξεως the wine of ſtupidity is by the Chaldee rendred the wine of malediction, ſuch as is given to them that are to be executed, of which ſaith Rabbi Shelomo, that it obnubilates the heart, and ſtrikes the brain, that is, diſturbs and takes away the ſenſes. And accordingly S. Paul uſeth πνεῦμα κατανύξεως, Rom. 11. for the ſpirit of ſtupidity, or ſlumber, having eyes and not ſeeing, &c. Thus οἶνος θυμοῦ Apoc. 14. 10. is not the wine of Gods wrath, but the wine mix'd with all theſe ſtupifying ſpices, that is, the ſtupifying and aſtoniſhing judgments of God. And the ſame is expreſs'd in the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 75. 9. by the phraſe of οἶνον ἀκράτου πλήρης κεράσματος, wine pure (unmix'd from water, or any ſoftening allaying mixture) and full of all theſe poyſonous, ſtupifying ingredients, and ſo, in like manner, by the οἶνος ἄκρατος κεκερασμένος in that place of Rev. 14. 10. the unmix'd wine, mix'd, which is there the periphraſis of οἶνος θυμοῦ, or the οἶνος ἐσμυρνισμένος in S. Marke, the wine with myrrh in it. This it ſeems being uſefull to open the pores, and haſten death, Chriſt refuſed to take, meaning to make good his own words of Ego pono, I lay down my life, not for his will only but the act alſo, and ſo though he gave way to naturall things to work, yet he reſerved all to his own power, and ſo when he had done all that he would, he ſayeth, it is finiſh'd Joh. 19. 30. and bowed the head and gave up the ghoſt. And this was it, that the Centurion conſidering was amazed at Mar. 15. 39.

Πῶμα κατανύξεως.

Οἶνος θυμοῦ

Οἶνος ἄκρατος κεκερασμένος.

V. 43. Will] The word θέλω is uſed by the Greek tranſlators of the Old Teſtament, and writers of the New, ſometimes in a notion which ſeldome belongs to it in other authors, as when 1 Sam. 18. 22. θέλει ἐν σοὶ ὁ βασιλεύς, the King delighteth or taketh pleaſure in thee. So 2 Sam. 15. 26. and very frequently in other places, upon this ground, that the Hebrew חָפֵץ which ſignifies to will, ſignifies alſo to delight in, and ſo is rendred εὐδοκέω, as well as θέλω, and when θέλω, it is taken in the ſame ſenſe, as if it were εὐδοκέω, And ſo 'tis here, for Pſal 22. 8. (from whence theſe words are taken, and from the tranſlatours there θέλει retained for חָפֵץ) we ordinarily render it, let him deliver him, if he delighteth in him, In like manner as Tob. 13. 6. Τίς γινώσκει, εἰ θελήσει ὑμᾶς, who knowes if he will accept, or be pleaſed with you? Thus in a fragment of Perictyone the Pythagorean in * Stobeus, Εθελήσει ἡ ἀνδρα, She ſhall be kind to her husband. Thus, Col. 2. 18. θέλων ἐν ταπινοφροσύνῃ καὶ θρησκείᾳ τῶν ἀγγέλων is one that delighteth, or pleaſeth himſelf in that kind of humility, and worſhip of Angels, that acquieſces in it. And ſo 1 Cor. 7. 36. θέλει ſignifies that which he hath a mind to.

g. Θέλω

* p. 488

V. 44. Theeves] That which is here affirm'd of the robbers in the Plurall number ſeems to be underſtood in the Singular, only of one of them, Lu. 23. 39. the other praying unto him and beleiving on him: ſeverall examples of the like formes of ſpeech ſeem to be in this book, ch. 26. 8. when his diſciples ſaw it they had indignation, whereas only Judas was diſpleaſed at it, ſaith S. John c. 12. 4. So c. 21. Looſe them (the aſſe and the foal) is Mar. 11. 2. a colt tyed, looſe him. And this by an ordinary figure (which the Græcians call κοινότης or σύλληψις) frequently uſed in all languages. So when Joh. 13. 28. 'tis ſaid, that none of thoſe that lay at meat with Chriſt knew to what purpoſe he ſpake to Judas, What thou doſt, doe quickly 'tis not to be concluded, that John (who v. 25. asked, and was told v. 26. who 'twas that ſhould betray him) was included in that number, of thoſe that knew not. So Heb. 11. 37. ἐπρίσθησαν they were ſawn aſunder in the Plural, which yet is not found to belong to any, but to Iſaias onely. But it is alſo poſſible, that both theſe theeves might at firſt blaſpheme and reproach him, and afterwards one of them confeſſe him, and pray to him. Thus Proſper underſtands it, cont. Collat. c. 12. Cùm aliquandiu blaſphemaſſet in Jeſum Chriſtum, repentè eſt mutatus, &c. when for ſome time he had railed on Jeſus, he was ſuddenly changed. And ſo Titus Boſtrenſis, p. 833. B. ἐν ἀρχῇ μὲν οἱ δύο λῃσαὶ παρεπλήσια τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ἐφθέγγοντο ἴσως τινα παρ' αὐτῶν βοηθειαν ἐντεῦθεν μισθοδοκῶντες εἰς ἄφεσιν. At firſt the two theeves ſpake as the Jewes did, perhaps by that means expecting ſome helpe from them toward getting their pardon, but that expectation being fruſtrated, and hearing him pray for his crucifiers, Lu. 23. 34. one was thereby wrought on, v. 40. And if ſo, then the words here will refer to the former time, and in S. Luke to the latter.

h. Λῃσταὶ

V. 51. Earth did quake] This is conceived by ſome to be the Earthquake that Macrobius mentions as the greateſt, ſaith he, which in the memory of mortall man was ever known, in the reign of Tiberius Cæſar, twelve cities of Aſia being deſtroyed by it, ſee Marcil. Ficinus de rel. p. 78. The ſame is mention'd by Pliny. Nat. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 48. But it doth not by the Text here appear that this earthquake belong'd to any thing but the Temple of Jeruſalem, the parts of which are mention'd, the veile, and the ground, and the ſtones of the building, and the tombs, &c. And 'its not improbable that this prodigie was ſhewed particularly on this place, to foretell the deſtruction of the Temple and ſervice, upon their crucifying of Chriſt. So ch. 28. 2. where there is mention'd μέγας σεισμὸς, a great ſhaking, it is not to be imagined that this was a ſhaking of the whole earth, but at the moſt of that part, where the grave was. Nay there being no mention of the earth in that place, it is not improbable that σεισμὸς ſhould there ſignifie that concuſſion of the aire, joyn'd with thunder &c. with which Angels are wont to deſcend, when they appear, for ſo it immediately followes there, For the Angel of the Lord deſcended, &c.

i. Ἐσείσθη ἡ γῆ

V. 57. Arimathea] Arimathea is the place where Samuel was born and brought up, called by the Hebrewes Ramathaim Sophim, in Greek Ἁρμαθαΐμ.

12. And when they were aſſembled with the Elders, and had taken counſell, they gave large money unto the ſouldiers,

13. Saying, Say yee,] His diſciples came by night and ſtole him away while we ſlept.

a. ὀψὲ Sabbat.

V. 1. End] If ὀψὲ ſignifie a diſtinct part of time, and that ſtrictly the evening, then it muſt note that evening, as the firſt part of the firſt day of the week, at which time theſe women began their journey, bought their ſpices, went out of the city, ſtayd all night in the ſuburbs, and very early ὄρθρου βαθέος, Lu. 24. 1. and σκοτίας ἔτι ὔσης while it was yet dark, Joh. 20. 1. came to the ſepulchre, and ſo that will reconcile and connect the ὀψὲ Σαββάτων to the ἐπιφωσκούσῃ &c. But ὀψὲ may be alſo taken in a wider ſenſe, ſee Note on ch. 14. d.

b. Ἔθνη

V. 19. All nations] What is meant ſometimes by the word ἔθνη nations hath been ſaid, (ſee Note on ch. 24. c.) to wit, the tribes and families of the Jewes, the regions and cities of Paleſtine, and though it doe not ſo here, excluſively to the other nations of the world, yet neither doth it ſignifie the nations of the heathen world, in oppoſition or excluſively to the Jewes, as elſewhere it frequently doth: but primarily and in the firſt place, the ſeverall parts of Judea, and the Jewes, whereſoever they are in their diſperſions abroad, and then ſecondarily the Gentiles mingled with the Jewes, and finally the whole gentile world, when, upon the Jewes rejecting the Goſpel, the Apoſtles depart from them, and goe to the Gentiles. That this is the meaning of the place, I ſhall uſe two arguments to make moſt probable. Firſt, becauſe in other places, when the Commiſſion of preaching and gathering diſciples is given to the Apoſtles, 'tis with a command to goe firſt to the Jewes, and not at all to the Gentiles. So in their firſt Commiſſion, out of which the very Samaritans were excluded, Mat. 10. 5. Goe not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not, but goe rather to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael. And in their ſecond Commiſſion Act. 1. 8. although the Samaritans are taken in, and the utmoſt parts of the earth, yet ch. 3. and ch. 13. 46. 'tis ſtill πρῶτον ὑμῖν firſt to the Jewes, that they muſt preach. And accordingly we find that the Apoſtles, till the Jewes reject them, and are ready to ſtone them, doe not leave them off to goe to the Gentiles. But then Act. 13. 46. they foretell them what they are to doe, Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you (which referres, I suppose, to the precept of Christ, that made it necessary) but seeing ye have put it from you, &c. loe we turn to the Gentiles. And when v. 47. they urge the Lords commandment for so doing, it is not this parting precept of Christ, but one out of the prophet Isaiah, c. 49. 6. I have set thee to be a light to the Gentiles, &c. And the same I conceive before intimated, v. 40, 41. Beware lest that come upon you (Jewes) which is spoken of in the prophet, Behold yee despisers and wonder and perish, for I work a work which you shall in no wise beleive, &c. that is, upon the Jewes despising and holding out obstinately against the preaching of the Gospel, v. 45. 'twas propheciied that they should be destroyed, and about the same time the Gospel should be removed, and preach'd to the heathen world, An incredible thing which should amaze the Jewes, and be matter of great wonderment to them, (and so it is said of them upon the like occasion of the Christian Jewes, that they were astonyed c. 10. 45.) What was thus foretold at Antioch by S. Paul is again repeated c. 18. 6 to the Jewes at Corinth, where upon their resisting and blaspheming, he shakes his garment (an embleme of their approaching ruine, like the shaking off the dust from their feet;) and tells them, From henceforth I will goe to the Gentiles, and presently enters into the house of Justus a proselyte, v. 7. This is after most fully done to the Jewes at Rome, at the conclusion of the Acts c. 28. 28. Be it known therefore unto you, that the salvation of God is sent to the Gentiles, but that again upon the obduration of the Jewes, v. 26, 27. All this makes it appear that after Christs death the Gospel was by the Apostles to be first preach'd to the Jewes to convince them of their sinne of crucifying Christ (enlarged also to the Samaritans by Christs command, Act. 1. 8. who were, in their worshipping at mount Gerizzim, schismaticks, and so separated from the Jewes, but otherwise were Jewes in religion) and that was a doing till about the time that that fatall destruction fell upon that nation, ch. 10. 23. But this not exclusively, but inclusively also to the preaching to all the nations and people of the world, as the phrase is taken in the greatest latitude (when the Jewes should first have expres'd their obstinacy sufficiently) For so the words, as they are repeated in S. Mark, must necessarily signifie, Goe into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature, to those of the synagogue first, and then to others also. Thus S. Luke hath set it down most distinctly, ch. 24. 47. that repentance and remission of sinnes should be preached to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem, where Judæa in which Jerusalem is, is one of the all nations, and they are to begin at Jerusalem, and from thence first preach through all other parts of Judæa (and even in the heathen cities) first of the native and proselyte Jewes in their synagogues, and proseuchæ, (before they went to the Gentiles) and so generally they continue to doe, till the time of the destruction of that people. The second argument for this rendring of the word ἔθνη, so as that it may primarily point to the Jewes, is that of S. Paul, Gal. 2. viz. that S. Peter was intrusted with the Gospel of the circumcision, that is to preach the Gospel particularly to the Jewes, and so again it there appeareth of James and John, that they betook themselves to the circumcision, that is, to the Jewes, v. 9. And 'tis observable how farre S. Peter was from understanding this precept in this place to oblige him at that time (not long after Christs ascension) to preach to the Gentiles, for in the busines of Cornelius Act. 10. 'tis clear, that he did not yet think it lawfull for him to preach to that one Gentile, and for the commission of Christ he repeats it thus, παρήγγειλεν ἡμῖν κηρύξαι τῷ λαῷ v. 42. he commanded us to preach to the people, that is, to the people of the Jewes (as the Rulers of the people and Rulers of Israel are all one, and as that nation is call'd ὁ λαὸς the people, and as πᾶς ὁ λαὸς Act. 10. 41. signifies all the Jewes) and 'tis manifest that before he would venture to preach Christ to that one heathen, God saw it necessary to send him a Vision, and by that instructed him that the Gentiles were not to be look'd on by him any longer as profane (or not to be conversed with) but might be preach'd to, as well as the Jewes. And this God confirm'd by sending down the holy Ghost on these first fruits of the Gentiles, Cornelius and his company (as he had done on the Apostles the first fruits of the Jewes) to testifie this his pleasure from heaven immediately. And accordingly v. 45. the beleiving Jewes were astonished when they heard of this, and ch. 11. 1. 'tis said that the Apostles &c. in Judea heard of this, and v. 2. they call Peter in question about it, and he is fain to give them an account of his Vision, and the descent of the holy Ghost upon them, as a testimony that so 'twas to be, v. 16. and by that they are convinced v. 18. and not till then.

V. 20. End of the world] It hath formerly been said (Note on Mat. 24. c.) that there was a double age famously spoken of among the Jewes, the then present age, and the future age, or the state of things under the Messias, from that time to the end of the world. According to this, the destruction of that state, or end of the first age, is taken notice of, as a famous period, and is set down in that very style, συντέλεια αἰῶνος, the consummation, or conclusion of the age, Mat. 24. 3. and Mat. 13. 40. where 'tis more distinctly, αἰῶνος τούτου, of this age, and so again Heb. 9. 26. συντέλεια τῶν αἰώνων, the conclusion of the ages, in the Plurall, those last times, Heb. 1. 2. wherein Christ came into the world. But then other places there are, where it may be taken in another sense, as Mat. 13. 43. where it may well signifie the end of this other age, the conclusion of the world, and so here Christs promise of his being with the Apostles unto the end of the world. For its to be observed that this age being the Christian state or kingdome of Christ, that doth most distinctly begin at his resurrection, all power being then given to him v. 18. and this being the last age (no other state to succeed this,) it followes necessarily, that this age then beginning, shall not conclude, till the end of the world, And consequently Christs promise hath no other period to determine it, but instates a power on the Apostles, and their successours by this mission, and assisting and backing them in the execution of their office, πάσας τὰς ἡμέρας, all the daies, the whole term of this new age.

The Gospel according to S. MARK.

CHAP. I.

Paraphrase.

1, 2, 3. The first thing considerable in the story of Christ the Messias and eternal son of God, and in the preaching of the Gospel which he brought with him into the world, was the preaching of John the Baptist, as of an Herald sent before him, and so foretold of by the old prophets, under the style of the voyce of a preacher in the desert, that is, the proclamation of an eminent person that should goe into the wilderness, and cry, and give warning to the Jews, that by repentance and amendment of life they should prepare themselves for the coming of God, a terrible coming to visit and punish the impenitents.

1 THE beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God.
2. As it is written in the prophets; Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.
3. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths streight.]

4. According to this prediction of the prophets, John went into the desart part of Judea, and there proclaimed to all the Jewes, the necessity of their instant change of life, promising them thereupon (and on no other termes) forgiveness of sins, And all that came to him, and thus reformed upon his preaching, he took and wash'd them in the river, after the manner of proselytes among the Jewes (see Mat. 23. note d. and John 3. a.) to signifie to them the purification of their wicked lives, to which they were obliged, and on performance of which (and not otherwise) God would receive them into his favour and look on them as his people. And this baptisme and this repentance, and the benefit of it, remission of sins, he proclaimed to all, every where, as he went.

4. John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptisme of repentance for the remission of sinnes.]

5. And the generality of people in all the country, and in the city of Jerusalem, obeyed his preaching so farre, as to goe and receive baptisme from him (which was done in Jordan a river convenient for that purpose, the same wherein Naamans leprosie had been cleansed long ago by washing in it) and to confesse the sins that they had severally been guilty of, and desiring directions from him for new life, Lu. 3. 10.

5. And there went out unto him all the land of Judea and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sinnes.]

6. See Note on Mar. 3. 8.

6. And John was clothed with camels hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loynes, and he did eat [locusts and wild honey.]

7. I am the forerunner of one who is of infinitely more authority then I, whose disciple I am not worthy to be, or, as such, to be employed by him in the meanest office, such as the taking off his shooes. See Note on Mat. 3. h.

7. And preached, saying, [There cometh one mightier then I after me, the latchet of whose shooes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.]

8. I am not worthy to be considered by you in comparison with him, All that I doe is to receive you as Proselytes, (after the Jewish manner) as many as now come in, and repent, and make faithful promise of amendment, and new life; And so water is the only signal which I use. But he, when he comes, shall send down the holy Ghost from heaven in a visible manner upon his disciples, and by that great signal testifie to you the truth of his doctrine, &c. See Mat. 3. 11. and Note on Acts 1. a.

8. I indeed have baptized you with water, but he shall baptize you with the holy Ghost.]

9. And it came to passe in those dayes, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

10. And instantly after his baptisme, as he came up from the river, he beheld a parting of the heavens, and opening of the clouds, and the spirit of God hovering over him, as a dove doth, when it descends and lights upon any thing. (See Note on Mat. 3. k.)

10. And straightway coming up out of the water he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit * like a dove descending upon him.]

* as it were, ὡσεί

11. And there came a voyce from heaven through the clouds directed to Christ, in these words, Thou art &c. see Mat. 3. 17.

11. And there came a voyce from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved sonne, in whom I am well pleased.]

12. And immediately the Spirit [a] † driveth him into the wilderness.

† exposeth him, or, leadeth him

13. And having fasted in the desert forty dayes, Satan then set upon him to tempt him, Mat. 4. 2, 3. and after he had done tempting him, he left him in the wilderness among none but wild beasts, and there the Angels came, and brought him food, Mat. 4. 11.

13. And he was there in the wilderness forty dayes tempted of Satan, and was with the wild beasts, and the angels ministred unto him.]

14. Soon after this Herod having for some time received instructions from John c. 6. 20. and at last being reproved by him about a woman, with whom he lived incestuously, c. 6. 17. imprisoned him. And after this his imprisonment Mat. 14. 3. Jesus went from Nazareth into Galilee (see Note on Mat. 4. e.) and there began to proclaim the doctrine of his father concerning this approaching reformation and change, that God as a King should now work in the world, especially among the Jews.

14. Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the Gospel of the kingdome of God,]

15. And the form of his proclamation was in these or the like words, The days of the coming of the Messias so long expected, and prophecied of, are now come, and Gods remarkable judgments upon the whole nation are approaching (see Note on Mat. 3. c.) which there is no way to avert from any, but by beleiving the Gospel now to be preach'd by Christ, and amending of their lives.

15. And saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdome of God is at hand, repent ye, and beleive the Gospel.]

16. washing their net, see Note on Luke 5. a.

16. Now as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother [casting a net into the sea] (for they were fishers.)

17. And having first shewed them a great miracle, convinced them of his divine power, he called them to be his disciples, telling them that he would employ them in an office of greater

18. And ſtraightway they forſook their nets, and followed him.] 18. And upon this command of his immediately they left their imployments, and as diſciples, attended conſtantly on him

19. And when he had gone a little farther thence, he ſaw James the ſon of Zebedee and John his brother, [* who alſo were in the ſhip] mending their nets. 19. with their father Zebedee, Mat. 4. 21. and other labourers here mentioned, v. 20. all together in a ſhip.

* and thoſe in the ſhip or boate, καὶ αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ.

20. And ſtraightway he called them, and they left their father Zebedee in the ſhip, with the hired ſervants, and went after him. 20. See Luke 5. 2.

21. And they went into [Capernaum,] and ſtraightway on the Sabbath day he entred into the Synagogue and taught. 21. a city of Galilee called Capernaum Mat. 4. 13.

22. And they were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine, for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the Scribes.] 22. And they wondred extreamly at his way of inſtructing them, Mat. 7. 28. For his manner of teaching was not like that of the Doctors of their law, who only expound the law, and tell them the traditions of their fathers the Jews, but he as one that came with power from heaven to give new rules of life, delivered his doctrine with great authority.

† in an unclean ſpirit ſo c. 5. 2. ſee Note on 2 Cor. 12. 2.

23. And there was in the Synagogue a man [† with an unclean ſpirit,] and he cryed out, 23. poſſeſt with a devill, (Luke 4. 33. ſee Mar. 3. 22, 30.) which caſt him into a fit of epilepſie,

24. Saying, Let us alone, What have we to doe with thee, thou Jeſus of Nazareth? Art thou come to [deſtroy us?] I know thee who thou art, the holy one of God. 24. Subdue, quell, undoe us, caſt us out of our poſſeſſions;

25. And Jeſus rebuked him, ſaying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him,

26. And * when the unclean ſpirit had torn him, and cryed with a loud voyce, he came out of him.

* the unclean ſpirit having diſquieted him (troubled him, wrought or boyled within him, ſee c. 9. 20.) and having cried σπαράξαν καὶ κράξαν,

27. And they were all amazed inſomuch that they queſtioned among themſelves ſaying, [What thing is this? † what new doctrine is this? For with authority commandeth he even the unclean Spirits, and they doe obey him.] 27. This is more then was ever heard of before, and therefore ſure his doctrine comes from heaven in an extraordinary manner, for it appears that he hath an authority over the devils themſelves, and they are ſubject to him.

† what is this new doctrine? that τίς ἡ διδαχὴ αὕτη, ὅτι

28. And immediately his fame ſpread abroad [* throughout all the region round about Galilee.] 28. through all Galilee a third partition of Paleſtine, called the ambient or circumjacent region of the nations, which encompaſſed Judea. See Note on Mat. 4. c.

* into the whole adjacent region of Galilee, εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν περίχωρον τῆς Γαλιλ.

29. And forthwith when they were come out of the Synagogue, they entred into the houſe of Simon and Andrew with James and John.

30. But Simons wives mother lay ſick of a fever, and † anon they tell him of her. † preſently εὐθέως.

31. And he came and [took her by the hand, and lift her up, and immediately the fever left her, and ſhe miniſtred unto them.] 31. took hold of her hand and raiſed or lifted her up, and aſſoon as he hid ſo, the diſeaſe forthwith left her, and ſhe was ſo well, that immediatly ſhe attended and made proviſion for them.

32. And at even when the ſun did ſet, they brought unto him all that were diſeaſed, and them that were poſſeſſed with devils.

33. And [all the city was] gathered together at the dore. 33. well-nigh all the inhabitants of that place were

34. And he healed many, that were ſick of divers diſeaſes, and caſt out many devils, and ſuffered not the devils to ſpeak, becauſe they knew him.

35. And in the morning riſing up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a ſolitary place, and there prayed.

36. And Simon and [they that were with him followed after him.] 36. the reſt of the diſciples, whom he had called, purſued and ſought after him.

37. And when they had found him, they ſaid unto him, [All men ſeek for thee.] 37. Sir, thou art extremely enquired for, and ſought after by all.

38. And he ſaid unto them, Let us goe into the next townes, that I may preach there alſo, [for therefore came I forth.] 38. for that was the appointment and employment for which I was ſent by my Father.

39. And he preached in their Synagogues throughout all Galilee, and caſt out devils.

40. And there came a leper to him, beſeeching him, and kneeling down to him and ſaying unto him, [If thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean.] 40. If it be thy pleaſure to ſhew forth thy power, thou art moſt able to cure me of my leproſie.

41. And Jeſus moved with compaſſion put forth his hand, and touched him, and ſaith unto him [I will, be thou clean.] 41. It is my pleaſure, be thou cured of thy leproſie.

42. And aſſoon as he had ſpoken, immediately the leproſie departed from him, and he was cleanſed.

43. And [he ſtraightly charged him, and] forthwith ſent him away. 43. with threats commanding him not to ſpeak of it (ſee Mat. 8. 4. Note b.) he 44. And ſaith unto him, See thou ſay nothing unto any man, but goe thy way and [ſhew thy ſelf to the Prieſt, and offer for thy cleanſing thoſe things which Moſes commanded for a teſtimony unto them.] 44. See Note on Mat. 8. c. d.

45. But he went out and began to publiſh it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, in ſo much that Jeſus could [no more openly enter into the city, but was without in deſert places, and they came to him from every quarter.] 45. no longer with ſafety come publickly into the city, but was fain to withdraw himſelf into places of ſolitude (ſee Note on Mat. 8. b.) and yet even there the people found him out, and in great multitudes came to him from all parts.

a. ἐκβάλλ. V. 12. Driveth] The word ἐκβάλλειν doth not in the New Teſtament, alwayes ſignifie according to the literal notation of it, to caſt out, but in a ſofter ſenſe to ſend out, *Mat.*9.25. and v.38. and c.12.20, and 35. ſo c.13.52. (and beſides many other in the Goſpels) Jam. 2. 25. And ſo it may doe here, and be all one with ἀνάγειν to lead away, which is the word uſed in the parallel part of the ſtory in S. Matthew, c. 4.1. ἀνήχθη he was led away, &c. But beſides this, the word doth in good authors peculiarly ſignifie to expoſe, to leave in a deſtitute helpleſſe condition, as when Ariſtotle ſaith of the Raven, ἐκβάλλει τοὺς νεοττοὺς ὁ κόραξ, that ſhe expoſes her young ones. And although Jeſus being already in the wilderneſſe, at his Baptiſme, (for there did John preach and baptize v. 4.) there is no peculiar need of any new act of driving or bringing him into the wilderneſſe, for the buſineſſe of his temptation following, but only to leave him or expoſe him there, yet becauſe S. Matthew joynes ἀνήχθη to this part of the ſtory, in order to his temptation, therefore the ſafeſt way is ſo to render ἐκβάλλειν as may be reconcileable with that, that is, to lead him up farther into the wilderneſſe, and expoſe him there.

b. ἔχόμεναι V. 38. Next] That ἐχόμεναι ſignifies here (joyned with κωμοπόλεις) adjoyning is from the uſe of the word in the Septuagint of the Old Teſtament; For there the Hebrew אחר which ſignifies behinde, or next after, and is oft rendred μετὰ, and ὄπισθεν poſt, and ὀπίσω the hinder parts is four times rendred ἐχόμενος, *Gen.*41. 23. ἐφύοντο ἐχόμενοι αὐτῶν, ſprang up adjoyning, or next to them, we read after them, 2 Sam. 21. 1. ἐνιαυτὸς ὁ ἐχόμενος ἐνιαυτῷ, year adjoyning to year, we read, year after year, Pſal. 68. 25. προέφθασαν ἄρχοντες ἐχόμενοι ψαλλόντων, the Princes went before adjoyning, or next to the ſingers, we read the ſingers after, Pſal. 94. 15. ἐχόμενοι αὐτῆς πάντες οἱ εὐθεῖς, All that are true are neer it, we read follow, or after it. So likewiſe the word מיד is oft by them rendred ἐχόμενος, in this ſenſe, following, contiguous, Num. 2. 17. and in eight places more, and accordingly I doubt not but 1 Sam. 19. 3. where the copies read σὺν πατρός μου, it ſhould be read ἐχόμενος, the Hebrew ליד, which we render beſides my father, being ſo often rendred ἐχόμενος, and ſo in like manner Dan. 10. 3. ἐυχόμενος τοῦ ποταμοῦ, ſure ἐχόμενος, the Hebrew having על יד and we render it, I was by the ſide of the great river. So in the New Teſtament τῇ ἐχομένῃ ἡμέρᾳ Acts 20. 15. and 21. 26. is the day adjoyning, or next following, according to the notion of אחר the day after, and c. 20. 15. τῇ ἐχομένῃ, the day next following, ſo Luke 13. 33. See Note on Acts 13. h.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Ἤρξαντο. Παρέλκον.

V. 23. Began.] The phraſe here in the Greek is a little unuſual ἤρξαντο ὁδὸν ποιεῖν τίλλοντες literally thus, They began to journey plucking, &c. But the truth is, the word ἤρξατο began here is but a παρέλκον, or an unſignificant Expletive, as in the parallel Mat. 12. 1. and in very many places more, where generally ἤρξατο λέγειν he began to ſpeak, is no more then ἔλεγε he ſaid, and ſo particularly Lu. 3. 8. bring forth fruits, &c. and begin not to ſay, that is, doe not ſay within your ſelves, We have Abraham, &c. and ſo Acts 1. 1. ὧν ἤρξατο ποιεῖν, &c. which Jeſus began to doe, and teach, that is, which he did and taught. So ἀποκριθεὶς ἔλεγε he anſwered and ſaid, a pure Expletive, many times, when there had gone nothing before, to which an anſwer could be accommodated, as c. 11. 14. when to the figtree ἀποκριθεὶς εἶπεν αὐτῇ, he anſwered and ſaid to it. So δοκεῖν ſeeming, or thinking, is ſometimes taken, as Mat. 3. 9. μὴ δόξητε λέγειν, &c. think not, or ſeem not to ſay, is parallel to that of Lu. 3. 8. μὴ ἄρξησθε λέγειν begin not to ſay, that is, ſay not within your ſelves, and ſo in many other places, as hath been formerly ſhewn, ſee Note on Mat. 3. 9. e. So πορευόμενοι going, Lu. 8. 14. which hath no ſignification but what belongs to the ſynonymous πνιγόμενοι choaked, following, πορευόμενοι συμπνίγονται they are choaked. So the word ἀνθρώπῳ Mat. 18. 23. ἀνθρώπῳ βασιλεῖ a man King, that is, a king, and ſo εὑρέθησαν found Lu. 1. 18. εὑρίσκουσιν ὑποστρέφαντες, they were found returning, that is, returned. And ſo here ἤρξαντο ὁδὸν ποιεῖν τίλλοντες, they began to goe or travaile, &c. is no more then ὁδὸν ἐποίουν they went plucking, or as they went they plucked.

Ἀρχομαι. Παρέλκον. ἀποκριθείς. Πορευόμενοι. εὑρέθησαν

b. Ἐπὶ.

V. 26. In the, &c.] The notation of the Prepoſition ἐπὶ for the time not then preſent but ſoon after ſucceeding, is remarkable Mat. 1. 11. where ἐπὶ τῆς μετοικεσίας cannot be underſtood or rendred under the Babyloniſh deportation, for that will not be found true in the hiſtory, Jechoniah being not born under the captivity, but before; and being King, Jer. 24. 1. and ſo carried captive into Babylon: ἐπὶ therefore muſt there ſignifie next before, as the Latine ſub doth often note, ſub finem libri, a little before the end of the book, and many the like, and ſo 'tis moſt true, Joſias begat Jechoniah, &c. next before, or neer about, the Babyloniſh deportation. So in like manner here ἐπὶ τοῦ Ἀβιαθὰρ may not be rendred under Abiathar the high Prieſt, for it was in Abimelechs time, who was Abiathars father, 1 Sam. 21. and the ſtory is known that Abimelech and the reſt of the Prieſts, almoſt the whole family, were by Sauls appointment ſlain for ſuccouring David at this time, Abiathar (here named) peculiarly eſcaping out of this ſlaughter, 1 Sam. 22. 20. and ſucceeding in the high prieſthood upon this occaſion, and ſo continuing long under Davids reign, famous for bringing him the Ephod, c. 36. 7. and he and Zadoc eſpeciall aſſiſtants to his affairs 2 Sam. 15. 35. It is therefore neceſſary that ἐπὶ τοῦ Ἀβιαθὰρ ἀρχιερέως here muſt be ſo rendred as to denote the time immediately preceding Abiathars being high Prieſt; And this uncertain ſignification of Prepoſitions in the New Teſtament, proceeds from the like of the Hebrew in the Old. For ſo לְפָנֵי which is often rendred ἐπὶ under, is often πρὸ before alſo, Gen. 13. 10. and 27. 7, 10. and 36. 11. and 50. 16. and in many other places, to note the time precedent. So in like manner for place, as well as time. For when Mat. 21. 19. 'tis ſaid that Chriſt ſaw a figtree ἐπὶ τῆς ὁδοῦ, it muſt not be rendred in, but at ſome diſtance from the way, for ſo in Mark we read, ἰδὼν συκῆν μακρόθεν, ſeeing a fig tree afarre off.

Annotations on Chap. III.

a. Ἐπιπίπτειν

V.10. Preſſed upon him] The word ἐπιπίπτειν αὐτῷ ſeems to be miſtaken by Interpreters, when 'tis rendred either irruere, or incidere, to ruſh or preſs upon. It is all one with προσπίπτειν v. 11. to fall down at his feet, as they do that have any petition or requeſt to make, as theſe had here, ἵνα ἅψωνται, that they might touch him. Thus ch.6.52. in a like matter, it is, in another phraſe, to this ſenſe, παρεκάλουν αὐτὸν ἵνα κἂν κρασπέδου ἅψωνται, they beſought him that they might but touch the hem, &c.

b. Βοανεργὲς

V.17. Boanerges] Βοανεργὲς is the corruption of the Hebrew בני רעש ſons of Cשמוּ, earthquake, or any other the greateſt commotion, ſuch as here is ſtiled βροντὴ thunder. And the meaning of this title may ſeem to be, that thoſe two ſons of Zebedee were to be ſpecial eminent Miniſters of the Goſpel, which is call'd Hebr. 12.26. φωνὴ τοῦ θεοῦ Cαλεύουσα, a voice ſhaking the earth, taken from Hag. 2.7. which is directly the periphraſis of רעש which is here rendred βροντὴ thunder, in the notion, wherein φωνὴ voice, and βροντὴ thunder are promiſcuouſly uſed for the ſame thing (ſee Note on *Act.*9. b.) and wherein the laſt ſort of revelations, the voice from heaven, was wont to be called among the Jews, בת קול, the daughter of voice, or thunder.

c. Ἔξίστη

V.21. Beſide himſelf] The word ἐξίστη here uſed, doth in all places of the new Teſtament but this, and 2 *Cor.*5 13. ſignifie being amazed or aſtoniſhed, ſome ſudden perturbation of mind, which deprives the man of the exerciſe of his faculties. In that place to the Corinthians 'tis ſet oppoſite to Cωφρονῶν, ſobriety, or temper, the ſpeaking magnificently of himſelf, commending his own office, or performances, exceeding a little in ſuch kind of ſpeeches of himſelf. For which he ſaith in another place, that he may be counted a fool by ſome; And thus in the old Teſtament 'tis variouſly uſed for exceſſes, or vehemencies, or commotions of mind, *Pſal.*31. 23. I ſaid in my haſte, the Hebrew hath בחפזי, the Greek, ἐν ἐκστάσει μου, and the Vulgar Latine, in exceſſu mentis meæ, in the exceſs, or vehemence of my mind. And the ſame Hebrew word *Pſal.*48.5. is rendred ἐταράχθη commoti ſunt, they were troubled. Agreeably here, I ſuppoſe, it will be moſt fitly taken for a commotion, exceſs, vehemence, tranſportation of mind, acting or ſpeaking in zeal (above that which is called (ordinarily) temper, and ſobriety,) or in ſuch a manner, as they which are moved by ſome extraordinary ſpirit, are wont to do, as Prophets &c. according to that of S. Chryſoſtome, τοῦτο μάλιστα ἴδιον τὸ ἐξεστηκέναι &c. 'tis proper to Prophets to be thus tranſported. See Note on 2 Cor. 12.a. Which ſenſe of the word will be thus fitted to the place. In this chapter Chriſt began to ſhew himſelf in the full luſtre of his office, he cures on the Sabbath day, which the Phariſees conceived unlawfull, v. 2. looks about him μετ' ὀργῆς, with ſome incitation of mind, v.5. is followed by great multitudes, v.7. heals the diſeaſed, and is flocked to for that purpoſe, v.10. is called openly the ſon of God by the demoniacks, v.11. makes 12. diſciples, and ſends them out to preach, and cure, v. 14. and upon this the Phariſees and Herodians take counſel againſt him, v.6. thoſe of their faction ſay he acts by Beelzebub, v.22. and is poſſeſs'd by him, that is, that he was acted by ſome principal evil ſpirit, and did all his miracles thus, and ſo was not to be followed, but abhorred by men. And they that ſaid not theſe high blaſphemies againſt him, yet ἔλεγον ὅτι ἐξέστη, ſaid that this making of diſciples &c. was a kind of exceſs, an height, a tranſportation, and this was the conceit of his own kinred. They had a ſpecial prejudice againſt him, ch.6.4. and did not believe on him, Joh. 7.5. And accordingly hearing this report of his doing theſe high things, came out κρατῆσαι to get him into their hands, and have him home with them, ἔλεγον γάρ, for they ſaid that he was guilty of ſome exceſſes. As for that interpretation which renders it of fainting through hunger, though it be favoured by † learned men, yet it ſeems not to have any ground in the nature of the word, ἐξίσασθαι, nor in κρατῆσαι, (being here joyn'd not with a Genitive, but an Accuſative caſe) nor in any circumſtances of the Context, ſave onely the caſual mention of their having no time to eat bread, v. 20. (which one thing hath ſeemed to ſome to be of ſo much force, *Act.*10.10. as to cauſe them to render the ἔκστασις that fell on S. Peter, no more but a ſleep, that ſuch as faint, or are diſpirited through hunger, fall into, when the viſion that is added to it, ſhews that it was a trance, into which he was caſt by God,) but is made improbable by many other circumſtances. Of the word ἔκστασις, ſee Note on *Act.*10. c.

Paraphraſe.

* abode on the ſea, καθῆσθαι ἐν.

1. AND he began again to teach by the ſea ſide, and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, ſo that he entred into a ſhip and * ſate in the ſea;] and the whole multitude was by the ſea on the land,

1. And again he taught by the ſea ſide, and the people flocked ſo together about him, that he was foreed to go into a boat, and ſit in that upon the water;

2. And he taught them many things by parables [and ſaid unto them in his doctrine,]

2. And as he taught them, thus he ſaid,

3. Hearken, Behold there went out a ſower to ſowe,

4. And it came to paſs, as he ſowed, ſome fell [by the way ſide,] and the fowls of the air came, and devoured it up.

4. See Mat. 13. 4.

5. And ſome fell on ſtony ground, where it had not much earth, and immediately it ſprang up, becauſe it had no depth of earth.

6. But when the ſun was up, it was ſcorched, and becauſe it had no root, it withered away.

7. And ſome fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up and choaked it, and it yeelded no fruit.

8. And other fell on good ground, and did yeeld fruit, that ſprang up, and encreaſed, and brought forth ſome thirty, and ſome ſixty, and ſome [an hundred.]

13. And he ſaith unto them, Know ye not this parable? And how then will ye know all parables?]

13. But as parables are a way of obſcuring doctrine to the careleſs heedleſs hearers, ſo have they a ſpecial energy in them, which worketh moſt ſharply, and with greateſt quickneſs on the diligent hearer, ſuch as diſciples are ſuppoſed to be (ſee Mat. 13.13.) and therefore 'tis ſtrange you ſhould not underſtand my meaning in this parable, which is an eſſay of what may be expected of you in others the like hereafter, this being the way, in which I ſhall commonly ſpeak unto you.

21. And he ſaid unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a buſhel, or under a bed, † and not to be ſet on a candleſtick?]

† Is it not that it may be put? οὐχ ἵνα ἐπὶ τὴν

21. The Goſpel of Chriſt whereſoever 'tis received, as it ought, is diffuſive of it ſelf, is as a candle lighted and brought into a room, on purpoſe to ſhine forth to others, in communicating the light we have (ſee Mat. 5.15.) and in actions of the light, Chriſtian performances.

22. For there is nothing hid which * ſhall not be manifeſted, † neither was any thing kept ſecret, but that it ſhould come abroad.]

* which ſhould not be made manifeſt, ὃ ἐὰν μὴ φανερωθῇ

† nor was it made ſecret οὐδὲ ἐγένετο ἀπόκρυφον.

22. For the doctrine which is taught you by me in, or out of parables, muſt be both practiſed and publiſhed by you, and therefore (for no other reaſon) it is revealed to you, and that by way of parables, which are the obſcuring of it, that having acquired the underſtanding of them you may ſet the more value on them for your own practiſe, and be more induſtrious to communicate them to others, See Mat. 10. 26.

23. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.]

23. And therefore let there be a weight laid on theſe and all other my words, and be ſure you lay them up to do accordingly.

24. And he ſaid unto them, * Take heed what you hear, with what meaſure ye mete it ſhall be meaſured to you, and unto you that hear ſhall more be given.]

* conſider βλέπετε

24. And he ſaid unto them, Mark diligently (and practiſe accordingly) what you hear, As you deal with God, ſo will he deal with you, and to thoſe of you that heed and make uſe of what is ſaid to you, more knowledge ſhall be revealed.

25. For he that hath, to him ſhall be given, and he that hath not, from him ſhall be taken, even that he hath.]

25. For he that makes uſe of that grace and knowledge which he hath (ſee note on Mat. 13. b.) he ſhall improve extremely; the very uſing his talent well, the exerciſing of Chriſtian virtues, and the teaching them to others, is a ſure way of improving it, and beſides Gods bleſſing and grace to him, is a great though inſenſible addition alſo; and on the contrary, that which is not uſed, decreaſes and moulders away, and 'tis juſt with God to withdraw it.

26. And he ſaid, So is the kingdom of God, as if a man ſhould caſt ſeed into the ground,]

26. To which purpoſe he uſed another parable, The ſtate of Chriſtianity is as if a man ſhould till and ſowe his ground,

27. And ſhould ſleep and riſe night and day, and the ſeed ſhould ſpring and grow up he knoweth not how.]

27. And having done ſo, never do more toward the growing of the corn, but go to bed at night, and riſe in the morning, and yet without any contribution of his, it comes up and grows inſenſibly, he knows not how.

28. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of her ſelf, firſt the * blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.]

* green corn like graſſe, then the ſtalk, or, ſtaik, then the full corn on the ſtalk, χόρτον, εἶτα στάχυν, εἶτα πλήρη σῖτον ἐν τῷ στάχυϊ.

28. For the earth it ſelf by its own ſtrength (and the continual warmth and influences of heaven, and the dews and ſhowres that God is pleaſed to afford it) without any farther labour or daily aſſiſtance of the husbandman, completes the whole work, ſends out a ſpear of graſs, as it were, firſt, then a blade &c.

b.

29. But when the fruit † is [b] brought forth, immediately he putteth in the ſickle, becauſe the harveſt is come.]

† is ripe

29. And when it is perfectly ripe, he reaps it in the time of harveſt, ſo when Chriſt hath made known our duty to us, he expects, without more ado, that we ſhould ſet to the performance of it, make good reſolutions, bring forth good fruit, and when we have finiſhed our courſe, he then takes us to himſelf, and rewards us, and whenſoever Chriſts word and grace meets with an honeſt heart, thus it is upon his firſt being revealed to him.

30. And

30. And he ſaid, Whereunto ſhall I liken the kingdom of God? or with what compariſon ſhall we compare it?]

30. The ſame alſo is the meaning of that other parable.

31. It is like a grain of muſtard ſeed, which when it is ſown in the earth, is leſs then all the ſeeds that be in the earth.]

31. The ſtate of Chriſtianity is like to the ſowing of muſtard-ſeed, There the word and grace of Chriſt is ſown in the heart, as a little grain of muſtard-ſeed in a garden, It is ſmall and unconſiderable at the ſowing, as the muſtard-ſeed is the leaſt of all ſeeds.

32. But when it is ſowed, it groweth up, and becometh greater then all herbs, and ſhooteth out great branches, ſo that the fowls of the air may lodge under the ſhadow of it.]

32. But being ſow'd, as the muſtard-ſeed comes up, and within a while grows into a tree (Lu.13.19.) and hath branches big enough for birds (to build neſts in, and rooſt, Lu.13.19. or) to be defended from ſun or weather in them, ſo doth that in the honeſt heart bring forth moſt abundantly, by the grace and bleſſing of God upon the uſe of his talents of grace.

33. And with many ſuch parables ſpake he the word unto them [as they were able to hear it.]

33. In ſuch a manner as was moſt intelligible, & withall moſt profitable for them.

34. But without a parable ſpake he not unto them, and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his diſciples.

* on that day, ἐν ἐκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ.

35. And [* the ſame day] when the even was come, he ſaith unto them, Let us paſs over unto the other ſide.

35. on a certain time, Mat.8.23.

† as he was, into the ſhip, ὡς ἦν ἐν τῷ πλοίῳ.

36. And when they had ſent away the multitude, they took him [† even as he was] in the ſhip, and there were alſo with him other little ſhips.

36. alone without the multitude.

37. And there aroſe a great [c] ſtorm of wind,] and the waves beat into the ſhip ſo that it was now full.

37. tempeſt of wind and rain together. c.

38. And he was in the hinder part of the ſhip aſleep on a pillow, and they awake him, and ſay unto him, Maſter, [careſt thou not that we periſh?]

38. We are ready to be drowned, and wilt thou continue aſleep, and take no care to preſerve us?

39. And he aroſe and rebuked the wind, and ſaid unto the ſea, Peace, be ſtill, and the wind ceaſed, and there was a great calm.

40. And he ſaid unto them, Why are ye ſo fearfull? [How is it that ye have no faith?]

40. How ſhould it be poſſible for you after ſo many evidences and experiments of my power, and readineſs to preſerve you, not at all to truſt or rely on me?

41. And they feared exceedingly, and ſaid one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the ſea obey him?

Annotations on Chap. IV.

a. ἵνα βλέποντες, that ſeeing &c.

V.12. That ſeeing, &c.] Theſe words ἵνα βλέποντες, that ſeeing &c. note the obduration of the Iſraelites, which fell on them from Gods deſertion, as a puniſhment of their not making uſe of the talents which he had given them, and ſo this verſe is anſwerable and parallel to *Mat.*13.15. or the end of that place in * Iſaiah, recited and ſet down at large in S. Matthew, but here, and ſo alſo *Lu.*8.10. and *Joh.*12.40. epitomized and ſumm'd up, μήποτε ἴδωσι, leſt they ſhould ſee &c. And therefore from the importance of the whole place in Iſaiah and Matthew, the ſenſe of it (here, where 'tis ſhortly recited) muſt be taken, viz. that upon their ſhutting their eyes, that is, voluntary obduration of heart againſt God, God withdraws his grace, which otherwiſe he would have afforded them, and doth afford others. To which 'tis conſequent, that they ſee not at all. Agreeably to that of Procopius on Iſaiah p. 102. Βλέπω παρὼν αὐλοῖς ἀπὸ τῆς ὀφθείσης χάριτος, τὸ μὴ ἰδεῖν συμβεβηκὸς μυσάντων τὰς ὀφθαλμούς, The power of ſeeing was preſent to them from the grace of him that was ſeen, Their not ſeeing was an accident or conſequent of their ſhutting their eyes. And ſo here their not being able to ſee, for want of light (the obſcurity of thoſe Parables in which God ſpake to them,) was a puniſhment of their winking, and not being willing to ſee.

* c.6.9,10.

b. παραδῷ

V.29. Brought forth] The word παραδῷ is here in an unuſual ſenſe, and ſignifies the ripeneſs of the fruit, that which *Lu.*8.14. is τελεσφορῆσιν, to bring to perfection, for ſo the Hebrew שלם which ſignifies to be entire, perfect, complete, is by the Septuagint rendred, παραδίδωμι, *Iſa.*38.13. becauſe when fruit is ripe, it doth, as it were, deliver it ſelf to the gatherer.

c. λαίλαψ

V.37. Storm of wind] Λαίλαψ is defined by Heſychius, ἀνέμος συσσὼν μετ' ὑετῶν, a tempeſt of wind with rain.

CHAP. V.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND they came over unto the other ſide of the ſea, into the [countrey of the Gadarens.]

1. the coaſt where Gadara, Mat.8.28. and Gergeſa lie together, See ch.8.10.

2. And when he was come out of the ſhip, immediately there met him out of the tombs [a man with an unclean ſpirit,]

2. two then Matth. 8.28. which were in a phrenſie poſſeſt with devils, in a raving lunatick manner of unrulineſs. a.

3. Who] had his dwelling among the tombs, and no man could bind him, no not with chains,

3. And one of them here mention'd (as the other alſo in S. Matthew.)

4. Becauſe that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked aſunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces, neither could any man tame him,

5. And alwaies night and day he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himſelf with ſtones.

6. But when he ſaw Jeſus afar off, he ran and worſhipped him.

7. And cried with a loud voice, and ſaid, What have I to do with thee, Jeſus, thou Son of the moſt high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou [b] torment me not.]

7. And the devil that poſſeſt him made uſe of the mans voice, to cry aloud to Jeſus, and ſay, Let me alone, thou eternal Son of the ſupreme God, I beſeech thee earneſtly for Gods ſake, who hath permitted me thus to poſſeſs and wound this man, not preſently to throw me into my chains. b.

8. (For he ſaid unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean ſpirit,)

9. and the devils that poſſeſt him anſwered Jeſus, ſaying

9. And he asked him, What is thy name? [and he anſwered, ſaying, My name is Legion, for we are many.]

'Tis not any peculiar name that is competible to us, unleſſe that of a Legion, or regiment of ſix thouſand ſouldiers among the Romans, there be ſo many of us in this man.

10. And the devil was very importunate in his requeſt, that if he were forced to goe out of that man, he might yet ſtay in thoſe parts, and get ſome other habitation.

10. And he beſought him much that he would not ſend them away out of the countrey.]

11. Now there were nigh unto the mountains a great herd of ſwine feeding,

12. Permit us to enter into the ſwine, Mat. 8. 31.

12. And all the devils beſought him ſaying, [Send us into the ſwine, that we may enter into them.]

13. And althought this was foreſeen by Chriſt to be the certain drowning of the ſwine, and though he ſeldome wrought any deſtructive miracle, yet that the people might ſee the virulency of theſe devils, if not reſtrain'd by him, and ſo the mercy done to thoſe that were poſſeſt, and likewiſe the mercy now approaching to their countrey by the coming of Chriſt, if they will accept of it, and withall to trie whether their love to their ſwine was greater, then that to their own ſouls, he permitted the devils to goe into the ſwine, that is, forbad them not, did not violently reſtrain them.

13. And forthwith Jeſus gave them leave,] And the unclean ſpirits went out, and entred into the ſwine, and the herd ran violently down a ſteep place into the ſea (they were about two thouſand) and were choaked in the ſea.

14. the inhabitants of the city and the whole countrey.

14. And they that fed the ſwine fled, and told it in the city, and in the countrey. And [they] went out to ſee what it was that was done.

15. And that ſight wrought an awe & a reverence in them, an acknowledgment of the Power of Chriſt that had done it.

15. And they come to Jeſus, and ſee him that was poſſeſſed with the devil and had the Legion ſitting, and cloathed, and † in his right mind, [and they were afraid.]

† ſober, of, in temper, σωφρονοῦντα

16. and they that had been preſent all the time, gave them the whole relation, the mercy to the poor man, and the drowning of the ſwine,

16. And they that ſaw it, told them how it befell to him that was poſſeſſed with the devil, and alſo concerning the ſwine.

17. And when they heard the one with the other, their love they earneſtly beſought him.

17. And the y began to pray him] to depart out of their coaſts. of the world prevailed ſo farre above their care of that which was ſo much, more pretious, that

18. And when he was come into the ſhip, he that had been poſſeſſed with the devil, prayed him, that he might be with him.

19. Howbeit Jeſus ſuffered him not, but ſaid unto him, Goe home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compaſſion on thee.

20. And he departed, and began to publiſh in Decapolis, how great things Jeſus had done for him: and all men did marvaile.

21. And when Jeſus was paſſed over again by ſhip unto the other ſide, much people gathered unto him, and he was nigh unto the ſea.

c. 22. And behold, there cometh [c] one of the rulers of the ſynagogue, Jairus by name, and when he ſaw him he fell at his feet,

23. and I am confident ſhe will recover.

23. And beſought him greatly, ſaying, My little daughter lyeth at the point of death. I pray thee come and lay thine hands on her, that ſhe may be healed, [and ſhe ſhall live.]

24. And Jeſus went with him, and much people followed him, and thronged him.

25. And a certain woman which had an iſſue of bloud twelve years,

26. And had ſuffered many things of many Phyſitians, and had ſpent all that ſhe had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worſe,

27. When ſhe had heard of Jeſus, came in the preaſe behind, and touched his garment,

28. Being thus confidently perſwaded in her minde that the leaſt touch of his clothes would cure her.

28. For ſhe ſaid, If I may touch but his clothes I ſhall be whole.]

29. And ſtraightway the [d] [fountain] of her blood was dryed up, and ſhe felt in her body that ſhe was healed of that * plague.

* diſeaſe, μάστιγος

30. Some cure had been wrought by touching him,

30. And Jeſus immediately knowing in himſelf, [that virtue had gone out of him] turned him about in the preaſe, and ſaid, Who touched my clothes?

31. And his diſciples ſaid unto him, Thou ſeeſt the multitude thronging thee, and ſayeſt thou, Who touched me?

32. And he looked round about to ſee her, that had done this thing.

33. Being by what had been wrought in her aſſured of his divine power, and ſo

33. But the woman [fearing, and trembling, knowing what was done in her] came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth. ſtrucken into a great awe and reverence towards him,

34. And he ſaid unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole, go in peace, and be whole † of thy plague.

† from thy diſeaſe, μάστιγός σου.

35. While he yet ſpake, there came from the ruler of the Synagogues houſe certain which ſaid, Thy daughter is dead; why troubleſt thou the maſter any further?

36. Aſſoon as Jeſus heard the word that was ſpoken, he ſaith unto the ruler of the Synagogue, Be not afraid, only beleive.

37. And the father and the mother Lu. 8. 51. leading him the way, he permitted none of his own company to goe into the houſe along with him,

37. And he ſuffered no man † to follow him,] ſave Peter, and James, and John the brother of James.

38. And he cometh to the houſe of the ruler of the Synagogue, and ſeeth [the tumult, * and them that wept and wailed greatly.]

39. And

39. And when he was come in he ſaith unto them, Why make ye this adoe, and weep? the damoſell is not dead but ſleepeth.

40. And they laughed him to ſcorn: but when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damoſel, and [them that were with him] and entreth in where the damoſell was lying. 40. Peter, and James and John v. 37.

41. And he took the damoſell by the hand, and ſaid unto her, Talitha cumi, which is being interpreted, Damoſell (I ſay unto thee) ariſe.

42. And ſtraightway the damoſell aroſe and walked, for ſhe was of the age of twelve years, and they were aſtoniſhed with a great aſtoniſhment.

43. And he charged them ſtreightly that no man ſhould know it] and commanded that ſomething ſhould be given her to eate. 43. See Mat. 8. note b.

Annotations on Chap. V.

V. A man &c.] What is here affirmed of a man in the Singular number, is Mat. 8. 28. Δύο δαιμονιζόμενοι two damoniackes, ſo in like manner where c. 10. 46. there is mention but of one blind man, Bartimæus, in Matthew ch. 20. 30. there are δύο τυφλοὶ two blind men, which difference hath nothing of weight in it, becauſe Matthew which names two, ſaying the truth, the other which names but one, yet not denying that there were more, muſt neceſſarily ſay true alſo, and it being not pretended, that each of the Evangeliſts doth relate all that was done by Chriſt, but poſitively affirmed by John, c. 21. 35. that all that was done, was not by any of them related, there is conſequently nothing ſtrange in this of S. Marke, which in either place omits the mention of one of them. So when Matthew mentions the bringing the aſſe and the colt, both c. 21. 7. S. Mark onely mentions the foale, c. 11. 7. Of the ſame pitch it is (viz. matter of very light importance, farre from a reall exception againſt the authority of this Goſpel) that the order of things related it not always the ſame in him and S. Matthew. As when the cure of the Paralytick is mentioned by Marke in the ſecond ch. and the drowning of the ſwine not till the fifth, Matthew mentions this before the former. And whereas the cure of the withered hand is in Mark c. 3. and not mentioned in Matthew till c. 12. in Matthew it falls out to be ſubſequent to many relations, to which Mark makes it antecedent. So the cure of Peters mother-in-law is by Mark ſet before that of the Leper, and by Matthew after, ſo the caſting the broakers out of the Temple is ſet down by Matthew, c. 21. 12. before the curſing of the figtree, v. 19. whereas S. Mark c. 11. 13. ſets down the ſtory of the figtree, and the caſting out of the broakers, after, v. 15. And perhaps other examples of the like may be found by thoſe, which ſhall more diligently compare them, But all theſe and (if there were) many more nothing derogating from the fidelity of the writers, who undertaking to make ſome relations of what was done by Chriſt, do no where undertake or oblige themſelves to obſerve the order, wherein every thing ſucceeded, that being generally extrinſecall, and of no importance to the relations.

a. Δύο δαιμονιζόμενοι.

V. 7. Torment me not] That βασανίζειν among other ſignifications is taken for coercing or impriſoning, hath been ſaid, Note on Mat. 8. e. and ſo Mat. 18. 34. βασανισταὶ ſignifies jaylers. And ſo here when the Devill deſires, and adjures Chriſt, that he ſhould not βασανίζειν, it ſignifies ſending him to his priſon, to his chaines, Jude 6. and 2 Pet. 2. 4. for ſo in S. Lukes relation of it, Lu. 8. 31. they beſought him that he would not command them to goe out into the deep, that is, that he would not ſend them to hell, (ſee Note on Lu. 8. d.) their place of puniſhment, and reſtraint, where they were (inſtead of going up and down Job 1. 7.) to be kept cloſe and tormented alſo, τετηρημένους εἰς κρίσιν in S. Peter 2 Pet. 2. 4. kept in cuſtody to be puniſhed. And accordingly S. Matthew reades, Art thou come ὧδε πρὸ καιροῦ βασανίσαι, Mat 8. 28. to ſend us to priſon before the time of our going thither, ſignifying this to be a more tolerable ſtate that now they were in, leſſe of reſtraint, and miſery, then, when time ſhould come, they were to expect.

b. Βασανίζειν. Βασανισταὶ

V. 22. One of the Rulers of the Synagogue] What is meant by ἀρχισυνάγωγος here, or ἄρχων συναγωγῆς Lu. 8. 41. the chiefe or ruler of the Synagogue, will the better appear, if we firſt conſider, what here we finde, that there were more then one of them, and therefore Jairus is here called εἷς τῶν ἀρχισυναγώγων one of theſe chiefe or rulers; and that not onely in divers, but in the ſame Synagogue, Act. 13. 15. For * συναγωγὴ here ſignifies the leſſer conſiſtory, or that of any particular city (as that is oppoſite to the great Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem) the judgment of twenty three, who were now able to puniſh offences not capital, to ſcourge, &c. which is therefore called ſcourging in their ſynagogues. And although among the Rulers thereof there was generally one chiefe in learning, and proportionably in authority, who both here in the Goſpel, and in the life of Alexander Severus, and in the Conſtitutions of the Emperours is called ἀρχισυνάγωγος or princeps ſynagogæ, the head or cheife, who impoſed hands on all thoſe which were electedor admitted into the conſiſtory, yet becauſe the reſt had power of Judicature there, with and under him, therefore not onely he but the reſt alſo, are all contained under this common name of ἀρχισυνάγωγοι, rulers of the Synagogue, both here, and Acts 13. 15. A difference there is between the rulers of the Synagogues, and thoſe that are called the rulers of the people, but no more then this, The former are thoſe in particular cities, but the latter thoſe of the Sanhedrim in Jeruſalem. Both of them are in other places called ſimply ἄρχοντες Rulers, as Mat. 9. 18, 23. Lu. 18. 18. ſpeaking of thoſe in particular cities, and in other places, when the Context belongs to Jeruſalem, as Lu. 23. 13, 35. Joh. 7. 26, 48. 'tis clear that the rulers called ſo ſimply, muſt be thoſe of the great Sanhedrim. For the former of theſe it is to be obſerved, what Maimonides tells us, that there were two kinds of meetings in particular cities among the Jewes, בתי הכנסיות, domus congregationum, the houſes of aſſemblies, where they did meet to pray and hear the Law every Sabbath, as they did at the Temple in Jeruſalem, and בתי המדרש, houſes of information or expoſition of the law. Theſe were either more private, where any Doctor entertained Scholars, ſuch was the School of Tyrannus, Act. 19. 8. (And of this ſort 'tis ſaid there were above 400. in Jeruſalem, and many in Iſrael in all places) Or elſe more publick, where their conſiſtories ſat to reſolve differences of the Law in particular cities. As for the Συνέδριον or great Sanhedrim which was in Jeruſalem, that is known to conſiſt of 72. and was made up of chief Prieſts. Elders of the people, and Scribes. 1 Ἀρχιερεῖς, the chiefe prieſts, perhaps the heads of the 24. Courſes, 1 Chron. 24. (ſee Note on Acts 4. a.) 2ly. Πρεσβύτεροι, The elders or heads of the families, chiefe men among their tribes, who were farther choſen, and by impoſition of hands received into the Sanhedrim, and ſo made Judges there, and theſe are called the Elders of the people, Mat. 21. 23. 26. 3,47. and of Iſrael Acts 4. 8. Then thirdly, for the γεγραμματεῖς Scribes, thoſe were they that had been taught γεγράμματα, Joh. 7.15. the bookes, or writings, of the Law, ἱερὰ γεγράμματα 2 Tim. 3.15. the holy writings or Scriptures, and inſtructed in the meaning of them, thoſe that had been ſonnes of the Prophets, that is, brought up in their ſchooles, but having not obtained the Spirit, or miſſion of Prophets at Gods hands, were ſometimes thought fit to be choſen into the Sanhedrim. Theſe I ſay, are called Scribes, and wiſemen, and accordingly the Jewes have an ancient ſaying, that After the age of the Prophets (that is, when the Spirit of prophecy was no more given) ſucceed the age of the Scribes. Though of theſe ſome did only keep ſchoole, and teach the Law, and then are ſtyled ſimply γεγραμματεῖς Scribes, whereas the others that were taken into the great Sanhedrim, are called Scribes of the people, Mat. 2. 4. and ſo Jud. 5 10. where the Hebrew hath, the Governours, the Chaldee Paraphraſe hath, the Scribes of Iſrael. By this appears the difference of theſe words ſo frequent in the Goſpels, Rulers, and Rulers of the people, and of the Synagogue, Elders, and Scribes, and, Scribes of Iſrael, and, of the people, which being here put together all in this place, may be uſefull for the illuſtrating many places of Scripture.

V. 29. Fountain] The Hebrew מקר ſignifies two things, properly a fountain, or ſpring of water, and Metaphorically ῥύσις a profluvium or flux; for a fountain we have it, Zach. 13. 1. where the Septuagint, that render it τόπος a place, read, it ſeems, מקום place, in ſtead of מקור fountain. For the Flux, ſuch as after childbirth, 'tis uſed Lev. 12. 7. where yet the Septuagint read πηγὴ a fountain, accordingly here S. Mark uſeth the ſame word πηγὴ, whereas S. Luke readeſ πηγὴ ῥύσις a flowing of blood, a ſore diſeaſe, which ſhe had for twelve years ſpace. Agreeable hereunto it is, that artificiall iſſues made in any part of the body are by Phyſicians called fountinels, or little fountains. d. ῥύσις

And Herod the king was exceeding sorrowfull and much troubled, not only that he should be obliged to shed blood upon his birth day (see note on Mat. 14. b.) but especially as having a reverence and kindnesse to John, v. 20. and also fearing the inconvenience that might come of it by reason of the authority which John had with the people, Mat. 14. and yet because he had sworn so publickly before those that were at the feast with him, that they might not discern either imprudence, or inconstancy in him, imprudence in promising, or inconstancy in not performing, he granted her request.

Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. Ἐνέχων

V. 19. Had a quarrel] Ἐνεῖχεν αὐτῷ which here (as alſo Luke 11. 53.) is to be rendred, was angry with him, will be beſt underſtood by the notion of the Hebrew שטם, which is rendred by it in the Old Teſtament, That ſignifies to hate, to hinder, or to ſet ones ſelf againſt another, to be an adverſary, and is rendred by ἐγκοτέω, being angry, as of Eſau againſt Jacob Gen. 27. 41. and Pſal. 54. 4. by μνησικακέω bearing injuries in mind, deſigning revenge, Gen. 50. 15. and ſo by ἐνέχω in the ſame ſenſe, Gen. 49. 23. Accordingly Heſychius ἐνεῖχον, ἐχόλων (it ſhould be ἐχολῶντο) ὠργίζοντο, they were wroth, or angry, and both he, and Phavorinus, ἐνέχει, μνησικακεῖ, ἔγκειται (or perhaps ἐγκοτεῖ) he bears the injurie in mind, ſets him againſt, or is angry: So Euſtathius, ἐνέχειν, is τὸ κατά τινος ἔχειν, to have ſomewhat againſt any one.

b. συνετήρει.

V. 20. Obſerved him] What συνετήρει here ſignifies, is a matter of ſome Queſtion. That which ſeems moſt probable is, that it ſignifies, as the literal notation imports, and as the Vulgars cuſtodiebat expreſſeth, kept him guarded, and ſo ſecured and preſerved him. For though he were impriſoned by him before, yet it is clear, that he ſuffered him not to be hurt by any; and accordingly Herodias, though ſhe bare him a grudge, and would have killed him, yet ſhe could not, v. 19. And the reaſon is rendred in this verſe, for he bare ſuch a reverence to him for his juſtice and piety, that he preſerved, and guarded and kept him ſafe from her malice.

c. Εὐκαίρῳ ἡμέρᾳ

V. 21. A convenient day] Ἡμέρα εὐκαίρος is a feſtival day, a day of vacancy, יום טוב, in Hebrew, a good day, that is, a ſolemn feſtival, a day of reſt from labour, ſet apart for feſtivity, from whence hath the Gloſſary εὔκαιρος, σχολάζουσα, 'tis a day of vacancy, and εὐκαιρῶ vaco, as 'tis here uſed v. 31. ὥστε φαγεῖν εὐκαίρων, they had not leiſure to eat, and Phavorinus εὐκαιρεῖν, ἐν σχολῇ ἔχειν, (perhaps it ſhould be read, εὐσχολεῖν, σχολὴν ἔχειν, or ἄγειν,) to be vacant, and ſuch, it is clear, was this, Herods birth day, whereon he made a ſupper for his Lords, &c. and whereon there was a dauncing, ver. 22.

d. Σπεκουλάτωρ

V. 27. Executioner] Speculator in the ſtories of the Roman Emperours ſignifies a ſouldier of the guard, and agreeably, when we read (in the ſtories of Pharaoh and Nebuchadnezzar) the captain of the guard, the interpreter of the Chaldee Paraphraſe generally reads princeps ſpiculatorum. So the captains of fifties, 1 Kings 9. 11, 13. were captains of the Kings guards, which being (by the cuſtome of Jewes, Ægyptians, Chaldeans, and Romans) executioners of thoſe whom the King condemned to death, it is here therefore appointed to one of theſe to goe, and behead the Baptiſt, which accordingly is done.

e. Πρασιαὶ

V. 39. By companies] Of the manner of accubitus, or lying at meat we have formerly ſpoken, and ſo of the cuſtome of eating in gardens, and lying on beds, or areolæ, or πρασιαὶ in them (ſee Note on Mat. 8. g.) All that will be needful here to adde, is the obſerving of the phraſes of πρασιαὶ πρασιαὶ, Συμπόσια Συμπόσια, ἀνὰ ἀνά, the two former clearly taken from the Hebrews, who want phraſes of diſtribution, and uſe doubling of words in their ſtead. So δύο δύο v. 7. two two, (like איש איש, אדם אדם man man) that is, man by man, one by one (in imitation of which is εἷς καθ' εἷς Joh. 8. 9.) And for the ἀνὰ ἀνὰ it is the very form uſed by Phyſicians in their Recipe's, to note the ſeveral proportions of each ingredient, as here the number of the gueſts, which were ranked or marſhall'd together by Chriſt the ἀρχιτρίκλινος, who, as the ὀψοδότης Συμποσίε, Maſter of the feaſt, Joh. 2. or the ἑλεαρχὶ in Athenæus, (for which we read corruptly ἑλεαπὶ in Heſychius) hath the care of preparing and ordering the feaſt and gueſts, and ſo ranks them here, an hundred in one rank, fifty in another. Another phraſe like unto this we have Lu. 9. 14. κατακλίνατε κλισίας ἀνὰ πεντήκοντα, make them lie down fifty in a bed.

f. Ἀγρὸς

V. 46. Country] Ἀγρὸς which literally and primarily ſignifies a field, ſignifieth alſo the region or country about, all beſide the city, Ἀγρὸς ὁ ἔξω τῆς πόλεως χώρος, the region without the city, ſaith Phavorinus, and ſo the Latine, ager, is uſually taken.

And in thir matter of washing, many other ordinances there are, which they think themselves bound to observe, as laws divine, as the washing of cups to drink in, of pots containing somewhat above a pint, of brazen vessels (when earthen vessels, if defiled, were to be broken) and also of beds, on which they did eat then, as now on tables. b. c,

And he said unto them, Is not this fair worship and serving of God, to reject all the prime commands of God, the most considerable parts of religion, and act directly contrary to them, and satisfie and content your selves with some external performances, which are not at all commanded by God, but only by your selves or your Rabbins?

15. As for your question v. 5. about washing, know this, that the true and real pollutions, which God would have all men to avoid, are not those which come from the meats and drinks, and such external things, but those of wicked thoughts and words and actions, those are the great defilements principally aimed at in the legal prohibitions, and forbidden by them.

Because his heart, or soul being the principal part of him, and that which alone is capable of defilement, all sin being an act of his will and choise, the meats which we take in, enter only into the stomach and belly, not into the heart, and being taken in, if there be any polluted part in them, that is voided and carried out in the draught, and by the purging out those dregs, all meats are made clean and nutritive.

Annotations on Chap. VII.

a. Κοινὸς

V. 2. Defiled] The word κοινὸς ſignifies two things, polluted and common, and is no more to be rendred common, when the ſenſe is for unclean, then it ſhould be rendred unclean when the ſenſe is for common. From this firſt notion of the word for polluted, is the Latine word cœnum, a ſink or mire, and the verb κοινῶ is turned into the old Latine, quino, from whence inquino to pollute is now in uſe, which notes this notion of it for polluted to be an ancient and primitive, not any Metaphorical ſecondary notion of it: In this notion it is uſed for any thing that is forbidden by the Ceremonial laws of the Jewiſh worſhip, as being oppoſite to clean or lawful; Thus meat which is by that law forbidden, is called κοινὸν polluted, 1 Mac. 1.50. ὕεια καὶ κτηνῶν κοινὰ, ſwines fleſh, and forbidden, polluted or unclean cattel, and ſo v. 65. Thus Acts 10. 14. and 11. 8. and Rom. 14. 14. Heb. 10. 29. and from thence κοινῶν to defile, Mat. 15. 11. and in ſeveral other places. So ſay the Grammarians, κοινὸν ſignifies βδέλυκτον, ἀκάθαρτον, abominable, or unclean, that is, ſuch as in the reputation, and by the prohibition of the law, are made ſuch. Thus when not by ſtrict law of Moſes, but (which among the Phariſees was all one) by the tradition of their Elders, or injunctions of the Rabbins among them, they were to waſh, whenſoever they eat any meat, hands unwaſh'd at ſuch a time, are κοιναὶ χεῖρες, polluted hands, that is, guilty of the breach of thoſe laws, which in their opinion required this conſtant waſhing before meat. So Maimonides on* Miſnaioth. Dicimus non licere homini panem edere, antequam manus laverit: We ſay a man muſt not eat bread before he waſh his hands. And lib. Tad. * tract. Berachoth, Quicunque comederit panem, ſuper quem dicitur benedictio Hammotſi, Benedictus qui produxit panem, opus eſt ut lavet manus antè & poſt, Whoſoever eates the bread, over which they recite the benediction Hammotſi, Bleſſed be he that produceth bread, he muſt waſh his hands before and after. By this is noted, not all kind of eating, for ſay the Rabbins, Super illud quod non vocatur propriè panis, over that which is not properly called bread, as cakes made of honey and ſugar and Almonds, &c.) they recite not the benediction Hammotſi. And therefore 'tis not ſimply eating here, but eating bread, v. 2, and 5. To this cuſtome referres that of Joh. 2. 6. where the veſſels of water, which were there at the feaſt, are ſaid to be κατὰ τὸν καθαρισμὸν Ἰουδαίων, according to the Jews cuſtome of waſhing alwayes before meat, that is, ſtood there for that uſe, or purpoſe. Now for the manner of waſhing, what it was, is here deſcrib'd v. 3. πυγμῇ νίψωνται τὰς χεῖρας, they waſh their hands to the wriſt, The word πυγμὴ is the hand up to the wriſt, and is indeed but a part of the χεὶρ in the critical notion of it. For χεὶρ is taken in Homer and Hippocrates and other authors for the whole arme, (of which πήχυς which the Anatomiſts uſe out of Heſiod and ἀκρόχειρ, the extreme part of it, in Hippocrates, is the hand peculiarly) and ſo it ſeems to be taken, 1 Mac. 15. 30. ἡ χεὶρ σὺν τῷ ὤμῳ φέρειν εἰς τὴν πόλιν, to carry the arm, (not hand) with the ſhoulder to the city,

* Tr. Chigigah, c. 2. §. 5.

* vid. Scalig. in Arist. problem p. 127.

city, juſt as in Homer he that ſtroke one on the * ſhoulder with his ſword, is ſaid to have cut off his χεὶρ, that is, his arme doubtleſſe. Agreeably to this notion the word ἀκροχειρίζειν in the Agones ſignifies to cuffe at the armes end, as we call it, and is all one with πυκτεύειν, one of the five exerciſes in the Olympick games. Which makes it clear, that by πυγμὴ is meant the hand with the wriſt (which Theophylact with leſſe exactneſſe renders μέχρι ἀγκῶνος up to the elbow) for ſo 'tis the manner of the Jews to waſh with their hands held up, that the water may come down ſo farre, to ſuch a part of the wriſt, which they call the elevation of their hands, and ſo here πυγμῇ νίψασθαι χεῖρας is clearly to waſh with this elevation, this rite or ceremony uſual in their waſhings, and to waſh thus farre. So Maimonides, Tad. 6.6. ſect. 4. tr. Berachoth, where he asks the queſtion, Quousque pertingat manuum lotio, how farre the waſhing of the hands reacheth, and anſwers עד הפרק uſque ad Perek, by Perek underſtanding that joynt, which ſets on the arme to the hand. So Joſeph Ben Levi, and R. Alphes, that to waſh the hands according to the rite of the Sanctuary, it muſt be ad eam compaginem, quæ ad finem manus eſt, to that joynt, which is at the end of the hand, that is, to the wriſt. So R. Solomo Bar Nathan, before eating bread properly ſo called, requires waſhing of the hands up to the wriſts. See Mr. Po. Miſcell. p. 367, &c. Of this uſe of the word πυγμὴ we have a clear example in Palladius Lauſiac. Hiſt. κεφ. ϱμγ. where Salvia ſeeing Jubinus νιπτῆρα λαβόντα νίψασθαι τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τοὺς πόδας πυγμῇ, take a laver and waſh his hands and his feet πυγμῇ) tels him, that ſhe was now ſixty years old, and that ἐκλὸς τῶν ἄκρων χειρῶν, καὶ αὐτὸ διὰ κοινωνίαν, ἐκ ὄψις ἥψατο ὕδατος, ἢ πῆς, οὐδὲ ἄλλο τι τῶν μερῶν, except her ἄκρων χειρῶν, and that for receiving the Communion, neither her face, nor feet, nor any other part had ever touched water, where though the interpreter Gentianus Hervetus render πυγμῇ palmis, and ἄκρων χειρῶν extremis manibus, yet the matter is clear, that πυγμῇ ſignifies the hands and wriſts together, and, applied to the feet alſo, the feet and ancles, and ἄκρων χειρῶν the hands only, which, as was ſaid, are called ἀκρὸν χειρες, the extreme parts of the χεῖρες, as that ſignifies armes.

b. ἀγορὰ

V. 4. Market] Ἀγορὰ ſignifies any promiſcuous or popular aſſembly, Theſe (ſetting aſide the ſacred aſſemblies, which are otherwiſe expreſs'd) are properly two ſorts, either 1. to buy and sell, or 2dly, to reſort for juſtice, and the word here uſed commonly ſignifies both, or either of theſe, 1. a fair or market, 2dly, a place of judicature, an hall or court of judgement. From the firſt is ἀγοράζω to buy, moſt ordinarily uſed in that ſenſe, and rendred ὠνεῖσθαι by Heſychius, but yet withall ſignifies to that other ſenſe, and is by him rendred not only in common to both, ἐν ἀγορᾷ διατρίβειν, to ſpend ones time in foro, but in particular, reſpecting theſe courts of juſtice, ὅτι ἢ καὶ ὅτι τὸ διαβάλλειν. And ἀγοραῖος, ſaith he, is διαλέγειν, where that of conſulting and debating or pleading, belongs to the Courts not Markets; From this latter notion of the word, comes ἀγοραία, for δικαιολογία giving of juſtice, and Ἀγορεία, Ἕρμις in Heſychius, and ἡ ἀγόρεσθαι for a court day (ſee Note on Acts 19. l.) And ſo 'tis probable that Acts 17. 5. ἀγοραῖοι are the officers of their courts, ſerjeants, &c. and the Jewes taking to them ſome of the wickedeſt of thoſe, and ſo raiſing a tumult, will be parallel to our calling a Conſtable, and raiſing the town, which by malitious men, by the help of wicked officers, may be againſt Apoſtles, or any the beſt of men, as there it was againſt S. Paul. Thus the word ἀγορὰ clearly ſignifies, Acts 16. 19. where at Philippi the owners or maſters of the Pythoneſs, conceiving themſelves injured by S. Paul, apprehended him, and drew him εἰς τὴν ἀγορὰν, to the hall. ἐπὶ τοὺς ἄρχοντας, to the Roman magiſtrates there. The queſtion now being, [in which of theſe ſenſes the word ἀγορὰ ſhould be taken in this place] cannot be decided from the nature of the word, which beares both indifferently, but from the buſineſſe in hand which is the tradition of waſhing among the Jewes. That, we know, was upon any legal uncleanneſſe, or ſuſpicion of having contracted any ſuch. And to that all promiſcuous aſſemblies were lyable, where heathens were uſually intermix'd, or poſſibly Jewes under ſome legal uncleanneſſe. But at this time when the Jewes were under the Roman procurators, their courts of judicature were moſt eminently ſo, the Procurator and his band or guard of ſouldiers being alwayes there. On this ground it is diſtinctly ſaid Joh. 28. 28. that the Jews would not goe in thither, ἵνα μὴ μιανθῶσιν, that they might not be defiled, which teſtimony makes it clear, that going in to the ἀγορὰ in this ſenſe, into the judgment hall, was by the Jews reſolved to be matter of defilement. And there being not any ſo clear teſtimony in the Scripture for the other, as it ſignifies a market, or place of buying and ſelling, it may be thought remarkable to preferre this interpretation of the word in this place, for a court hall, from whence all Jews that came were obliged to waſh themſelves, as from a legal pollution; But I now rather adhere to that, which * Mr. Pocock hath conceived, in reference to ἀγορὰ, as it ſignifies a Market, interpreting the place from a rule of the Rabbines ſet down by Maimonides in theſe words, Tr. Berachoth, c. 6. בוטל אדם ידיו שחרית ומתנחיעל הם כל היום ואינו צריך ליטול ידיו לכל אכילת ואכילה &c. A man ſhall waſh his hands in the morning ſo that it ſhall ſuffice him for the whole day, and he ſhall not need to waſh his hands as oft as he eates; which holds in caſe he doe not avert his mind any other way (that is, goe abroad, or meddle with buſineſſe, goe to the Market &c.) but if he doe ſo, he is bound to waſh his hands as oft as there is need of waſhing; that is, before he eat or pray; And ſo that may well be the meaning of the place, that the Phariſees eat no meat, before they have waſh'd their hands, and in caſe after the morning waſhing they goe to the market, or fall to any worldly buſineſſe, wherein there may be very eaſily ſome legal pollution, they muſt waſh their hands again before they dine.

* Not. Miſcell. c. 9.

c. Βαπτίζεσθαι Niſi ſe lavent

Ib. Waſh] The word here uſed βαπτίζεσθαι (as it differs from νίπτεσθαι v. 3.) ſignifies not only the waſhing of the whole body, (as when 'tis ſaid of Eupolis (which wrote the Tragedy call'd Bapta againſt Alcibiades) that being taken and thrown into the ſea, ἐβαπτίζετο, he was immerſ'd all over, and ſo the baptiſmes of cups &c. in the end of this verſe, is putting into water all over, rincing them) but waſhing any part, as the hands here, by way of immerſion in water, as that is oppoſed to affuſion, or powring water on them. For that is all the difference, ſaith learned Mr. Pocock obſervable in Hebrew betwixt טבל, and נשל, & that the former notes immerſion, the other affuſion of water, both indifferently uſed of any part, and both ſometimes for any kind of waſhing that part. And ſo βαπτίζεσθαι Luke 11. 38. is plainly uſed for the waſhing of hands before meat. What is here affirm'd of the Phariſees waſhings is obſerved by Epiphanius of the Eſſens, who yet ſeem to have had it, as they had much more, from the Pythagorean Philoſophers, whoſe doctrine it is ἡ ἁγνείαν τὴν διὰ καθαρμῶν καὶ λήτρων καὶ περιῤῥαντηρίων, that purity was to be obtained by purgations, and irrigations and waſhings.

d. Ἀφροσύνη

V. 22. Fooliſhneſſe] Of the ſeveral notions that the word ἀφροσύνη imprudence, or folly may be capable of, that which ſeems moſt proper to this place, is that of boaſting, which is the moſt unſeemly thing, and ſo the moſt contrary to prudence, or wiſdome of converſation. In this ſenſe the word is uſed 2 Cor. 11. 1, 19. (and ἄφρονες madneſſe v. 23. (and ch. 12. 6, 11. where he foreſees that his ſpeeches for the juſtifying of his Apoſtleſhip againſt the ſeducers will by them be accounted boaſting, and being ſo he knows it muſt goe for folly. In this notion it will accord, and aſſociate very well with βλασφημία calumny, and ὑπηφανία pride, which immediately precede, the calumniating, faſtuous (inſolent) and vain-glorious behaviour, going ordinarily together.

c. Μογιλαλ

V. 32. Impediment &c.] The word μογιλάλ fignifies one of an impedite, ſtammering ſpeech, one that was tongue-tyed, and to that the next verſe ſeems to agree, where we reade ἐλύθη ὁ δεσμὸς, the ſtring that tyed his tongue, was looſed; and ſo 'tis interpreted here by the Syriack. But it may ſeem here more agreeable, to take it as all one with ἄλαλ ſpeechleſs; for, 1. ſo 'tis recited in the end of the Chapter, v. 37. he makes the deaf to hear, and the dumb to ſpeak, which is evidently their obſervation upon this particular miracle. 2. the Hebrew word אלם, which ſignifies dumb, and is rendred ordinarily ἄλαλ, κωφὸς, ἄφων, ἔνεος, all words to expreſs perfect dumbneſs, is twice rendred μογιλάλ, Exod. 14. 11. and Iſaiah 35. 6. where yet in both places, the ſenſe beares, totally dumb, and not only of a ſtammering ſpeech, In the firſt place, Who makes the dumb, or deaf, the ſeeing, or blind? In the ſecond, The lame ſhall leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb ſhall ſing.

CHAP. VIII.

1. IN thoſe days the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jeſus called his diſciples unto him, and ſaith unto them,

2. I have compaſſion on the multitude, becauſe they have now been with me three daies, and have nothing to eat.

3. either they will faint for want of refreſhment, or elſe to get victuals they will be ſcattered and diſperſed from one another, See note on Mat. 9 m.

3. And if I ſend them away faſting to their own houſes, [they will faint by the way,] for divers of them came from far.

4. And his diſciples anſwered him, From whence can a man ſatisfie theſe men with bread here in the wilderneſs?

5. And he asked them, How many loaves have ye? and they ſaid, Seven.

6. diſtributed them, gave every one of the multitude a portion.

6. And he commanded the people to † ſit down on the ground, and he took the ſeven loaves, and gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his diſciples to ſet before them, and they [did ſet them before the people.]

† lie down ἀναπεσεῖν

7. appointed them to give every one a piece of fiſh.

7. And they had a few ſmall fiſhes, and he bleſſed, and [commanded to ſet them alſo before them.]

8. So they did eat and were filled, and they took up of the broken meat that was leſt, ſeven baskets.

9. And they that had eaten were about four thouſand, and he ſent them away.

10. the coaſts of Magdala, Mat. 15. 39. or Magadon (as S. Jerome and S. Auguſtine there reade it) a village, near which lies another call'd Dalmanutha, ſo that either of them might fitly denominate the whole.

10. And ſtraightway he entred into a ſhip with his diſciples, and came into [* the parts of Dalmanutha.]

11. And the Phariſees came forth and began to † queſtion with him, [ſeeking of him a ſigne from heaven, tempting him.]

† diſpute with him, demanding συζητεῖν αὐτῷ ζητοῦντες

12. Hereupon ſaith Chriſt in a great ſadneſs, This is an infidel perverſe ſort of people, miracles would be but caſt away upon theſe, and therefore they ſhall not be afforded them upon asking, only that great miracle of my riſing from death, typified by that which befell Jonas, Mat. 16. 4. that ſhall be afforded them.

12. And he * ſighed deeply in his ſpirit, and ſaith, Why doth this generation ſeek after a ſigne? Verily I ſay unto you, There ſhall no ſigne be given unto this generation.]

* groaned ἀναστενάξας

13. And he left them, and entring into the ſhip again, departed to the other ſide.

14. Now the diſciples had forgotten to take bread, neither had they in the ſhip with them more then one loaf.

15. See note on Mat. 16. a.

15. And he charged them, ſaying, * Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Phariſees, and of the leaven of [Herod.]

* See, take heed of ὁρᾶτε, βλέπετε

16. This he ſaith to reproach us for our negligence in providing and bringing victuals with us.

16. And they reaſoned among themſelves, ſaying, [It is becauſe we have no bread.]

* doe ye diſcourſe that ye have no bread? doe ye not yet underſtand nor conſider? Τί διαλογίζεσθε ὅτι ἄρτους οὐκ ἔχετε; οὔπω νοεῖτε οὐδὲ συνίετε;

17, 18. Why ſhould you think that my ſpeech ſhould relate to your having no bread? as if I were not able to ſupply that want, will you never underſtand nor conſider what is done before you? will you always be thus ſenſleſs, thus unimprovable, that nothing can enter into you, making no uſe of eyes, or ears, or memory, after all this?

17. And when Jeſus knew it, he ſaith unto them, [Why * reaſon ye becauſe ye have no bread? Perceive ye not yet, neither underſtand? Have ye your heart yet hardned?

18. Having eyes, ſee ye not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember?

19. When I brake the five loaves among five thouſand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They ſay unto him, Twelve.

20. See note on Mat. 16. b.

20. And when the ſeven among four thouſand, how many [baskets] full of fragments took ye up? And they ſaid, Seven.

* How doe ye not conſider? πῶς οὐ συνίετε;

21. How ſtupidly inconſiderate are you?

21. And he ſaid unto them, [* How is it, that ye do not underſtand?]

22. And he cometh to Bethſaida, and they bring a blind man unto him, and beſought him to touch him.

24. And he † [a] looked up, and ſaid, [* I ſee men as trees walking.]

25. After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and [made him looke up,] and he was reſtored and ſaw every man clearly.
25. wrought the cure perfectly upon him,

26. And he ſent him away to his houſe, ſaying, Neither goe into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

27. And Jeſus went out and his diſciples into the townes of [Cæſarea Philippi] and by the way he asked his diſciples, ſaying unto them, Whom do men ſay that I am?
27. Mat. 16. not. c.

28. And they anſwered, John the Baptiſt, but ſome ſay Elias, and others, One of the prophets.

29. And he ſaith unto them, But whom ſay ye that I am? And Peter anſwereth and ſaith unto him, Thou art [the Chriſt.]
29. The long expected Meſſias of the world.

30. And he charged them that they ſhould [tell no man of him.]
30. not proclaim him as yet to any that he was the Chriſt, See Mat. 16. 20.

31. And he began to teach them, that [the ſon of man muſt ſuffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, of the chief prieſts and ſcribes, and be killed, and after three daies riſe again.]
31. the prophecies of the Meſſias could not be fulfilled, unleſſe he ſuffer, and be rejected, and at laſt put to death by the great Conſiſtory or Sanhedrim of Jeruſalem, (ſee note on c. 5. c.) and riſe again the third day.

32. And he ſpake that ſaying [openly.] And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him.
32. in the hearing of the people (ſee note on Joh. 7. a.) or without any figure or parable to involve it, which formerly he had often uſed, Joh. 2. 19. and 3. 14. Mat. 16. 4.

33. But when he had turned about, and looked on his diſciples, he rebuked Peter, [ſaying, Get thee behind me Satan: for thou ſavoureſt not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men.]
33. telling him, that his propoſal was contrary to the will of God, the prophecies, the end of his coming, the ſalvation of men, and ſuch only as was fit for the adverſary of all theſe to propoſe to him.

34. And when he had called the people unto him, with his diſciples alſo, he ſaid unto them, Whoſoever [will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and take up his croſſe and follow me.]
34. will undertake to be my diſciple, muſt reſolve not to care what becomes of his owne ſecular advantages, or of even life it ſelf, but prepare himſelf for the ſame death, that I ſhall die before him, and to follow me as a diſciple both in life and death.

35. For whoſoever will ſave his life, ſhall loſe it; but whoſoever ſhall loſe his life for my ſake and the Goſpels, the ſame ſhall ſave it.
35, 36. And let me tell him that the great care of preſerving himſelf, if it make him to deny or forſake me, in the purſuit of it, ſhall not be a probable courſe of ſtanding him in any ſtead in this world, it ſhall be the very means to deſtroy many, who, if they continued firm to their profeſſion, might probably eſcape (ſee Mat. 16. 25.) and however the advantages to the conſtant, and loſſes to the cowardly, in another life, are infinitely above all other conſiderations.

36. For what ſhall it profit a man if he ſhall gain the whole world and loſe his own ſoul?]

37. Or what ſhall a man give in exchange for his ſoul?]
37. The loſing of life here, if it happen by an unchriſtian deſire to ſave it, or however everlaſting death, is ſo great a loſſe, that nothing elſe is worth having, which is ſo purchaſed.

38. Whoſoever therefore ſhall be aſhamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and ſinfull generation, of him alſo ſhall the ſon of man be aſhamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with his holy Angels.
38. See note on Mat. 16. m. n.

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a. Ἀναβλέπω

V. 24. Looked up] The word ἀναβλέπω joyned with εἰς οὐρανὸν to heaven ſignifies to look up or lift up the eyes that way. So Mat. 14. 19. Mar. 6. 41. and 7. 34. Lu. 9. 16. and thus it is uſed of perſons that did ſee, nay being ſpoken of them, it is ſometimes uſed in that ſenſe, without εἰς added to it, as Lu. 19. 5. Chriſts looking up is his looking up to the tree the mention of Zacchæus's climbing up to the tree, intimating it as clearly, as if it had been expreſs'd. And Lu. 21. 1. it is ſimply to ſee or behold, being ſpoken of Chriſt, who ſitting over againſt the treaſury Mar. 12. 41. ἀνέβλεψε look'd upon them that caſt in &c But the word is generally uſed of blind perſons, and then ſignifies recovering of ſight, See Mat. 11. 5. 20. 34 Mar. 10 51, 52. Lu. 7. 22. 18. 41, 42, 43. Joh. 9. 11. 15. 18. Act. 9. 12, 18. and 22. 13. So ἀνάβλεψις is recovering of ſight, Lu. 4. 18. And therefore in all reaſon it muſt in theſe two places alſo be ſo interpreted.

CHAP. IX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND he ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, [There be ſome of them that ſtand here, which ſhall not taſt of death till they have ſeen the kingdome of God come with power.]
1. In this generation Mat. 24. 34. before the death of ſome that are here, particularly of John, Joh. 21. 22. ſhall be that famous coming of Chriſt as a king for that act of revenge upon his crucifyers, and deſtroying the Jewiſh ſtate, See note on Mat. 3. c. and on Mat. 17. a. and 24. b.

2. And after ſix daies Jeſus taketh with him Peter and James and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themſelves, and he was [transfigured] before them.
2. changed into another form or manner of appearance.

3. And his rayment became ſhining exceeding white as ſnow, ſo as no a fuller on earth can white them.

4. And there appeared unto them Elias with Moſes, and they were talking with Jeſus.

5. And Peter [anſwered and ſaid unto Jeſus Maſter, it is good for us to be here. Let us make three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moſes, and one for Elias.
5, 6. ſaid to Jeſus, Lord, what a bleſſing is this to us to be made partakers of this dignity? let us abide here alwaies. And not knowing what to ſpeak, being together with his tranſportation of joy, in a great fright alſo (as the reſt of them were, ſo that they fell on their faces, Mat. 17. 6.) he ſpake he knew not what, ſaying, We will make three tents or tabernacles, one for thee and us, &c.

6. For he wiſt not what to ſay, for they were ſore afraid.]

7. This is he whom I have appointed to reveale my whole will unto you, whatſoever he tells you is perfectly my will and pleaſure, and he himſelf the only eternall Son of God, whom therefore you and all the world are obliged to hearken to and obey.

7. And there was a cloud that overſhadowed them, and a voice came out of the cloud, ſaying, [This is my beloved ſon, heare him.]

8. Elias and Moſes were vaniſhed out of ſight, and none left.

8. And ſuddenly when they had looked round about, [they ſaw no man any more] ſave Jeſus only and themſelves.

9. And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them that they ſhould tell no man what things they had ſeen, till the ſon of man were riſen from the dead.

10. And they * kept that ſaying with themſelves, queſtioning one with another, what the riſing of the dead ſhould mean.

* held a diſcourſe, diſputing among themſelves, τὸν λόγον ἐκρατησαν πρὸς ἑαυτοὺς ζητοῦντες

11. And upon occaſion of what they ſaw, and heard in the Mount, (ſee note on Mat. 17. a.) they asked Chriſt, ſaying, Is it not reſolved by all that are skill'd in the prophecies of ſcripture, that Elias muſt come, before that great day, that Moſes and Elias talked of with thee?

11. And they asked him ſaying, [† Why ſay the Scribes that Elias muſt firſt come?

† The Scribes ſay ὅτι λέγουσιν οἱ γραμματεῖς;

12, 13. And he anſwered them ſaying, It is no doubt prophecied of Elias, Mal. 4.5. that he ſhould come before the great and terrible day of the Lord, that is, the deſtruction of the Jewes, on purpoſe to convert, and deliver them from it, v. 6. But let me tell you, John Baptiſt is this Elias, and he, ye know, is come already as well as I, and they have uſed him, as Ahab uſed Elias, when he was here on earth, ſtood out obdurate againſt all his threats, And as they have done with him, ſo ſhall they deale with me, perſecute, deſpiſe, and put me to death, according to the predictions of the old prophets concerning the Meſſiah, and as was intimated by John Baptiſt in thoſe words of his, [Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the ſinnes of the world,] meaning that I ſhould beare your puniſhments as a lamb, be ſacrificed, and ſlain by, and for you. See Mat. 17. 11, 12.

12. And he anſwered and told them, Elias verily cometh firſt and reſtoreth all things, and how it is written of the ſon of man, that he muſt ſuffer many things, and be ſet at nought.

13. But I ſay unto you that Elias is * indeed come, and they have done unto him, whatſoever they liſted, as it is written of him.]

* alſo is come καὶ Ἠλίας ἐλήλυθε

14. And when he came to his diſciples, he ſaw a great multitude about them, and the Scribes queſtioning with them.

15. And ſtraightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and running to him, ſaluted him.

16. About what doe you queſtion the diſciples? ver. 14.

16. And he asked the Scribes, [*What queſtion ye with them?]

* What doe yee diſpute among your ſelves? according to ſome copies which read αὐτοῦς, not αὐτούς.

17. a diſeaſe which when it is upon him takes away his ſpeech (an Epilepſy, Lu. 9. 39.)

18. And whereſoever he taketh him, † he [b] teareth him, and he foameth, and gnaſheth with his teeth, and pineth away, and I ſpake to thy diſciples that they ſhould caſt him out, and they could not.

19. He ‖ anſwereth him, and ſaith,] O faithleſſe generation, how long ſhall I be with you? how long ſhall I ſuffer you? bring him unto me.

20. And they brought him unto him, and when he ſaw him, ſtreightway the ſpirit [* tare [c] him,] and he fell on the ground and wallowed foaming.

* boyl'd within him, troubled him.

21. And he asked his father, How long is it agoe ſince this came unto him? And he ſaid, Of a child.

22. And oft-times it hath caſt him into the fire, and into the waters, [to deſtroy him:] but if thou canſt doe any thing, have compaſſion on us, and help us.

22. ſo as to endanger his life.

23. If thou canſt beleive me to be able to doe it, thou mayeſt then be capable of this miracle; For

23. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, [If thou canſt beleive,] all things are poſſible to him that beleiveth.

24. and whatever degree of faith is wanting in me, I beſeech thee to pardon, and repair it in me.

24. And ſtraightway the father of the child cryed out, and ſaid with teares, Lord, I beleive, [help thou mine unbeleif.]

25. commanded the devil that inflicted that diſeaſe, ſaying, Thou evil ſpirit which afflicteſt this perſon ſo ſorely, that he can neither ſpeak nor hear,

25. When Jeſus ſaw that the people came running together, he [rebuked the foule ſpirit, ſaying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf ſpirit,] I charge thee come out of him and enter no more into him.

26. And he fell into a ſore fit of Epilepſy, and therewith was forever freed of the diſeaſe.

26. And the ſpirit cryed and * rent him ſore, and came out of him, and he was as one dead, inſomuch that many ſaid, He is dead.]

* put him into a great diſquiet, πολλὰ σπαράξαν

27. But Jeſus took him by the hand and lifted him up, and he [aroſe.]

28. His diſciples thinking verily that they were not able to cure this diſeaſe, asked in private, what the reaſon was.

28. And when he was come into the houſe, [his diſciples asked him privately, [d] Why could not we caſt him out?]

29. And he told them that to the curing of this diſeaſe they ought to have faſted and prayed, and their not uſing that means (which they ought to have uſed) was it that made them not able to doe it, and that was the culpable omiſſion, which he reprehended in them, v. 19. See Mat. 17. 21.

29. And he ſaid unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer, and faſting.]

30, 31. And Chriſt now determined to be more private, ſeeing and telling his diſciples how little good was now likely to be done by his farther miracles, it being certain that the chief of the Jewes would inſtead of believing on him, put him to death, but as this ſhould be, ſo within three days he ſhould riſe again, and that would be a proper means to convince ſome. See note on Mat. 8. b.

30. And they departed thence and paſſed through Galilee, [and he would not that any man ſhould know it.

31. For he taught his diſciples and ſaid unto them, The ſon of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they ſhall kill him, and after he is killed, that he ſhall riſe the third day.]

32. But they underſtood not that ſaying, and were afraid to ask him.

33. And he came to Capernaum, and being in the houſe he asked them, What was it that ye diſputed among your ſelves by the way?

34. But they held their peace: for [by the way they had diſputed among themſelves, || who ſhould be the greateſt.]

|| who was greateſt τὶς μείζων

34. they had, as they went along, fallen into a contention on which of them was to be preferred before, to take place of the reſt.

35. And he ſate down and called the twelve, and ſaith unto them, [If any man deſire to be firſt, the ſame ſhall be laſt of all, and ſervant of all.]

35. The precedence among my diſciples, all that they are capable of, that of being governours of the Church, brings no advantage to him that hath it, but to be more the ſervant of other men, more work and buſineſs being the only advantage of that precedence, which ſhall befall you, and your ſucceſſors in the Church.

36. And he took a child, and ſet him in the midſt of them, and when he had taken him in his arms he ſaid unto them,

37. Whoſoever ſhall receive one of ſuch children in my name, receiveth me, and whoſoever ſhall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that ſent me.]

36,37. To which purpoſe he gave them a ſignificative embleme in ſhewing them a little child, and having done ſo, taking him into his arms, and embracing him; By the former part intimating (what was before expreſt v. 35.) that he that will expect to be capable of any office of dignity from him (to have that authority in the Church after, which he hath now from his Father) humility and meekneſs is the only way to it; By the ſecond (his embracing the child) his great kindneſs to, and particular owning of ſuch humble followers of his, They have commiſſion from him, as he hath from his Father, and the receiving, or entertaining, and ſubmitting to them is interpretatively the entertaining, and obeying of Chriſt, and by conſequence, of God the Father, whoſe commiſſion Chriſt came with.

38. And John anſwered, ſaying, Maſter, we ſaw one caſting out devills in thy name, and he [followeth not us,] and we forbad him, becauſe he followeth not us.

38. Goes not along in our company.

39. But Jeſus ſaid, [Forbid him not: for there is no man that ſhall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly ſpeak evil of me.]

39. This propoſal of thine is like that of Joſhua Numb. 11. 28. and is to be anſwered as that was by Moſes, Let as many caſt out devills in my name as will, or can, for though they accompany not with us, as then Eldad and Medad were not with the reſt of the ſeventy, v. 27. yet aſſuredly the ſame Spirit worketh in them, and I ſhall not be diſhonoured by ſuch.

40. For he that it not againſt us, is on our part.]

40. For he that goes out into the field, doth always take one part or other, and his not engaging againſt me, as is evident by his uſing, not blaſpheming my name, is an argument infallible that he is on my ſide, beleives in my name, which he maks uſe of to ſuch purpoſes.

41. For whoſoever ſhall give you to drink a cup of water in my name, becauſe ye belong to Chriſt, verily I ſay unto you, he ſhall not loſe his reward.]

41. For 'tis not onely the great eminent performances, thoſe which are in you my conſtant attendants and diſciples, which is accepted by me, but every the leaſt degree of ſincere faith, and Chriſtian performance, (proportionable but to the expreſſing the leaſt kindneſſe, giving a cup of water to a diſciple of mine for being ſuch) ſhall be accepted and rewarded by me.

42. And whoſoever ſhall offend one of theſe little ones that beleive in me, it is better for him that a mil-ſtone were hanged about his neck, and he were caſt into the ſea.

42. And on the other ſide he that ſhall oppoſe me in the leaſt degree, diſcourage the meaneſt Chriſtian, hinder his progreſſe in chriſtianity, his condition is ſo ſad, that as it were much better for him never to have been born, ſo being born it were a preferment to him to be annihilated again.

43. And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off, it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, then having two hands to goe into hell, into the fire that never ſhall be quenched:

44. Where their worme dyeth not, and the fire is not quenched.

45. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off, it is better for thee to enter halt into life, then having two feet to be caſt into hell, into the fire that never ſhall be quenched:

46. Where their worme dyeth not, and the fire is not quenched.

47. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, it is better for thee to enter into the kingdome of God with one eye, then having two eyes to be caſt into hell fire.

48. Where their worme dyeth not, and the fire is not quenched.

43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48. It is a ſad thing that Chriſtians ſhould, by any temptations or occaſions whatſoever, be alien'd from Chriſt, yet ſuch things are to be looked for, and therefore the great miſery of it, and infelicity lyes upon them, that doe contribute any thing towards it (ſee Mat. 18. 7.) And therefore if any thing, that is moſt neer unto thee, moſt uſefull, or neceſſary to thy ſecular concernments, be a means to alien thee from the ſervice and confeſſion of Chriſt, part with it moſt readily, and ſpeedily, thou hadſt better looſe that, and (after what ever ſufferings here) inherite heaven eternally, then (after what ever temporall enjoyments here) to be thrown into Hell, where the remorſe for ſuch folly, and the ſharp torments attending it ſhall never be at an end.

49. For every one ſhall be [c] ſalted with fire, and every ſacrifice ſhall be ſalted with ſalt.]

49. For every Apoſtate, or temporary Chriſtian, every wicked man that by the temptations of the fleſh fore-mentioned is taken off from the Chriſtian courſe, ſhall (like a burnt offering) be conſumed with fire, but every pious man will preſerve himſelfe pure from all evill affections, as the ſacrifice is by ſalt from all putrefaction.

50 Salt is good, but if the ſalt have loſt his ſaltneſſe, wherewith will ye ſeaſon it? [Have ſalt in your ſelves, and have peace one with another.]

50. As the doctrine and grace of Chriſt is uſefull to you in reſpect of your ſelves, to eat up corruptions in the ſoul, ſo let it have that other qualitie of ſalt, as it is a ſigne of union and of the perpetuity and firmneſs of that, and ſo let it ingage you in all amity and peaceableneſſe with other men.

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς

V. 3. Fuller on earth] 'Tis poſſible there may be a meaning in the phraſe ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, which is not ordinarily taken notice of, yet becauſe it is but a conjecture, I have neither put it into the margent nor Paraphraſe, but only left it to be mentioned here. The Fuller, whoſe work it is to cleanſe, and dreſſe cloath, doth for theſe purpoſes uſe a kind of earth, which is therefore ordinarily known by the name of fullers earth which hath a ſpeciall cleanſing whitening faculty in it, beyond all other things. This 'tis poſſible may be here look'd on, in the deſcription of the whiteneſſe of the appearance of Chriſts garments, that 'twas ſo pure a degree of white, that no fuller by or with, earth could be able to whiten any thing ſo. And though the Prepoſition ὅτι doe not favour this interpretation, yet the promiſcuous uncertain uſe of Prepoſitions among ſacred writers is ſo obſervable, that it may take off much of that one objection. For thus is ὅτι uſed Acts 3. 16. in the ſenſe of διὰ, ὅτι τῇ πίστει by faith, as by a means. And if it be ſo rendred here, it will bear this ſenſe, No fuller by, or by means of, earth can ſo whiten any thing. So 1 Cor. 8. 10. ἐπὶ τῇ σῇ γνώσει by thy knowledge. Otherwiſe it is uſed for with, Phil. 1. 3. ἐπὶ πάσῃ τῇ μνείᾳ ὑμῶν, cum omni memoria veſtri, ſaith R. Stephanus, with every remembrance of you. And that rendring will agree to this ſenſe alſo. But the truth is, neither of theſe three examples come perfectly home to it, they being in the Dative, this in the Genitive caſe, and ſo I leave it as a conjecture, and only adde that in Theophraſtus's character of a niggardly perſon, πολλὴ γῆ ſignifies much of this fullers earth. Πρὸς τὰς γναφεῖς διατεινόμενον, ὅπως τὸ ἱμάτιον αὐτοῖς ἔξει πολλὴν γῆν, ἵνα μὴ ῥυπαίνοιτο ταχύ, he earneſtly entreats the Fullers that his garment may have a great deal of earth, that it may not be ſullyed quickly.

V. 18. Teareth him] Ῥήσσω which ſignifies to break or rend, Mat. 7. 6. and 9. 17. Mar. 2. 22. Lu. 5. 37. (and to break out, Gal. 4 27. that is to ſpeak, ἐκρῆξαι φωνὴν, φράσαι λόγον, ſaith Heſychius, and ῥῆξάτω, κεφαλάτω) ſignifies alſo to beat, or throw down, upon, or againſt the ground, and is by * Tertullian according to that latitude of the word rendred evertere, to throw down, Mat. 7. 6. (though the context in that place ſeems not to own it, the treading under foot going before, not following it) thus is προσέρρηξεν ὁ πόλεμος the river, being ſwelled into a torrent, beat upon the houſe, Lu. 6. 49. and upon it followes in the next words, εὐθέως ἔπεσε preſently it fell. In ſtead of it S. Matthew in the parallel place Mat. 7. 25, 27. reads προσέπεσον and προσέκοψαν, fell upon. And ſo in the end of the verſe in S. Luke ὧν ἡ πτῶσις αὐτῆς μεγάλη, the fall of it was great. Thus doth Heſychius render the word ῥῆξαι, not only διελεῖν to divide, or break in pieces, but καταβαλεῖν alſo, to throw down, (as here v. 22. 'tis expreſs'd by ἔβαλεν) and again Ῥῆξε, διέρρηξε, κατέβαλεν, ἀπέλυσεν (perhaps it ſhould be ἀπέχυσε, for ſo שטנ which is rendred ῥήγνυμι, is alſo ἐκχύω, Hoſ. 12. 14 (and ſo Lu. 5. 37.) and διαχύω, 1 Sam. 30. 16. to poure on the ground) and διέκοψεν. Thus in this place the Syriack and the old Latine took it, and ſo the Hebrew הרס, that is by the Septuagint rendred ῥήγνυμι, is καταβάλλω alſo, Job 12. 14. Ezech. 26. 4, 12. and καταστρέφω and καπασπάω to ſubvert and caſt down, and ſo שטנ καταβάλλω Ezech. 29. 5. and 31. 12. and ἐδαφίζω to lay on the ground, or daſh againſt the ground, Ezech. 31. 12. and σφάλλω ἐπὶ γῆς to throw on the ground Am. 5. 6. is ῥήγνυμι Iſa. 33. 2, 3. and ῥάσσω Jer. 23. 33. and 39. And Mat. 17. 15. where this diſeaſe is deſcribed, as alſo here v. 22. 'tis ſaid that he falls into the fire and into the water, as here ὅπου ἂν, where ever it takes him, if by the fireſide, it throwes him into the fire, if by the water, into that. To this the whole ſtory of this mans diſeaſe perfectly agrees, being directly the falling ſickneſſe.

V. 20. Tare him] What is the full notion of ἐσπάραξεν may be ſeen by the ancient Grammarians. Σπάραγμα, ζεσμὸς, ταραχή. Σπαραττόμεθα, ζεόμεθα, ταρατλόμεθα, ſaith Phavorinus out of Heſychius. The word ſignifies ſuch a ſtirre or tumult within one, as in a pot or cauldron is joyned with boyling or ſeething, and produceth a froth or foame at the top, and ſo is a clear deſcription of an Epilepſie, which doth ſo boyle within, as to cauſe a foaming at the mouth both here and Lu. 9. 39. Some Manuſcript copies read ἐτάραξεν for it, troubled, diſquieted, put him in a commotion.

V. 28. Why] Ὅτι here muſt ſignifie διὰ τί; wherefore; ſee note on Lu. 7. c. and ſo the Kings MS. reads it, διὰ ὅτι τί ἡμεῖς, and the ancient Greek and Latine MS. and others in like manner.

V. 47. Salted] The word ἁλίζομαι is made anſwerable to the Hebrew מלח, and is Iſa. 51. 6. ſet by Symmachus to ſignifie conſumed, in like manner as the ὁλοκάυτωμα the whole burnt offering is conſumed, burnt all of it with fire; which is anſwerable to the πῦρ ἄσβεστον, unquenchable fire going before, and ſo the meaning of this expreſſion will be here, that that firſt ſort of men, the Apoſtates, or wicked carnall Chriſtians, the ſubject of the former verſes (to which therefore the univerſal particle, πᾶς every one, is to be reſtrained, as in ſcripture 'tis frequent to reſtrain it) ſhall be uſed as the burnt offerings are, they ſhall have fire in ſtead of ſalt, but the pious minded Chriſtian, like the Minchah, ſhall have the * ſalt, the grace of God and Chriſtian doctrine, and by Gods help make uſe of it to eate up all his corruptions, and degrees of putrefaction left in him, and alſo to be a principle of union and peaceable mindedneſſe in him, v. 50. as among other uſes of ſalt it is ſaid to be ἑνωτικὸς unitive alſo, (ſee note f.) and is accordingly uſed in covenants and confederations, and thence Lev. 2. is the ſalt of the Covenant of God. But it is not unlikely, that in this place (and that of Iſaiah) ἁλισθήσεται may be put for ἁλωθήσεται (or ἀναλωθήσεται) which ſignifies firſt to be caught, then to be conſumed, ſo ἅλωσις 2 Pet. 2. 12. is preying upon, and joyned with φθορὰ deſtroying or conſuming. So Iſa. 66. (whence the former words, their worm ſhall dyeth and their fire, &c. v. 24. are taken) after the mention of Gods pleading by fire, v. 16. is added v. 17. ὅτι τὸ αὐτὸ ἀναλωθήσονται, they ſhall be conſumed together. The agreeableneſſe of this interpretation both to the words, and to the Context, ſhewes how unneceſſarily that conjecture was taken up by * Joſ. Scaliger, of the text being corrupted πᾶς πυεὶ, for πᾶπ πυεία, taking πυεία for אשה Lev. 2. when neither any one copy gives countenance to the emendation, nor the Septuagint or any other ancient author have ever uſed this word πυεία for אשה And then it is ſtrange to conceive, what ſhould ſuggeſt thoſe inordinate expreſſions, which there follow in that Epiſtle, eſpecially this, Mea eſt vera hujus loci interpretatio, quem fœdiſſima menda ab incunabulis uſque ipſius Chriſtianiſmi invaſit. Sunt & alia paſſim in textum Evangelicum ab ultima vetuſtate vitia admiſſa, qua nemo præter me indicaverit. Et hoc quod jam aperuimus præcipuum eſt ex omnibus. Qui aliquo ſenſu communi præditus eſt, non poterit non laudare ſententiam noſtram. Nihil enim verius eſſe poteſt.

V. 50. Salt] That ſalt is σύμβολον φιλίας καὶ εἰρήνης, a ſymbol ſignificative of friendſhip and peace, is ordinarily ſaid; In reference to which is that of Æſchines de ementit. Legat. τὰς δὲ τῆς πόλεως ἅλας, the ſalt of the city, meaning thereby the publike peace and proſperity; and from hence ſaith * Euſtathius τοῖς ὀπτωμένοις παρεπιθέλο ἅλες πρὸ τῶν ἄλλων ἐδωμάτων, ſalt before all other meats was ſet before the gueſts. The onely difficulty is, from whence this cuſtome ſprang, or wherein this ſymbolical nature of ſalt conſiſts, and that is anſwered by the ſame Euſtathius, ὡς γὰρ ἐξ ὑδάτων πολλῶν καὶ χυτῶν παγεὶς ἓν τι στερεὸν γέγονε σῶμα, οὕτω καὶ οἱ συμελθόντες εἰς φιλίαν ἐκ διεστώτων εἰς ἕν, τῷ τε τόπῳ καὶ τῇ φιλικῇ διαθέσει ξυνήχθησαν, for as ſalt being compacted of many drops of water, every one in it ſelf fluid and unſteady, becomes one ſolid body; ſo they that from diſtant places conjoyne into a league of friendſhip, meet together both in place and friendly diſpoſition.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND he [roſe from thence] and cometh into the coaſts of Judæa by the farther ſide of Jordan. And the people reſort unto him again, and as he was wont, he taught them again.

1. departed from Galilee Mat. 19. 1.

2. And the Phariſees came to him and asked him, [Is it lawfull for a man to put away his wife? tempting him.]

2. Is it lawfull for a man, upon a diſlike of his wife, for other cauſes beſides fornication, to put her away? This they asked out of an intention to enſnare him, knowing his doctrine in this matter, Mat. 5. 32. contradicted that liberty which they had by Moſes.

3. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, What did Moſes command you?

4. And they ſaid, [Moſes ſuffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away.]

4. Moſes gave us liberty to do ſo, Deut. 24. 1.

5. And Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid unto them, [For the hardneſſe of your hearts he wrote you this precept.]

5. This law wherein that was permitted by Moſes, was written to provide by that means againſt the inflexibleneſſe, and imperſwaſibleneſſe of the Jewes hearts, which, if this were forbidden them, would be apt to commit ſome greater villany.

6. But from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female.

7. For this cauſe ſhall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife,

8. And they twain ſhall be one fleſh: ſo then they are no more twain but one fleſh.

6, 7, 8, 9. But the prime law of the creation was quite otherwiſe, making the union between husband and wife a ſacred thing, that muſt not be violated by any. See note on 2 Pet. 1. 6.

9. What therefore God hath joyned together, let not man put aſunder.]

10. And in the houſe his diſciples asked him again of the ſame matter.

11. And he ſaith unto them, Whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery [againſt her.]

11. by living as an husband with her, whom he marries, when he is the husband of another, and cauſeth his own wife, from whom he thus unreconcileably parteth, to commit adultery, Mat. 5. 32. that is, giveth her great occaſion, and temptation, and danger to do ſo.

12. And if a woman ſhall [a] [put away her husband and be married to another, ſhe committeth adultery.]

12. part with her husband, do her part in abſolving the husband from his band to her, and make uſe of it, to marry her ſelfe again to another. a.

13. And they brought young children to him, that he ſhould touch them, and his diſciples rebuked thoſe that brought them.

14. But when Jeſus ſaw it, he was much diſpleaſed, and ſaid unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for [of ſuch is the kingdome of God.]

14. they are of that temper of innocence and ſimplicity (and being impotent themſelves, reſigne themſelves up to be aided and ſuſtained by others) that they are of all others the fitteſt emblemes of thoſe, of whom the Chriſtian Church is made up here, and heaven hereafter.

15. Verily I ſay unto you, Whoſoever ſhall not receive the kingdome of God as a little child, he ſhall not enter therein.

15. And he that ſhall not come to Chriſtianity as a little child, with that very humility, and ſelf-denyall and reſignation, and ſole dependence on Chriſt, as is obſervable in one of this age, ſhall never be received or entertained by Chriſt.

16. And he took them up in his armes, put his hands upon them, and bleſſed them.

17. And when he was gone forth into the way, *there came [one] running and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good maſter, what ſhall I doe, that I may inherit everlaſting life?

17. a young man Mat. 19. 20. a Ruler Lu. 18. 18.

18. The attribute of good belongs truly to none but God, Is that thy meaning to acknowledge me ſuch when thou calleſt me by that title?

Annotations on Chap. X.

V. 12. Put away her husband] That which is here ſaid convertibly of Divorces, the wife putting away the husband, as the husband the wife, muſt not ſo be underſtood, that the wife hath (or ever had) in any caſe power to put away the husband, though not to marry again, as, in caſe of fornication, the husband may put away the wife; For there is that difference between the Huſband and the Wife, that renders one lawfull, and not the other, viz. the dominion of the Husband over the Wife, which the Wife, whoſe part is obedience, Gen. 3. 16. 1 Pet. 3. 6. hath not back again over the Husband; and accordingly in the Law, though there be a liberty given to the man of putting away the wife, in more caſes then Chriſt allowes of, yet there is none given the Wife to put away the Husband in any caſe; and Chriſt, that reſtrained that liberty of the man to the one caſe of Fornication, cannot be thought (and no where appears) to have enlarged, or extended that liberty to the Wife. As for the ſome kind of ſemblance of it here in this text, it will ceaſe to be ſo, by obſerving either of theſe two things, Firſt, that the only thing here in hand in theſe two verſes, is to ſet down the unlawfull, and adulterous divorces, viz. thoſe that are attended with marrying ſome other, for ſuch are all they equally, whether committed by the man, or woman, and ſo there is no occaſion here to ſtate that other queſtion of lawfull divorces, which had been made by the Phariſees v. 2. and anſwered Negatively v. 3. &c. And conſequently all that is here ſaid, is that the Wife, however ſeparated from the Husband, may not marry again, not that ſhe may in any caſe lawfully ſeparate. Many things of this nature there are in the Scripture which are ſpoken only to prepare for ſomewhat elſe, and have themſelves no farther importance, all the weight of the ſpeech lying on that other part to which they prepare. See Note on Mat. 9. d. Secondly, The nature of the word, that is here, and in other places of the New Teſtament, uſed for divorcing, falls out to be a word, which ſignifies not putting away, as that notes any act of authority, but ἀπολῦσαι abſolving, looſing, releaſing from a debt, or a band, and ſo it may truly be ſaid ἀπολύσῃ ἢ ἄνδρα that it is only releaſing, abſolving, not putting away, the husband, that is, doing what is in her power to doe, but not pretending to more; The Grecians were wont to ſpeak more accurately, calling it on the mans part ἐκπέμψειν, to ſend, or caſt out the wife, but on the wives part, ἀπολείπειν, to leave, or forſake the Husband, which though practiſed among the heathen ſometimes, yet being but an act of deſertion, it pretends not to any authority over him that is forſaken.

a. Ἀπολύῃ ἄνδρα

V. 19. Defraud not] That our Saviour reckons up here the ſix laſt precepts of the Decalogue, containing our duty toward our brethren, that is, toward other men, under the Law, is preſently clear to him that conſiders the words, either here, or Mat. 19. 17. From thence it is clear again, that Μὴ ἀποστερήσῃς, is S. Marks rendring of the tenth commandement. And it is obſervable how many waies this commandement is rendred in the Bible, in Exod 20. and Deut. 5. the Septuagint expreſſe it by οὐκ ἐπιθυμήσεις, thou ſhalt not covet, S. Paul Rom. 7 7. hath the ſame, but S. Mark here μὴ ἀποστερήσῃς thou ſhalt not defraud, and S. Matthew, ch. 19. Ἀγαπήσεις, &c. Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf, From which 'tis farther obſervable what is the meaning of that commandement, That undoubtedly, which will be the joynt united importance of theſe three phraſes, & not that which might be thought ſufficient to expreſſe the meaning of ſome one of them, that is, ſo to reſt ſatisfied every man with his own lot, which God hath afforded him, and ſo to deſire the good of others as well as of himſelf, as not to deſire, or endevour to gain any thing to himſelf by the loſſe or diminution of any other, to think the neighbour as fit to enjoy any thing that belongs to him, as himſelf to enjoy his own, and ſo joyne together theſe two precepts of the Heathens, the Quod ſis eſſe velis, nihilque malis, in Martial, the perfect complacency with our preſent condition, and the ——ἀδὲ βελόνης Δαμόνιε ἐπιθύμησον ἀλλοτρίας πότε, in Menander, the not coveting ſo much as a needle or pin of anothers.

b. Ἀποστερεῖν

V. 23. Hardly] The thorny ground appears by the parable of the ſower to be very contrary to the good, fruitfull, the embleme of the honeſt heart, wherein Chriſtianity was to be planted; By that was meant the mind choak'd with riches and the cares of this world, which betray and eat out many good hopefull ſeeds of grace, which would otherwiſe lift up the ſoul to the purſuit of the one neceſſary. And this is the interpretation of the δυσκόλως εἰσελεύσονται, great difficulty of the rich mans being a diſciple of Chriſt, and attaining to his kingdome. This Julian, in his Epiſtle to Ecebolius, ſpeaks of ſcoffingly, and ſaith that he took away from the Chriſtians all that they had, μὴ στερηθῶσιν ὧν ἐλπίζουσι τὴν οὐρανίαν βασιλείαν, that they may not be deprived of that heavenly kingdome which they hope for.

c. Δυσκόλως εἰσελεύσονται &c.

V. 31. Many] They who were call'd and choſen first to be diſciples, who conſequenly ought to have expreſs'd more zeal, more fidelity, and taken more pains in the Apoſtolicall office, are here call'd the firſt, in reſpect of their προκλησιν being firſt called into the vineyard, and ſuch was Peter and John, and the reſt of his preſent diſciples. The laſt are thoſe which were call'd later, as S. Paul, who ſaith truly of himſelf, that as he was born out of due time, ſuddainly (not regularly, as the diſciples in Chriſts life-time had been, diſciples a long ſpace, before they had their commiſſion of Apoſtleſhip) ſo he was in labours more abundant, &c. 1 Cor. 15. 10. and 2 Cor. 11. 23. And they that have written the Itineraries of the Apoſtles have obſerved the truth of it, S. Paul having travail'd much farther then either S. Peter or S. John, as they have deſcrib'd the circuit.

And being ſo, he eſpied afar off a figtree full of leaves, and went to ſee if there were any fruit on it, and when he came he found no one fig nor any thing, but leaves on it, the year being, it ſeems, unſeaſonable for that fruit, and therefore being willing to ſhew a miracle on a fruitleſſe tree, (which had nothing but leaves to be deſtroyed by his curſe) he ſaid unto it, This tree ſhall never bear more fruit, but ſhall wither and dry up preſently. Which ſentence of Chriſt if it be applyed as an embleme to men that bear no fruit, it will then ſignifie that they which profeſſe piety (which is anſwerable to bearing of leaves) muſt never be found without fruit, If they be, Chriſt will viſit them, and ſubtraction of grace and deſtruction will be their portion, the one following upon the other, as the inſtant withering here upon the word of Chriſt. But the moſt pregnant meaning of it is, that the Jews which were juſt like that leafy tree, without any kind of degree of fruit on it at this time, when Chriſt came from heaven to call for it, ſhould ſuddainly be deſtroyed.

13. And ſeeing a figtree afarre off having leaves, he came, * if haply he might find any thing thereon, and when he came to it he found nothing but leaves, for * the time of figs was a not yet.

23. For verily I ſay unto you, that whoſoever ſhall ſay unto this mountain, Be removed, and be thou caſt into the ſea, and ſhall not doubt in his heart, but ſhall beleive that thoſe things which he ſaith ſhall come to paſſe, he ſhall have whatſoever he ſaith.]

This is to be undertaken by you, not upon confidence of your own ſtrength, but by humble prayer to God, and whatſoever you ſhall thus pray for, beleiving that I will according to my promiſe grant it to you, that ye ſhall be ſure to receive from me.

25. And when ye ſtand praying, forgive if ye have ought againſt any, that your father alſo which is in heaven may forgive you your treſpaſſes.] 25. But for the obtaining this certain return to your prayers, the other conditions which have formerly been required (ſee Mat. 6. 14.) to make mens prayers effectual, muſt be obſerved by you, Namely, that whenſoever you pray for any thing to be granted you by God, you put all malice from you, and be filled with all charity even to your enemies, that God may in like manner deale with you.

26. But if you doe not forgive, neither will your father which is in heaven forgive your treſpaſſes. 26. And if you doe not ſo, there is no expectation that any prayer of yours, whether for pardon of ſin, or any thing elſe, ſhall be heard and granted by God.

28. And ſay unto him, By what authority doeſt thou theſe things? and who gave thee this authority to doe theſe things?

31. And they reaſoned with themſelves ſaying, If we ſhall ſay, From heaven, he will ſay, Why then did ye not beleive him?

32. But if we ſhall ſay, Of men, they feared the people: for all men counted John, that he was [a prophet indeed.] 32. a prophet ſent with commiſſion from God.

2. Καιρὸς σύκων

V. 13. Not yet] That the words are thus literally to be rendred οὐ γὰρ ἦν καιρὸς σύκων, for it was not a time, or ſeaſon of figs, there is no doubt; what the meaning of the word time, or ſeaſon here is, will be the only difficulty. If the time, or ſeaſon of the year, wherein figs are ripe, ſo that it be here ſaid it was not that time of ripe figs, then many inconveniencies will follow, As firſt that will not be (as this paſſage is deſigned) a reaſonable account, why there was nothing but leaves on the tree, for green figs there might be, and ſo ſomewhat beſide leaves though the time of ripe figs were not come, 2ly, It is not to be imagined that Chriſt being hungry, v. 12. and thereupon going out of his way to a fig tree, εἰ ἄρα εὑρήσει τι ἐν αὐτῇ in all account to find ſome food there, ſhould do ſo at a time, when he knew fruit was not ripe, green figs, before they are ripe, being as unfit for food as could be imagined. 3. If we conſider the time which is there ſpecified, we ſhall have reaſon to doubt, whether thus interpreting καιρὸς, there were indeed any truth in the ſpeech, being great probability, that at this time of the year figs in Judæa were wont to be ripe. For it was immediately before the Paſſover, (preſently after the Hoſannaes) both here, and in Matthew. And that is about the time of putting the ſickle into the corn, Deut. 16. 9. and their offering their firſt fruits, (ſeven weeks before Pentecoſt, Lev. 23. 16.) by which it is evident that fruits were then ripe in that countrey. This may be farther confirmed by a paſſage in Ariſtophanes in Ορνισι,

Κῆπόθ' ὁ κόκκυξ αἴποι κόκκυ, τόθ' οἱ φοίνικες ἅπαντες
Τὰς πυρὰς ἂν κῆτὰς κριθὰς ἐν τοῖς πεδίοις ἐθέριζον.
Τοῦτ' ἄρ' ἐκεῖν' ἦν τοῦπος ἀληθῶς, κόκκυ φωλοὶ πεδίονδε.

At the time that the Cuckow ſounds out his note (that we know is at the beginning of our ſpring) then all the Phœnicians (that is, the inhabitants of Canaan, Mat. 16. Note f.) reap'd their wheat and their barly in their fields, and that was the meaning of the Proverb, κόκκυ φωλοὶ πεδίονδε, that is, ſaith the Scholiaſt, κόκκυγος κράζοντος θερίζομεν, when the Cuckow cryes, we reap, by we noting the φωλοὶ, that is, the circumciſed, as appears by that Scholiaſt in theſe words, ἐπὶ τῶν Αἰγυπτίων ἦσαν φωλοὶ πολλοὶ, among the Ægyptians there were many circumciſed (ſo Herodotus in Euterpe ſaith of them.) And then that the fruits of trees were gathered alſo at the ſame time with the corn, appears among many other evidences by the expreſs words of Philo, Leg. ad Caium p. 795. E. where Petronius in his letter to Caius, about the ſetting up the image of Jupiter in the Temple, tells him his fear, that the provoked Jews would ſet on fire all the fruits of the ground; ἐν ἀκμῇ γὰρ τὸν τῆς σίτου καρπὸν εἶναι, for the fruit was now ripe (where by the way, ἀκμὴ, not καιρὸς, is the proper word for the time of fruits being ripe) and therefore care muſt now be taken for the συγκομιδὴν καρπῶν, the taking in of the fruits, οὐ μόνον τῶν σπειρομένων, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὧν ἡ δενδροφόρος παρέχει, not onely the corne of the field, but the fruit of the trees, from which circumſtance it is, that Baronius duely concludes that this of the deſigned dedication of that image, was at the Paſſover, and ſo a puniſhment that might mind the Jews of their ſin of crucifying Chriſt at that time of the year. As for that objection which is apt to deceive many, and ſo impoſed upon S. Chryſoſtome, becauſe this time of Eaſter is not the time of harveſt in other places, whereupon that Father Tom. 4. p. 629. l. 20. ſpeaking of Pentecoſt, ſaith, it was the time ὅτε τὸ δρέπανον ἐπιβάλλειν ἔδει τῷ ἀμήτῳ, ὅτε τοὺς καρποὺς σωλάγειν ἐχρῆν, when the ſickle was to be put into the harveſt and the fruits to be gathered in, 'tis eaſily anſwered, that the difference of the Climate betwixt Judæa and Greece, and much more betwixt Judæa and us, being ſo great, and the forwardneſſe of fruit depending ſo immediately on that, there can be no ſtrangeneſſe in it; For theſe and other reaſons it ſeems improbable that this ſhould be the meaning of the words. Another notion, I conceive, there is of the καιρὸς time, or ſeaſon, which will be ſubject to none of theſe, nor any other inconveniences. For the word literally ſignifying a ſeaſonable time, and time being of a great latitude, belonging to any part of time, an age, a year, and not only a part of a year, though the firſt of an age cannot, yet the ſecond of a year may be applyable to this place, and then the meaning will be, that that was not a ſeaſon of figs, that is, a good fig year, a year that brought forth any ſtore of figs in that country. And in this interpretation of the phraſe, the whole paſſage will be very perſpicuous; Chriſt was hungry v. 12. and ſeeing a fig tree afarre off, having leaves, that is, looking very promiſingly, he went out of his way to it, if ſo be he might find any thing, that is, any one, or more figs upon it, And when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves, not one fig of any kind, ripe or other, of which this reaſon is rendred, ὐ γὰρ ἦν καιρὸς σύκων, for it was not a kindly ſeaſonable year of figs. Whereupon Chriſt immediately curſeth the tree, for having ſuch promiſing verdure of leaves, but no kind of fruit on it, and ſo ſymbolically foretells the fate of that people of the Jewes, who were at this time very barren of goood works, 'twas a very ill ſeaſon of fruit with them, (and when Chriſt comes ſhortly after to viſit, ſhall he find faith on the earth? any fruit of the Chriſtian faith in that land of Judea?) though they made very promiſing faire profeſſions. Having ſaid thus much, it will not be neceſſary to take notice of the emendation, which the learned Dan. Heinſius hath here propoſed, converting it, from ὐ γὰρ ἦν καιρὸς σύκων for it was not a ſeaſon of figs, into ὃ γὰρ ἦν, καιρὸς σύκων, for where he was, (that is, in that place) the ſeaſon of figs, that is, it was the ſeaſon of ripe figs. The exceptions which offer themſelves againſt this conjecture are many. 1. The great change that is made by this means even from a Negative to an Affirmative, from one member of a contradiction to another, which if it were allowed upon no greater grounds, then of a conjecture, the conſequence would be very dangerous, 2. In caſe this conjecture were admitted, the words ſo read would be of a ſtyle diſcernibly different from all the reſt of the book; For of either of thoſe formes of ſpeaking ὃ ἦν, where he was, for in that region, or place, in oppoſition to other remote climates, or of καιρὸς σύκων, ſeaſon of figs ſo conciſely, for it was the ſeaſon of figs, 'twould be hard to find any example in the New Teſtament: And then, though to reduce a perplex'd intricate, unuſuall form of ſpeaking, to a perſpicuous ordinary phraſe, it might be reaſonable to propoſe a conjecture, yet to force it by this means from an uſual to a ſtrange form, (for which there is no example) will not be very reaſonable. Laſtly, there is no need, or uſe of any change, as already appears; but on the contrary, if the change were admitted, the verſe would be leſſe intelligible then now it is, For the words are a reaſon, as the particle γὰρ for aſſures us: Now that which is next before, and to which this is affix'd as a reaſon, being this, that coming to the fig tree he found nothing but leaves, the words in that new reading, for where he was, it was the ſeaſon of figs, cannot be thought a reaſon of that (the ſeaſon for fruit cannot be the reaſon that there was no fruit,) but would be of the contrary, whereas the words in the old reading are a clear reaſon of it, there were no figs, but only leaves to be found, for it was not a ſeaſon of figs. The only thing poſſible to be replyed, is, that the words ſo altered ſhall be a reaſon of Chriſts going to the tree to ſee if there were any fruit on it, and not of his finding no fruit, Which if it be ſaid, then I anſwer, that this is moſt unreaſonable, when the words, as they lie, are regularly a reaſon of what went next before, to change them, upon conjecture or phantaſie, into the direct contrary, and then affix them as a reaſon of what is farther off, and with which they doe not connect, but might with as much reaſon be farther ſevered and connected with any other (yet remoter) paſſage, to which a freſh conjecture ſhould accommodate them.

V. 17. All nations] There were three atria, or courts, or iles in the Temple, the firſt, the court of the Prieſts, the ſecond of the other Jewes, together with the perfect complete Proſelytes, they that were circumciſed and undertook the whole Law, and differed nothing from Jews, but that they were born of Gentile parents, the Proſelytes of juſtice, or of the Covenant, (ſee Note on Mat. 23. d. and c. 3. a.) and the third was the court of the Gentiles, that is, of thoſe Gentiles, which were received as Proſelytes of the gates, the Gentile worſhippers, or pious heathens, that had undertaken the ſeven precepts of the ſons of Noah (renounced Idolatry, &c.) though not the whole Jewiſh law; This court of the Gentiles was indeed diſcriminated by a ſept or little low wall from the court of the Jews, and was therefore by them thought leſſe holy then their court, and becauſe the Jews did not worſhip in it, they therefore conceiv'd that it might be lawfully put to common or profane uſes, and ſo 'twas here uſed by the Jews, But Chriſt ſaith, it was a houſe of prayer to the Gentiles, and therefore had a promiſe of Gods peculiar preſence there, and conſequently a relative ſanctity, and was not to be thus uſed to common profane uſes. b. οἶκος προσευχῆς κληθήσεται.

CHAP. XII.

1. And Chriſt ſpake many parables unto them, all pertinent to the rebuking of them for their unbeleif, as firſt that mention'd Mat. 21. 28. and then ſecondly this here Mat. 21. 33. of a man that

1. AND he began to ſpeak unto them by parables, A certaine man] planted a vineyard, and ſet an hedge about it, and digged a place for the winefat, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a farre countrey.

2. And at the ſeaſon he ſent to the husbandmen a ſervant, that he might receive from the husbandmen of the fruit of the vineyard:

3. And they caught him, and beat him, and ſent him away empty.

4. And again he ſent unto them another ſervant, and at him they caſt ſtones, and wounded him in the head, and ſent him away ſhamefully handled.

5. And again he ſent another, and him they killed, and many others, beating ſome, and killing ſome.

6. Having yet therefore one ſon, his well-beloved, he ſent him alſo laſt unto them, ſaying, They will reverence my ſon.

7. But thoſe husbandmen ſaid among themſelves, This is the heire, come, let us kill him, and the inheritance ſhall be ours:

8. And they took him and killed him, and caſt him out of the vineyard.

9. What ſhall therefore the Lord of the vineyard doe? He will come and deſtroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others.

12. And they were willing to find ſome juſtifyable occaſion to apprehend him, being ſomewhat reſtrained by fear of the people, and yet being much incenſed againſt him (for they knew that he had deſigned theſe parables particularly to pourtray them) but in fine they let him alone at preſent and departed.

12. And they ſought to lay hold on him, but feared the people: for they knew that he had ſpoken this parable againſt them, and they left him and went their way.]

13. And

13. And they ſend unto him certaine of the Phariſees, and of the Herodians, to catch him in his words.]

13. Soon after, being willing to get ſome accuſation againſt him, they ſent ſome of the Phariſees and ſome of the Herodians together to him, the Phariſees that thought not Cæſar to have right over Judæa, but look'd on him as an uſurper; and the Herodians (ſee Note on Mat. 22. b.) which aſſerted his right, that between them they might bring him to ſay ſomewhat either againſt the liberty of the people of God, aſſerted by the Phariſees, or againſt the power of the Roman Emperour, aſſerted by the others; perhaps alſo ſuſpecting by his frequent being in Galilee (and his Apoſtles moſt of them being born there) that he was of the ſect and doctrine of the Galileans, that no acknowledgement or tribute was to be paid to the Emperour.

14. And when they were come, they ſay unto him, Maſter, we know [that thou art right, and careſt for no man, for thou regardeſt not the perſon of men, but teacheſt the way of God in truth,] Is it lawful to give [a] tribute to Cæſar, or not?

14. that thou wilt freely ſpeak thy mind what danger ſoever come of it, and not ſuffer the fear of Cæſar to reſtrain thee from telling us the will of God.

17. And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid unto them, Render to Cæſar the things that are Cæſars, and to God the things that are Gods. And they marvelled at him.

18. Then come unto him the Sadducees, which ſay there is [no reſurrection,] and asked him, ſaying,

18. Mat. 22, 23. no future ſtate after this life,

19. Maſter, Moſes wrote unto us, If a mans brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his brother ſhould take his wife, and raiſe up ſeed unto his brother.

20. Now there were ſeven brethren, and the firſt took a wife, and dying, left no ſeed;

21. And the ſecond took her, and dyed, and left no ſeed; and the third likewiſe;

22. And the ſeven had her, and left no ſeed, laſt of all the woman dyed alſo:

23. In the reſurrection therefore, when they ſhall riſe, whoſe wife ſhall ſhe be of them, for the ſeven had her to wife?

25. For when they ſhall riſe from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the Angels of God which are in heaven.

26. And as touching the dead that they riſe, have ye not read in the book of Moſes, how in the buſh God ſpake unto him, ſaying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob?

28. And one of the Scribes came, and having heard them reaſoning together, and perceiving that he had anſwered them well, asked him, Which is the firſt commandement of all?

29. And Jeſus anſwered him, The firſt of all the commandements is, Hear O Iſrael, the Lord our God is one Lord.

30. And thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy [mind] and with all thy ſtrength, this is the firſt commandement.

30. Underſtanding v. 33.

31. And the ſecond is like, namely this, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf: there is none other commandement greater then theſe.

33. And the real ſubſtantial performance of all duties both towards God and Man, is to be preferred before all thoſe ritual performances that Religion is generally placed in.

34. And when Jeſus ſaw that he had anſwered diſcreetly, he ſaid unto him [Thou art not farre from the kingdome of God.] And no man after that durſt ask him any queſtion.

34. This account of thine argues that thou art not farre from being a Chriſtian, the doctrine of the Goſpel containing little more in it beyond this.

35. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, while he taught in the Temple, [How ſay the Scribes that Chriſt is the ſon of David?

35. How comes it to be generally reſolved by the Doctors of the Law out of the Scripture.

36. For David himſelf ſaid by the holy Ghoſt, The Lord ſaid to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footſtool.

37. David therefore himſelf calleth him Lord, whence is he then his ſon? And the common people heard him gladly.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

1. V. 14. Tribute] Judas of Galilee (called indifferently Gaulonita and Galilæus) was ſaith Joſephus, head of a fourth ſect among the Jews, (ſee Antiq. l. 18. c. 2.) and having Saddok a Phariſee joyned to him, he ſollicited the people to defection, telling them that God was to be their only Maſter and Prince, and no mortall to be acknowledged ſuch; that the requiring a taxe from them, if it were payd by them, was a manifeſt profeſſion of ſervitude, and that 'twas their duty to vindicate their liberty, by which means he raiſed a great ſedition among the Jews, and was the cauſe under pretence of defending the publick liberty, of innumerable miſchiefes to the nation. Of this ſect 'tis poſſible they ſuſpected Chriſt might be a favourer, and the rather for his being counted a Galilean, and that therefore they now come and aske him this queſtion. And though he anſwer moſt punctually in favour of the Roman Emperour, and ſo much more for the paying then for the refuſing to pay tribute, yet becauſe there was ſo much caution in his ſpeech as that the Phariſees were not able to take any advantage againſt him, It is therefore improved into an accuſation againſt him, that he forbad to give tribute to Cæſar, Lu. 23. 20. ſee Note on Mat. 22. b. V. 44. Want] To diſcern the meaning of ὑστέρησις or ὑστέρημα among the Scripture writers, it will not be amiſſe to look on it a little in the Old Teſtament, Ezr. 6. 9. where ὃ ἂν ὑστέρημα (whereby מה חשחן is rendred) ſignifies that which they have need of, for the word חשח ſignifies oportuit, neceſſe habuit, indiguit, to want, or have need of, and ſo ἐκ τῆς ὑστερήσεως here, and ἐκ τοῦ ὑστερήματος Lu. 21. 4. will be rendred out of her neceſſaries, out of that which was neceſſary to her, out of that which ſhe wanted for her ſelfe, out of her very low eſtate or extremity (as appears by that which followes ὅλον τὸν βίον αὐτῆς, all her proviſion, all that ſhe had to live or ſubſiſt on) as that is oppoſed to ἐκ τοῦ περισσεύοντος out of that which thoſe others had to ſpare: Thus Phil. 4. 11. καθ' ὑστέρησιν in reſpect of a very low eſtate, wherein he had no more then abſolute neceſſaries (with which, ſaith he, he had learned to be content) expreſſed by ταπεινοῦσθαι, being abaſed or very low, v. 12. both which are oppoſed to περισσεύειν there, when πεινᾶν hungring is oppoſed to χορτάζεσθαι feeding full. So 1. Cor. 16. 17. ὑμῶν ὑστέρημα ἔτοι ἀνεπλήρωσαν that which you ought to have done, and did not, they have ſupplyed, 2 Cor. 8. 13. ὑμῶν περίσσευμα εἰς τὸ ἐκείνων ὑστέρημα, your abundance may be a ſupply to their neceſſities, and c. 9. 12. τὰ ὑστερήματα τῶν ἁγίων the neceſſity of the Saints, and c. 11. 9. τὸ ὑστέρημά μου my neceſſity; So Phil. 2. 30. τὸ ὑμῶν ὑστέρημα τῆς πρὸς μὲ λειτουργίας your defect of miniſtring to me, or that miniſtring to me, which was neceſſary, but through diſtance could not be performed, on our part, So Col. 1. 24. I rejoyce in my ſufferings for you, καὶ ἀνταναπληρῶ τὰ ὑστερήματα τῶν θλίψεων τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐν τῇ σαρκί μου ὑπὲρ τοῦ σώματος αὐτοῦ &c: thus, or to this ſenſe, Chriſt ſuffered for his Church, his body, (yea Lu. 24. 46. ἔδει παθεῖν he ought to ſuffer, in many reſpects there was a neceſſity of it) And ſo in like manner by way of correſpondence (ſo ἀνταναπληρῶ ſignifies) it is neceſſary, that I that am a Chriſtian, ſhould ſuffer for you, for the Church, that is, his body, this now I doe, I in my fleſh make up, by way of Antitype, thoſe neceſſary ſufferings of Chriſt for his body. So 1 Theſſ. 3. 10. καταρτίσαι τὰ ὑστερήματα τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν, to complete or fill up (for καταρτίζειν being the interpretation of כלל in the Old Teſtament, is all one with πληροῦν, and ſo κατάρτισμὸς with πλήρωμα) thoſe things that are neceſſary to your faith. All this is here caſt together, to give one entire view of theſe words in the New Teſtament. Ἀνταναπληρῶ ὑστερήματα. καταρτίσαι, κατάρτισμα ὑστερήματα.

Annotations on Chap. XIII.

V. 4. All theſe] That the ταῦτα, and the ταῦτα πάντα here, theſe things, and all theſe things ſignifie that which had been by this Evangeliſt mention'd in the words immediately precedent, there is no queſtion, And conſequently that thereby is ſignified the Deſtruction of the Temple, and what was implyed and contained in that, the city, and nation of the Jews, their whole Government, Civil and Eccleſiaſtical. Which being the words, in which S. Mark expreſſes that, which S. Matthew expreſſes in other words, (here, what ſhall be the ſigne when all theſe things ſhall be fulfilled? there τί τὸ σημεῖον τῆς σῆς παρουσίας καὶ τῆς συντελείας τοῦ αἰῶνος; what is the ſigne of thy coming, and of the conſummation of the age? it irrefragably followes from hence (what hath been inſiſted on at large in the Annotations on Mat. 24. b. c.) that the coming of Chriſt, and conſummation of the age ſignifies the deſtruction of the Jewiſh Temple, and nation; Of which onely, and not of the day of laſt Judgment, the ſignes are here demanded by the Diſciples, and given by Chriſt; Which I here adde ex abundanti, for the removing all ſcruple in this matter. To the ſame purpoſe 'tis again obſervable, that though here, at the beginning, S. Mark doe not at all uſe the phraſe of Chriſts coming in this manner, yet v. 26. inſtead of that which is in another phraſe in S. Matthew, c. 24. 30. then ſhall appear, or be ſeen, the ſigne of the ſon of man in heaven, this ſignall puniſhment and revenge on the crucifyers from Chriſt now reigning in heaven he hath theſe plain words, Then ſhall they ſee the ſon of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory.

a. Ταῦτα πάντα.

V. 32. The ſon] That this whole diſcourſe belongs to the deſtruction of Jeruſalem there can be no doubt to him that compares it with Mat. 24. and Lu. 21. and what hath been ſaid in the Annotations for the evincing of it. Which having been the matter of Daniels predictions, and afterwards of ſome of Johns viſions in the Revelation, and here of Chriſts, It is moſt certain, that the time of it was revealed by God to this ſon of man, and other his ſervants, and therefore of that, and of the particular circumſtances connecting to the laſt point of that, it cannot be underſtood, that of that knoweth no man, &c. That day and hour therefore, of which the words are to be underſtood, muſt be more nicely interpreted, to ſignifie not the time more looſely but more ſtrictly that very point of time, wherein this fatal blow was to be ſtruck; And of this, to preclude the curioſity of men, and to ingage their vigilance, Chriſt is pleaſed to tell them, that no diſpenſation of Gods, either by man viz. Daniel, or any other Prophet, or by Angel, or (which is higheſt) by the ſon of man, had ordered us thus to know the times or the ſeaſons, this being no part of the Prophetick office of any man, or within the commiſſion of Chriſt himſelf, to reveale this ſecret to them. What the Agnoetæ taught in this matter, and wherein their ſuppoſed miſtake conſiſted, is not obvious to define. They were thus called, ſaith * Leontius, becauſe they defined from this text, that ὡς ἀνθρώπῳ ἠγνόει τὸ χρειὸς, that Chriſt as man was ignorant of ſome things, ὥσπερ καὶ πονεῖσθαι λέγομεν αὐτὸν in the ſame manner as we ſay he ſuffered grief, &c. For this, ſaith he, Theodoſius Biſhop of Alexandria wrote againſt them, but his authority is not great, being himſelf tainted, and deemed as an Heretick, as there appears, and ſo accounted by * Baronius, and his followers Theodoſiani or Jacobitæ. But Eulogius Biſhop of Alexandria alſo wrote againſt them, and the Epitome of his arguments and anſwers we have in * Photius, and the ſumme of them is, that what is here ſaid of Chriſt, was ſaid, κατ' ἀναφορὰν, ſecundùm reſpectum, ὡς ἐκ τοῦ ἀγνοίας ὄντος αὐτῷ τῷ σώματι, ἴσον τῷ ἀνθρωπίνης οὐσίας, ἧς ὅτιν αὐτὸς ἡ κεφαλὴ, * in that his body, viz. the humane nature, of which he was the head was not without ignorance, as, ſaith he, he is ſaid to be made ſin and a curſe for us, becauſe the head appropriating to it ſelf the things of the body, he thus took upon him the things of the body, viz. of us ſinfull men. Yet * after this, though he much diſlike, that either according to his Divinity or Humanity, ignorance ſhould be attributed to him, he cannot but * acknowledge with Gregorie Nazianzen, γινώσκει μὲν ὡς θεὸς, ἀγνοεῖ δὲ ὡς ἀνθρωπος, that he knowes indeed as God, but is ignorant as man, onely adding, that the Fathers that acknowledged, or admitted ignorance in our Saviour, in reſpect of his humanity, ἐκ ὡς δόγμα τοῦτο παρεδώκασιν, did not produce this, as a doctrine, but to repreſs the Arians, made uſe of it. Now of this diſcourſe of Eulogius * Pope Gregorie, gives his opinion in his Epiſtles, that he admires much in it, but diſlikes nothing, that he had written a great deal to Anatolius the Deacon to the ſame ſenſe, that what he ſaid of Chriſts words, that they were to be referred to him juxta corpus ejus, nos quod ſumus, in reſpect of his body, which we are, is moſt true, and that S. Auguſtine had oft expreſſed himſelf to the ſame ſenſe, adding alſo another interpretation of the words, not that the ſon of man was ignorant of that day, Sed quia hunc ſciri minimè permittat, but that he would by no means permit it to be known. * After this, another ſubtilty, as he ſtyles it, he propoſeth, that the onely ſon being incarnate, and made for us perfect man, in natura quidem humanitatis novit diem —— Sed hunc non ex natura humanitatis novit, knew the day in his humane nature, but not from his humane nature, becauſe being made God-man, he knew it onely per Deitatis ſuæ potentiam, by the power of his deity. This certainly hath truth in it, but will not eaſily be diſcerned how it oppoſeth them, who acknowledging Chriſt God-man to know all things in this hypoſtatical union, do yet affirme him, in reſpect of his Humanity, to be ignorant of ſome things; For 'tis not neceſſary, they ſhould mean any more in thus affirming, then that he hath not this knowledge of all things from his Humanity, but from his Divinity only. In that Epiſtle of Gregories, one thing is reſolved, which may poſſibly give ſome light to this whole matter, viz. * that he that is no Neſtorian, cannot be an Agnoeta. If this be true, then we have a competent cauſe of the Agnoetæ being reckoned up for Hereticks, for ſuch the Neſtorians doubtleſs were, denying the union of the Divine and Humane nature in Chriſt. But the hiſtory rather inclines us to beleeve, that the Agnoetæ were Eutychians than Neſtorians, for Theodoſius was one of the Σταυροφανῆται, that oppoſed the Councel of Calcedon, and thoſe that brake off from him (about this point of Chriſts being ignorant of ſome things, in reſpect of his Humanity) had been, till then, of his communion, and ſo oppoſers of that Councel, ſee Leontius, p. 514. A. Theſe Eutychians hereſie conſiſted in this, that they affirmed ſo cloſe an union betwixt the Word and the humane nature, that they became but one nature, and this was refuted in that Councel of Calcedon, and the Agnoetæ being oppoſers of that Councel, muſt be ſuppoſed to adhere to this Hereſie, and then indeed it muſt be acknowledged they were Heretickes, and their Hereſie, ſo much worſe than bare Eutychianiſme as it is blaſphemie to impute neſcience or ignorance to God. For ſuppoſing, as an Eutychian ſuppoſeth that the divinity and humanity were by union * become one and the ſame nature, 'twere prodigious to beleeve, that this nature were ignorant of any thing. This therefore I ſuppoſe to be the ground of defining theſe Agnoetæ to be Heretickes; for ſuch they were, if they thus taught. But for the doctrine of thoſe, which hold firmly the decrees of all the four firſt General Councels, and ſo condemne all the Hereſies there condemned, particularly that of Neſtorius, dividing the Perſons, and of Eutychus confounding the Natures in Chriſt, and onely affirme, that though as God, he knew all, yet as man, he was ignorant of ſome things, juſt in the ſame manner, as he was paſſible and ſubject to all humane infirmities, which had not ſin in them, and that this is his owne expreſſe affirmation, that the ſon of man knew not that day and hour, this ſure is ſo far from Hereſie, that, as the ſame Leontius elſewhere tels us, πλὴν ἰστέον ὅτι οἱ πολλοὶ τῶν πατέρων φάσκον ἢ πάντες φαίνονται λέγοντες αὐτὸν ἀγνοεῖν. p. 531. B. it is the unanimous aſſertion of all the Fathers; to which neither the Councel of Calcedon, nor any other hath taught any thing contrarie. For ſo in his tenth πρόξις, reſuming this buſineſs of the Agnoetæ, and recounting the anſwer that ſome gave, that thoſe words [οὐδὲ ὁ υἱός, neither the ſon] were ſpoken by Chriſt, κατ' οἰκονομίαν, ἵνα ὑποβλέψῃ τοὺς μαθητάς ——by way of prudential œconomie, to avert the diſciples from their inquirie —— he addes, as * his owne affirmation, that it is not fit to ſpeak over ſubtily in this matter, and that therefore the Synod did not make any decree in it.

V. 35. Cock-crowing] The gallicinium or cock-crowing is here ſet to note the midddle time betwixt midnight and and morning. For there were two cock-crowings in the night, as appears c. 14. 30. and the ſecond is here ſpoaken of, and call'd ſimply ἀλεκτοροφωνία, as alſo Mat. 26 75. and Lu. 22. 34, and Joh. 13. 39. there is only φωνήσῃ ἀλέκτωρ the cock ſhall crow, where yet the meaning is clearly this, δὶς φωνῆσαι the ſecond crowing as appears by this Evangeliſt, ch. 14. 30. See Cenſorinus.

But that will contribute little to his advantage, that is the actor in it. It is a moſt unhappy thing to have any hand in putting the Meſſias, or any other perſon to death, though their dying may be determined by God to moſt glorious ends, which the wicked actor or contriver knowes nothing of, nor at all deſignes, but directly the contrary. † teſtimonies were not ſufficient.

59. But that, if ſufficiently teſtified, was yet no capital crime.

And neither thus was their teſtimony ſufficient. See note g.

60. And the high prieſt ſtood up in the midſt, and asked Jeſus, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou nothing? what is it] that theſe witneſſe againſt thee?

60. And therefore to get ſome charge againſt him out of his own mouth, the high prieſt ſtood up and ſaid to him, Anſwereſt thou nothing? what ſaiſt thou to theſe things?

61. But he held his peace and anſwered nothing. Again the high prieſt asked him and ſaid unto him, Art thou the Chriſt, the ſon of [h] the bleſſed?

62. And Jeſus ſaid, I am, And yee ſhall ſee the ſon of man ſitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.

See c. 13. 26. h.

72. It was the ſecond cock-crowing about three in the morn, and upon hearing of a cock crow Peter called to mind, what Jeſus had ſaid to him, Before &c. and caſting his eye up to Chriſt, he ſaw him look earneſtly upon him, Lu. 22. 61. which together with the crowing of the cock, put him in minde of what he had done, and thereupon he wept (as himſelfe confeſſes here by his amanuenſis S. Mark, but, ſay the others, he wept bitterly.)

72. And [the ſecond time the cock crew, And Peter called to minde the word that Jeſus ſaid unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou ſhalt deny me thrice, and i † when he thought thereon, he wept.] † he looked upon him, and wept.

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

a. V. 3. Spikenard] What is meant by Ἀλάβαστρον hath been explained Mat. 26. b. Beſides that, there are ſome other difficulties in that paſſage of the ſtory, as it Νάρδε is ſet down with ſome variation in this Goſpel. As 1. For the ſort of oyntment 'tis here ſaid to be nard, which was not any ſuch διάπασμα or dry oyntment, as ſhould make it needfull to be put in a boxe, or that boxe to be broken for the taking it out, but fit to be poured in, and out of a cruiſe, being moiſt and fluid, whence * Nonnus calls it ἑέρσῃ a dew or watery ſubſtance. This nard is reckoned among the καλὰ, the oyntments that do diſtill out of reeds, either of their own accord, or when they are cut and bruiſed, and with which nothing is wont to be mix'd, that ſo it may remain a pure, ſimple, liquid and noble juyce. Hence it is called ſpicata nardus, Spiknard, becauſe it thus diſtills ex ſpicis vel ariſtis, out of canes or reeds, And it is very poſſible that Πίστικὴ that may be the importance of the word πιστικὴ here, lightly varyed from the Latine ſpicata. Some have thought it to come from the name of a place Biſt or Piſt, whether that be the Metropolis, of Carimania, or of the region of Cabul in India, Others that πιστικὸς like πιστὸς may ſignifie ſincere, unmix'd as the Latine ſincerus, ſincere, is ſaid to be made of fine cera without mixture of waxe (contrary to the Ceroma oyle and waxe together, uſed by the athletæ) and ſo 'tis generally called pure nard

* ἐλιβανώδεσιν ἐρσαις ἱέρσοις

Pura diſtillant tempora nardo, in Tibullus, pure nard diſtilling on his temples, and ſuch is commonly the more chargeable, ἠ καλοῖσι μύρεσι ἀλαδεῖσι, in Archeſtratus) as this here is πολυτελὴς and πολύτιμος in S. John, coſtly or pretious, thus Marcellus in his book De medicament. and Theophil. cals it ἄδολον καὶ μετὰ πίστεως καλασκευασθεῖσαν, unmix'd, faithfully prepared, And the Old Gloſſes, balſamum ſine impoſtura, that is, mixtura, without any deceit. So ſaith * Vadianus, Epit. de inſulis Mar. Mediterr. Dignum cognitu, quod Plinius tradit l. 13. ſcilicet novem herbarum ſpecies eſſe, quæ nardum imitentur, & adulterent; unde intelligimus in tanta fraudis materia uſum loquendi obtinuiſſe ut piſtica nardus diceretur quæ ſincera & abſque vitio eſt, & plane ἄδολος, germana, & nullâ arte vitiata. It is worth knowing, what Plinie affirmes, that there are nine ſpecies of herbes, which imitate and adulterate nard, whence it is, that, in ſo great matter of deceit, that nard is called πιστικὴ, which is ſincere, and without fault, deceitleſs and not vitiated by any art. But that which ſeems to me the moſt probable is, that as there are in the New Teſtament writers many Latine words, and thoſe a little diſguiſed by turning into Greek, as λίβρα for libra &c. ſo here ſpicata may be turned into πιστικὴ, which is as it were, the Anagram of it, the miſplacing, but yet retaining all the conſonants in it. This is I find, Eraſmus's opinion of it, whoſe judgment I ſhall ſuppoſe fit to recommend it to the reader.

b. Συντρίψασα 1b. Brake] This part of this paſſage expreſs'd by συντρίψασα ἀλάβαστρον κατέχεεν remains ſtill (after all that hath been ſaid on S. Matthew and here) to be explained. That it cannot be interpreted of her breaking the veſſell, I am perſwaded, not onely firſt, becauſe a veſſell of that kinde, of Marble is not eaſily broken (and Nonnus renders it μάρμαρον ἄγγος a marble veſſell, and if it had been of Gold or Silver, or other metall, 'twere as hard to be imagined) and 2. becauſe there was no need of breaking it, and 3. becauſe Suidas mentions this very veſſel or cruiſe, βίκιον μύρε ὃ ἀλείψαλο ὁ Χριςὸς (together with many other σημειοφορικὰ notable reliques, as laid up by Conſtantine the great, but taken away, ἀφανισθέντα by Theodoſius the great) which ſure if it had been broken in pieces by the woman could not well have been laid up by Conſtantine, nor would Suidas have ſaid it was, if he had ſo underſtood this word συντρίψασα in the Goſpel, at leaſt would not have called it βίκιον the cruiſe, but onely ſome pieces of it. And although perhaps that relation in Suidas be not of infallible authority, that it was kept till Conſtantines time, (which yet the durable matter, of which 'twas made, was able to authorize) yet thus farre may an argument be drawn from thence, that they that affirmed it to be ſo kept, did not believe it broken by the woman, and that Suidas which was a very good Grammarian, and thought it not broken, did infallibly underſtand ſomewhat elſe (and not breaking) by συντρίψασα. But beſides theſe I have yet this farther argument, in that 'tis here ſaid καλέχεεν ſhe poured out of it, which was moſt proper for the buſineſſe in hand, it being the manner to poure out ſuch oyntment out of the mouth of the veſſel; So Euphemus in Pollux, λύε τὰ ἀλάβαστρα θᾶσσον open the cruiſe preſently, and the manner of pouring out the oyntment is there expreſs'd, by uſing a ſpathula or rudicula, an inſtrument to put into it firſt, to taſt the oyntment, πρὶν καταχέειν (the word here) before it be poured out, and alſo to ſtir up the thicker parts of it from the bottome and from the ſides, that they may come out together. To this purpoſe hath the Syriack interpreted it ſhe opened it, and the Æthiopick, ſhe opened and poured out. And for the Greek συντρίψασα in the Active, that doth not naturally ſignifie to break, but either contundere, conquaſſare, to knock, to beat or ſhake together, συνθλᾶ ſaith Heſychius, So in * Lucian, ξύλοις συντρίβειν is fuſtibus contundere, not to break (though in the Paſſive that which is contuſum or contritum is oft that which by ſuch contuſion is broken to pieces) A. Gellius ſpeaking of a boy that was to poure out oyle from the cruiſe into a ſallet of herbs, the oyle not coming at firſt, concuſſum vehementius, ſaith he, iterum in ollam vertit, he ſhook, or knock'd it very vehemently, and then turned the mouth of it over the diſh. Or elſe conterere, to rub, or ſcrape, &c. Thus the ſimple word τρίβω vulgarly ſignifies tercre, to rub, and περιτρίβω to rub upon, as in * Palladius περιτρίψαι

* in Demoſth. p. 58.

* Lauſ hiſt. c. 29. p. 67. C.

ἡ κεφαλὴν τῷ ὄφεως τοῖς μορίοις, rubbing the head of the viper on the parts, on purpose that it might bite him; and then by Analogy, συμβίβω must be, to rub together. If it signifie contundere, or conquassare, to knock, or shake, then the meaning will be, that she shook the vessel, or knock'd it against the ground, that it might run the more fluently, and the more corpulent parts might rise from the bottome, and then she poured it on his head. But if it signifie conterere, then it referres to the ἀλάβαστος in Pollux, the instrument ordinary among Apothecaries, to rub, or scrape the inside of the vessel, that the ointment stick not to it. In one of these two notions I doubt not but 'tis taken, and the Hebrew כתת which is rendred sometimes συντρίβω, is also by the Septuagint ἐκτινάσσω excutio, and ἐκραφίζω, to strike against the ground, and διαχέω and ἐκχέω to poure out, Prov. 5. 16. and διανοίγω to open, and that very agreeable to the moystnesse, or thinnesse of the Nard, which before was mentioned.

V. 12. First day of unleavened bread] Some difficulty there is in the Old Testament about the beginning of the feast of unleavened bread arising from the comparing of Exod. 12. 6. 8. and Lev. 23. 5. Numb. 28. 16. In Exodus, on the fourteenth day of the moneth Nisan at even the Passover is to be killed, v. 6. and the flesh eat that night, v. 8. and v. 17. 18. their eating of unleavened bread is to begin at the fourteenth day of that moneth at even, and to last till the 21 day of that moneth at even, whereas in Leviticus and in Numbers 'tis distinctly said, In the fourteenth day of the first moneth at even is the Lords Passover, and on the fifteenth day of the same moneth is the feast of unleavened bread, and agreeably Josephus Antiq. l. 3. πέμπτῃ καὶ δεκάτῃ διαδέχεται ἡ τῶν Πάσχα ἡ τῶν ἀζύμων ἑορτὴ ἑπτὰ ἡμέρας ἔσα on the fifteenth day of the feast of unleavened bread followes the Passover, and last seven days. These will soon be reconciled, if first we suppose that the Jewes fourteenth day begin at the Sun-set of the thirteenth according to the first calculation, Gen. 1. The evening and the morning were the first day, and the importance of the word νυχθήμερον night and day, for the naturall day, And then secondly, that betwixt that time and the next evening being the full time that belonged to the fourteenth day, all that belonged to the Passover was to be done, the place of eating it prepared, the lambe killed, and dressed, and eaten about the conclusion of that 24 houres, according to that of Moses, Exod. 12. 8. They shall eat the flesh in that night (not the night with which the fourteenth day began, but the night or evening concluding, or shutting up the fourteenth day) that is, not deferre the eating it any longer, then that night, leave none of it till the morning, v. 10. And then thirdly, that this day of the Passover being the Eve or preparation of the seven days feast of unleavened bread they were that day before Sun-set, (that is, before the fifteenth day began) to purge out or remove all remainders of leavened bread out of their houses and to eate the Passover with unleavened, (which seems to be referred to by S. Paul, 1 Cor. 5.) and then the feast of unleavened bread was to begin, and last seven days, that is, from the evening that concluded the fourteenth, and began the fifteenth day Lev. 23. 5. Numb. 21. 16. to the evening, the conclusion of the 21. Exod. 12. 18. and beginning of the 22 day. Agreeable to this is that of Josephus, Ant. l. 2. speaking of this feast, ἑορτὴν ἄγομεν ἐφ' ἡμέρας ὀκτὼ, we keep that feast eight days, beginning from the fourteenth day of the moneth, wherein at even they were to eate unleavened bread, Exod. 12. 18. and then to keep the feast of unleavened bread seven days after. From this explication of those texts of the Old Testament the controversie about the time of Christs and the Jewes keeping this Passover, here in the New, may be decided. And first the precise time of this πρώτη ἀζύμων, the first day of unleavened bread be defined. On the thursday evening then, wherein the thirteenth day of the moneth was concluded, and the fourteenth day (or νυχθήμερον night & day, and evening and morning) began, expres'd here by two characters, 1. πρώτη ἡμέρα τῶν ἀζύμων, the first day of unleavened bread (not the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, or the first of the seven daies, but) the preparation to that feast, wherein the leaven was put out of their houses, 2. ὅτε τὸ Πάσχα ἔθυον, when they kill'd the Passover, that is on the evening which began that Paschal day, (at the end of which, the Paschal lamb was wont to be kill'd and eaten) The disciples say unto him, Where wilt thou that we go, and prepare that thou eat the Passover? For according to the usuall custome, that night and the next morning, the Jewes were wont to prepare, and make ready, cleanse the house, remove all leavened bread out of it, and at length lay the cloth, dresse the meat, and eat the Passover about the evening or night after. But the truth was, Jesus our Passover was to be sacrificed (that is, crucified himself) before the next evening or night, wherein the Paschal lamb used to be eaten, and therefore he resolved to keep it sooner, viz. in the former part of that Paschal νυχθήμερον; This saith the learned Grotius, is the importance of, my time is at hand Mat. 26. 18. and of ποιῶ I keep the Passover, that is in respect of the suddennesse of my death approaching I will keep it presently, and Luk. 22. 15. I have earnestly desired to eat this Passover with you, before I suffer; But this not by eating the Lamb; That was to be slain by the Levites, 2 Chron. 35. 6. and sacrificed in the Temple, Deut. 16. 2, 6. (and that so it continued at this time and after, appears by the story of Cestius, learning by this means from the Priests the number of the Lambs that were sacrificed, and the people that were present at a Passover) and that on the the fourteenth day at even onely, that is, at the conclusion of that day. But another Passover, which was not sacrificed (and accordingly of that which Christ took, it is no where said in the Gospels, that it was sacrificed, not θύω but only ποιῶ, I keep, or celebrate, and φάγω, I eat it) but eaten, as a memoriall of the afflictions and deliverance out of Ægypt, viz. unleavened bread, and bitter herbs, and nothing else. To this purpose it may be observed, that as Joh. 13. 1. the time there specified for the supper, v. 2. is πρὸ τῆς ἑορτῆς τοῦ Πάσχα, before the feast of the Passover, Upon which it is added, that Jesus knew that his hour was come, that he should passe out of this world unto the Father, that is, that he, our Passover, should be sacrificed; and so himself passe before the Passover, intimating that what he now doth at this supper, was upon this consideration, that he knew he should not live to eat the Lamb with them. So at the time of the eating of this supper in John, which is here, v. 12. call'd this (commemorative) Passover, The solemn Paschal feast (by the mention of those things that they have need of εἰς τὴν ἑορτὴν for, or against the feast v. 29.) appears to be yet to come, the Disciples it seems, conceiving that it would follow in its due time, as it would, had it not been prevented by Christs death. This commemorative Passover they that could not come up to Jerusalem to sacrifice, were wont to observe at home, in remembrance of the deliverance, And accordingly Christ by his approaching death being hindred from the more solemn celebration of it by killing, and sacrificing of the Lamb, yet would needs keep this commemoration of it on the same day or νυχθήμερον, though many houres before the ordinary eating of the Lamb, viz. in the night before, expressed by ὀψίας γενομένης v. 17. which that it signifies not only the evening but in some places necessarily the night, see Note on Mat. 14. c. This setting of the passage will perspicuously reconcile all difficulty, and seeming contrarieties in the relations of this matter among the Evangelists.

c. Πρώτη ἀζύμων

V. 41. It

d. ἀπέχει V. 41. It is enough] What the word ἀπέχει here signifies, may best be learn'd from Hesychius, though in the place, which orderly belongs to it, the word be not to be found in the printed copies. After the word ἀπέχασον, ἀπέχει followes, Ἀπέχῃ, ἀπέχει, ἐξαρκεῖ, and after again, ἀπέχει ἐξαρκεῖ, By which it appears to be an Impersonal, and to signifie sufficit, actum est, and here to import, ['Tis to no purpose to speak any more of not sleeping, 'tis now too late] and this preparative to what followes, the hour is come &c. Thus is ἔχει used also, as Num. 16. 3. Ἐχέτω ὑμῖν let it suffice you, where Symmachus and Theodotion out of the Hebrew litterally read πολὺ ὑμῖν it is much for you, So in Anacreon, ἀπέχει βλέπω γὼ αὐτὴν, It is sufficient for I see her. In order to this interpretation of the word, it is observable, that ἀπέχω Phil. 4. 18. seems to have a peculiar forensick notion for satis habeo giving a discharge, subscribing of an Acquittance, (which is therefore call'd ἀποχὴ) πάντα ἀπέχω, I give you my acquittance (ὡς ὂν ὀφειλῆς as upon receiving of a debt, saith Theophylact) for all that which now ye sent me, having, as it followes, received by Epaphroditus, &c. Now this notion of it being Impersonally applyed to this place, signifies Christs giving them an ἀποχὴ or acquittance, a requiring no farther attendance from them, (they may sleep on now) and so, according to our vulgar phrase, giving them a quietus est. So Mat. 6. 2. and 6. ἀπέχουσι τὸν μισθὸν αὐτῶν they receive all that is due to them, by the receiving the praise of men they acquit God of any farther payment. So Gen. 43. 23. τὸ ἀργύριον ὑμῶν τὸ εὐδοκιμῶν ἀπέχω, I received your money, good and lawfull money, and acquit you of it, and accordingly Suidas interprets ἀπέχω in the present tense by ἀπέλαβον in the Aorist, I received, and so doth Theopaylact, Ἐπαινέμενοι γὼ τὸ πᾶν ἀπέλαβον παρὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων they that are praised have received all from men, that is, have acquitted God. Another way hath been thought of to interpret this place, by adhering to the nature of the verb ἀπέχω, as that notes distance or absence, but that not far removed, approach or drawing nigh. So the Syriack seems to have undestood it here; For in the printed copy of that, in stead of ἀπέχει they read מטורת חרתא appropinquavit finis, the end approacheth, and in Manuscript copies, קרב שולמא appropinquavit consummatio, the consummation approacheth, where מטא and קרב, have the same importance, both signifying, to draw nigh. According to this way ἀπέχει must be taken Personally, and having no Substantive annex'd to it, the word ὥρα, houre, which followes, must belong to that, as well as to ἦλθεν is come; thus, ἀπέχει ἦλθεν ὥρα, the houre (the point of time) drawes nigh, yea it is come, the son of man is delivered into the hands of sinners, and so it will agree with what followes immediately, Behold he is at hand that doth it. But the former I conceive the fittest to be adhered to, though the latter having the authority of the Syriack, is not unworthy to be mention'd also.

e. Νεανίσκοι V. 51. Young men] Νεανίσκοι young men is a title here of the Roman Souldiers, as in Polybius νεανίσκων καταχαφὴ, the mustring of Souldiers, so Jos. 6. 22. the Septuagint have δύο νεανίσκοι κατασκοπεύσαντες two Souldiers went to spie, and Jos. 2. 1. and Isa. 13. 18. τοξεύματα νεανίσκων the bowes of the young men, or Souldiers. See Casaubon against Barron: p. 113. So Juvenes in Latine doe usually signifie; See Lipsius Epist. quæst. l. 1. Ep. 1.

f. φῶς V. 54. Fire] The word φῶς light is here and Lu. 22. 56. clearly taken for a fire, for to that θερμαινόμενος warming himself referres. And it is observable, how it comes to doe so. The Writer of this book, and all of the New Testament, and so the Greek translators of the Old were Jewes by nation, and had learn'd Greek, Hence it is, that though they write in Greek, yet they not only retain the Hebrew idiome in phrases, and formes of speeches, but farther in many other things imitate the Hebrew manner especially in two things, 1. in the Conjugations of Verbs, They having in Hebrew more then there are in Greek, do yet expresse the sense of all their Conjugations by Greek words of other Conjugations, being not able to do otherwise, as when Hiphil one of their Conjugations is to make doe a thing, they finding no Conjugation in Greek answerable to this, make use of the Active for it. Thus have we θριαμβεύειν 2 Cor. 2. 14. to make triumph, ἀναπέλλειν Mat. 5. 45. to make arise, σπεύδειν 2 Pet. 3. 12. to make to hasten, καθίζειν 1 Cor. 6. 4. to make to sit, and ὑποτομαπίζειν to make recite, Lu. 11. 53. and περισσεύειν to make abound, 2 Cor. 9. 8. Thus when we read Mat. 5. 25. ἴσθι εὐνοῶν, that is, litterally, think thou well, or, be friends with thine adversary, it clearly signifies, make, or, get him to be friends with thee, see Note on Mat. 5. 24. m. The other thing is, that when an Hebrew word (according to the paucity of Themes in that language) signifies severall things, and those severalls expres'd in Greek by severall words of severall significations; one of these Greek is often by them (according as it was the usuall dialect, or manner of speaking among them) taken for the other. This might be observed in other writings of translators, which have turn'd books out of their owne native language into a language which they have learn'd by study, As when a Grecian rendred the Novels out of Greek into Latine, meeting with these * words ἀφ' ὁδοῦς ὑποπλάνωσι δόξης they erred from the right opinion, δόξα in Greek signifying gloria as well as opinio, he renders it à vera aberrarunt gloria. So the Translator of Irenæus, who, in a discourse how all things were created by God himself and not by the Angels, hath these words, Ea omnia non per Angelos, neque per virtutes aliquas ablatas ab ejus sententia, All these were created not by Angels nor by any virtues pulled off from his sentence, where the Greek being questionless ἀπὸ δόξης αὐτοῦ should have been rendred ab ejus gloria, from his glory, according to the opinion of those who supposing the Angels to be made of beams and rayes of Gods glory, (ἀπαυγάσματα and ὑποστάσεις) taught that the world was created by them. Something of this kind might be observed among the Greek authors themselves, as when the Greek κόρη signifies both a maid and the apple of the eye, the word γλωὼ signifying onely the latter of these, is yet used sometimes for a maid, ἔρρε κακὴ γλωὼ, and hence perhaps it is that when ὀργὴ signifies both χολὴ, and τρόπον, anger, and generally, the disposition of the mind, whatever it is, χολὴ which imports one of these (signifying choler or anger) is taken sometimes for the other, as when in Zenobius we read δίχολοι γνῶμαι, and find that rendered by the Scholiast, ἰδιόβουλοι: I make little doubt but the place in Zenobius is corrupt, and should be read ἰδιόχολοι, and then that being all one with ἰδιόβουλοι, argues χολὴ and τρόπος to be so too. Thus hath * Phavorinus observed of Pindar, that τιμὴ signifying two things, reward in a good sense, and ποινὴ punishment in a bad, from τίω τιμωρῶ, he useth ποινὴν punishment often for ἢ ἐπὶ καλῷ ἀμοιβὴν retribution in a good sense. In the Septuagint's, (or whosever did it) the Greek translation of the Old Testament, there are infinite examples of this kind, I must not goe about to throw them in here, They would make up a volume, onely one I shall mention, as being a pitch above any, which we have yet observed, or which is ordinary in the other examples, It is this, that when כבד signifies both burthen, and honour, they do not only render that word by one of these, when it signifies the other, but moreover there being another Hebrew word, to wit סבר which signifies a burthen, that is, denotes one part of the signification of the word כבד, and not the other yet those Translators have rendred סבל sometimes by that other other ſignification of the word כבד, as Iſa. 14. 25. where they render it δόξῃ glory and Exod. 6. 6. καλαδωσεῖα, where yet the ſenſe requires burthen in both places. Examples of the main obſervation in the New Teſtament we ſhall meet with many, and obſerve them briefly as they come. That which is here before us, and occaſion'd all this preparative diſcourſe, is τὸ φῶς ſignifying light in Greek and nothing elſe, but is here uſed for fire, moſt clearly upon this ground and no other, becauſe the Hebrew אור which ſignifies light, and the ſun the fountain of light (from whence it is that the Greeks call the Sun or Apollo Ἥλιος) doth alſo ſignifie light fire, or flaming fire (from whence perhaps is the Latine, uro, to burn) and ſo in vulgar uſe, both fire and light, and here upon one of theſe is taken and uſed for the other, τὸ φῶς, when the ſenſe require τὸ πῦρ.

g. Ἴσαι μαρτυρίαι

V. 56. Agreed not together] Ἴσαι μαρτυρίαι here belongs not to the agreement or diſagreement of their teſtimonies, but to the weight of them, or ſufficiency to the matter in hand, of putting him to death, either in reſpect to the number of the witneſſes, but eſpecially of the crimes charged on him. The teſtimonies that were look'd for, were εἰς τὸ θανατῶσαι, ver. 35. ſuch as would be ſufficient to put him to death, and that muſt not be but under two or three witneſſes, and for a crime which is by law capital. Now though there were many knights of the poſt brought in, to witneſſe againſt him, v. 56. yet 'tis probable that their witneſſes were of ſeverall matters, not two or more of them to one matter, and ſo 'tis there ſaid, that they were not ἴσαι, ſufficient in the firſt ſenſe, in reſpect of the number of the witneſſes. Afterward v. 57. the witneſſes agree, more then one in the ſame teſtimony, and though it be not in Matthew and Mark ſet downe in the ſame words exactly, yet the difference is not reall but verball betweene them (as in many other narrations) and each of them affirm that the witneſſes ſaid the ſame thing. In that verſe therefore, the οὐκ ἴσαι ſignifies that the teſtimonies were not of any capitall crime, or of ſuch importance, as that, allowing them to be true, a man ſhould be put to death for them. And therefore it is that the chief Prieſt was fain to examine him, and at laſt adjured him (which I formerly obſerved the force of, Note on Mat. 26. h.) that out of his own mouth he might draw ſomewhat to condemn him. (For ſo the faſhion of adjuring was deſigned, Num. 5. 13. when an accuſation is not ſufficiently proved, and there is no witneſſe againſt him.) And when by Chriſts anſwer he concludes that he had ſpoken blaſphemy, then he riſes up and ſaith, What need have we of any farther witneſſes? ver. 63. and Mat. 26. 65.

h. Εὐλογητός.

V. 61. The Bleſſed] The Jewes when they name God, generally adde bleſſed for ever, and thereupon ὁ εὐλογητὸς is here the title of God the father, ſee Note on Rom. 9. d.

i. Ἐπιβαλὼν

V. 72. Thought thereon] Many conjectures there are about the importance of ἐπιβαλὼν, as that it might be for ἐννοῶν, thinking on it, or that ἐπιβαλὼν ἔκλαιε were all one with ἐπέβαλε κλαῦσαι, and that to be rendred, he proceeded or added to weep, that is, he wept, as προσθεὶς ἔπαι, Lu. 19. 11 a kind of Expletive, or as ἐπιβάλλειν ſignifies περισσότητα, and περίσσειαν, abundance, ſay Grammarians, and then would be all one with his weeping bitterly in the other Evangeliſt; But the two latter will be leſſe probable, if it be mark'd that there is a comma betwixt ἐπιβαλὼν, and ἔκλαιε, whereas either of thoſe ſenſes requires the connecting of theſe together, and the advantage that the laſt hath by agreeing with πικρῶς in S. Matthew, is again loſt by that which is obſerved of this Evangeliſt, that being S. Peters Scribe, he doth as a true penitent would doe, ſet out his ſinne of denying Chriſt with more aggravations then any of the Evangeliſts, and only mentions the repentance, but more ſlightly then the reſt. As for the firſt, that ἐπιβάλλειν ſhould ſignifie ἐννοεῖν, it is but affirmed by Caſaubon, but not proved by any Grammarian or Gloſſary, and therefore though proper enough to the place, will be of leſſe authority, and beſides, this thinking on it ſeems to have been contained before in the ἀνεμνήσθη ὁ Πέτρος, Peters remembring Chriſts ſaying. Leſſe probable then any of theſe I conceive that of Claudius Salmaſius to be, that it ſhould ſignifie ἐγκαλυψάμενον, operto capite, putting on his hat, covering his head. To theſe I might adde another conjecture, that the Hebrew כפל being ſometimes rendred ἐπιβάλλω, and that ordinarily ſignifying to fall down, to proſtrate himſelfe, and that as an argument and expreſſion of ſorrow, ἐπιβαλὼν may poſſibly ſignifie caſting himſelfe down, proſtrating himſelfe. But that which ſeems to me leſt forced, and moſt proper to the paſſages ſet down by the other Evangeliſts and back'd by the judgment of learned ancient Grammareans, is this, that it ſhould ſignifie looking on Chriſt caſting his eyes upon him he wept. In S. Luke c. 22. 61. 'tis ſaid (in this point of time here ſet down by S. Mark) that Jeſus turned καὶ ἐνέβλεψε τῷ Πέτρῳ and look'd upon Peter, And his doing any thing upon that look of Chriſts (as it followes there, he remembred &c.) in an infallible argument that S. Peter look'd upon him alſo, ſeeing him look; and that he did ſo, and thereupon wept, is the ſumme of this interpetation, And for authority to confirme it, 'tis Phavorinus's gloſſe ἐπιβάλλω, τὸ ἐπιβλέπω τινὸς ἢ τῷ δε. It ſignifies to look upon any man.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND ſtraightway in the morning [the chief prieſts held a conſultation with the Elders and Scribes, and the whole councell, and] bound Jeſus and carried him away and delivered him to Pilate.

1. the chief prieſts elders and ſcribes, that is the whole Sanhedrim having ſate in conſultation, and reſolved that he was to be put to death (Mat. 27. 1.)

2. And Pilate asked him, Art thou King of the Jewes? And he anſwering ſaid unto him, [Thou ſaieſt it.]

2. I am.

3. And the chief prieſt accuſed him of many things, but he anſwered nothing.

4. And Pilate asked him again, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou nothing? Behold how many things they witneſſe againſt thee:

5. But Jeſus yet anſwered nothing, ſo that Pilate marvelled.

6. Now at the feaſt [he releaſed unto them one priſoner, whomſoever they deſired.]

6. It was the cuſtome for him to looſe to the Jewes, by way of gratification, ſome one priſoner, whomſoever the multitude of them ſhould demand, v. 8.

7. And there was one named Barabbas, [which lay bound with them that had made inſurrection with him, who had] committed murther in the inſurrection.

7. that together with his complices was in priſon for having made an inſurrection, and this man had alſo

8. to releaſe them a priſoner according to cuſtome.

8. And the multitude crying aloud began to deſire him [to doe as he had ever done unto them.]

9. But Pilate anſwered them ſaying, Will ye that I releaſe unto you the King of the Jewes.

10. For he knew that the chief prieſts had delivered him for envy.

11. But the chief prieſts moved the people that he ſhould rather releaſe Barabbas unto them.

12. And Pilate anſwered and ſaid again unto them, What will ye then that I ſhall doe unto him whom ye call the King of the Jewes?

13. And they cryed out again, Crucifie him.

14. Then Pilate ſaid unto them, Why, what evill hath he done? And they cryed out the more exceedingly, Crucifie him.

15. in compliance to the importunity and clamours of the Jewes, though he thought him abſolutely innocent (and therefore ſent for water to waſh his hands of it, Mat. 27. 24.) and though he had inflicted ſcourging, as a lower puniſhment, to releaſe him from this higher, ſee note on Lu. 23. 16. releaſed Barabbas, and gave them their deſire, delivered Jeſus to be crucified.

15. And ſo Pilate [willing to content the people, releaſed Barabbas unto them, and delivered Jeſus, *when he had ſcourged him, to be crucified.]

17. And they [a] clothed him with purple, and platted a crowne of thorns and put it about his head.

18. And began to ſalute him, Haile King of the Jewes.

23. And they gave him to drink [wine mingled with myrrhe] but he received it not.

24. And when they had crucified him, they parted his garments, caſting lots upon them, what every one ſhould take.

a. Πορφύραν ἐνδύω

V. 17. Clothed him with purple] Many particulars mention'd in their dealing with Chriſt were not from the Jewiſh, but the Roman cuſtomes. Some were mention'd in the Note on Mat. 27. 15. d. and ſuch was here the putting the purple or ſcarlet robe upon him, which the text here ſaith was done by the ſouldiers, and Luke by Herods ſervants, or elſe the Roman guards, Lu. 23. 11. And ſo ſaith * Lazarus Bayfius, this purple or ſcarlet gown, or robe was the Roman faſhion, call'd toga picta, and accordingly by S. Luke ἐσθῆτι λαμπρᾷ ch. 23. 11. and was by way of ſcoffe brought to Chriſt by the ſouldiers, as if it had been ſent by the Senate and people of Rome to him, which, as the Jewes ſaid, pretended to be their King. See farther Lu. 23. b.

b. Ἐπιγραφὴ τῆς αἰτίας

V. 26. Superſcription of, &c.] That it was the Romans cuſtome to write the crime, for which any man ſuffered death, in a table, and carry it before him to execution, appears by Euſebius Eccl. hiſt. l. 5. c. a. where of Attalus the Chriſtian Martyr it is ſaid, that he was led about the amphitheatre, πίνακι δὲ ἄνδρα προάγοντος, ἐν ᾧ ἐγέγραπτο, &c. with a table carried before him, in which was written in Latine, This is Attalus the Chriſtian. So in Suetonius, Domit. c. 10. Detractum in arenam canibus objecit, cum hoc titulo, Impiè locutus &c. He brought him out, and caſt him to the dogs, with this title, or inſcription, He ſpake impiouſly. This elſewhere he calleth elogium, a way of publiſhing the fault, in Calig. and ſo Tertullian in his Apologie c. 11. And as of other kinds of death, ſo particularly of thoſe that are crucified. This is mention'd by Dio of a ſervant, that he was carried to the croſſe, ᾧ γεγράμματον τὴν αἰτίαν τοῦ θανατώσεως δηλοῦντων with a writing, or words, declaring the cauſe of his being put to death. From theſe records of the Romans, appears the propriety of all theſe expreſſions in the ſeverall Evangeliſts, ἐπιγραφὴ τῆς αἰτίας, the ſuperſcription of the cauſe, or of his crime here in Marke; ἡ αἰτία ἐπάνω τῆς κεφαλῆς γεγραμμένη, the charge, or cauſe, written over his head, Mat 27. 37. and ſimply, ἐπιγραφὴ inſcription, Lu. 23. 38. and τίτλος (the Latine word Titulus) title, Joh. 19. 19. all to the ſame purpoſe, noting this Roman cuſtome obſerved in the dealing with him more Romano, after the manner of the Romans.

V. 40. James the leſſe] That the Poſitive μικρὸς is here taken for the Comparative, the leſſe, or the younger, doth not appear by any circumſtance of this text or Analogie of other places. And there were three James's ſo known, two Apoſtles, & the third the brother of the Lord, that this title of the leſſe in the Comparative, could be no character of the third of theſe, to diſtinguiſh him from the other two. That which is moſt probable is, that being a kind of cognomen here, it is an Abbreviate of μικρὸς τῇ ἡλικίᾳ, little in ſtature, the phraſe uſed of Zacchæus Lu. 19. 3. and ſo notes this James to have been about Zacchæus's ſize or pitch, and and ſo diſtinguiſh him from the others of that name, who, it ſhould ſeem, were not ſo. c. Μικρὸς

V. 43. Counſeller] What is meant by βουλευτὴς Counſeller here, is matter of ſome queſtion. Moſt probable it is, that it imports one of the Decuriones placed by the Romanes in their Colonies or provinces; So ſaith Fornerius, Decuriones βουλευταὶ dicebantur quòd conſilii gratiâ allegerentur, the Decuriones were called Counſellers, becauſe they were choſen to give counſel. So the old Greek and Latine Lexicon, βουλευτὴς, Decurio, Curialis. So the old Gloſſarie, Decurio βουλευτὴς, δεκαδάρχης. Now what the Decurio is, we find in the Digeſts, Lib. 50. Tit. 16. de verbor. ſignif. leg. 239. § 5. Decuriones dictos aiunt ex eo, quòd initio, cùm coloniæ deducerentur, decima pars eorum qui ducerentur conſilii publici gratiâ conſcribi ſolita ſit. They were ſo called, becauſe at the firſt when Colonies were ſent out, the tenth part of them were appointed to ſit as a ſtanding Councel, to manage affaires. And ſuch an one at this time was Joſeph, and he ἐπίσημος, a perſon of great eminence. d. Annotations on Chap. XVI.

a. ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου.

V. 2. At the riſing] The various readings in this place, may deſerve to be taken notice of. 1. Gregorie Nyſſen Serm. de Reſurr. ſaith, Ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀκριβεστέροις τῶν ἀντιγράφων ἐμφέρεται. The moſt exact Copies put in ἔτι now. And ſo Euſebius de Demonſtr. Euang. l. 10. in the end, reads ἔτι ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου, the ſun being now riſen, and ſo Lucas Brugenſis cites it out of ſome Manuſcripts. 2ly. The ancient Greek and Latine MSS read ἀνατείλοντος in the preſent tenſe, and if the ἔτι now, be joyned with that, the plain ſenſe will be, the ſun now riſing, or as our Engliſh, at the riſing of the ſun, and ſo it will agree exactly with S. Matthew's τῇ ἐπιφωσκούσῃ, the day beginning to appear, or ſhine, ὀπωσκούσης κυριακῆς, the Lords day beginning to ſhine, ſaith Ignatius ad Trall.

b. πᾶσα κτίσις

V. 15. Every creature] What πᾶσα κτίσις here ſignifies is clear by comparing this paſſage with the ſame, as 'tis ſet down in the other Goſpels. In S. Matthew (with whom S. Mark throughout moſt exactly agrees) it is thus, πορευθέντες οὖν μαθητεύσατε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, Goe and gather diſciples over all nations, and immediately follows (as here) baptizing them, &c. In S. Luke thus c. 24. 47. ἔδει κηρυχθῆναι, &c. ἄρξασθαι ἀπὸ Ἰερουσαλὴμ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, repentance and remiſſion of ſins muſt be preach'd to all nations. From whence not onely appears that πᾶσα κτίσις in this place is all the Gentiles, but a very fit occaſion is offered of interpreting the ſame phraſe again in a very hard place, Rom. 8. 22. and 1 Pet. 2. 13. which we ſhall referre to be explain'd more at large on thoſe chapters. Some ground of the uſe of the phraſe in this ſenſe, ſeems to be taken from the Hebrew, which uſes בריות (which ſignifies creatures properly) for men, as being the moſt excellent creatures. And ſo the Arabick alſo, as appears by one of their Geographers, who ſpeaking of cities, often ſaith, that there are in it many בראי, that is, literally κτίσεις creatures, but clearly ſignifies men, and ſo πᾶσα κτίσις every creature, is all men, in oppoſition to the Jewes, that is, not only they, but all other nations of men beſide.

c. Ὄφεις ἀροῦσι

V. 18. They ſhall take up ſerpents] This ſeems to be prophecied of by that Sibyll, out of which Virgil had learnt the ſubſtance of that verſe of his,

7. And they had no child, becauſe that Elizabeth was barren, and they both were now well ſtricken in years.]

7. And they were childleſſe in the ſame manner as Abraham was, for beſide the barrenneſs of the wife they were both of an age conceived to be paſt child-bearing.

8. And it came to paſſe that while he executed the prieſt's office before God in the order of his courſe,

9. According to the cuſtome of the prieſts office, [his lot was to burn incenſe when he went into the Temple of the Lord.]

9. it was his courſe to go into the Sanctuary, and offer incenſe there.

10. And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the [e] time of incenſe.]

10. And while the Prieſt offered incenſe within, the people, according to the cuſtome, were praying without. e.

11. And there appeared unto him an Angel of the Lord, ſtanding on the right ſide of the altar of incenſe,

12. And when Zacharias ſaw him, he was troubled, and fear fell upon him.

13. But the Angel ſaid unto him, Fear not Zacharias, for [thy prayer is heard, and thy wife Elizabeth ſhall bear thee a ſon, and thou ſhalt call his name John.]

13. thy prayer for the people (joyned with the incenſe, Lev. 16. 17.) and for the whole world (as Joſephus and Philo ſay) is now moſt effectually heard, God meaning now ſuddenly to ſend the Meſſias, and before him his forerunner, who ſhall be born of thy wife Elizabeth, and called John.

14. And thou ſhalt have joy and gladneſſe, and many ſhall rejoyce at his birth.]

14. And this birth of a ſon to thee in thy old age by a barren wife, ſhall not only be matter of joy and exultation to thee, but to many others alſo, all that expect the Meſſias, ſhall rejoyce at this coming of Elias his forerunner.

15. For he ſhall be a very eminent perſon, abſtaining after the manner of the Nazarites, and the power of the holy Ghoſt ſhall be diſcern'd to be upon him very early, v. 80.

16. And many of the children of Iſrael ſhall he turn to the Lord their God.]

16. And being a Preacher of repentance to the Jewes, he ſhall work upon many of them, and bring them to repentance and new life.

* the prudence of the juſt, or, the minding of juſt things

17. And he ſhall go before the Meſſias, as his harbinger, with the ſame affections of zeal and courage againſt ſinne, (ſee note on ch. 9. d.) of earneſt calling for repentance, (and reproving even Herod himſelf) and with the ſame authority and prophetick power, which toward Ahab was obſervable in Elias (to whom he hath a greater reſemblance then to any of the old Teſtament) to work an univerſall reformation among the Jewes, to bring them to the minding of thoſe things which tend to true juſtice, and not only of externall legall obſervances, to ſincere reformation and change of all their evil waies; and ſo fit men to receive Chriſt on his conditions, and to render themſelves capable of his mercies. f.

18. And Zacharias ſaid unto the Angel, Whereby ſhall I know this? for I am an old man, and [my wife well ſtricken in years.]

19. And the Angel anſwering ſaid unto him, [I am Gabriel, that ſtand in the preſence of God, and am ſent to ſpeak unto thee, and to ſhew thee theſe glad tidings.]

19. My name is Gabriel, and I am an officer or attendant that wait on God, by whom I was diſpatcht on this good meſſage to thee.

20. And as a puniſhment of thy unbelief, and withall as

35. This ſhall be done by the HolyGhoſt, and the power of the eternall God coming upon thee, for which cauſe the child which ſhall be born, ſhall be the ſon of God, and not of any man.

35. And the Angel anſwered and ſaid unto her, [The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee. Therefore alſo that holy thing that ſhall be borne of thee, ſhall be called the ſon of God.]

36. And for a token of this, know thou that thy couſin Elizabeth hath alſo conceived in her old age, and this is the ſixt moneth with her who was called barren. Elizabeth hath alſo conceived a ſon in her old age, and this is the ſixt moneth with her who was called barren.

42. And ſhe brake out into the ſame words that the Angel had uſed to Mary, v. 28. adding alſo an Eulogy or benediction to the child in her womb.

42. And ſhe ſpake out with a loud voice, and ſaid, Bleſſed art thou among women, and bleſſed is the fruit of thy womb.]

that the child did ſuddenly ſpring in my womb by reaſon of that joy which tranſported me.

45. And

45. And bleſſed is ſhe that believed, for there ſhall be a performance of thoſe things which were told her from the Lord.]

45. Thy beliefe v. 38. of that meſſage which the Angel delivered unto thee from God, v. 28. and 36. ſhall never be repented of by thee, for it ſhall certainly be performed in every particular exactly.

46, 47. Upon this Mary alſo brake out into a divine hymne of thankſgiving to God, ſaying, All the faculties of my ſoule, my affections, and my rationall faculty, have all reaſon to bleſſe and praiſe the name of God.

48. For he hath regarded the low eſtate of his hand-maiden, for behold, from henceforth all generations ſhall call me bleſſed.]

48. For he hath done an honour, (the greateſt that was ever done to any) to me the unworthieſt of all his ſervants, In which reſpect all poſterities ſhall look upon me, as the happieſt perſon, the moſt highly dignified by God of any.

49. For he that is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is his name.]

49. For the omnipotent God of heaven hath honoured me above imagination, his name be bleſſed for it.

50. And his mercy is on them that fear him from generation to generation.]

51. He hath ſhewed ſtrength with his arm, he hath ſcattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts,]

51. Whereas the proud and great deſigners of the world are ſo farre from being favoured, that they are oppoſed and confounded by him.

52. He hath put down the mighty from their ſeates, and exalted them of low degree.]

52. Nothing is more ordinary with him then to debaſe the lofty Atheiſt, and to advance the humble perſon, though of never ſo low degree.

53. He hath filled the hungry with good things, and the rich he hath ſent empty away.]

53. The poor that calls to him is repleniſht by him, and the rich man that truſts in his wealth, is often brought to beggery.

54. He hath holpen his ſervant Iſrael, in remembrance of his mercy,
55. As he ſpake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his ſeed for ever.]

54, 55. He hath now perform'd his promiſe to Abraham and to his ſeed, hath exhibited to them (the Jewes, and all the believing world) that great promiſed mercy, and ſo made a proviſion for them, which ſhall never fail, ſent the Meſſias, the Saviour of the world ſo long expected, a mercy that ſhall never be taken away from us.

56. And Mary abode with her about three moneths, and returned to her own houſe.

57. Now Elizabeths full time came that ſhe ſhould be delivered, and ſhe brought forth a ſon.

58. And her neighbours and her couſins heard how [the Lord had ſhewn great mercy upon her,] and they rejoiced with her.

58. God had ſhewn a miracle of mercy to her, in giving her a child thus in her old age, and when ſhe had been barren ſo long.

59. And it came to paſſe that [on the eight day they came to circumciſe the child, and they called him Zacharias after the name of his father.]

61. And they ſaid unto her, There is none of thy kindred, that is called by this name.
62. And they made ſignes to his father, how he would have him called.
63. And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, ſaying, His name is John: and they marvailed all.
64. And his mouth was opened immediatly, [and his tongue looſed,] and he ſpake and praiſed God.

64. and his tongue reſtored to him as before.

65. And fear] came on all that dwelt round about them, and all theſe ſayings were noiſed abroad throughout all the hill-countrey of Judæa.

65. And great aſtoniſhment and reverence

66. Certainly this child will prove ſome notable perſon: And God in a ſpeciall manner was preſent to him, to aſſiſt and proſper him.

Annotations on Chap. I.

a. Πληροφορῆσθαι

V. 1. Moſt ſurely believed] This word πληροφορῆς hath ſeveral notions in the New Teſtament: 1. It is no more then πληρῆς to be fulfilled, performed, done. So 2 Tim. 4. 5. τὴν διακονίαν σε πληροφόρησον, fulfil or perform thy miniſtery. So ſaith Phavorinus πληροφόρησον, πλήρωσον, fulfil, adding, ὡς ὁ Ἀπόστολος, τὴν διακονίαν σε πληροφόρησον, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Fulfil, or performe thy miniſtery. So in * Nilus πληροφορεῖν ἐπιθυμίαν to fulfil deſire is to do what is deſired, ſo 2 Tim. 4. 17. ἵνα τὸ κήρυγμα πληροφορηθῇ, that the preaching may be fulfilled, i. e. gone through with, and that the Gentiles may hear, i. e. that it may be preached to the Gentiles alſo. So in Heſychius Presbyter, Cent. 2. 10. παλαιὰ ἦτι ἐπλεύε, ἔτι ἐπληροφόρει τὸ ἔσω ἄνθρωπον εἰς εὐσέβειαν, the Old Teſtament did not perfect or complete the inward man to piety, or in that reſpect; τελεῖν, and πληροφορεῖν in the ſame ſenſe. And ſo 'tis in this place, πράγματα πεπληροφορημένα ἐν ἡμῖν, things which have been done, performed, acted, among us, of which the διήγησις, or narration enſuing doth conſiſt. And this is perfectly agreeable to the notion of the Hebrew מלא (that in the Old Teſtament is once rendred by it) which ſignifies to fulfil, and performe, as well as to fill. So the Hebrews have a proverbe איש ומלא את לבו let a man fulfil his heart, i. e. do what he liſts, and in the Pſalmiſt [to fill, or fulfil, all thy mind], is [to grant all thy petitions.] Secondly then it ſignifies to fill, and ſo πληροφορία is fulneſſe or plenty, Col. 2. 2. πλοῦτος πληροφορίας τῆς συνέσεως the riches of the fulneſſe of underſtanding, and becauſe the Hebrew מלא ſignifies Metaphorical, as well as real filling, infuſing, imbuing, &c. πληροφορεῖν and πληρεῖν do ſo too. And according to the matter of ſubject, to which it is applyed, the ſignification is yet farther varied. For ſo being applyed to the Heart, the principle of action, it ſignifies [to incite to any action, to embolden to do any thing] and when there is any thing of difficulty in it, or of danger, then it is particularly to give courage, or confidence, to embolden. So Act. 5. 3. διὰ τί ἐπλήρωσεν ὁ Σατανᾶς τὴν καρδίαν σε ψεύσασθαί σε; why hath Satan filled thy heart, that thou ſhouldſt lye, or deceive the Holy Ghoſt? i. e. why, or how did Satan incline or embolden thee to do this villany? and ſo Eccleſ. 8. 11. ἐπληροφορήθη ἡ καρδία υἱῶν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, the heart of the ſons of men is filled to do evil, i. e. men are by impunity incited and emboldned to do ſo. So Heſt. 7. 5. who hath filled his heart to do this? or, whoſe heart hath filled him to do this? where the Greek reads diſtinctly τίς ἔστος ὃς ἐπλήμπρη; who is it that hath dared? to denote the danger that he incurred that had done it, and ſo the boldneſſe of the adventurer. And thus πληροφορῆς comes ordinarily to ſignifie boldneſſe, confidence, πληροφορία ἐλπίδος Heb. 6. 11. confidence of hope, the ſame with ὑπόστασις elſewhere, πληροφορία πίστεως, confidence of faith, Heb. 10. 22. the effect of being waſh'd from an evil conſcience in the end of the verſe, and the inſtrument of the προσερχώμεθα, coming cheerfully to God, in the beginning. So πληροφορηθεὶς Rom. 4. 21. being confident that God was able, and ſo boldly depending on it. So 1 Theſſ. 1. 5. Our Goſpel hath been towards you (preached to you) not onely in word, but in power, and in the holy Ghoſt, καὶ ἐν πληροφορίᾳ πολλῇ, and in or with much confidence, for ſo the next words [as ye know what manner of men we were among you] are interpreted, c. 2. 2. we were confident in our Lord to ſpeak the Goſpel of God to you in much contention. And ſo Rom. 14. 5. ἕκαστος ἐν τῷ νοῒ πληροφορείσθω, Let every man have aſſurance (ſuch as on which his actions are to depend) in his own (not any other mans) underſtanding. The Kings MS. leaves out ἐν, and then the meaning is Let a man be moved to do any thing by his own, not by another mans conſcience, for ſo the Context enforceth, being in oppoſition to one mans judging another for doing what he thinks he ought to do, v. 4. according to that of 1 Cor. 10. 29. why is my liberty judged of another mans conſcience? Theſe are the places where the word is uſed in theſe books, which are therefore put together here in the firſt place.

* διάλογ. p. 27. & 51.

b. ὑπηρέται τοῦ λόγου. ὁ λόγος

V. 2. Miniſters] Two poſſible acceptions there are of the phraſe, ὑπηρέται τοῦ λόγου here, firſt ὁ λόγος the word may ſignifie, as it doth in ſome other places, the matter, the thing ſpoken of, for ſo it doth v. 4. περὶ ὧν κατηχήθης λόγων, the words, i. e. the things, wherein thou haſt been inſtructed. So ῥῆμα γεγονὸς, the word, i. e. thing done c. 2. 15. (ſee Note on Mat. 2. h.) and in this notion ὑπηρέται λόγου] will be the Apoſtles, as thoſe that were Chriſts inſtruments and officers, not onely ſaw, but acted themſelves the things, the paſſages that are here related. And this is the plaineſt and cleareſt meaning of the phraſe. 2ly. It is the opinion of other learned men, and, among them of * Budæus, that ὁ λόγος ſignifies here, as generally it doth throughout S. Johns Goſpel, the word, i. e. Chriſt incarnate. That the uſe of this phraſe or title of Chriſt ſhould not be appropriated to S. John onely, may appear probable, becauſe this ſtyle ſeems to have been known among the Jews, before Chriſts time, and is oft uſed by the Chaldee paraphraſt. מימר דיי the word of the Lord. As when Gen. 3. 22. we read, The Lord ſaid, Behold the man, &c. the Targum hath it [And the word of the Lord God ſaid, Behold Adam whom I have created alone in my age, as I am alone in the higheſt heavens, ſee the learned Paul Fagius on the Chaldee paraphraſe of that place. So Gen. 26. the word of the Lord created Adam. So Iſa. 1. 17. in ſtead of my ſoul, the Targum hath מימרי my word hateth, and c. 45. 17.

Iſrael

Iſrael is delivered or ſaved, by the Lord, they read, במימר דיו by the word of the Lord, ſo Jer. 1. 8. becauſe I am with thee, they read, becauſe my word is with thee, and ſo Pſal. 110. 1. The Lord ſaid unto my Lord, they again, The Lord ſaid למימרה to his word. And to Abraham, Gen. 15. 1. I am thy ſhield, My word is thy ſhield. So is Chriſt called the word, in the Alcoran, and therefore the paraphraſt of it, Ben Achmet expounds his word by the ſon of Mary. And it ſeems this word in this ſenſe was gotten among the Heathens very antiently, which cauſed Amelius, when he read the beginning of S. Johns Goſpel, to cry out, Per Jovem barbarus iſte cum noſtro Platone ſentit, verbum Dei in ordine principii eſſe, This barbarian is of our Plato's opinion, that the word of God is in the order of principles. Thus Julian the Apoſtate hath Ἰησοῦν, θεὸν, λόγον, Jeſus, God, word, Ep. 51. p. 210. Of the full importance and cauſe of this name ſee Sol. Glaſſius in ὀνοματολ. Meſſiæ, p. 270.

c. Θεόφιλ. V. 3. Excellent Theophilus] 'Tis not certain that Theophilus here was the proper name of a particular man, but perhaps a feigned title to ſignifie every Chriſtian, every one that loved God, to whom he addreſſes his diſcourſe. Thus ſaith Epiphanius Hær. 51. p. 429. εἴτ' ἐν τινὶ Θεοφίλῳ τότε γεάφων ἔλεγεν, ἢ παντὶ ἀνθρώπῳ θεὸν ἀγαπῶντι, whether he wrote to one Theophilus, when he ſaid this, or whether to every man that loved God; leaving it uncertain which it was. Thus Salvian, in his Epiſtle to Salonius, prefix'd before his books ad Eccleſ. Cathol. giving him an account, why he inſcribed thoſe books not by his own name, but by that other of Timothy, ſaith he followed this Euangeliſts example, qui in utroque divini operis exordio Theophili nomen inſcribens, cùm ad hominem ſcripſiſſe videatur, ad amorem Dei ſcripſit, who in the beginning both of his Goſpel and of the Acts inſcribing the name Theophilus, ſeeming to have written to a man, he wrote to, or for, the love of God. Thus in Athanaſius l. de incarn. μαϑητὰ, and φιλόχριστοι are uſed promiſcuouſly for Chriſtians. And then κράτιστος will be no title of honour, nor any more then Optimus in Latine, a forme of civility onely.

d. V. 5. Of the courſe of Abiah] Though the word ἐφημερία do literally denote the ſervice of no more then a day, yet it is not ſo to be taken here, but in a greater P. 763. B. latitude, for the ſpace of a week. So ſaith Titus Boſtrenſis, ἐφημερίαν δὲ χρὴ νοεῖν ἃ τὸ πρὸς ἡμέρας παραμένειν καὶ λειτουργεῖν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, ἀλλὰ τὸ πρὸς ἑβδομάδα, you muſt not underſtand the word of dayly continuance and ſerving in the Temple, but of weekly.

e. V. 10. time of incenſe] At the time when the Prieſt offered incenſe within in the Sanctuary or Tabernacle, Ὥρα θυμιάματος. the people were left alone without, in the atrium Judæorum, the court of the Jews, praying for the pardon of ſins, every man apart for himſelf till the Prieſt came back again, and pronounced the benediction. This is Σιγὴ ἐν οὐρανῷ it that ſeems to be referred to by the half hours ſilence in heaven, Rev. 8. 1. which ſeems there to be ſet in relation to that time of the Prieſts being gone in to offer incenſe; This is ſet down punctually Eccluſ. 50. where v. 15. there is mention of the high prieſt Simon the Son of Onias offering τῷ ὀσμὴν εὐωδίας, the odour of ſweet ſmell, or of incenſe, unto God. Then, ſaith he, the ſons of Aaron cryed out and ſounded with trumpets v. 18. (as in that Rev. 8. 2. it followes, immediately, the ſeven trumpets were given to the Angels, &c.) and then followes, πᾶς ὁ λαὸς κοινῇ κατίσπευδον καὶ ἔπεσον ἐπὶ πρόσωπον ἐπὶ τὸν γλῶ v. 19. then all the people together made haſt, and fell on their face to the ground, and v. 21. ἐδεήθη ὁ λαὸς κυρίου ὑψίστου ἐν προσευχῇ κατέναντι ἐλεήμονος, ἕως συνετελέσθη κόσμος κυρίου καὶ τὴν λειτουργίαν αὐτοῦ ἐτελείωσε, The people beſought the Lord moſt high in prayer before the merciful, until the miniſtery of the Lord (the incenſe, noted by κόσμος there) were done, and they had accompliſhed his ſervice, all which is a diſtinct deſcription of this manner of the peoples praying without, whileſt the Prieſt offers within, as the two other parts, 1. of giving praiſes to God, and 2. the Prieſts pronouncing the εὐλογία or benediction, are ſet down there alſo, one v. 20. καὶ ἦσεν οἱ ψαλμῳδοὶ ἐν φωναῖς ὡτῶν, the ſingers ſang praiſes with their voices, &c. the other v. 22. τότε καταβὰς ἐπῆρε χεῖρας αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ πᾶσ ἐκκλησίαν υἱῶν Ισραὴλ, δοῦναι εὐλογίαν κυρίῳ or κυρίου, ἐν χειλέων αὐτοῦ, &c. Then deſcending he lift up his hands over all the congregation of the children of Iſrael, to give bleſſing to the Lord or, the Lords bleſſing, out of his lips, &c.

f. V. 17. To the wiſdome] The difficulties of underſtanding this verſe, will be beſt avoided, and the obvious ſenſe of it moſt clearly ariſe, if it be firſt obſerved, that there be in the Hebrew language but few Præpoſitions, in compariſon with the Greek. By which means it comes to paſſe that as our Engliſh tranſlators do oft miſtake, and diſturb the ſenſe of Scriptures by not obſerving this, (as for inſtance Job 2. 4. where we render Skin for skin, it ſhould be, skin after skin, i. e. one thing, that is neareſt to us, after another, yea all that a man hath, will he give for his life) ſo in the writings of thoſe, that being Jews by birth, write in Greek, i. e. in the Greek tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, and writings of the New, the Greek prepoſitions are uſed in the latitude that belongs to the Hebrew, and not according to the ſtrict propriety of the Greek idiome in Attick writers, but farre more looſly and promiſcuouſly. This hath been already obſerved on occaſion of [ἐπὶ] with a Ἐπὶ Genitive caſe Mat. 1. 11. which cannot there ſignifie under, but before, and ſo in other places, See Note on Mar. 2. b. And the ſame is often obſerved of ἐν, that Ἐν. it ſignifies (beſide the vulgar notation of it,) ſometimes ἐντὸς within, ſometimes εἰς, into and for, and this upon that known ground, becauſe the Hebrew ב is uſed in that latitude. This being thus premiſed, it is next obſervable, that this expreſſion of the office of John Baptiſt, and the anſwerableneſſe of it to that of Elias, is here taken from Malac. 4. 6. There his preaching of repentance is expreſs'd by his turning the heart of the fathers with the children (for ſo ב is there to be rendred with not to) and the heart of the children with the fathers, that is, converting fathers and children together, working upon them (or, according to his office, endevouring, by preaching in the wilderneſſe, to work upon them) and perſwading them to repent, and amend their lives, Mat. 3. 2. This place of Malachi is both by Matthew c. 17. 11. and by Mark 9. 12. repeated out of the Septuagint (which hath ἀποκαταστήσῃ καρδίαν &c.) ἀποκαταστήσῃ, and ἀποκαθιστᾷ πάντα, he ſhall, or he doth, * reſtore, or return all, i. e. all men, (the Neutral πάντα, * See note on Mat. 17. all being oft taken for the Maſculine, ſee Mat. 18. 11. 6. & 18.) Where there is nothing ſet in ſtead of the heart Πάντα of the fathers with the children, &c. but only πάντα all, noting that, and no more, to be the meaning of the phraſe in Malachi, [he ſhall convert the heart of the fathers with the children, and of the children with the fathers, (of old and young, young and old) i. e. he ſhall preach repentance to the whole Jewiſh nation, noted by [the land] in the end of that verſe of Malachi, which God there threatens to come and deſtroy with a curſe, i. e. finally and univerſally if this preaching of the Baptiſt, and of Chriſt, & of the Apoſtles, do not bring them to repentance. Now what is by thoſe two Evangeliſts ſo briefly expreſs'd by, he ſhal reſtore, or return al, is here more largely repeated out of the words of Malachi, ἐπιστρέψαι καρδίας πατέρων Ἐπιστρέψαι καρδίας πατέρων ἐπὶ τέκνα ἐπὶ τέκνα. to convert the hearts of the fathers, &c. Whence 'tis apparent, that the Præpoſition ἐπὶ muſt here be taken in that notion of ב, which belongs to that place of Malachi, and ſo is to be rendred not to but with the children, to this clear ſenſe, John Baptiſt ſhall go before Chriſt, as his herald to prepare his way in (or admiſſion to) mens hearts, by preaching repentance, or re- turn, or new life, the interpretation of the Hebrew השיב converſion which is uſed in Malachi. This firſt part of the period being thus explain'd, the ſecond, which is not taken from Malachi, but is a kind of gloſſe or paraphraſe to explain that obſcurer prophetick expreſſion; will more eaſily be interpreted, if firſt we obſerve the ſignification of the word φρονεῖν in the New Teſtament, which generally notes to mind, to deſire, to like, to look after with an appetite, from the Nowne φρένες which is uſed for affections, appetite, 1 Cor. 14. 20. παιδία τῇ φρεσὶν, children in appetites, or deſignes, or inclinations, as they are that ſet their minds on that that profits leaſt; and τέλειοι φρεσὶν, thoſe that have more perfect, mature, manly appetites: ſo τὰ ἄνω φρονεῖν to mind, deſire, look after the things above, Col. 3. 2. ὀπίσω φρονεῖν, Phil. 3. 19. τὰ τῆς σαρκὸς φρονεῖν Rom. 8. 5. to mind earthly, carnal things: and ſo agreeably φρόνημα σαρκος, Rom. 8. 6, 7. and φρόνημα πνεύματος v. 27. the minding of the fleſh, and of the ſpirit, that is thoſe appetites which the fleſh on one ſide, and the ſpirit on the other doe incline men to; or, as Theophylact moſt fully, the deſire and purſuit either of carnall or ſpirituall things. And if in this ſenſe the word φρόνησις be here taken, 'tis then the minding of juſt things, and being applied to that which went before turning the hearts of the fathers unto the children it will perfectly agree with it, He ſhall bring men to repentance, and the moſt diſobedient (viz. Publicans &c. Lu. 3. 12.) to the minding of juſtice, and righteouſneſs, Lu. 3. 13. that is, of all good things. But 'tis ſtill poſſible that φρόνησις be here taken for that practicall vertue of prudence, (as 'tis at large defined by the Moraliſt) the practical knowledge of thoſe things which are truely eligible, the knowledge that will bring men to the true juſtice, the judging of what is or is not to be done according to the rules of juſtice; and 'tis poſſible again that the word δικαίων of the juſt ſhould be the Maſculine gender, and ſo the phraſe be rendred, the prudence or practical wiſdome of juſt men; and then alſo 'twill be anſwerable to the text in Malachi, thus; that he ſhall convert the Jewes, even the moſt vicious of them to that practice of all morall rules which denominates men juſt, that is, that this ſhould be the deſign of John's preaching, to make them ſuch, to work ſuch a generall reformation among the Jewes. As for the Propoſition ἐν, that (as was ſaid) is ordinarily uſed for εἰς, or ὅτι, to, or otherwiſe 'twill be hard to find out any ſenſe of theſe words.

g. V. 20. Dumb] The Hebrew חרש as the Greek κωφὸς ſignifies both a dumb man and a deaf, and is wont to be rendred either by ἀπροσωπᾶν, or by ἀπακοῦν, Mich. 7. 16. that is, growing or becoming deaf, for there the Context referres it to the eares. In this place one of the ſignifications of the Hebrew ſeems to be put for the other, σιωπῶν ſilent or dumb, (if we believe Theophylact and the ancients) for ſurdus deaf, and ſo that which is added, καὶ δυνάμενος λαλῆσαι and not able to ſpeak will be no Pleonaſme, but ſignifie him dumb alſo. For that he was not only dumb, but deaf, appears by his friends, who doe not ſpeak but nod and make ſignes to him, v. 62. and it is not probable that of the two thirgs that befell him, one ſhould be twice, and the other not once foretold by the Angel.

h. V. 22. Viſion] By ὀπτασία viſion is here meant the ὀπτάνεια or appearance of God by an Angel to the Prieſt, revealing his will unto him, and theſe were wont to be at the time of offering of incenſe, ſee Joſ. Ant. l. 13. c. 18. where when Hyrcanus was offering incenſe, God gave him the Oracle. From hence it was that the people ſeeing Zachary ſtay ſo much longer then ordinary within, and come out ſpeechleſſe and aſtoniſhed, concluded that he had ſeen a viſion, that an Angel had appeared unto him.

Ὀπτασία

i. V. 23. Miniſtration] The word λειτουργεῖν, which is here firſt met with, may deſerve to be look'd into. The Origination of it among * Grammarians from λεία and λῄΐα ſpoyles, ſeems remote and alien. Another way may be better collected from Heſychius by changing the punctation of a few words in him thus, Λειτουργεῖν (λειτὸν δὲ δημόσιον,) λειτουργεῖν. Λειτουργεῖν ſignifies publick ſervice, officiating, and λειτουργεῖν is all one with that, for λειτὸν (from λαὸς populus) ſignifies publick or belonging to the people. Thus is the King call'd λειτουργὸς Θεοῦ, the officer of God for publick adminiſtrations, Rom. 13. 6. Hence then is the prime importance of the word for any publick ſervice. Of which ſort becauſe among both Jewes and Heathens, the Prieſtly office, the ſacrifices &c. of the Temple, were the chief, the word comes to ſignifie any ſacred office. Of this we have theſe footſteps in the Grammarians Λεῖτορες, ἱέρειαι, and Λειτεύσαι ἱέρεια in Heſychius & Phavorinus, and again λειτουργικὸς, ἱερατικὸς. Thus the word is uſed in this place by S. Lu. for the executing the prieſts office, & ſo Phil. 2. 17. Θυσία and λειτουργία are joyned, ſacrifice and ſacred office, or ſervice, and Heb. 8. 6. διαφορωτέρας τετύχηκε λειτουργίας, he hath obtained a more excellent miniſtery, that is prieſtly ſervice, in oppoſition to the prieſts office on earth, ver. 4. ſo Heb. 9. 21. σκεύη τῆς λειτουργίας, the utenſils of the prieſt, and Heb. 10. 11. ἕστηκε καθ' ἡμέραν λειτουργῶν, he was daily attending, or waiting on the prieſts office: From hence it is brought down to the ſervice of the Chriſtian Church, any Chriſtian office, as Act. 13. 2. λειτουργούντων αὐτῶν τῷ Κυρίῳ, while they miniſtred to the Lord, that is, were about the daily offices, praying, and faſting, &c. and ſo Rom. 15. 16. εἰς τὸ εἶναί με λειτουργὸν Ἰησοῦ, that I might be a miniſter of Jeſus, employed in ſacred offices. This word, though it comes from λῄΐτὸς publick, doth not yet ſo belong to publick employments, but that it ſignifies * domeſtick alſo (and ſimply ſerving Λειτουργῶ, διακονῶ, ſaith Phavorinus, and Λειτουργεῖν, μοχθεῖν, δουλεύειν in Heſychius) eſpecially that office of the ſteward, which is moſt publick of any in the family, having the adminiſtration of the whole domeſtick affaire belonging to it. Hence λειτουργεῖν τὸ οἶκον, in Pollux to perform the ſtewards office over the houſe. Now becauſe, as Chriſt ſaith, it is the ſtewards office, to give every man his portion of food in his ſeaſon, and becauſe the diet in an houſe or family belongs to all, is every man's portion, only ſo, that the ſteward aſſignes it diverſly to every one, as he thinks fit to diſpenſe it, (and thence in the Grammarians Λειτοδάρχαι are οἱ καθηγούμενοι τῆς ἐστάσεως, they that are ſet over the diet,) therefore in the Scripture ſtyle, λειτουργία is oft uſed for the buſineſſe of the collecta or offertory, for the diſpenſing of the oblations, and out of them relieving the poor Chriſtians; Thus 2 Cor. 9. 12. ἡ διακονία τῆς λειτουργίας ταύτης the adminiſtration of this liberality, which was to ſupply the wants of the Saints, as it followes there, and all one with ἁπλότης κοινωνίας liberality of communicating, v. 13. And ſo Phil. 2. 30. τοῦ πρὸς μὲ λειτουργίας was the relieving the Apoſtle, and ſo λειτουργὸς τῆς χρείας μου, v. 25. the reliever of my want. So Rom. 15. 27. ἐν τοῖς σαρκικοῖς λειτουργῆσαι αὐτοῖς, miniſtering to them in carnall things, is interpreted by κοινωνία εἰς τοὺς πτωχοὺς τῶν ἁγίων, v. 26. liberality to the poor ſaints: and ſo perhaps when the Angels are call'd λειτουργοὶ ὄντες, Heb. 1. 7. his miniſters, and λειτουργικὰ πνεύματα, v. 14 miniſtring ſpirits, it may bear the ſenſe of ſerving, ſo as to feed, and relieve, and provide for us. But becauſe the office of the ſteward is to govern the family, as well as thus to give meat in due ſeaſon, therefore agreeably to this, as the word is ſometimes uſed by Chriſtian writers peculiarly for the Lords ſupper, in reference to the feaſt provided there in the ἀγάπαι antiently, and ſtill in the offertory, for the uſe of the poor (in the ſame manner as 'tis call'd κοινωνία, and κλάσις ἄρτου breaking of bread,) ſo alſo ſometimes it is uſed to ſignifie the whole ſervice of the Church

Λειτουργεῖν

* Jul. Pollux and Phavorinus.

* Λειτουργικὴ χυρίως μὲ ἐξοχὴν καὶ ἀγαπητικὴ δὲ διακονία.

Church, or exercise of the priest's office, and sometimes peculiarly the government of the Church, as in Eusebius generally when one Bishop dies, another, saith he, ἐγχειρίζει τὴν λειτουργίαν, undertakes the office, or administration, or government of it, as of Pius the Bishop of Rome l. 4 c. 11. and λειτουργίαν ἀναλαμβάνει, in the same Chap. of Celadion Bishop of Alexandria.

k. κεχαριτωμένη Χάρις.

V. 28. Highly favoured] For the finding out the full importance of this word κεχαριτωμένη in this place, 'twill be needfull first to examine the severall notions of χάρις the Nowne, from whence the verb χαριτόω comes. One eminent notion of it for the Gospel of Christ is explain'd (as it signifies the matter of the Gospel) Note on Heb. 13. d. and (as it signifies the preaching or promulgating of it) Note on Act. 18. e. Another notion, as it signifies charity, liberality, is explained Note on Act. 2. f. and very neer to that, for δωρεὰ a gift, Note on 1 Pet. 3. e. Beside these it signifies also a reward, either that of good words, of thanks, as we call it, or else farther, of some real return, ἀμοιβὴν ἢ ἐνεργείαν, saith Hesychius, a retribution for a good turn, and so 'tis oft used. Lu. 17. 9. Μὴ χάριν ἔχει; will he thank, or reward that servant? so Lu. 6. 32, 33, 34. ποία ὑμῖν χάρις ἐστί; what thanks, or reward is due to you? for which there is μισθὸς reward, v. 35. So 1 Pet. 2. 19. τοῦτο γὰρ χάρις, this shall be, or shall yeild a reward, all one with κλέος, honour, the reward of an heroick action, v. 20. Fourthly it signifies favour, or mercy, in this chapter, to Mary εὗρες χάριν, thou hast found favour with God, ver. 30. and in some other places, and in effect in all those, where it signifies the Gospel in opposition to the Law, that being so styled, because there is so much of Gods favour, and undeserved mercy discernible in it, contrary to boasting, or debt. Lastly, it is taken for virtue, goodness in the latitude, without restraint to any particular kind of it, and that both of the body (beauty) and of the minde, from whence is that gloss of Hesychius χαείν, καλὸν, ἀγαθὸν, ἁγνὸν, ὅσιον, the word gracious signifies either good or handsome; for that universall goodness of the mind it seems to be taken 2 Pet. 3. 18. grow in grace, that is, all kind of goodness, and in the knowledge (that is practical knowledge) of our Lord, &c. and so in diverse other places mentioned Note on Ephes. 5. c. Now from which of all these notions the word κεχαριτωμένη is to be taken, or (because there are but two, that can be competitors for it) whether as it signifies favour, or goodness, is somewhat uncertain; If it be taken from χάρις favour, mercy, as it seems to be Ephes. 1. 6. then it will agree with the εὗρες χάριν, thou hast found favour with God, v. 30. And so Theophylact expounds it, ὅπερ ἄνωθεν κεχαριτωμένη ὥσπερ ἐρμηνεύων φησὶν, εὗρες γὰρ χάριν &c. when he had first said, thou that art favoured, he addes by way of interpretation, for thou hast found favour, &c. But some arguments there are to preferre the other notion, 1. that Hesychius renders χαείντα, good, or gracious, by καλὰ, κεχαριτωμένα, distinctly pitching on that notion of it, and perhaps where we read κεχαρισμένος, ἄριστος, φιλοφρονέστατος, μὴ χαρεὶς (I suppose χάριτος) πάντα ποιῶν, an excellent, lovely person, that doth all things with a grace, it may be a false print for κεχαριτωμένος, (as that book is very full of such faults) 2^ly, Ps. 18. 26. where the Hebrew reads עִם חָסִיד תִּתְחַסָּד, & the Septuagint μὴ ὁσίῳ ὁσιωθήσῃ, with the merciful thou shalt be merciful, the Greek Scholiast reads μὴ κεχαριτωμένῳ χαριτωθήσῃ, with the gracious thou shalt deal gratiously. Thirdly, this word is used once in the Son of Syrach, c. 18. 17. and by us rendered rightly a gracious man. Fourthly, the word here is not only by the vulgar Latine rendred, gratiâ plena, full of grace or goodness, but in like manner by the Syriack also. And in this notion of χάρις we have γυνὴ εὐχάριστος, a gracious woman, Prover. 11. 16. (as perhaps on the contrary ἀχάριστος ungratious 2 Tim. 3. 2.) מלֵאת טִיבוּתָא full of grace or goodness; which phrase in Syriack and Chaldee signifies no more, then very good or gracious, so Act. 9. 33. πλήρης ἀγαθῶν ἔργων, signifies a very good woman, diligent, laborious, (that wrought many good things v. 39. in a peculiar notion of the phrase good works, for diligent in the calling, see Note on Tit. 3. a.) as among the Hebrews מְלֵא חַיִל full of beauty, signifies very handsome; so μεστοὶ ἀγαθωσύνης Rom. 15. 14. full of goodnesse is very good; and in * Philo. μεστὸς φρονήματος καὶ ἀνὴρ (as, πλήρης σοφίας Act. 6. 3.) a man full of wisdome, that is a very wise man, and πλήρης πίστεως Act. 6. 5. an eminent believer. And if the word be thus rendred, 'tis then a fit forme of a salutation, such as κράτιστε Θεόφιλε ô most excellent Theophilus, v. 3.

* in lig. ad Cajum p. 774. F.

Ib. Lord, &c.] This speech of the Angels is by him delivered in form of a salutation (see v. 29.) χαῖρε σὺ Hail, &c. and so these words that immediately follow, being part of the ἀσπασμὸς, salutation, seem most fitly rendred by way of prayer or benediction, The Lord be with thee, Blessed art thou, &c. Thus κύριος μεθ' ὑμῶν, is generally used, the Lord be with you, and χάρις μεθ' ὑμῶν, grace be with you, and the like formes of Christian salutation.

m. ἐν ταύταις ταῖς ἡμέραις

V. 39. In those daies] The phrase ἐν ταύταις ταῖς ἡμέραις, in these daies hath for the most part a peculiar signification, differing from ἐν ἡμέραις ἐκείναις in those daies. The latter signifies an indefinite time, sometimes a good way off, but the former generally denotes a certain time then present, instantly, then, at that time; so here that which is said of Maries going to Elizabeth, was sure immediately after the departing of the Angel from her, and therefore 'tis said she rose up μετὰ σπουδῆς, very hastily. So v. 24. μετὰ ταύτας τὰς ἡμέρας, that is, immediately, Elizabeth conceived, so c. 6. 12. ἐν ταῖς ἡμέραις ταύταις, that is, then, at that point of time, he went out to the mountain, See c. 23. 7. c. 24. 18. Acts 1. 5. c. 11. 27. & 21. 15.

n. προφητεύω

V. 67. Prophecyed] To prophecy is a large word, and besides the foretelling of future events, which is the ordinary notion of it, it signifies secondly to worke Miracles, as when 'tis said of Elisha's body, that being dead it prophecyed, Eccles. 48. 14. referring to the miracle that it wrought, in raising the dead body, that was put into Elisha's grave, 2 Kings 13. 21. thirdly, to declare the will of God to any, by revelation, or mission from him. Thus Sybilla l. 1. προφητεύσω τὰ ἔκπαγλα, Ὁπποσα πεὶν γέγονεν, ποσὰ δ' ὄψιν, ὁπποσά τε μέλλει, I will prophecy all things that are past, present, and to come. Adding, πρῶτον δὴ κέλεταί με λέγειν Θεὸς, and first God commands me to say ——professing to doe it from God. So the author of Synopsis Prophetiarum, Τῶν προγεγονότων ἢ γνῶσιν ἐκ θεοῦ τις λαβὼν προφήτης λέγεται, Any that receives knowledge from God of things past is called a Prophet. So * Chrysostome, Ὁ προφήτης ἑρμηνευτής ἐστιν, ἀλλὰ τοῦ θεοῦ. A Prophet is no more but an interpreter, but that of God. And Grammarians have observed that the word naturally signifies no more, then this of speaking from, or in the stead of another, that is, of God; as a Proconsul is he that supplies the Consuls place, πρὸ in Composition being all one with ὑπὲρ. So the Poets were said to be the Prophets of the Muses, as in Pindar μαντεύομαι μοῖσα προφατεύσω δ' ἐγὼ Let the Muse inspire and I will prophecy. And in Theocritus,

* Tom. 3 p. 485. l. 42.

Μουσάων δ' ἁλίσια τέκεν ἱερὸς ἀοιδήτας,

the sacred Prophets of the Muses, that speak under them, or as they are inspired and directed by them. In which sense as Christs Prophetick office consisted in revealing the will of God to the world, so all that have in any degree done the like are styled Prophets, all that have taught men their duties towards God, and Men; Thus among the Heathens, the Divines which told men what they ought to doe, their Priests, or religious persons were called Vates, Prophets. And even their Poets which ordinarily reprehended their vices, are by S. Paul called ἴδιοι προφῆται their owne Prophets, Tit. 1. 12. For although of that Epimenides it be true, that he is ordinarily by the heathens called θεῖος ἀνὴρ and προφήτης a divine man, and a Prophet, and that his book is called χρησμοὶ Oracles or Prophecies, yet is this rather a confirmation of this use of the word Prophet, for those which teach men their duty; for of this Epimenides saith Diodorus Siculus lib. 5. that he was θεολόγος a divine, and Plutarch in Solon, that he was θεοφιλὴς καὶ σοφὸς περὶ τὰ θεῖα, to the same purpose; and Aristotle Rhet. l. 3. c. 17. saith expresly ὁ περὶ τῶν μελλόντων ἐμαντεύετο he prophecyed not of things to come. And thus Glaucus (among the ancient Mythicall writers) that directed men the way in their navigation, ὡς δεῖ ποιεῖσθαι τὸν πλοῦν how they were to order their voyage, was by them called θαλάσσιος μάντις, the sea-prophet. Thus when Exod. 7. 1. God said to Moses, I have made thee a God to Pharaoh, and Aaron thy brother shall be thy Prophet, The meaning is, that what God had or should command Moses, Moses should (as God to a Prophet, the Oracle to the προφήτης) deliver to Aaron, concerning Pharaoh, and Aaron should goe, as a Prophet sent from God and deliver it to Pharaoh; he shall be thy spoaksman, he shall be to thee in stead of a mouth, Ex. 4. 16. Fourthly, it signifieth to expound, or interpret Scripture, as 1. Cor. 14. 1. Desire spirituall gifts, but specially that ye may prophecy, and v. 3. he that prophecyeth, speaketh to edification, &c. So v. 4, 5, 6, 22, 24, 28. 31, 32. Fifthly, 'tis sometimes set to signifie wild, raving, mad behaviour, or speaking such as the ἔνθεοι or enthusiasts among the Heathen, men possess'd with diabolical furies, were wont to use: so when the evill spirit came upon Saul, he prophecyed in the midst of the house, 1 Sam. 18. 10. and in the same rage or fury cast the javelin at David v. 11. The reason of this is clear, v. 12. because Prophets did ordinarily both speak and act in a manner farre distant and remote from the ordinary practice of other men, used strange language, strange motions and agitations of the body, and accordingly were by many that looked on them thought to be mad. So the Prophet sent by Elisha to anoint Jehu, is called this mad fellow 2 Kings 9. 11. Sixtly, it signifies singing and praising God, forming of divine hymnes, and singing them to God. So 1 Sam. 10. 5. Thou shalt meet a company, a colledge or covent of Prophets coming down from the high place with a Psaltery, and a tabret, and a pipe, and a harp before them, and they shall prophecy, (where the Chaldee paraphrase reads, shall sing) and the spirit shall come on thee, and thou shalt prophecy, (where the Chaldee hath, and thou shalt praise with them.) So 1 Chron. 25. 1. David seperates the sons of Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun, who should prophecy with Harpes and Psalteries and cymbals. And so 'tis possible it may be, Numb. 11. 25. where 'tis said of the seventy, that they prophecyed and did not cease; for as 1. Sam. 10. 6. Sauls prophecying was to be an effect of the Spirit of God coming upon him, and was a signe of his being set a part by God for the Kingly office, and furnished with abilities for it which is call'd turning him into another man; so Num. 11. 15. God takes of the spirit that was upon Moses, that is, the Spirit of government, wherewith he was indued, and gave it unto the Seventy, and when the Spirit rested upon them, they prophecyed; whereas the other circumstances agree, the giving them the Spirit, and fitting them for their office by that means, so the evidence of it, their prophecying may agree also, though wherein their prophecying consisted is no where defined in Scripture. This onely is unquestioned, that it was some extraordinary act, a testimony that the Spirit of God in some extraordinary manner rested upon them, and as such, was discernible to all (in like manner as was Sauls stripping off his clothes and lying down naked, 1 Sam. 19. 24.) and so fit to authorize them in the eyes of others, as by a miracle, and to declare to all that they were assumed to this office. And to this notion of prophecying must this place be interpreted, Zacharias was filled with the holy Ghost and prophecyed, was stirred up in an extraordinary manner by the Spirit of God, to compose this divine hymne following, the Benedictus, saying, Blessed &c. And so, 1 Cor. 11. 5. Every woman praying or prophecying, Where speaking of the Church, wherein the woman is not permitted to speake c. 14. 34. 'tis apparent that prophecying cannot be taken for interpreting of Scripture, and so it remains that it signifie this of singing hymns in the Church, which is fitly joyned with praying. What is here said of his being filled with the holy Ghost, (as before of Elizabeth also, v. 51.) is no more then being indued with the Spirit of God (see note k.) incited by somewhat higher then his owne spirit, the Spirit of God enabling him to make this hymne. So when the Spirit descended with the gift of tongues, they were filled with the holy Ghost, Acts 2. 4.

V. 69. Horne of salvation] The word Horne hath divers notions in the Scripture, first it signifies power, κέρας σωτηρίας. or strength, because the hornes being the weapons of beasts, their strength or ability of hurting others is said properly to consist in them. So Lam. 2. 3, 17. he hath cut off all the horne of Israel, and, set up the horne of thine adversaries; so Jer. 48. 25. the horne of Moab is cut off, and his arme is broken, the horne being the beasts best instrument of defence, as the arme is the mans; so Mich. 4. 13. I will make thy horne Iron, and thou shalt beat in pieces many people, that is, I will give thee great power; so Ezech. 29. 21. I will cause the horne of the house of Israel to bud forth, they shall have some considerable strength again; so the hornes of the wicked and the righteous, Psal. 75. 10. are their power. Secondly, it signifies honour, glory, triumph, as when the horne is said to be lifted up, or exalted, Psal. 75. 4. 89. 24. 112. 9. Thirdly from the union of both these, it signifies Regal power, the honours and power of a King, so Zach. 1. 18. Dan. 7. 7, 8. and Rev. 13. 1. the four, and the seven, and the ten hornes are confess'dly so many Kings. And this seems to be the importance of the word in this place, where the house of David being the regal family, and the word Saviour denoting him that is the ruler, or leader, or Prince of the people, (thou gavest them Saviours, Neh. 9. 27. i.e Rulers, Judges; and, Saviours shall come up, (Obad. 21.) & the kingdome shall be the Lords) the horne of salvation in the house of David will denote the kingdome of Christ, that spirituall one which is not of this world, or rather Christ (in concreto) under the notion of a King. Thus Psal. 18. 2, among the titles given to God (upon his delivering David from the hands of his enemies, as here for the redeeming us from the hands of all that hate us, v. 71.) this is one the horne of my salvation, that is, my King, and Saviour; and this is agreeable also to that other part of the period, ἤγειρεν ἡμῖν, he hath raised up, to, or for us, that of raising up belonging to persons advanced by God to any office of King, or Prophet, (see note on Acts 13. g.) particularly of Christ to his Kingdome, Acts 2. 30. God had sworne that he would from the fruit of Davids loynes according to the flesh raise up the Christ to sit on his throne, which is distinctly parallel to this.

V. 70. The world] עולם signifies an age, and in the New Testament most commonly is used in a general αἰών. p. sense, not for the age of a man, nor again for an hundred years, but for an age of the world, or some eminent part in the division of that. Now the World is divided two wayes, either into the age before the Messias, and the age of the Messias, or into the age of this world, and of the world to come after the day of doom. Accordingly the word עולם is used sometimes for the first part of the first division, for the first estate, beginning at the

the beginning of the world, and reaching to the end of the Jewiſh common-wealth. Thus is the phraſe מן העולם à ſeculo, ordinarily uſed, and accordingly ἀπ' αἰῶνος here, to note that general age from the beginning of the world, of which the Jewiſh ſtate was an eminent part, under which prophecies had been allowed by God to this people. And it being reſolved by the Jews that there was to be another age (beſide that firſt) which they call the age of the Meſſias (ſee Note on Mat. 24. c.) or the age to come, they are wont to uſe the phraſe לעולם ועד עולם (or ſometimes for brevity ſake לעולם ועד which the Septuagint render εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα καὶ ἔτι, and ſometimes εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα καὶ ἐπέκεινα, to age and yet farther, or to age and afterward,) in ſeculum & ſeculum, to age and to age, meaning thereby both theſe ages, the then preſent, and that other then to come, the age of the Meſſias. Thus have we interpreted the word αἰὼν age Mat. 24. 3. in a diverſe ſenſe from that which belongs to it Mat. 28. 20. In the former to ſignifie the Jewiſh ſtate, in the latter the ſtate of the world under the Meſſias. And in that notion I ſuppoſe it is, that the Goſpel of Chriſt is called εὐαγγέλιον αἰώνιον, Rev. 14. 6. the Goſpel of that age of the Meſſias, the Chriſtian faith, which was to endure till the end of the world, Mat. 12. 32. note l. Sometimes again the word αἰὼν ſignifies the firſt number of the ſecond diviſion, this world, from the creation till the day of doom, as Luk. 20. 34. οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου the children of this age, the men of this world (oppoſed to καταξιωθέντες τοῦ αἰῶνος ἐκείνου τυχεῖν thoſe that are vouchſafed participation of that other,) do marry, &c. and ſo in many other places. And ſo likewiſe for the ſecond part of the ſecond diviſion, the ſtate after this life, that of another world, ordinarily call'd αἰὼν ἐρχόμενος, and αἰὼν ἐκεῖνος the world to come, and that world or age, it is oft call'd αἰὼν ſimply alſo, as Joh. 6. 51, 58. he ſhall live εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, which we render for ever, or to that age to come, which is eternal. And from this notion of the word αἰὼν] it is peculiarly, that the word αἰώνιος commonly ſignifies eternal, including both this world and that other. This eternal future ſtate was, it ſeems, denied by the Sadducees, and thereupon it is the obſervation of the Jews, that after Ezra's time it was appointed, that at the end of benedictions in the Temple, the phraſe לעולם in ſeculum ſhould be changed into מן העולם ועד העולם from age to age, i. e. from this age to the next. So we find it in c. 9. of Cod. Berachoth, &c. כל חותמי ברכות In all the concluſions of benedictions they were wont to ſay מן העולם from age; But when the Sadducees perverted this form of ſpeech, and ſaid that there was but one age, they appointed that the form ſhould be from age and to age. And though perhaps this latter form be before Ezras time to be met with in the Hebrew writings, yet, it ſeems, twas not in their formes of benedictions in the publick ſervice, and there it was probably inſerted on that occaſion. And an abbreviate of that form it is which the Chriſtians have delivered to them by Chriſt, Mat. 6. 13. thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας to both ages, the preſent and the future, which we according to ſenſe render for ever and ever, i. e. for this world (which is one for ever,) and for the next (which is another for ever.) This is more largely ſet by the Apoſtle, Gal. 1. 4. εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων, to the ages of ages, but yet more amply in the antient Church, which added that ſecond verſicle to the doxologie [As it was in the beginning (i. e. מן העולם from the age, from the beginning of the world, as ἀπ' αἰῶνος here ſignifies) is now, and ever ſhall be, world without end] i. e. now, in this world, and לעולם to that world, which ſhall never end.

V. 74. Grant] The word δοῦναι with an Infinitive mood after it (as here δοῦναι λατρεύειν) is, according to the ſenſe of it, to be rendred, as if the word power, or ſomething elſe like it, were to be underſtood; ſo often in the Revelation, as c. 2. 7. and 17. δώσω φαγεῖν, I will give to eat, or drink, i. e. power to do ſo, c. 3. 21. δώσω καθίσαι, I will give the priviledge, or favour, to ſit. So the Paſſive ἐδόθη in like manner c. 6. 4. ἐδόθη λαβεῖν, c. 13. 7. ἐδόθη ποιῆσαι, and v. 15. ἐδόθη δοῦναι, it was given to receive, to do, to give, and ſo c. 16. 8. and 19. 8. where the word ἐξουσία power, or the like, is clearly underſtood, which in many other places is expreſs'd, c. 9. 3. c. 6. 8. c. 15. 5, 7. &c. and ſo the former part of the 74. ver. being read, as it were, in a parentheſis, the ſenſe will be perſpicuous, The oath which he ſware to Abraham our father, that he would give us power to ſerve him in holineſſe, &c. And ſo, beſide the explication of that oath made to Abraham (which hath from this paſſage been explain'd in * another place) here will be obſervable alſo the alluſion of this whole paſſage to the names of the Baptiſt, and his parents. For the meaning of Zachary is the remembrance of God, and to that referres his μνησθῆναι διαθήκης Gods remembring his covenant, v. 72. Elizabeth ſignifies the oath of God, and to that referres ὅρκον ὃν ὤμοσε, the oath which he ſware. And John ſignifies the free gift, or grace, of God, and to that referres the δοῦναι, the giving deliverance and grace to ſerve him in ſincere holineſſe, &c. the grace of Juſtification, Sanctification, and Perſeverance.

* Prakt. Cat. l. 1. ſect. 2.

Ib. Without fear] That the word [ἀφόβως without fear] referres to our enemies, in whoſe power before we were, appeares by the diſtinct mention of them in the next words, and therefore it cannot with any ſenſe be applied to the excluding that fear of our danger, which is founded onely in our ſelves, our own negligences, or miſcarriages. And that it is to be joyned with ῥυσθέντες being delivered, and not with λατρεύειν ſerving, is not onely apparent by many antient Copies, which ſo joyn it without any comma betwixt ἀφόβως and ἐκ, and by Irenæus l. 3. c. 11. reading it, Nobis ſine timore ereptis, ſervire in ſanctitate, us being delivered without fear, to ſerve him in holineſſe, and * Titus Boſtrenſis ἐπειδή τινες πολλάκις ῥύονται —— μὴ φόβῳ ᾖ, διὰ τοῦτό φησι τὸ δοῦναι ἡμῖν ἀφόβως —— ῥυσθῆναι, becauſe ſome oft times are delivered from the hands of enemies, but with fear, therefore he ſaith, that he gives us to be delivered without fear, adding διὰ τῆς χριστοῦ ἐπιδημίας πεπίστευκεν ἡμᾶς ἀφόβως —— ῥυσθῆναι, for Chriſts coming cauſed us to be without fear delivered, οὐ γὰρ ᾐσθόμεθα τῆς ἐπιβουλῆς ἐχθρῶν, for we felt not, had no apprehenſion of, the treachery of our enemies, ἀλλ' ἀιφνίδιον ἥρπασεν ἡμᾶς, &c. but he preſently ſnatch'd us out, and transferr'd us from them into his own lot and portion, διὸ, &c. which layes the obligation on us (as on thoſe that are now become his) to ſerve him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, &c. but alſo by the nature of the word [ἀφόβως without fear] in the tranſlatours of the Old Teſtament, in that onely place, where 'tis uſed, Prov. 1. 33. ἡσυχάσει ἀφόβως ἀπὸ παντὸς κακοῦ, he ſhall reſt without fear from all evil, which is an explication of the dwelling ſafely, that immediately preceded. And this according to the notion of φόβος fear among the ſacred writers, not for the paſſion it ſelf, but for the object of it, as 1 Pet. 3. 14. τὸν φόβον αὐτῶν μὴ φοβηθῆτε, fear not their fear, where the word φόβος ſignifies whatſoever formidable object, which the οἱ κακώσαντες v. 13. malitious perſons can bring upon them. So alſo in humane writers, in * Lucian, τίς ἐλπὶς τοῦ φόβου; where as ἐλπὶς is fear, ſo φόβος is of danger. And ſo in Alex. Aphrodiſ. φόβος ἀπειλούμενος ὑπὸ τυράννου, the terror or terrible things threatned by the tyrant. So in * Menander * in tyrannicid. p. 400.

Γυνὴ λέγουσα χρὴ δ' ὑπερβάλλων φόβος.

* ap. Stob. p. 433.

A fair-ſpoken woman is exceeding great fear, i. e. is very much to be feared, a great danger. So Iſa. 8. 12. whence that place of S. Peter is taken, where the Greek hath φόβος αὐτῶν, his fear or terror, the Hebrew hath מוראו, which notes the formidable object, not יראה which

εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας

which signifies the passion, and presently it followes Κύριος ἔσται σοι φόβος, the Lord shall be thy fear, i. e. the object of it, and so he is called the fear of Isaac. Thus is φόβος] also the thing that is feared, Prov. 3. 25. as appeares by the ὁρμαὶ ἀσεβῶν, the incitations of wicked men, that follow to explain φόβος. So perhaps εὐλάβεια Heb. 5. 7. may signifie the thing against which he prayed, and from which he was delivered. And thus ἀφόβως will be directly all one with ἀκινδύνως without danger, as Wisd. 17. 4 ἀφόβως διαφυλάττειν, to preserve safe, and so 1 Cor. 16. 10. where the Apostle speaking of Timothy, bids them see, ἵνα ἀφόβως γένηται πρὸς ὑμᾶς that he may be safely with them, or ἐν εἰρήνῃ v. 11. peaceably. The same thing is expres'd by the translatours of the Old Testament, by ἐπ' ἐλπίδι Psal. 4. 8. Prov. 1. 33. not as 'ελπὶς notes hope, or expectation of future good, but as 'tis opposite to our present notion of φόβος, and imports safety. And this observation might be extended to many other words in the Scripture, which seem to denote actions, affections, or faculties, but are used for the objects of them, as θέλημα Θεοῦ, the will of God, 1 Thess. 4. 3. the things which Gods wills, ἐλπὶς hope, Rom. 8. 24. the things hoped for, πίστις faith, Rom. 4. 14. and in many other places, where it signifies the doctrine of the Gospel, the thing to be believed. So λύπη sorrow for calamity, 1 Pet. 2. 19. (and therefore, saith Hesychius, λύπη sorrow is βλάβη and ἀπώλεια, hurt and destruction, and πένθος mourning is, saith he, συμφορὰ calamity) and from thence λυπεῖσθαι to be wounded, Rom. 14. 15. and πενθεῖν not to mourn, but to use such asperity as will cause mourning, 2 Cor. 12. 22. But this by the way. I shall only adde that by Analogie of Scripture, it no way appeareth that fear is to be excluded from our serving of God, but rather that it is a good powerful motive to it, and so is called the beginning of wisdome, and a wholsome companion of it, and therefore we are commanded to work out our salvation with it.

Εὐλάβεια. Ἐλπὶς Πίστις Λύπη

f. Ἀνατολὴ

V. 78. Day-spring from on high] That ἀνατολὴ is here the title of Christ, there is no question, whether it be literally to be rendred the East, or the rising of the sun, that sun of righteousnesse, Mal. 4. 2. And this title seems formerly to have been bestow'd on him, Zach. 3. 8. and 6. 12. ἰδοὺ ἀνὴρ, ἀνατολὴ ὄνομα αὐτῷ. Behold the man whose name is the East, or rising of the sun, as Justin Martyr cites it dial. cum Tryph. p. 105. For which we ordinarily have, whose name is the Branch. The Hebrew צמח signifies oriri to rise or spring, and that may be applied to a branch that sprouts out of the tree, but so also it belongs to the rising sun, and accordingly signifies also lucere, to shine, and Heb. 1. 12. the brightnesse is in the Syriack Tsemach of his glory. And if ἀνατολὴ in Zachary be not a quite distant thing from the same word here in this other Zachary, it must then needs be in this other sense, for that here it is so, appeares by that which followes, both of visiting, and giving light to them that sit in darknesse. And so it may well be read out of that Prophet too, ch. 6. 12. not, he shall grow or branch up; (referring to the word Branch, but) he shall rise up, ἀνατελεῖ, or, as צמח signifies, shine out from under him. Hence is it that where ἀνατολὴ the East is used in other places of Scripture, some of the Greek Scholiasts have still applied it to Christ. As Bar. 4. 36. Περίβλεψον πρὸς ἀνατολάς, look toward the East, i. e. saith Olympiodorus, πρὸς τὴν τῆς δικαιοσύνης ἥλιον τὸν Κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, to the Sun of righteousnesse, our Lord Jesus Christ. And Jer. 23. 5. I will raise up unto David צמח צדיק ἀνατολὼ δικαίαν in the Septuagint, the righteous East; Severus renders it τὸν Χριστὸν τὴν δικαιοσύνης ἥλιον, Christ the Sun of righteousnesse. And from hence perhaps it is that Tacitus hist. l. 5. at the destruction of Jerusalem, saith that some on that occasion remembred antiquas Sacerdotum literas, the antient writings of the Priests, which foretold eo ipso tempore fore ut valesceret Oriens, that at that very time it should come to passe, that the East should prevail, i. e. Christ, cujus nomen est Oriens, whose name is the East, meaning all this while by the East, that Orient or rising Sun, and not the point, from whence he riseth. To which purpose also may applied that of Philo περὶ συγχυσ. διαλ. Τὸν πρεσβύτατον υἱὸν ὁ τῶν ὅλων πατὴρ ἀνέτειλε, the Father of all things sent him forth (in the word from whence the original ἀνατολὴ comes) his most ancient son, or first born.

f. Σκιὰ θανάτου

V. 79. Shadow of death] What is the meaning of this figurative speech, the shadow of death, will be best conjectured by comparing it with Psal. 23. 4. though I walk thorow the valley of the shadow of death, &c. There making God his shepheard v. 1. he compares himself to a sheep, which feeds sometimes upon an hill, sometimes in a valley, and again may be supposed to be in danger of Wolves, or else free from that danger. The hills being the highest, have all the light and warmth of the sun upon them, and the valleyes contrariwise that are shaded by the hills have much lesse of that warmth or light, and being also more subject to incursion of Wolves then the hills were, (where their coming would be more discernible) this is there the meaning of, [the valley of the shadow of death] a gloomie vale of danger of the utmost evil. Proportionably here (in a spiritual sense) the shadow of death is a state of sin, and ignorance, want of light, or knowledge, and want of warmth, or grace, the description of the state under the Law, which afforded neither of these in any proportion to what is now done by Christ, and so left men in a dangerous condition, till Christ was thus pleased to shine upon them, and thereby to rescue them out of it.

Annotations on Chap. II.

a. Οικεμένη

V. 1. All the world] That οἰκουμένη doth not always ſignifie the whole world, may be concluded by Act. 11. 28. where the prophecy of the famine through the whole world, ſeems to belong to the ſame, which was foretold by Chriſt, Mat. 24. 7. and ſo to referre only to Judæa (ſee Note on Mat. 24. e. and Euſebius Eccl. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 11.) Thus Lu. 21. 26. ἐπὶ τῇ οἰκουμένῃ, the things that come upon the world, ſeems to belong only to thoſe things that were a coming on Judea. And thus it is ordinarily ſaid, that Jeruſalem is ſituate in medio telluris in the middle of the earth; that is, of Judæa; as Delphi is ſaid to be Orbis umbilicus, the navel of the world, that is, of Greece, and as Minos calls Crete, over which he was King, his Orbis in Ovid, Certè ego non patiar Jovis incunabula Creten,

Qui meus eſt orbis, tantum contingere monſtrum.

So Plinie in his Nat. Hiſt. l. 12. c. 12. uſes the word Orbis for a region. In noſtro orbe proximè laudatur Syriacum.

riacum. But here the word belongs to the Roman Empire, which is often called by that title,

Orbem jam totum victor Romanus habebat and in Hegesippus l. 2. Antiq. c. 9. Orbis terrarum qui Romano Imperio clauditur & definitur; and so in Spartianus, Lampridius, Marcellinus, and in Optatus l. 3. and Ἐγὼ τῷ κόσμῳ κύριος, saith Antoninus in his Rescript to Eudæmon Nicomediensis, I am Lord of the world, and in Ulpian, who from a Constitution of Antoninus, Qui in orbe Romano sunt, cives Romanos effectos esse; and Bartolus pronounces that he were an Heretick, which would not say that the Emperour is Dominus & Monarcha totius orbis, the Lord and Monarch of the whole world. See Hieron. Magius Miscell. l. 4. c. 15. And so Suidas in the word Ἀπογραφὴ, saith, ὅτι πᾶσι τοῖς γῆν ὑπηκόοις ἐξέπεμψε δι' ὧν ἀπογραφὰς ἐποιήσατο, Augustus sent out unto all the regions of those that were subject to him, officers by whom he made the enrolings, and in the word Αὔγουστος Καῖσαρ, he saith, he decreed to number κατὰ κεφαλὴν πάντας τοὺς οἰκήτορας Ῥωμαίων, all the inhabitants of the Romans, and reciting the number, his style is, εὑρίσκονται οἱ τὴν Ῥωμαίων οἰκοῦντες, there were found so many myriads inhabiting the dominions of the Romans.

b. Ἀπογραφὴ

Ib. Taxed] The ἀπογραφὴ is here literally descriptio, and that is (not an exacting of tribute, or taxation, but) a setting down, or enrolling every person, according to their families and estates. So in Hesychius ἀπογραφὴ, ἀναθήσεις, ἢ ἡ γινομένη μίνυσις, it signifies the numbring of the people or declaring how many and what kind of people they are: And Phavorinus, that ἀπογράφω ποιοῦς is when each man is sent for to make known, ὅσα τε ἔχει, καὶ ὅθεν τὰ χρήματα καὶ πόσα ταῦτα ἐστι, what and how much he hath, and whence his estate came to him. This is it that the Greek and Latine glosse in H. Stephanus hath expres'd by ἀπογραφὴ, census, professus, professio, the word professio being the proper Latine word for this matter, and therefore the Vulgar very fitly hath it ver. 3. of this chap. Ibant profiteri, they went to tell what they were worth, &c. Suidas indeed in the word Ἀπογραφὴ mentioning this of Augustus, saith it was to the other end, of bringing into his treasury ἀυτάρκη τινὰ μῖσιν, a sufficient proportion, and that it was therefore called, Ἀπογραφὴ πρώτη, the first of this kind, by way of equal and moderate distribution, because they that were in power before him, were wont to take away what they would. But though Suidas be an excellent Grammarian, yet in matter of history his authority is not great, and 'tis sure enough the Roman subjects paid their vectigalia, certain taxes, before this, and the Publicans were the gatherers of them. And Cassiodore's words, which somewhat look toward that of taxing, yet refer it not to the cause assigned by Suidas, but because by the civil warr's mens dominions or possessions were uncertain and confounded, and therefore this Census was appointed together with a survey and division, ut possessio sua nulli haberetur incerta, quam pro tributorum susceperat ratione solvenda, that every man might have his possession certain, and proportionably his tax be certain also. Cassiod. Var. l. 3. Ep. 52. It is therefore by learned men affirmed, particularly by Is. Casaubon in Bar. p. 105. (and is most probable) that this decree of inrolling was an effect of Augustus's curiosity (and neither of his desire to inrich his treasury, nor to reforme the excesses of those before him) and this overruled by Gods special providence, saith * S. Chrysost. that this Emperor might ὑπηρετῆσαι πρὸς τὸν ἐν Βηθλεὲμ τόκον serve or be instrumental to the conserving the record of the birth of Christ, whose name and his mothers as well as Joseph's, were now inrolled. And that is a farther evidence of the nature of this ἀπογραφὴ, that it was not a taxe, for that would not have belonged to women, and infants, but, as Cassiodore said, to the possessors onely. And thus Suidas himself understands it in Augusto, that he decreed to number by head all the inhabitants of the Romans, being willing to know πόσον δὴ πλῆθος, how great the multitude was, which must take off all authority of his to the contrary. This enrolling is most amply defin'd by Florus, ut omnia patrimonii, dignitatis, ætatis, artium, officiorumque discrimina in tabulas referantur, that all the differences of patrimony, dignity, age, craft, office might be recorded. Now concerning this particular enrolling or census here mention'd, 'tis observable what Sepulveda and Gerundensis have related, that 27. years before the birth of Christ, Augustus appointed that there should be an enrolling of the whole Empire, and proclaimed it in Tarracon a city in Spain after the Cantabri (and others that in Spain had broke off from him) had been conquered and reduced by him. For then he conceived that all the parts of his Empire were quiet and setled, and so that is was a fit time to take this view of his people. Velleius Paterculus seems to agree in this relation, making mention of a notable peace, that is, quiet and rest from warre about the twentieth year of Augustus, which being by him said about the 20th year, if it be resolved to have been punctually the 17th, it will fall directly on this time of this 27 years before our Saviours birth, that being in the 44th year of his reign. But upon or soon after this Proclamation Augustus found a breaking out of some stirres in other parts, and thereupon deferr'd his resolution to some other quieter time, which was this very point of time wherein Christ was born. Hence it is that the ancient Spaniards observed an æra (which is a word made up of the first letters of Annus erat Regni Augusti, the year of Augustus's reign) different from all other Christians, to wit, 27 years before them, reckoning from this first proclamation in Tarracon, and counting the ἀπογραφὴ, or enrolling here, in S. Luke to have been at that time. By this passage of story considered there will arise to us matter of most excellent observation, concerning Gods wise disposal of all things, particularly in this of the birth of Christ, which, if Augustus's first decree and proclamation in the 17th of his reign, had stood, in all probability could not have been in Bethlehem, as the Prophets foretold it should. For if that had gone on in the 17th, there had been no use of this in the 44th year of his reign. Had not this been in the 44th, Joseph and Mary would have had no occasion at that time to come up to Bethlehem from Nazareth, where they dwelt, Had they not done so, Christ had not been born there: Whence appears Gods providence in changing Augustus's resolution by the breaking out of new troubles, and transferring this time of full peace (and so of enrolling) to this very point of time, wherein Mary being so near her time, and going up to Bethlehem to be enrolled, should there fall in travail, and bring forth, that so the seed of David, and branch of Jesse (as Christ is call'd) that was conceived in Nazareth, should be born in Bethlehem, where Jesse lived, and David was born. Now whereas 'tis added that this was ἀπογραφὴ πρώτη, the first enrolling, that is to distinguish it from another, Act. 5. 37. the same which Josephus and Eusebius speak of and place under Cyrenius also, but differing from this here. As for Cyrenius having rule over Syria at this time, that is to be taken in a looser, not stricter sense, not that Cyrenius was there now the standing Governour under the Romans, but sent by the Emperour particularly on this occasion, to take an inventory of this part of his Empire. For so saith Suidas upon the word ἀπογραφὴ out of some antient Author, that Cæsar Augustus desiring to know the strength and state of his dominions sent 20 chosen men into all his dominions, one into one part, another into another, to take this account, and P. Sulpitius Quirinius had Syria for his province, not to have any setled dominion there, but to perform this work, for which he was sent extraordinarily, Sentius Saturninus being then President of Syria, Tertull. cont. Marc. l. 4. c. 19.

Ἀπογραφὴ πρώτη

* Hom. 8. in Matt.

c. Φάτνη

V. 7. Manger] Φάτνη signifies βυσσίνον, or ἱπποστάσιον, ſaith Iſ. Caſaubon ad Baron. i. e. a ſtable where cattel ſtand, and not onely the place where their meat is put, the manger. So in Latine Præſepe, Virgil. Æneid. 7.

—— in præſepibus urſi Sævire —— and Stabant tercentum nitidi in præſepibus altis, and to this the ſtory beſt agrees, which gives the reaſon of their laying him in the φάτνη, becauſe there was no room (not in the ſtable, but) in the Inne.

d. Φυλακαὶ τῆς νυκτός.

V. 8. Keeping watch] 'Tis ſufficiently known that the night was diſtinguiſht into ſeveral watches, the ὀψὲ, and μεσονύκτιον, and ἀλεκτοροφωνία, and πρωΐ, Mar. 13. 35. the evening, and midnight, and cock-crowing, and morning. The firſt ending at nine in the evening, the 2d at twelve, the 3d at three, the fourth at ſix in the morning, as the day is divided into the third, and ſixt, and ninth, and twelfth houres. Now theſe the ſhepheards in thoſe countreys (which lay chiefly upon feeding cattel) i. e. the inhabitants of the countreyes did ſo diſtribute among them, that ſuch a number of them might continue in the field and watch abroad ſo many houres in the night, and when that watch ended, ſo many other freſh men might come & ſucceed to that care, & this the form of ſpeech in Greek doth import φυλάσσοντες φυλακὰς τῆς νυκτὸς ὅτι τὴν ποίμνιον ἐφύλαττον, i.e. literally rendred, watching the watches of the night over their flock, and ſo the Vulgar readeth it, cuſtodientes vigilias noctis ſuper gregem.

e. Εὐδοκία. Ἄνθρωποι εὐδοκίας.

V. 14. On earth peace, good will to--] The concurrence of ſo many antient Copies and readings for this of εὐδοκίας, not εὐδοκία, makes it fit to give an account of that phraſe, if ſo it be read. Gods favour or acceptance, (an argument, and evidence of the ſincerity of the Chriſtians heart which is ſo approved, or accepted by him,) is literally the notion of εὐδοκία, good liking, i. e. Gods good liking, or well-pleaſedneſs. So when, in the higheſt degree, 'tis ſaid of Chriſt, ἐν ᾧ εὐδόκησα, in whom I am well pleaſed. So when of Noah 'tis ſaid, that he found grace in the eyes of the Lord, Gen. 6. 8. Accordingly ἄνθρωποι εὐδοκίας, are ſuch as theſe, whoſe uprightneſſe of heart, and ſincerity, (though mix'd with much frailty, and ſome ſin, for which there is no way of pardon but in Chriſt) hath approved them to God, and to theſe and none but theſe, this εἰρήνη ἐπὶ γῆς peace on earth belongs. And ſo this reconciliation of God to all penitent ſinners, all ſincere, faithful, new creatures, (thoſe whom God ſees, and ownes as ſuch) as it is the full importance of εἰρήνη ἐπὶ γῆς ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκίας, peace upon earth toward men of his good-liking] ſo is it, next the glory of God, mention'd in the former words, the principal deſign of Chriſts coming into the world.

f. Ῥομφαία ψυχὴν διελεύσεται.

V. 35. A ſword ſhall pierce] That Mary the mother of Chriſt was put to death is the affirmation of Epiphanius l. 3. her. 78. contra Dicomarianitas, and this place of Scripture ſaid to be fulfilled by it, ἵνα ἀνηρέθη, καθὼς γέγραπται, καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτῆς διελεύσεται ῥομφαία, ſhe was put to death according as it is written, a ſword ſhall paſſe through thy ſoul alſo, and ſo he goes on, ἐν μάρτυσιν αὐτῆς τὸ κλέος, her glory is among the martyrs. If ſhe were not actually put to death, ſome great ſenſitive affliction, the ſharpneſs of which is here compared to a ſword, and ſaid to paſs through her ψυχὴ, her animal or ſenſitive ſoul, is here certainly meant by it.

g. Ἀξιοπίστως γηρείας, &c.

V. 37. Served God with faſtings] Of this Hanna 'tis the teſtimony of Cyril of Jeruſalem, Cat. 10. that ſhe was ἐγκρατὴς, ἐυλαβεστάτη, καὶ ἀσκήτεια. The firſt title referres to her continence and widow-chaſtity for ſo many years, (having lived with an husband, but ſeven years after marriage, he, in all probability, dying at that time.) The 2d. to her devotion and ſtrict obſervance of piety. The 3d. not to a ſolitarie monial life (as the Latine interpreter there falſly renders it) but to ſuch a ſtrict obſervance of all that σκληραγωγία, or auſterity, in faſting ſo often every week, and attending of publick (and private) prayers ſo often every day (and all this for the whole ſpace of her enſuing life) as was antiently obſervable among the ἀσκηταὶ or devout perſons. Thus did ſhe take her ſelf up from the cares and affaires of the world that ſhe might have the full vacancy for the ſervice of God, and dayly frequented the Temple at the houres of prayer, not that ſhe did neither eat nor ſleep, or that in any reſpect ſhe could be ſaid to dwell there alwayes, but that ſerving God there at all the ſet times of prayer, and to prayer adding the weekly obſervances of faſting alſo, ſhe returned from thoſe performances to her own houſe, and there properly inhabited; and this is enough to own that expreſſion here, that ſhe departed not from the Temple, i. e. forſook it not, kept cloſe to it at the ſet times, (though ſhe was at her own houſe alſo at other times) as the Apoſtles ch. 24. 53. are ſaid to have been διὰ παντὸς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, continually in the Temple, and Act. 1. 13. διαμένοντες continuing there, which yet doth not note that they were never out of it, but, as it follows, ἦσαν προσκαρτεροῦντες ὁμοθυμαδὸν τῇ προσευχῇ καὶ δεήσει they continued unanimouſly conſtant in prayer and ſupplication, not again that they did never intermit praying, but that they were conſtant in the frequent dayly performances of that duty, at the houres appointed for it.

h. Τὰ τοῦ πατρός

V. 49. My Fathers buſineſſe] Ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρός μου seems to referre to the place where they found him, i. e. in the Temple, and ſo τὰ ἴδια in the Neuter, his own, Jo. 19. 27. ſignifies his own houſe, as Eſter 5. 10. and 6. 12. בֵּית houſe, is rendred τὰ ἴδια, his own. Thus the Syriack reads it, and thus Theophylact, ἐν τῷ ναῷ αὐτοῦ, in his temple. So Chryſoſtom Hom. 52. in Gen. ſpeaking of Abimelech driving Iſaac out of his countrey, askes, πῦ ἀπελαύνεις ἡ δίκαιον; whither driveſt thou the righteous man? ἐκ οἶδα ὅτι ὅπου ἂν αὐτὸν ἀπελθεῖν συμβαίνῃ, ἐν τοῖς τοῦ δεσπότου τοῦ ἑαυτοῦ δεῖ) αὐτὸν ἀνάγκη, do'ſt thou not know that whitherſoever he ſhall happen to depart, 'tis neceſſary he ſhould be in his Fathers houſe, i. e. within his providence? And * Dionyſius Alexandr. ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ μοῦ ἔυρεσάν με, λέγῃ διὰ προφήτου, ἐν ᾧ Εὐαγγελίοις, ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρός μου δεῖ με εἶναι, They found me in my houſe, ſaith he by the prophet, but in the Goſpel, I muſt be in thoſe of my father, i. e. in his houſe likewiſe. So * Titus Boſtrenſis, Εἰς ἡ ναὸν ἦν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἔφη, οὐκ ἠδεῖτε ὅτι ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρός μου δεῖ εἶναι με; Being in the Temple of God he ſaid, knew ye not that I muſt be in my fathers (houſe?) See the learned Fullers Miſcell. p. 585.

2. Annas a chief prieſt being a man of principal authority among the Jews, and Caiaphas placed by the Procurator in the Pontificate,

c.

2. Annas and Caiaphas being the [c] High prieſts,] the word of God came unto John the ſon of Zacharias in the wilderneſſe.

3. to ſeveral parts of the coaſts that were nigh Jordan, Bethabara, Ioh. 1. 28. Ænon, Ioh. 3. 23. and by that means all the region about Iordan came to hear him, and he warned all the people to repent and be baptized of him, to come in as proſelytes of his, that ſo their ſins might be forgiven, which would otherwiſe bring certain deſtruction on them.

3. And he came [into all the countrey about Jordan, preaching the baptiſme of repentance for the remiſſion of ſins,]

4. As

4. As it is written in the book of the words of Eſaias the prophet, ſaying, [The voice of one crying in the wilderneſſe, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths ſtreight.

5. Every valley ſhall be filled, and every mountain and hill ſhall be brought low, and the crooked ſhall be made ſtreight, and the rough wayes ſhall be made ſmooth.]

4, 5. There ſhall come a cryer, or herauld, or harbinger of the Meſſias in the wilderneſſe, to fit men by repentance for the receiving of Chriſt, and part of his proclamation ſhall be in theſe words, Every valley, &c. which may figuratively import the peculiar quality of the Goſpel of Chriſt, which was to work upon the poor in ſpirit, and exalt them to a participation of the greateſt priviledges, which none of the higher loftier ſpirits were capable of, till they were humbled, and brought down from their heights; but literally they may ſeem to foretel the terrible deſtruction, which ſhould ſhortly come upon this people for their impenitence, the plaining of the land for the coming of the Roman army (ſee note on Mat. 3. c.) and the viſible diſcrimination, which ſhould then be made betwixt the obdurate impenitent unbelievers on one ſide, and thoſe that are penitent and receive Chriſt, on the other.

6. And all fleſh ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God.]

6. And all men ſhall diſcern the deliverance which is wrought for the penitent believers, when all impenitents are deſtroyed.

7. Then ſaid he to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the [wrath to come?]

7. deſtruction approaching?

8. Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and [begin not to ſay within your ſelves, We have Abraham to our father;] For I ſay unto you that God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children unto Abraham.

8. Do not think 'twill ſerve your turn, that you are able to ſay (ſee note on Mat. 2. a) We are of the ſeed of Abraham, who have right to the promiſes made to him, whatſoever our actions are, See Mat. 3. 9.

9. And now alſo the axe is laid unto the root of the trees, Every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and caſt into the fire.

9. Mat. 3. 10.

10. And the people asked him, ſaying, What ſhall we do then?]

10. And the common ſort of people asked him, What was their task, or part of duty, to prevent or avert this ruine.

11. He anſwereth and ſaith unto them, He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none, and he that hath meat let him do likewiſe.]

11. And he preſcribed to them an extenſive liberality, charity, mercifulneſſe to all that wanted what they had to ſpare.

12. Then came alſo [Publicanes] to be baptized, and ſaid unto him, Maſter, what ſhall we do?

12. the tole or tribute-gatherers.

13. And he ſaid unto them, [Exact no more then is appointed you.]

13. Receive all the taxes which the Emperour requires to be gathered, but beſide that, do not you either by cunning, or force take any more for your ſelves.

14. And the ſouldiers likewiſe demanded of him, ſaying, And what ſhall we do? And he ſaid unto them, Do violence to no man, * neither [d] accuſe any falſly, but be content with your wages.]

* not wrong any.

14. And to the military men of the Iews (employed by their Procurators, or the Romans) he preſcribed theſe rules, Neither fright, nor plunder any man, but be content with that allowance, which is aſſigned for your maintenance. d.

15. And as the people were in expectation, and all men muſed in their hearts of John, whether he were the Chriſt or not,]

15. And as the people were amuzed concerning him, looking for ſome further declaration or manifeſtation from him, and having ſome diſputes within them, whether he were not the Meſſias himſelf,

16. John anſwered ſaying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with water, but one mightier then I cometh, the latchet of whoſe ſhooes I am not worthy to unlooſe, he ſhall baptize you with the holy Ghoſt and with fire.]

16. John gave a clear anſwer to their doubts, telling every one that came to him, in plain words, that he was not the Chriſt, ſaying, My whole office is, thus to receive you as proſelytes, to believe on the Meſſias, who ſhall ſuddenly reveal himſelf; I am but a diſciple of that great Maſter, ſent before him, as diſciples of prophets are wont to be, to take up room for him, (ſee Luk. 10. 1. and Mat. 26. 20.) to ſerve him, to take off, and lay away his ſhooes (ſee note on Mat. 3. h.) and truely I am unworthy of this office, to be the diſciple of ſo divine a perſon. But he, when he cometh, ſhall be another manner of perſon, and do other kind of things; Over and above the receiving of proſelytes with water in baptiſme, he ſhall ſend down the Spirit on his diſciples, in an appearance as of fire, Act. 2. and thereby enable them to ſpeak with tongues miraculouſly, and ſo fit them for their office, (ſee Act. 1. a.)

17. Whoſe [fan] is in his hand, and he will throughly purge his floor, and will gather the wheat into his garner, but the chaffe he will burn with fire unquenchable.

17. winnowing inſtrument, See note on Mat. 3. 12.

18. And many other things in his exhortation preached he unto the people.]

18. And John Baptiſt ſaid many ſuch things as theſe, and more different from theſe, by way of exhortation and proclamation to the people, concerning the Goſpel of Chriſt.

19. But Herod the Tetrarch being reproved by him for Herodias his brother Philips wife, and for all the evils which Herod had done,]

19. And Herod calling him to the court, and hearing him often, and that with great reſpect to him at firſt (Mar. 6. 20.) at laſt being reproved by him for marrying his brothers wife, and for all other ſins, that John ſaw him to be guilty of,

20. Added yet this above all, that he ſhut up John in priſon.

21. Now when all the people were baptized, it came to paſſe that Jeſus alſo being baptized and praying, the heaven was opened,

22. And the holy Ghoſt deſcended in a bodily ſhape like a dove upon him,] and a voice came from heaven, which ſaid, Thou art my beloved ſon, in thee I am well pleaſed.

22. And the holy eternal Spirit of God appeared viſibly to come down, and to deſcend upon him, as a dove uſes to deſcend, and light on any thing (ſee note on Mat. 3. k.)

23. And Jeſus himſelf began to be about thirty years of age, being (as it was ſuppoſed) the ſon of Joſeph, which was the ſon of [e] Heli.]

23. And at this time of his being baptized, Jeſus was about thirty years old, the age before which the Levites were not to be admitted to ſacred functions, Num. 4. 3. and 43. 1 Chron. 33. 2. And being born of a pure virgin he had truely no father on earth, but yet Joſeph the ſon of Heli being betrothed to Mary his mother, he was his reputed father. e.

Ib. Tetrarch of Ituræa] That which is here said of Herod's brother Philip being Tetrarch of Ituræa and Trachonitis is thus farre confirmed by Josephus Ant. l. 18. c. 7. that this Philip died in the twentieth year of Tiberius, having for the space of 37. years been Præfect of Trachonitis, and Gaulanitis, and Batanæa where in stead of Gaulanitis the truer reading is Auranitis, of which we have mention in the same Josephus Ant. l. 15. c. 13. as a part of Zenodorus his province, Trachonitis and Batanæa being there named as the other parts of it, the latter of which (or else that, and Auranitis together) is sure the Ituræa here. As for the word τετράρχης Tetrarch, it denotes a principality of a fourth part, and when Herod, who is call'd so, is elsewhere call'd King Herod, the word King is to be taken in that latitude, as to signifie no more then what Tetrarch here doth, one placed by the Romans over this Region of Galilee, with Regal power and for life, and thereby differing from the ἡγεμών, a Governor (such as Pilate here, and Mat. 27. 2.) with Commission for so many years, πομπώφ⊙, 1 Pet. 2. 14. a Deputy of the supreme, and as a Steward in a family, dispensing it under him, Ἐπίτροπ⊙, and Procurator.

c. Ἄννας καὶ Καϊάφ.

V. 2. High Priests] Concerning the two Ἀρχιερεῖς or high Priests in this place (and the reconciling it with the Old Testament, where there was to be but one at a time, one of the sons of Aaron, Ex. 29. 30. Lev. 16. 32. and he to continue not for a year only, but for his life, whereas here it seems to be otherwise) many things have diversly been said by learned men. Without surveying of their severall conjectures, I shall first think it worth observing that in the books of Samuel (when sure there was but one high Priest) Abimelech the son of Ahitub being slain, and Abiathar succeeding him in the high Priests office, 1 Sam. 22. there is yet, after that, frequent mention of Zadok and Abiathar together, 2 Sam. 15. 35. Zadok and Abiathar the priests, and c. 17. 15. and c. 19. 11. and 20. 25. and 1 Chron. 15. 11. every where Zadok and Abiathar priests, and Zadok plac'd before Abiathar constantly (as Annas before Caiaphas here.) The reason of which is probably this, because though Zadok was not actually high Priest in Davids time, yet being the son of Ahitub 2 Sam. 8 17. (not that Ahitub, the father of Abimelech 1 Sam. 22. 11. who was of Ithamars line 1 Chron. 24. 2. but another 1 Chron. 6. 8. and 53. the lineal successor of Eleazar v. 4. and 50.) to him the High-Priesthood regularly belonged, and so after the expulsion of Abiathar (the last of Eli's, and so of Ithamars line, 1 Kin. 2. 26, 27.) was restored to him, 1 Kin. 2. 35. and Abiathar being in Davids time the High Priest of Eli's, and so of Ithamars line, (to which, it seems, it was changed from Eleazars, and continued in that line for some time) Zadok being a principall person in authority with David, a Priest, and regularly heire to the High-priesthood, is constantly joyned with (and set before) Abiathar the high Priest. Agreeable to this example it is, that Annas father-inlaw to (the high Priest of that year) Caiaphas, a most eminent person himself, and one that had been high-Priest also, and, I suppose, the chief of the race of Aarons sons then alive, as Zadok was, is here set before, and joyned with Caiaphas, and call'd ἀρχιερεὺς high Priest, though punctually he executed not the office of the high Priest. This being said by way of preparation, the main of the difficulty may perhaps be removed by observing of three things: First, That at this time, the land being under the Roman Emperour (whose name and the year of his reigne is set down at the beginning of the verse, as also his Procurator of Judæa, Pontius Pilate, and the Tetrarchs of other places) the succession of the high-Priests was now changed. The one lineal descendent in the family of Aaron, which which was to continue for life, being not permitted to succeed (λέλυτο μὲν ἡ διὰ βίου, ἣν ἐκ προγόνων διαδοχή, saith Eusebius l. 1. c. 18.) but some other, whom he pleased, named to that office by the Procurator every year, or renewed, as often as he pleased. To which purpose is that of Theophylact. Οἱ τότε ἀρχιερεῖς τῆς Ἰουδαίων ἐπεπίλλον τῇ τιμῇ, ἀνιστὰ τὴν αὐτὴν κτώμενος,

ἢ τὸν νόμον διαφθείροντες. They who were at that time high Priests of the Jewes, invaded that dignity, bought it, and ſo deſtroyed the Law, which preſcribed a ſucceſſion in the family of Aaron. Secondly, That there was at this time, after the Roman Conqueſt, and before the deſtruction of the Temple (whenſoever they made no King of (but only ſent a Procurator into) Judæa) the place and title of נשיא, ἄρχων τοῦ λαοῦ, Ruler of the people (and with it ſome part of the ſoveraign power) allow'd unto the Jewes, or at leaſt ſomewhat proportionable to it. This Naſi was he which had at any time the chief power of that people within themſelves, that is, what degree of power ſoever remained in the Jewes at any time by the indulgence of their Conquerours it was principally in him: Whileſt they were not ſubject to ſtrangers, an abſolute and ſupreme power (and therefore in the Law and in Ezechiel the Naſi or the Ruler ſignifies the King) but when they were ſubject to other nations, a power ſubordinate, ſuch as was allow'd them by thoſe that had dominion over them, but yet that ſupreme among themſelves, for the deciding of all controverſies ariſing from, and determinable by their Law, though generally without power of life and death, to enforce the ſentences of their judicatures. Such are the ראשי הגלות or ἀρχιμαλωτάρχαι the chief of the Captives that returned from Babylon. Zorobabel the ſon of Salathiel, Hag. 2. and Zach. 4. being of the tribe of Judah, Mat. 1. 12. Luke 3. 27. (at the ſame time when Joſuah the ſon of Joſedech is high Prieſt, Zach. 3. and therefore they two together are called the anointed ones, c. 4. 14. and named in the front of the Captives, Ezra. 2. 2.) and after him his poſterity, till about the time of the Maccabees. According to that of S. Baſil in his Epiſtles p. 1170. Επανελθόντες δὲ οἱ περὶ τὸν Σαλαθιὴλ, καὶ Ζοροβάβελ δημοτικώτερον κατηγάγοντο τὸ λαὸν, τῆς ἀρχῆς λοιπὸν ὅπη τῷ ἱερωσύνην μεταπεσούσης. The ſucceſſors of Salathiel and Zorobabel ruled the people ſomewhat after a popular manner, and after their time foreward the principality fell to the prieſthood, to wit, in the time of the Macabees. (As for Nehemiah and the Governours mention'd by him c. 5. 14. it ſeems by his commiſſion, and the Babyloniſh name פחה, that he had his power from the King of Perſia, not from the Jewiſh nation, or from the right yet remaining in them under their Conquerours, of living according to their owne lawes.) After the manner of what was thus done in Paleſtine the like was generally put in practiſe in the ſeverall countries whether the Jewes were diſperſed, that is, not only in Babylonia, but alſo at Alexandria (ſaith Philo in Leg. ad Caium,) to the Naſi whereof all the multitude of the Jewes in Ægypt were ſubject, a million ſaith Philo, in his time; And therefore ſaith Joſephus, Ant. l. 20. c. 4. that the Εθνάρχαι of the Jewes being dead, the Emperor Claudius μὴ κεκώλυκε ἐθνάρχας γενέσθαι did not forbid them to ſet Rulers of the nation over them, but conſented ὑποτελέσθαι ἐκείνους, that all ſhould be ſubject to them, according to their owne cuſtomes, and not be forced παραβαίνειν τὸ πάτριον δρησκείαν to tranſgreſſe the religion of their fathers. The like is reported of Auguſtus by Philo ad Flaccum, calling theſe rulers Τενάρχας, as Joſephus did Εθνάρχας, and others of the heathen Writers Patriarchas, See Vopiſcus in vita Saturnini. Thirdly, This office of the Naſi generally fell on ſome perſon of the greateſt authority among them, for skill and knowledge in their Law. And 'twill not be improbable that that ſhould be ſome Prieſt (ſuch being moſt carefully brought up in that knowledge) and then though it be not neceſſary to ſuppoſe that that were the lineally deſcended high Prieſt (there being no ſuch perhaps left in the land) yet 'twill be eaſie to conceive, that a Prieſt the chief of one of the ranks, eſpecially of the firſt rank of the Prieſts, and he poſſeſs'd with ſo great authority, as that of the Naſi (the greateſt now left among them ſhould be ſtyled ἀρχιερεύς, chief or high prieſt. And ſo, I conceive, it was at this time, ſomewhat after the manner of what the Maccabees had formerly been, which were in a manner Kings and prieſts both, that is, being prieſts, were alſo one after another, leaders and rulers of the Jewes, (proportionable to the Naſi, of which I now ſpeak) the onely rulers which then they had with any image of Regality on them. That this may be more diſcernible, 'twill not be amiſſe in brief to ſet down the beginning and progreſſe of them. Upon the profanation committed by Antiochus upon the Law and worſhip of God among the Jewes, aroſe Mattathias the ſon of John, the ſon of Simeon, a prieſt in Modin, of the ſons of Joarib (that is, of that family which had the firſt courſe of the four and twenty aſſigned to them by lot 1 Chron. 24.) and ſo of a family next to the family of the high prieſt, Aarons ſucceſſor. This Mattathias not pretending any right to the high prieſthood (it being not affirmed that he was chief of that family of Joarib, but a branch of one of the ſons, that is, one of that courſe, and beſides Onias the laſt of the high prieſts of the ſucceſſion of Aaron, was not, that appeareth, as yet gon into Ægypt) but meerly as a Zelot began to to kill the profaners, then went out into the mountains with as many after him as he could get, and at laſt when he had gathered an army, he left Judas as the mightieſt of his ſons (though not by ſucceſſion again as the eldeſt of them) to be Generall of it, 1 Mac. 1. 66. And he under the name of Judas Maccabæus (or the Zelot) did lead them, was as it were their King (the only one they had) their ruler at that time, and fought their battels illuſtriouſly, cleanſed the Sanctuary, built a new Altar, and being at laſt ſlain, 1 Mac. 9. 18. it followes v. 29. that Judas's friends (that is, thoſe that had continued with him in all his actions) came to chuſe Jonathan a brother of Judas to be their prince or captain in his ſtead, to fight their battails, and ſo he took the government on him v. 31. And upon a treaty of league betwixt Alexander the ſon of Antiochus Epiphanes and him, Alexander ordains him to be the high prieſt of his nation, 1 Mac. 10. 20. and accordingly after that he is ſo call'd, v. 69. Thus the Dukedome and the high Prieſthood continued to his ſucceſſors, his brother Simon, and Hircanus Simons ſon, and ſo on, till the race of the Aſſamonæi or Maccabees were extinct alſo, by the killing of Ariſtobulus, and depoſing of Hircanus. After which the Prieſthood went among the Prieſts, at the will of the Governours appointed by the Romans, as Jonathan and the Aſſamonæi had been by the Kings, that then had power over them; but yet more uncertainly, not by ſucceſſions, as among the Aſſamonæi they did. Now ſome ſucceſſor as it were to that office of the Aſſamonæi, as farre as they were rulers of the people (not as by the King appointed to be the high prieſts) that is, ſome one of the Jewes, by themſelves ſet up to be chief among them, I ſuppoſe to have been continued at this time, after Herod the Great. And this not the lineal ſucceſſor of Aaron (for after the flight of the laſt Onias into Ægypt where he built a Temple in imitation of that in Jeruſalem, that Aaronicall line vaniſhed, or was interrupted in Judæa) but, like Mattathias, ſome other Prieſt of great reputation and authority among the people; and ſuch was Annas or Ananus or Ananias, at this time, a man of greateſt value and authority among them, ſaith Joſephus, who, though he differed from the high prieſt, put in by the Procurator, as Moſes did from Aaron, yet being a Prieſt, and Naſi at this time, 'twill be eaſie to believe, that he ſhould be called ἀρχιερεὺς high prieſt or chief prieſt (being ἄρχων and ἱερεὺς, a prieſt and ruler of the people) both here, and Act. 4. 6. and as I ſuppoſe, Act. 23. 5. where by what is ſaid of him by S. Paul, it is acknowledg'd that he was ἄρχων τοῦ λαοῦ prince, or ruler of the people. Accordingly the

1b. Tetrarch of Ituræa] That which is here ſaid of Herod's brother Philip being Tetrarch of Ituræa and Trachonitis is thus farre confirmed by Joſephus Ant. l. 18. c. 7. that this Philip died in the twentieth year of Tiberius, having for the ſpace of 37. years been Præfect of Trachonitis, and Gaulanitis, and Batanæa where in ſtead of Gaulanitis the truer reading is Auranitis, of which we have mention in the ſame Joſephus Ant. l. 15. c. 13. as a part of Zenodorus his province, Trachonitis and Batanæa being there named as the other parts of it, the latter of which (or elſe that, and Auranitis together) is ſure the Ituræa here. As for the word τετράρχης Tetrarch, it denotes a principality of a fourth part, and when Herod, who is call'd ſo, is elſwhere call'd King Herod, the word King is to be taken in that latitude, as to ſignifie no more then what Tetrarch here doth, one placed by the Romans over this Region of Galilee, with Regal power and for life, and thereby differing from the ἡγεμὼν, a Governor (ſuch as Pilate here, and Mat. 27. 2.) with Commiſſion for ſo many years, πεμπτὸς&, 1 Pet. 2. 14. a Deputy of the ſupreme, and as a Steward in a family, diſpenſing it under him, Ἐπίτροπ&, and Procurator.

c. Ἄννας & Καϊάφας.

V. 2. High Prieſts] Concerning the two Ἀρχιερεῖς or high Prieſts in this place (and the reconciling it with the Old Teſtament, where there was to be but one at a time, one of the ſons of Aaron, Ex. 29. 30. Lev. 16. 32. and he to continue not for a year only, but for his life, whereas here it ſeems to be otherwiſe) many things have diverſly been ſaid by learned men. Without ſurveying of their ſeverall conjectures, I ſhall firſt think it worth obſerving that in the books of Samuel (when ſure there was but one high Prieſt) Ahimelech the ſon of Ahitub being ſlain, and Abiathar ſucceeding him in the high Prieſts office, 1 Sam. 22. there is yet, after that, frequent mention of Zadok and Abiathar together, 2 Sam. 15. 35. Zadok and Abiathar the prieſts, and c. 17. 15. and c. 19. 11. and 20. 25. and 1 Chron. 15. 11. every where Zadok and Abiathar prieſts, and Zadok plac'd before Abiathar conſtantly (as Annas before Caiaphas here.) The reaſon of which is probably this, becauſe though Zadok was not actually high Prieſt in Davids time, yet being the ſon of Ahitub 2 Sam. 8 17. (not that Ahitub, the father of Ahimelech 1 Sam. 22. 11. who was of Ithamars line 1 Chron. 24. 2. but another 1 Chron. 6. 8. and 53. the lineal ſucceſſor of Eleazar v. 4. and 50.) to him the High-Prieſthood regularly belonged, and ſo after the expulſion of Abiathar (the laſt of Eli's, and ſo of Ithamars line, 1 Kin. 2. 26, 27.) was reſtored to him, 1 Kin. 2. 35. and Abiathar being in Davids time the High Prieſt of Eli's, and ſo of Ithamars line, (to which, it ſeems, it was changed from Eleazars, and continued in that line for ſome time) Zadok being a principall perſon in authority with David, a Prieſt, and regularly heire to the High-prieſthood, is conſtantly joyned with (and ſet before) Abiathar the high Prieſt. Agreeable to this example it is, that Annas father-inlaw to (the high Prieſt of that year) Caiaphas, a moſt eminent perſon himſelf, and one that had been high-Prieſt alſo, and, I ſuppoſe, the chief of the race of Aarons ſons then alive, as Zadok was, is here ſet before, and joyned with Caiaphas, and call'd ἀρχιερεὺς high Prieſt, though punctually he executed not the office of the high Prieſt. This being ſaid by way of preparation, the main of the difficulty may perhaps be removed by obſerving of three things: Firſt, That at this time, the land being under the Roman Emperour (whoſe name and the year of his reigne is ſet down at the beginning of the verſe, as alſo his Procurator of Judæa, Pontius Pilate, and the Tetrarchs of other places) the ſucceſſion of the high-Prieſts was now changed. The one lineal deſcendent in the family of Aaron, which which was to continue for life, being not permitted to ſucceed (λέλυτο μὲν ἡ διὰ βίου, ἡ ἐκ προγόνων διαδοχή, ſaith Euſebius l. 1. c. 18.) but ſome other, whom he pleaſed, named to that office by the Procurator every year, or renewed, as often as he pleaſed. To which purpoſe is that of Theophylact, Οἱ τότε ἀρχιερεῖς τῆς Ἰουδαίων ἐπιτιθέντο τῇ τιμῇ χρόνῳ τὴν αὐτὴν κτώμενοι, ἡ τὸν νόμον διαφθείροντες. They who were at that time high Priests of the Jewes, invaded that dignity, bought it, and so destroyed the Law, which prescribed a succession in the family of Aaron. Secondly, That there was at this time, after the Roman Conquest, and before the destruction of the Temple (whensoever they made no King of (but only sent a Procurator into) Judæa) the place and title of נשיא, ἄρχων τοῦ λαοῦ, Ruler of the people (and with it some part of the soveraign power) allow'd unto the Jewes, or at least somewhat proportionable to it. This Nasi was he which had at any time the chief power of that people within themselves, that is, what degree of power soever remained in the Jewes at any time by the indulgence of their Conquerours it was principally in him: Whilest they were not subject to strangers, an absolute and supreme power (and therefore in the Law and in Ezechiel the Nasi or the Ruler signifies the King) but when they were subject to other nations, a power subordinate, such as was allow'd them by those that had dominion over them, but yet that supreme among themselves, for the deciding of all controversies arising from, and determinable by their Law, though generally without power of life and death, to enforce the sentences of their judicatures. Such are the ראשי הגלות or ἀρχιμαλωτάρχαι the chief of the Captives that returned from Babylon. Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, Hag. 2. and Zach. 4. being of the tribe of Judah, Mat. 1. 12. Luke 3. 27. (at the same time when Josuah the son of Josedech is high Priest, Zach. 3. and therefore they two together are called the anointed ones, c. 4. 14. and named in the front of the Captives, Ezra. 2. 2.) and after him his posterity, till about the time of the Maccabees. According to that of S. Basil in his Epistles p. 1170. Επανελθόντες οἱ περὶ τὸν Σαλαθιὴλ, καὶ Ζοροβάβελ δημοτικώτερον κατηγάγοντο τὸν λαὸν, τῆς ἀρχῆς λοιπὸν ὅπη τῷ ἱερωσύνῃ μεταστάσης. The successors of Salathiel and Zorobabel ruled the people somewhat after a popular manner, and after their time forewards the principality fell to the priesthood, to wit, in the time of the Macabees. (As for Nehemiah and the Governours mention'd by him c. 5. 14. it seems by his commission, and the Babylonish name פחה, that he had his power from the King of Persia, not from the Jewish nation, or from the right yet remaining in them under their Conquerours, of living according to their owne lawes.) After the manner of what was thus done in Palestine the like was generally put in practise in the severall countries whether the Jewes were dispersed, that is, not only in Babylonia, but also at Alexandria (saith Philo in Leg. ad Caium,) to the Nasi whereof all the multitude of the Jewes in Ægypt were subject, a million saith Philo, in his time; And therefore saith Josephus, Ant. l. 20. c. 4. that the Εθνάρχαι of the Jewes being dead, the Emperor Claudius μὴ κεκώλυκε ἐθνάρχας γενέσθαι did not forbid them to set Rulers of the nation over them, but consented ὑποτελέσθαι ἐκέλευσε, that all should be subject to them, according to their owne customes, and not be forced παραβαίνειν τὰ πάτρια θρησκεύειν to transgresse the religion of their fathers. The like is reported of Augustus by Philo ad Flaccum, calling these rulers Γενάρχας, as Josephus did Εθνάρχας, and others of the heathen Writers Patriarchas, See Vopiscus in vita Saturnini. Thirdly, This office of the Nasi generally fell on some person of the greatest authority among them, for skill and knowledge in their Law. And 'twill not be improbable that that should be some Priest (such being most carefully brought up in that knowledge) and then though it be not necessary to suppose that that were the lineally descended high Priest (there being no such perhaps left in the land) yet 'twill be easie to conceive, that a Priest the chief of one of the ranks, especially of the first rank of the Priests, and he possess'd with so great authority, as that of the Nasi (the greatest now left among them should be styled ἀρχιερεὺς, chief or high priest. And so, I conceive, it was at this time, somewhat after the manner of what the Maccabees had formerly been, which were in a manner Kings and priests both, that is, being priests, were also one after another, leaders and rulers of the Jewes, (proportionable to the Nasi, of which I now speak) the onely rulers which then they had with any image of Regality on them. That this may be more discernible, 'twill not be amisse in brief to set down the beginning and progresse of them. Upon the profanation committed by Antiochus upon the Law and worship of God among the Jewes, arose Mattathias the son of John, the son of Simeon, a priest in Modin, of the sons of Joarib (that is, of that family which had the first course of the four and twenty assigned to them by lot 1 Chron. 24.) and so of a family next to the family of the high priest, Aarons successor. This Mattathias not pretending any right to the high priesthood (it being not affirmed that he was chief of that family of Joarib, but a branch of one of the sons, that is, one of that course, and besides Onias the last of the high priests of the succession of Aaron, was not, that appeareth, as yet gon into Ægypt) but meerly as a Zelot began to to kill the profaners, then went out into the mountains with as many after him as he could get, and at last when he had gathered an army, he left Judas as the mightiest of his sons (though not by succession again as the eldest of them) to be Generall of it, 1 Mac. 1. 66. And he under the name of Judas Maccabæus (or the Zelot) did lead them, was as it were their King (the only one they had) their ruler at that time, and fought their battels illustriously, cleansed the Sanctuary, built a new Altar, and being at last slain, 1 Mac. 9. 18. it followes v. 29. that Judas's friends (that is, those that had continued with him in all his actions) came to chuse Jonathan a brother of Judas to be their prince or captain in his stead, to fight their battails, and so he took the government on him v. 31. And upon a treaty of league betwixt Alexander the son of Antiochus Epiphanes and him, Alexander ordains him to be the high priest of his nation, 1 Mac. 10. 20. and accordingly after that he is so call'd, v. 69. Thus the Dukedome and the high Priesthood continued to his successors, his brother Simon, and Hircanus Simons son, and so on, till the race of the Assamonæi or Maccabees were extinct also, by the killing of Aristobulus, and deposing of Hircanus. After which the Priesthood went among the Priests, at the will of the Governours appointed by the Romans, as Jonathan and the Assamonæi had been by the Kings, that then had power over them; but yet more uncertainly, not by successions, as among the Assamonæi they did. Now some successor as it were to that office of the Assamonæi, as farre as they were rulers of the people (not as by the King appointed to be the high priests) that is, some one of the Jewes, by themselves set up to be chief among them, I suppose to have been continued at this time, after Herod the Great. And this not the lineal successor of Aaron (for after the flight of the last Onias into Ægypt where he built a Temple in imitation of that in Jerusalem, that Aaronicall line vanished, or was interrupted in Judæa) but, like Mattathias, some other Priest of great reputation and authority among the people; and such was Annas or Ananus or Ananias, at this time, a man of greatest value and authority among them, saith Josephus, who, though he differed from the high priest, put in by the Procurator, as Moses did from Aaron, yet being a Priest, and Nasi at this time, 'twill be easie to believe, that he should be called ἀρχιερεὺς high priest or chief priest (being ἄρχων and ἱερεὺς, a priest and ruler of the people) both here, and Act. 4. 6. and as I suppose, Act. 23. 5. where by what is said of him by S. Paul, it is acknowledg'd that he was ἄρχων τοῦ λαοῦ prince, or ruler of the people. Accordingly the ſtory of the Goſpel, Joh. 18. 13. mentions the carrying of Chriſt to Annas firſt, as to an officer of principall authority among them, who ſent him bound to Caiaphas, that was the Pontifex maximus that yeare, of the Romans putting in, and ſo continued all the time of Pilates Procuratorſhip. If this which hath been ſaid of the Naſi be ſufficient to ſhew that Annas might paſſe for one of the ἀρχιερεῖς here (and ἀρχιερεὺς he is called, that's clear, and as clear, by what is ſaid of him in Joſephus, and the Goſpels, the greateſt man at that time among the Jews, to whom the malefactors were firſt brought, Joh. 18. 14. which proves him to be Naſi alſo) then the other part of the difficulty, as to Chaiaphas, will be ſoon cleared: For 'tis manifeſt that at this time the Roman Præfect did ad libitum, when he would, and that ſometimes once a year, put in whom he pleaſed into the Pontificate, to officiate in Aarons office, in ſtead of the lineal deſcendent from him. And that is it of which Joſephus ſo frequently makes mention. After the race of the Aſſamonæi it ſeems Jeſus the ſon of Phabes was put in, then he being put out, Simon is put in his ſtead, this Simon put out, and Matthias in his ſtead, Ant. l. 17. c. 6. then Matthias put out by Herod about the time of Chriſts birth, and Joazar put in his ſtead, Ant. l. 17. c. 8. then Joazar put out by Archelaus and Eleazar put in, c. 15. and he again put out, and Jeſus the ſon of Sia put in. Then in the firſt of Quirinus there is mention again of Joazar ſon of Boethius, l. 18. c. 1. who, it ſeems, was put in, and ſo turned out again by Quirinus the ſame year, and Ananus the ſon of Seth put in his ſtead, who was the Annas here mention'd by S. Luke. Then Gratus at the beginning of Tiberius's reign, put out Annas and put in Iſmael, and in his ſtead Eleazar, Annas's ſon, then in his ſtead Simon, and after his year, Caiaphas here, who continued from that, all his and Pilates time, till Vitellius diſplaced him, and put Jonathan another ſon of Annas in his ſtead, and in his, a year or two after Theophilus another ſon of Annas, whom Agrippa again diſplaced, Ant. l. 19. c. 5. and put in Simon, and turning him out the ſame year, put in Mattathias a fourth ſon of Annas in the beginning of Claudius his reigne, ſome nine years after the death of Chriſt, and ſoon removing him, put in Elioneus, c. 7. Then it ſeems, Cantharas was put in, for in his place Herod put in Joſeph, l. 20. 1. and in his ſtead about fifteen years after the death of Chriſt, Ananias ſon of Nebedeus, c. 3. After him we find Jonathan, then Iſmael, then Joſeph, then Annas another ſon of Annas, then Jeſus ſon of Damneus, then Jeſus ſon of Gamaliel, then Matthias, in whoſe time the Jewiſh warre began. Theſe which I have thus named make up the number of 28. which, ſaith Joſephus, l. 20. c. 8. held the Pontificate from the time of Herod to Titus's burning of the Temple, that is, were the men which were put into it by the Roman Preſidents, And Caiaphas is one of them, and ſo he is mention'd Mat. 26. 3. and 57. and Joh. 11. 49. Caiaphas high prieſt of that year, and Joh. 18. 13. 14. 24. referring to the yearly change of this office at that time, though, as appears by Joſephus, it were continued in Caiaphas for ſome ſpace. But now (to return to Annas again) it is obſervable from Joſephus, that beſide this ſeries of the chief prieſts, Ananias is ſet down as ἀρχιερεὺς in the very ſame time, when Jeſus Damnæi is ſaid to have been put into that other line, l. 20. c. 8. And this appears to be the Annas here, for having ſpoken of him in the beginning of the chapter, and affirmed him to be the happieſt of all men, as having five ſons advanced to the dignity of high prieſt (viz. Eleazar, Jonathan, Theophilus, Mattathias and Annas) after himſelf had enjoyed it to ſatiety, he now adds, that Ananias became daily more famous, beloved, and for his liberality honour'd of all, obliging daily with gifts Albinus the Procurator, and the Summus Pontifex, and preſently he mentions Eleazar, as ſon of this Ananias, whom before we have ſet down ſon of this Annas. This being thus evident, it will be more then a probable conjecture, that by Annas's or Annanias's Pontificate, now ſpoken of, is meant his being the Naſi or ruler of the people at Jeruſalem (as before I ſaid) he being a perſon of ſo much authority among the Jewes. And ſo theſe two, the Naſi and the ſummus ſacerdos, being the two chief men among the Jewes (it being affirmed by Joſephus in the end of 8 chap. of l. 20. Ant. that the Pontifices were placed in the top of the Common-wealth, after the reign of Herod and Archelaus, the πολιτεία being brought to an Optimacy) may very well be reſolved on, to be theſe two here named, as the ἀρχιερεῖς at that time, though it fell out that they continued to be ſome years together. All which being put together will perhaps be able to anſwer any objection which can be brought againſt this conjecture. This Annas is after Act. 4. 6. call'd Ἅννας ἀρχιερεύς, Annas the high prieſt, or chief prieſt, and without doubt is the ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας, Act. 23. 5. and Act. 24. 1. being by Joſephus ſo called, as even now appear'd. Of him S. Paul, Act. 23. ſaith, οὐκ ᾔδειν ὅτι ἐστὶν ἀρχιερεύς, I knew not that he is high prieſt. 'Tis rightly wondered how Paul ſhould be able truly to ſay that he did not know him to be high prieſt, being ſo well acquainted with the Jewiſh nation, and the cuſtomes of their judicature: But if we take notice of the words of the by-ſtanders v. 4. revileſt thou God's high prieſt? It is firſt certain that Ananias was not ἀρχιερεὺς Θεοῦ, the high prieſt of God, nor indeed any man elſe at that time among them, the lineall ſucceſſion having been a long while interrupted. And to that in theſe words S. Paul anſwers, that he did not know that he was; meaning thereby, I ſuppoſe, the lineal deſcendent from Aaron. ſecondly there being at this time another high prieſt to whom that name more properly belong'd, then to Ananias it could, viz. the ſummus Pontifex, or he that was put into the place of the Aaronicall prieſthood by the Roman Præfect, this might truly be ſaid by him again, I knew not that he was high prieſt. Howſoever knowing him to be at that time the Naſi, he retracted his haſty and ſharp ſpeech, as having ſaid ſomewhat againſt the Ruler of the people, who was not by Gods law to be evil ſpoken of. That which is ordinarily ſaid of theſe two high prieſts, is, that one was the high prieſt, and the other his סגן or vicarius, ſuch as Zephaniah called the ſecond Prieſt, Jer. 52. 24. Of this Sagan it is clear that, though he were chief or principal of the ordinary prieſts which miniſtred to the high prieſt, and, in the day of Expiation, ſupplied his place in officiating, if any thing fell out which hindred him from being able to doe it himſelf, and thereupon be called ראש הכהנים, the chief of the ordinary prieſts, and כהן השנית the ſecondary prieſt, and כהן אחר the other prieſt, and μέτοχος ἀρχιερωσύνης in Joſephus partaker of his office, viz. when he officiates for him, or in that he is appointed his vicarius, yet he is never כהן גדול the high prieſt. What he was you may plainly ſee, Cod. Joma c. 1. §. 1. where having ſpoken of the high prieſt כהן גדול that is to officiate on the day of Expiation, it follows ומתקנין לו כהן אחר they appoint unto him another prieſt under him, שמא יארע בו פסול, if by chance any pollution, or profanation, (which hinders the high prieſt from officiating himſelf) doe befall him, as in Joſephus, Ant. l. 17. c. 8. when Matthias the high prieſt was unclean, Joſeph the ſon of Ellem was his proxy or Vicar to officiate for him, but this only for the ſpace of one day, as he there ſaith, (the great day of Expiation, as the Gloſſe on Joma clears it) by which it appears that he was under the high prieſt, as his ſubſtitute once a year for a day (not for a year, or any long time) but never his collegue or equall to him. 2ly. 'Tis evident, that this of the Sagan cannot Ἀρχιερεὺς Ἀνανίας.

Ἀρχιερεὺς Θεοῦ.

be applied to this matter. For I ſhall demand, to which of theſe two did the office of Sagan belong at this time, to Annas, or to Caiaphas? To Annas it could not, becauſe if it did, he muſt be acknowledg'd inferiour to the high prieſt, whereas Annas in all paſſages of Scripture, where he is named with Caiaphas, hath the priority, and never appears to be inferiour to Caiaphas, and therefore it muſt belong to Caiaphas, or to neither of them. And to Caiaphas it cannot, becauſe 'tis manifeſt, both that Annas was not the Pontifex Maximus at this time, & that Caiaphas was, by the ſeries of them, even now ſet down from Joſephus. 3ly. The office of the Sagan, as vicarius to the high prieſt, extended no farther then to the officiating in the Temple (for from that only was the high prieſt excluded by pollution, ſo as to need a ſubſtitute to officiate for him) Or if it could be conceived that the Sagan were to ſupply the high prieſts place in judicature, when he were detained by ſickneſſe, &c. yet of Annas here that cannot be affirmed, for 'tis apparent, that his authority continued to him, Joh. 18.13. when Caiaphas was in health, and acted as high prieſt, v. 28. and ſo alſo Act. 4.6. they both met in counſel together. For theſe reaſons, I ſay, that ordinary way of reconciling this difficulty, by that of the Sagan, may not fitly be allow'd, being not appliable to either of theſe, who are both named here as perſons of authority among the Jewes, next to the Emperour and his Procurator, and appeare at the apprehending of Chriſt to be Magiſtrates and perſons of civil juriſdiction, which the Naſi and high prieſt were, but the Sagan, as ſuch, cannot be pretended to have been. Another account, I acknowledge, is given of this matter, by Euſebius l. 1. c. 9. to wit, that Chriſt is here ſaid to have begun and accompliſh'd his whole time of preaching under Annas and Caiaphas high prieſts, which, ſaith he, notes the compaſſe of 4 years, and that he began his preaching, when Annas, and ended it, when Caiaphas was high prieſt. For about this time, ſaith he, the Roman Præfects having changed the Moſaicall courſe, they that were by them made high prieſts continued not above a yeare in it. And he brings a ſucceſſion out of Joſephus thus, ValeriusGratus putting Annas out of the high prieſthood, made Iſmael in his ſtead, then after a while removing him, he put Eleazar Annas's ſon in his, and at the years end he gives it to Simon, and at the end of that year Joſeph called Caiaphas alſo ſucceeded him, and all theſe within leſſe then 4 yeares, and ſo, ſaith he, Caiaphas was high prieſt at the time of our Saviours paſſion. This might ſound at firſt hearing, as a probable conjecture, but, if examined, will ceaſe to be ſuch. For, 1. the thing in hand Lu. 3.1. is not to ſet down the ſpace of the continuance of Chriſts preaching, but the yeare of the beginning of Johns preaching punctually naming that 15th year of Tiberius, And 2ly, that which Joſephus ſaith, Ant. l. 18. c. 3. is this, That at the beginning (not 15th year) of the reign of Tiberius, Valerius Gratus was ſent Præſident into Judæa, that he continued ſo eleven years, that in that time, probably in the three firſt years of his Government, he changed the high prieſt yearly, that Caiaphas was the laſt of them, who continued the reſt of Gratus's time, and all Pilates ten years, and was not removed till the time of Vitellius, who ſucceeded Pilate, and put Jonathan Annas's ſon in his ſtead, l. 18. c. 9. By which 'tis clear that Euſebius was miſtaken in applying that, which Gratus did in the beginning of Tiberius's reigne, to the four years of Chriſts preaching and crucifixion, which was certainly under Pilate, all whoſe time Caiaphas was continued in the high prieſthood. And ſo that cannot be the way of ſalving this difficulty. There is only a third way, that I have met with, that Annas having been high prieſt long ſince, was now a kind of Conſulary man, and as ſuch, being alſo father-in-law to Caiaphas the high prieſt of the year, is ſtyled ἀρχιερεὺς high prieſt alſo. But to this the anſwer is clear, that there were many other ſuch Pontifical men alive, that is, ſuch as had been Pontifices in their times, and therefore there was nothing in that peculiar to Annas, or which could put him in the Pontifical Faſti, as the ἀρχιερεὺς of that year, without ſome other addition of Dignity, peculiar to him from thoſe others, ſuch as I ſuppoſe that of the Naſi, and cannot imagine that of being father-in-law to Caiaphas, or any ſuch extrinſecall relation to be.

V. 14. Accuſe any falſely,] Συκοφαντῆσῃ though it have a Proverbial ſignification to accuſe, and by that means to flatter thoſe, to whom that accuſation is whiſperingly conveyed, and had its originall from a paſſage about figs, as Phavorinus, and the Grammarians ordinarily expreſs it, yet it is uſed in a greater latitude for wronging, taking away any thing by force from any, according to the latitude of the ſignification of the Hebrew עשק which ſignifies both to calumniate, and to uſe violence, and accordingly is rendred in the Old Teſtament, ſometimes by ἀδικέω, καταδυναστεύω, (in the notion of oppreſſing by force) ἐκτέζω, θλίβω, ἁρπάζω, ſometimes by συκοφαντέω, but that in many places, when the ſenſe would rather have required ἀδικέω, or the like, ſo in Job. 35. 9. Pſal. 119. 21. and other places. From this Old Teſtament-uſe of the word muſt the ſenſe of it be fetch'd in the New. So when Zaccheus c. 19. 8. ſaith of himſelf εἴ τινός τι ἐσυκοφάντησα (which is the only other place where the word is uſed) it belongs clearly to wrong dealing, violence, injuſtice, taking by force from others (which was ordinary for the Publicans to doe,

Πάντες τελῶναι, πάντες ἐσμὲν ἅρπαγες,

All Publicans are rapacious, ſaith Zeno the Comœdian, and ſuch was Zaccheus here) and therefore his penitent heart in that caſe vowes the ſatisfaction, which the Law requires for theft, reſtitution fourfold. The word belongs to any kind of injuſtice or extortion, and ſo here to that which is ordinary among ſouldiers, rapine, plundring; συκοφάντης, ἐμπεδάζοντες, ſaith Heſychius, that is, βιάζοντες, forcible invaders, and that is here farther expreſs'd by that which followes, and be content with your ὀψωνίοις, that is, thoſe ſtipends, that are publickly appointed the ſouldiers, that are kept together in bands for publick uſe, as in Vopiſcus, Annonâ ſuâ contentus ſit, non de lacrymis provincialium vivat, that is, Let them not oppreſſe thoſe countrey men, where they are quartered, but reſt ſatisfied with the allowance of victualls, &c. that is allowed them. d. Συκοφαντῆσῃ

V. 23. Sonne of Heli] The ſetling of the Genealogie of Chriſt, and reconciling the differences between S. Luke and S. Matthew, is a matter of ſome uncertainty, ariſing from the cuſtomes of the Jewes in reckoning their Genealogies, among whom it is ordinary to find different pedegrees, which ſeem to contradict one another, when they doe not. And the matter requiring ſome length I rather referre the Reader to the labours of the learned H. Grotius on this place, and in the particular of Cainan v. 36. to the learned Sam. Bochartus in his Phaleg, l. 11. c. 13. e.

CHAP. IV.

See Mat. 4. 1.

1. AND Jeſus being full of the holy Ghoſt returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the wilderneſſe,

2. Being fourty daies tempted of the devil, and in thoſe daies he did eat nothing, and when they were ended, he afterward hungred.

3. And the devil ſaid unto him, If thou be the ſon of God, command this ſtone that it be made bread.

See Mat. 4. 4.

4. And Jeſus anſwered him, ſaying, It is written, that man ſhall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God.

See Mat. 4. 8.

5. And the devil taking him up into an high mountain, ſhewed unto him all the kingdomes of the world in a moment of time.

6. And the devil ſaid unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them, for that is delivered unto me, and to whomſoever I will, I give it.

7. If thou therefore wilt worſhip me, all ſhall be thine.

8. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: For it is written, thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve.

See Mat. 4. note b.

9. And he brought him to Jeruſalem, and ſet him on a * pinacle of the Temple, and ſaid unto him, If thou be the ſon of God, caſt thy ſelf down hence, *battlement πτερυγιον.

10. For it is written, He ſhall give his Angels charge over thee to keep thee,

11. And in their hands they ſhall bear thee up, leſt at any time thou daſh thy foot againſt a ſtone.

See Mat. 4. 7.

12. And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid unto him, it is ſaid, thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

13. left him for a time, meaning to wait an opportunity to aſſault him again. See Mat. 4. 11.

13. And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he [departed from him * for a ſeaſon.]

14. being by the powerfull incitation of the Spirit of God now ſtirr'd up to ſet upon this prophetick office, returned

14. And Jeſus [returned in the power of the Spirit] into Galilee, and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about,

15. exceedingly admired.

15. And he taught in their ſynagogues being [glorified] of all.

16. And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up, and, as his cuſtome was, he went into the ſynagogue on the ſabbath day, [and ſtood up for to read.]

16. And he made ſhew to undertake to expound ſome part of ſacred writ, as their Doctors are wont to doe.

17. And the officer of the ſynagogue (ſee v. 20.) brought him a.

17. And there was delivered to him] the book of the prophet Iſaias, and when he had [a] opened the book, he found the place where it was written,

18. thoſe that long impriſonment and ſhakels have bruiſed,

18. The ſpirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe he hath anointed me to preach the Goſpel to the poor, he hath ſent me to heale the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of ſight to the blind, to ſet at liberty [them that are bruiſed,]

19. To proclaim to all a year of Jubilee, wherein ſervants are ſet free &c.

19. To preach the acceptable year of the Lord.]

See note on Mar. 5. n.

20. And he cloſed the book, and gave it again to the [* miniſter] and ſat dowu, and the eyes of all them that were in the ſynagogue were faſtned on him.

* officer. ὑπηρέτου

21. And he began to ſay unto them, This day is this ſcripture fulfilled in your ears.

22. And all that heard him did with acclamations expreſſe that they were amazed at the power and wiſdome with which he ſpake, (ſee Pſal. 45. 2.) wondring whence he had ſuch excellencies, Mat. 13. 54. but becauſe they knew he was Joſephs reputed ſon, one brought up in an ordinary condition, they did not believe on him.

22. And all bare him witneſſe, and wondred at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they ſaid, Is not this Joſeph's ſon?]

23. Whereupon he ſpake unto them, ſaying, that which among the Jews is by way of gibe vulgarly uſed to a Phyſitian, who is himſelf fallen into any diſeaſe, or infirmity, Phyſician &c. (which ſignifies a man that pretends to doe cures abroad, but is able to do none at home) is become appliable to me, who being believed on by ſtrangers, and by that means having opportunities to doe miracles or healing among them, am deſpiſed and rejected among my own countrey-men, very few of whom having that belief of my power, as to come to me for cure, Mar. 6. 5. I cannot conſequently doe many ſuch miracles here, Mat. 13. 58. which in Capernaum and other places I have done.

23. And he ſaid unto them, Ye will ſurely ſay unto me this proverb, Phyſitian heale thy ſelf: Whatſoever we have heard done in Capernaum, doe alſo here in thy countrey.]

24. And ſo generally it hath been, when prophets have been ſent to work miracles of mercy, very few among their countrey-men, to whom they were familiarly known, have been found fit to receive them.

24. And he ſaid, verily I ſay unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own countrey.]

25, 26. As in Elias's time of the many men and women, particularly of widows that were in that time of famine, through all Iſrael, there was none qualified to receive that miracle from Elias, but one onely, the widow of Sarepta, or Zarephath a city of Zidon, 1 Kin. 17. 9.

25. But I tell you of a truth, many widowes were in Iſrael in the daies of Elias, when the heaven was ſhut up three years and ſix months, when great famine was throughout all the land.

26. But unto none of them was Elias ſent, ſave unto Sarepta a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow.]

27. And though there were many leprous perſons among the Iſraelites in Eliſha's time, yet they being his countrey-men, the obſervation was there as here, that no one of them had faith to ſeek and qualifie himſelf for a cure of his leproſie, Only Naaman which was not that countrey-man, but a Syrian, was by Eliſha converted to the true religion, and heal'd of his leproſie.

27. And many lepers were in Iſrael, in the time of Eliſeus the prophet, and none of them was cleanſed, ſaving Naaman the Syrian.]

28. And

28. And all they in the ſynagogue when they heard theſe things, were filled with wrath,

29. And roſe up, and thruſt him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill (whereon their city was built) that they might caſt him down headlong.

30. But he [paſſing through the midſt of them] went his way.

30. without being hurt by any of them.

31. And came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the ſabbath daies.

32. And they were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine, for [his word was with power.]

32. he ſpake with authority, Mat. 7. 29. and added miracles alſo to confirm the truth of what he ſaid.

33. And in the ſynagogue there was a man, which [had a ſpirit of an unclean devil,] and cried out with a loud voice,

33. was poſſeſſed by the devil, and tormented with a ſore diſeaſe conſequent to it,

34. Saying, let us alone, what have we to doe with thee, thou Jeſus of Nazareth? art thou come to deſtroy us? I know thee who thou art, the holy One of God.

35. And Jeſus rebuked him, ſaying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had [thrown him in the midſt, he came out of him, and hurt him not.]

35. caſt him into a fit of apoplexy, before or in the preſence of them all, the devil and the diſeaſe departed from him, and he was very well immediately.

36. And they were all amazed, and ſpake among themſelves, ſaying, [What a word is this?] For with authority and power he commandeth the unclean ſpirits, and they come out.

36. This is very wonderfull beyond all that was ever ſeen before,

37. And the fame of him went out into every place of the countrey round about.

38. And he [aroſe] out of the ſynagogue, and entred into Simons houſe, and Simons wives mother was taken with a great feaver, and they beſought him for her.

38. went

39. And he ſtood over her, and [rebuked the feaver, and it left her,] and immediately ſhe aroſe, and miniſtred to them.

39. commanded the feaver to depart from her, and ſo it did.

40. Now when the ſun was ſetting, all they that had any ſick of divers diſeaſes brought them unto him, and he [laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them.]

40. by prayer and impoſition of hands, without the uſe of any thing elſe, cured them.

41. And devils alſo came out of many, crying out, and ſaying, thou art the Chriſt the ſon of God. And he rebuked them, ſuffered them not to ſpeak: for they knew that he was Chriſt.

42. And when it was day he departed, and went into a deſert place, and the people ſought him, and came unto him, and [ſtayed him] that he ſhould not depart from them.

42. uſed all means to prevail with him.

43. And he ſaid, [I muſt preach the kingdome of God to other cities alſo: for therefore am I ſent.]

43. My buſineſſe is to preach the Goſpel, (and the cures which I work are but ſubſervient to that,) and this I muſt preach to the reſt of the villages and townes, and not continue ſtill in one place.

44. And he preached in the ſynagogues of Galilee.

a. Ἀνεπτύξατο

V. 17. Opened the booke] The word ἀναπτύσσω referres to the manner of writing among the Jewes, which was not in Parchments or papers ſowed together, as we now uſe, but in one continued page or long roll, and that folded up to ſave it from duſt or other harm. So the Hebrew מגלת ספר ſignifies no more, then charta volubilis, a paper, or parchment folded up, according to that of Iſa. 3. 4. וגללו, and the heavens ſhall be folded up כספר, as a book, referring to the cuſtome of folding books and writings; and ſo Apoc. 6. 14. the heavens paſſed away, ὡς βιβλίον ἑλισσόμενον, as a folded book, that is, מגלת סגר which is by the Greek ſometimes called βιβλίον, and by us rightly rendred a bill, Deut. 24. 1. and ſometimes κεφαλὶς, from the round form, when 'tis folded up, as in Architecture ſome round parts are called κεφαλίδες Exod. 26. 32. 27. 17. 36. 34. 38. 28. 27. and ſo ſaith Suidas, κεφαλὶς βιβλίου, ὅ ἐστι τινὲς εἰλημά φασιν, the volume, or round form of a book, which ſome call the folding; Thus it is uſed Heb. 10. 7. out of the Pſalmiſt, for a roll, or inſtrument, or indenture, wherein Chriſt undertakes in writing, under his hand as it were, to doe Gods will, or that which God requires of him, by way of office. And * Theophylact who explains it by εἰλητάριον a roll. After the manner of theſe rolls or bills, were their books and other writings rolled up, when they would ſhut them, ספרי תורה עיגנלין the books of the law folded up, ſaith R. Eliezer, in Gemar. Sanhed. c 7. and opened by way of ἀνάπτυξις, unfolding, or unrolling, and then again πλυσόμενα rolled up, as here πτύξας rolling it up, v. 20. which the Hebrewes ordinarily expreſſe by וגלל סגר, and he folded up the book, or roll, that is, ſhut it up, Joma. c. 7. § 1.

* having gone out of them had waſhed their nets

2. And ſaw two boats, one belonging to Andrew and Simon, Mat 4. 18. 'tother to Zebedee, and his ſons, James and John, and the fiſhermen having made an end of fiſhing for that time, had carried out their nets, and cleanſed them, meaning not to let them down or uſe them any more.

3. And

3. And he went into one of the ſhips, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thruſt out a little from the land, and he ſat down, and taught the people out of the ſhip.

4. Now when he had left ſpeaking, he ſaid unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets * for a draught.

* to catch, εἰς ἄγραν,

5. And Simon anſwering, ſaid unto him, Maſter we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing, nevertheleſſe at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And when they had this done, they encloſed a great multitude of fiſhes, and their net brake.

7. And they beckned unto their partners which were in the other ſhip, that they ſhould come and help them. And they came and filled both the ſhips, ſo that [they began to ſink.]

7. both the boats with the weight of the fiſh ſunk into the water diſcernibly, and were in danger to be loſt.

8. When Simon Peter ſaw it, he fell down at Jeſus knees, ſaying, [Depart from me, for I am a ſinfull man, O Lord.]

8. My ſinnes make me uncapable of receiving benefit from thy miracles, this great miracle of the fiſh being ready to drown the boat, and to become deſtructive to me, I beſeech thee go out of the ſhip.

9. For he was aſtoniſhed,] and all that were with him, at the draught of fiſhes, which they had taken.

9. This he ſpake, not out of a deſire to be rid of his company, but out of a great ſenſe of his own unworthineſſe, and a great dread and amazement wrought in him by the miracle.

10. And ſo was alſo James and John the ſons of Zebedee. which were partners with Simon, And Jeſus ſaid unto Simon, Fear not, [from henceforth thou ſhalt catch men.]

10. thou ſhalt be a fiſherman no longer, thy trade ſhall be changed into a more honourable, that of catching, ſo as to keep alive, and not (as in hunting and fiſhing &c. it is ordinary) to kill what is caught by thee; thou ſhalt catch men, and by ſo doing, preſerve them to all eternity.

11. And when they had brought their ſhips to land, [they] forſook all and followed him.

11. all foure of them.

12. And it came to paſſe, when he was in a certain city, behold a man full of leproſie, who ſeeing Jeſus, fell on his face, and beſought him, ſaying, Lord, if thou wilt thou canſt [make me clean.]

12. recover me from my foul diſeaſe.

13. And he put forth his hand and touched him, ſaying, I will, be thou clean.] And immediately the leproſie departed from him.

13. And he did but touch him, and ſpeak the word

14. And he charged him to tell no man, [but go and ſhew thy ſelf to the prieſt, and offer for thy cleanſing, according as Moſes commanded, for a teſtimony unto them.]

14. But, ſaid he, go, &c. See note on Mat. 8. d.

15. But ſo much the more went there a fame abroad of him, and great multitudes came together to hear and to be healed by him of their infirmities.

16. And he withdrew himſelf into the wilderneſſe,] and prayed.

16. did oft go aſide into places of ſolitude,

17. And it came to paſſe [on a certain day, * as he was teaching, that there were Phariſees and doctors of the law ſitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judæa, and Jeruſalem, and the power of the Lord was preſent to heal them.]

18. And behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with the palſie, and they ſought means to bring him in, and lay him before him.

19. And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in becauſe of the multitude, they went up on the houſe top, and let him down through the tiling with his couch into the midſt before Jeſus.

20. And when he ſaw their faith, he ſaid unto him, Man, thy ſins are forgiven thee.

20. Mat. 9. 2.

21. And the Scribes and the Phariſees began to reaſon, ſaying, [Who is this which ſpeaketh blaſphemies? Who can forgive ſinnes but God alone?]

21. This is ſure a blaſphemer, making a God of himſelf, for none but ſuch can forgive ſinnes.

22. But when Jeſus perceived their thoughts, he anſwered and ſaid unto them, [What reaſon ye in your hearts?]

22. What ground have you for this diſpute beginning in your hearts (and expreſs'd by your tongues, v. 21.)

23. Whether is eaſier to ſay, Thy ſins be forgiven thee, or to ſay, Riſe up and walk?

24. But that ye may know that the ſon of man hath power upon earth to forgive ſins, he ſaid unto the ſick of the palſie, I ſay unto thee, Ariſe, and take up thy couch and go into thine houſe.]

23, 24. Is it blaſphemy for him that is endued with divine power, and can cure all diſeaſes with his word, to forgive ſins alſo? The one ye ſhall ſee me able to do, And why may I not then freely, and without injury to any, do the other alſo? (ſee Mat. 9. 6.) whereupon he ſaid to the Paralytick, I command thy health to return to thee, and thee to take up that bed, on which now through weakneſſe thou art laid, and to carry it home unto thy houſe.

25. And immediately he aroſe up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own houſe, glorifying God.

26. And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, ſaying, We have ſeen ſtrange things to day.

31. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid unto them, They that are whole need not a Phyſician, but they that are ſick. Mat. 9. 12.

32. I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance.

33. And they ſaid unto him, [Why doe the diſciples of John faſt often, and make prayers and likewiſe the diſciples of the Phariſees, but thine eat and drink?] 33. when the diſciples of John (Mat. 9. 14.) and the Phariſees obſerve frequent daies of faſting, at leaſt two every week, and ſet apart thoſe daies to prayer alſo more ſolemnly then the reſt, What is the reaſon that thy diſciples doe not ſo at all, keep no ſolemn weekly daies of faſting?

34. And he ſaid unto them, [Can ye make the children of the bride-chamber faſt,] while the bridegroom is with them? 34. Can it be expected or thought reaſonable for the gueſts of a mariage-feaſt to faſt,

35. But [the daies will come when the bridegroom ſhall be taken away from them, and then ſhall they faſt in thoſe daies.] 35. there are ſad daies to come upon my diſciples, and when they come, and I, on whom they depend, am removed from them, then will it be ſeaſonable for them to practiſe that duty of faſting.

36. And he ſpake alſo a parable unto them, [No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old, if otherwiſe] then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old. 36. No prudent man putteth a patch of new cloth into an old garment (ſee Mat. 9. 16.) or if he doe not obſerve that rule of prudence,

37. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles, elſe the new wine will burſt the bottles and be ſpilled, and the bottles will periſh.

38. But new wine muſt be put into new bottles, and both are preſerved.

39. No man alſo having drunk old wine, ſtreightway deſireth new, for he ſaith, The old is better. 39. It is not beſt immediately to bring men to an auſtere courſe of life, but by degrees, leaſt they fall off upon the ungratefulneſſe of it: for they that have taſted old wine which is the ſmoother, will not willingly leave that for new, which is more hatſh (ſee Ecclus. 9. 10.) the old being ſweeter, more gratefull and delightfull and agreeable to the ſtomach; And thus it is fit to condeſcend to the weakneſſes of men, and not preſently to require of my diſciples the auſterities of faſtings &c. eſpecially while I am with them, which is rather a time of feſtivity to them, But there will ſoon be a ſeaſon for faſting alſo. ver. 35. &c.

Annotations on Chap. V.

1. V. 2. Gone out of them] Some differences ſeem to be between the ſtory of Chriſts coming to theſe two boats &c. here ſet down, from what it had been in S. Matthew. There Peter and Andrew were caſting nets into the ſea, or lake, Mat. 4. 18. and James and John were in the ſhip mending thier nets, v. 21. but here 'tis ἀποβάντες ἀπ' αὐτῶν, having departed from their boats, ἀπέπλυναν τὰ δίκτυα, they waſhed, or, had waſhed, their nets. So again 'tis ſaid that Chriſt called Andrew and Peter, and they followed him, Mat. 4. 20. καὶ προβὰς ἐκεῖθεν and departing thence he ſaw the other two, and called them v. 22. whereas here when Peter is called, James and John are with him v. 10. and unleſſe they were called at the ſame time with Peter, there would be found no other mention of their call, or their following of him. In anſwer to theſe, it muſt firſt be obſerved in general, that Matthew and Mark making a brief ſummary relation, and leaving out a main particular of this ſtory, which Luke takes in, that of the miracle of the fiſhes, and ſetting down no more but his ſeeing and coming to their boats, and his calling them, and their following him, doe upon occaſion of his coming firſt to one boat, then to the other, ſet down all that belongs to the one, before they proceed to the other, which is very ordinary in all ſtories, when yet many of the paſſages are intermix'd. This being ſaid, it muſt next (for the reconciling of the firſt ſeeming difference) be obſerved, that what is here ſaid, ἀπέπλυναν in the Aoriſt, muſt be underſtood of the time paſt indefinitely, and be beſt rendred, they had waſhed their nets, and ſo for the ἀποβάντες too, they had gone out and waſh'd (that is, they had given over fiſhing at that time) and having done ſo, they were returned to their boats again before this time, when 'tis ſaid of Chriſt, that he ſaw their ſhips ſtanding by the lake, that is, at the point ſpecified here ver. 1. when ſtanding by the lake the people preſs'd upon, or flocked unto, him to hear the word. And as this is intimated by S. Luke ver. 3. (when 'tis ſaid that Chriſt entered into one of the ſhips, and deſired Simon, the owner of it, to thruſt out a little, which notes that he was come back to the boat again) and as this is all that is affirmed by S. Luke in that matter, ſo it agrees very well with that which is ſaid by S. Matthew; For before this it is, at Chriſts firſt comming to the lake, that S. Matthew deſcribes them in another poſture, Jeſus walking by the ſea of Galilee ſaw two brothers, Simon and Andrew, βάλλοντας ἀμφίβληστρον εἰς τὴν θάλασσαν &c. caſting a net into the ſea; Which as it may poſſibly ſignifie fiſhing, ſo it may otherwiſe be interpreted, not to denote their being actually a fiſhing at that time (for that is expreſſed Lu. 5. 4. by a very diſtant phraſe, χαλάσατε τὰ δίκτυα εἰς τὰ ἄγρας letting down their nets to catch, and that by lanching out εἰς τὸ βάθος into the deep or midſt of the lake) but more probably their waſhing their nets in the ſea, as they were ſitting on the ſhore, (and then that will be directly all one with the ἀποπλύνειν waſhing or ſcouring of them, which, as now paſt, is here mentioned by S. Luke) And departing thence, ſaith S. Matthew, he ſaw other two brothers, the ſons of Zebedee in the ſhip mending their nets: where, as their mending their nets was ſubſequent to the waſhing of them (and ſuppoſes it paſt, as ἀπέπλυναν they had waſhed here doth) ſo it agrees with S. Lukes affirmation, ver. 7. where they are ſuppoſed to be ἐν πλοίῳ in the boat. The deſigne of S. Luke in ſetting down this circumſtance of their having gone out of their boats, and waſh'd their nets was doubtleſſe to intimate, what is after affirmed, ver. 5. that at the time of Chriſts coming thither, they had deſpaired of catching any fiſh, and ſo had given over for that time, and had ſet to waſhing, and after that they in one boat, ſaith S. Matthew, to mending their nets; which as it is a farther evidence of their reſolution to fiſh no more at that time, ſo it is an enhancement of the miracle following, of the great draught of fiſh, which S. Luke ſets down at large, but Matthew and Mark did not meddle with. Which order being thus ſuppoſed in the firſt part, the ſecond will follow very agreeably, and all be capable of an exact Harmony, by compounding of Matthew and Luke together thus; Jeſus walking by the ſea of Galilee, at his firſt coming thither, ſaw two brothers, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, caſting their net into the ſea, Mat. 4. 18. that is, waſhing of it, Lu. 5. 2. When he had ſtaid a while with them, he went on to another boat, and there he found other two brethren, James the ſon of Zebedee, and John his brother in a boat with Zebedee their father, who having newly waſhed, were now mending their nets v. 21. both theſe precedent to, and ſo reconcileable with the ſubſequent paſſages mentioned Lu. 5. 2. He ſaw two ſhips ſtanding, or abiding, παρὰ τὴν λίμνην by the lake, that is, at the ſhore, and the fiſhermen having gone out of them had waſhed their nets. And then (upon the peoples preſſing about him to heare, Lu. 5. 1.) followes that paſſage (not at all related by S. Mat. or S. Mark) that he went into one of the ſhips, or boats, that of Peter, v. 3. and having, contrary to Peters intention, perſwaded him to launch out and let downe the net εἰς ἄγραν, to trie what he could catch, he there wrought that miracle, which had like to have drowned the boat, and occaſioned the calling in of James and John to their relief, and gave them all an aſtoniſhing evidence of his power. Hereupon to remove their feares, Chriſt ſaith to Simon here in the end of v. 10. Feare not, henceforth thou ſhalt catch men. At which time, I ſuppoſe, he called not him only, but all the other three, that had their parts in this miracle; This Matthew ſets down firſt of Peter and Andrew v. 19. to whom he ſaith, Follow me, and I will make you fiſhers of men, and immediately they followed him, v. 20. and then of the other two, v. 22. who alſo left their nets and boat and father, and followed him; which act of their ready following S. Luke ſets down agreeably, though more diſtinctly v. 11. when they had brought their boats to land, they left all, and followed him; i. e. when the two paire of fiſhermen, with their two boats, ſo laden that they were affraid they would ſink, had brought them ſafe to ſhore, and had this farther evidence of Chriſts power in delivering them from that danger, being all called, they all obeyed his call, left their trade and goods, and attended him as diſciples ever after. And wheras of his calling the ſons of Zebedee, S. Mark interpoſes, εὐθέως he ſaw them mending their nets, and ſtraightway he called them, Mar. 1. 19, 20. which ſeems to place no ſpace or interval betwixt his coming to their boat and his calling them, That may eaſily be anſwer'd by obſerving, Firſt, that the word εὐθέως preſently is not alwayes taken in that nice ſenſe, to ſignifie immediately, but often is taken in a latitude, and includes a greater interval, then here is ſuppoſed to have been; and Secondly, that it is not unlikely, that here ſhould be an ὑπερβαλον in the Period, which will thus be cleared in conſtruction, he ſtraight way called them, and they left their father, that is, aſſoon as he called them, they immediately left; for ſo 'tis read in S. Matthew, He call'd them, And they immediately left the boat &c.

V. 30. Their Scribes] Αὐτῶν their, or of them, cannot relate to thoſe which went next before, the Publicans, and other gueſts at the feaſt; For if γραμματεῖς αὐτῶν their Scribes where ſome of them, they muſt murmure againſt themſelves. Another way there is to render theſe words, by joyning αὐτῶν to ἐγόγγυζον murmured, thus, the Scribes murmured at them, that is, at Chriſt and thoſe that were with him. In this way of interpreting it there will be two difficulties, Firſt, that γογγύζειν murmuring ſhould be joyned with a Genitive caſe; but that may be ſalved, by ſaying that κατὰ is underſtood, as when Mat. 10. 1. δύναμις πνευμάτων power of ſpirits, is power againſt, or over, ſpirits, and Lu. 6. 7. κατηγορίαν αὐτοῦ an accuſation of, that is againſt, him. The Second is, that πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς ordinarily rendred againſt his diſciples, is immediately joyned with ἐγόγγυζον, murmured, which if it ſtand ſo, αὐτῶν againſt them, cannot be joyned with it alſo. The only way to ſalve that is by altering the ordinary punctation, and reading πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς to his diſciples, joyning it to λέγοντες ſaying thus, ἐγόγγυζον οἱ γραμματεῖς αὐτῶν καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι πρὸς τοὺς μαθητὰς λέγοντες, The Scribes and Phariſees murmured at them, ſaying to his diſciples. But there doth not appeare any neceſſity of this, there being yet a third interpretation, which is expreſs'd with no inconvenience, viz. by rendring γραμματεῖς αὐτῶν the Scribes of them, that is, the Lawyers &c. of, or among the Jewes, inhabitants of that place, which were then preſent, and ſo the Phariſees alſo, as many of that ſect as were there preſent at that time.

CHAP. VI.

3. 1. In the morning of the day of Pentecoſt falling on a ſabbath day, by which conjunction that day became an high ſabbath, Chriſt paſſed through the corn-fields which were now full ripe (this feaſt of Pentecoſt being called the feaſt of harveſt, Exod. 23. 16.) and his diſciples (ſee Mat. 12. a.) pluckt the eares of corn and eat of it.

1. AND it came to paſſe on the * a ſecond ſabbath after the firſt, that he went through the corn fields, and his diſciples plucked the eares of corn and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.]

* ſecond prime ſabbath.

2. And the Phariſees queſtion'd them, ſaying, Why doe you eat before the publick ſervice, which is not to be done on ſabbath daies, eſpecially on ſuch daies as this, the feaſt of Pentecoſt? See note on Mat. 12. a.

2. And certain of the Phariſees ſaid unto them, Why doe ye that which is not lawfull to doe on the ſabbath daies?]

3, 4. And Jeſus anſwered for the diſciples, by putting them in mind, what David did in the like caſe, that of hunger, tranſgreſſing the law of holy things, which is in like manner appliable to ſuch tranſgreſſions as theſe on the ſabbath daies.

3. and Jeſus anſwering, ſaid unto them, Have ye not read ſo much as this, what David did when himſelf was an hungred, and they which were with him?

4. How he went into the houſe of God, and did take and eat the ſhew-bread, and gave alſo to them that were with him, which is not lawfull to eat but for the prieſts alone.]

See Mat. 12. a.

5. And he ſaid unto them, that, The ſon of man is Lord alſo of the ſabbath.

6. And it came to to paſſe alſo on another ſabbath, that he entred into the ſynagogue, and taught, and there was a man whoſe right hand was withered.

7. obſerved him inſidiouſly, and at laſt asked him whether the working a cure on the ſabbath day were lawfull or no? Mat. 12. 10.

8. their deſignes of treachery (ſee note on Mat. 15. e.) and yet made no ſcruple to run the hazard, rather then omit the working of that mercy,

8. But he knew their [*thoughts, and ſaid] to the man which had the withered hand, Riſe up and ſtand forth in the midſt: And he aroſe, and ſtood forth.

9. And therefore ſaid, He that doth not an act of charity when there is need of it, and he can doe it, doth commit ſinne, and he that then doth not cure deſtroies; I ſhall therefore ask you this queſtion, Which of theſe is the fitteſt employment for a ſabbath day to cure, or kill?

9. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, I will ask you one thing, Is it lawfull on the ſabbath daies to doe good, or to doe evil; to ſave life, or to deſtroy it?

10. And

10. And looking round about upon them all, he ſaid unto the man, Stretch forth thy hand; and he did ſo, and his hand was reſtored whole as the other.

11. And they were filled with [madneſſe, and communed one with another] what they might doe to Jeſus.

30. Annotations on Chap. VI.

a. δευτεροπρωτον σάββατον

V. 1. Second Sabbath after the firſt] This phraſe δευτεροπρωτον σάββατον hath been matter of trouble to Interpreters. The moſt probable conjecture concerning it is that of the learned H. Grotius, which I ſhall thus explain and confirme. When any of the ſolemn yeatly feaſts fell on the Sabbath day, that Sabbath had a ſpeciall extraordinary reſpect attributed to it and was called ſometimes μέγα σάββατον a great Sabbath, and μεγάλη ἡμέρα τῶν σαββάτων a great day of Sabbath, Jo. 19. 31. Now three of theſe feaſts there were, the Paſſover, Pentecoſt, and the feaſt of Tabernacles. Of theſe feaſts ſome dayes there were dayes of holy aſſemblies, קרא מקרא wherein the aſſemblies were called together, as the firſt day of unleavened bread, Lev. 23. 7. and the ſeventh day of it, v. 8. the day of Pentecoſt, Lev. 23. 21. the firſt of the feaſt of Tabernacles, Lev. 23. 35. and the eighth, v. 36. And theſe being dayes of reſt (as 'tis appointed in every of thoſe places) were a kind of Sabbaths, and diſtinguiſh'd from the other dayes of the feaſt, and therefore called ἡμέρα μεγάλη the great day, Iſ. 1. 13. And ἡμέρα μεγάλη τῆς ἑορτῆς the great day of the feaſt, Jo 7. 37. And accordingly Tertullian cont. Marcion. l. 5. ſpeaking of the obſervation of dayes, mentions jejunia & dies magnos, Faſts and great dayes. But when any of theſe great dayes fell on the Sabbath too then that was not only a great day, but a great Sabbath. Now this great Sabbath was called alſo πρῶτον σάββατον, a prime, or firſt Sabbath, (as πρῶτον and μέγα are all one) and conſequently three of theſe prime or great, or firſt Sabbaths there were, 1. When the Paſſover, that is either of the great dayes of that feaſt, but eſpecially the firſt fell on a Sabbath, and 2ly. when the day of Pentecoſt, and 3ly. when the great day of the feaſt of Tabernacles fell on a Sabbath day, and theſe prime or great Sabbaths were thus diſtinguiſh'd one from another, The firſt of them call'd πρωτοπρωτον σάββατον the firſt prime Sabbath, i. e. when the firſt day of the feaſt of Paſſover fell upon a Sabbath day. The ſecond of them δευτεροπρωτον σάββατον, the ſecond prime Sabbath, that is, the day of Pentecoſt falling on a Sabbath. The third of them τριτοπρωτον σάββατον, the third prime Sabbath, that is, the great day of the feaſt of Tabernacles falling on a Sabbath, of which Joſephus ſaith, that 'tis then μάλιστα θρησκευόμενον σάββατον a Sabbath hath moſt adored, or reverenced. By all this appears, that by this phraſe, ἐν σαββάτῳ δευτεροπρώτῳ is meant on the day of Pentecoſt falling on a Sabbath at that time. That δευτεροπρωτον ſhould be all one, as if it had been δεύτερον πρῶτον, appears to be according to Analogy, by the like uſe of δευτεροδεκάτη uſed frequently by Joſephus (not, as 'tis conceived, for the tithe of tithes payed by the Levites to the Prieſts, but the ſecond tithing which was ſold, and the price carried up to Jeruſalem, and ſpent in feſtivity there, Tob. 1.7.) which in Tobit is called δευτέρᾳ δεκάτῃ, in two words the ſecond tithing.

b. Προσευχὴ

V. 12. Praier.] Προσευχὴ ſignifies an oratory, a place where men are wont to pray, and ſo ſeems to be uſed in ſome places of the Scripture, eſpecially in S. Lukes writings. So Acts 16.13. οὗ ἐνομίζετο προσευχὴ εἶναι, the Syriack read, ubi conſpiciebatur, בית צלותא, where a houſe of prayer was ſeen, a praying place by a river ſide, as here on a mountain, ſuch an one there was in Miſpah, 1. Mac. 3.46. where upon occaſion of the victory gotten by Joſhua in that place. Joſ. 11.3, 8. they were wont to meet to pray, and to deliberate on any great affair, and there was an Altar built by Joſhua, and בית התפלה an houſe of prayer, or בית מקודש לתפלה an houſe conſecrate for prayers, which prayers and conſecration, being both made unto God, it is very agreeable, that thoſe places ſo conſecrated to him, ſhould be called, as here, προσευχαὶ θεοῦ, Oratories, or praying houſes, of God. Of theſe προσευχαὶ we find frequent mention in Joſephus, in his own life, the people convened in a προσευχὴ, as they call it, a houſe of prayer, ample and capacious of great multitudes; and ſpeaking of Tiberias, I found the people convened in a προσευχὴ, and Epiphan. t. 2. l. 3. c. 80. There were ancient places of prayer both among the Jewes, without the city, and among the Samaritans as we find, ſaith he, in the Acts of the Apoſtles. Such a place there is in Sichem, which is now called Neapolis, without the city in a plain region. And ſome ſuch place it may ſeem to be wherein Jeſus continued all night, in this verſe.

c. Ἀπόστολοι.

V. 13. Apoſtles.] The title Ἀπόστολοι Apoſtles, which is here by Chriſt ſaid to be given to the Twelve, is a name of power, and dignity, and authority in the Church, and how it doth ſignifie ſo will deſerve to be explained. That the Government of the Church of God was now ſetled on the ſon of man upon earth, that is, upon Chriſt incarnate, had been foretold, Iſ. 9. 6. the Government ſhall be upon his ſhoulders, and Iſ. 61. 1. the ſpirit of the Lord God is upon me, becauſe the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings, &c. he hath ſent me to bind up, &c. to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, &c. (ſee Lu. 4.18, 21.) In which place as the Anointing, and the Spirit of the Lord being upon him, ſo the ſending is the ſetling the Government upon him. And the ſending is a ſolemn word, noting a Diploma, or Commiſſion, ſealed to him, (as it were, by God in heaven) by the Spirits deſcending on him, Mat. 3. 17. and that ſupplyed the place of the ſolemn unction (the ceremony of advancing to any office, which is therefore paraphraſed by the Chaldee by רבא exaltation) which was now out of faſhion under the ſecond Temple, and was to be ſupplied by Gods teſtimony from Heaven, as to Chriſt it was, and is accordingly ſtyled Gods anointing him with the holy Ghoſt, Acts 10. 38. and ſimply Gods anointing, Acts 4. 27. Hence it is that Chriſt is ſaid to be ſent by his Father, Joh. 20.21. to have power on earth to forgive ſins, Mat. 9. 6. to have all power in heaven and earth delivered to him, Mat. 28. 18. to be the teacher, and Lord of his Church, or Diſciples, Joh. 13. 1. and as the High Prieſt of our profeſſion, ſo Ἀπόστολος, the apoſtle, Heb. 3. 1. in the ſame ſenſe as the Great Paſtor of his ſheep, Heb. 13. 20. and the only (as Paſtor, ſo) Biſhop of our ſoules, 1 Pet. 2. 25. from whence ſaith Origen on Mat. 24. Propriè Epiſcopus Dominus Jeſus eſt, The Lord Jeſus is properly a Biſhop. Now what was thus conferred on Chriſt, was alſo perſonally excerciſed by him, upon earth, whiles he remained here, he preached the Goſpel, inſtituted rites in his Church to continue for ever, called diſciples, gave them commands, uſed their miniſtery, deſigned ſome to certain offices, ſent out ſeventy Lu. 10. 1. as Heralds, before his face, gave them power to cure diſeaſes, v. 9. and ſo committed to them ſome, though but a temporary office, or miſſion, which ceaſed at their return to him, v. 17. On others he reſolved to inſtate a larger and more durable power, to ſend them as his Father had ſent him, to make them his ſucceſſors on earth, but this he did not at this time. He ſent them indeed (the Twelve peculiarly) Mat. 10. 5. and that with no ſmall power; power to caſt out unclean ſpirits, v. 1. and to preach v. 7. and that was the ſumme of this Miſſion, v. 8. Preach, cure, cleanſe, raiſe, caſt out devils, freely ye have received, freely give, diſpenſe the powers liberally to the advantage of others, which are ſo freely beſtowed on you. Proportionably to this, and that other of the ſeveuty, Lu. 10. it is to be remembred that among the Jewes, all ſorts of Meſſengers are called שלוחים Ἀπόστολοι. So Ahijah, 1 Kings 14. 6. is called σκληρὸς Ἀπόστολος, that is, שלוח an harſh Apoſtle, or meſſenger, of ill news, ſo the twelve ſpyes, Num. 13. were ſaid ἀποστέλλεσθαι to be ſent to explore the land, (and were as it were a ſampler of the Twelve that here Chriſt ſends out on the like account) and in the Old Teſtament the word is no otherwiſe uſed; Among the Talmudiſts 'tis uſed of them that were by the Rulers of the Synagogues ſent out to receive the tenths, and dues that belonged to the Synagogues, ſuch as Philo calls ἱεροπομποὶ ἀφ' ἁγνείας, ſent for the monies of the Temple, leg. ad Caium, and by the Emperour * Auguſtus, ὑποδοχῆς receivers, (and in like manner the meſſengers of the Church that carryed their liberality, or letters congratulatory from one to another, are by Ignatius called θεόδρομοι and θεοπρεσβύται, the divine carriers, or Embaſſadors) and ſo in the Theodoſian Codex tit. de Judæis, Apoſtoli are thoſe that were ſent by the Patriarch at a ſet time to require the gold, and ſilver due to them. Of theſe it is obſervable that when they were thus imployed though not on any very high imployments, and but for a ſhort time, they yet were furniſh'd with letters of Proxy, or Attourney, that what they did, might be done in the names and perſons of thoſe, from whom they were ſent, and from thence the Axiom is known among the Jewes, that every mans Apoſtle is as himſelf, to which Chriſt ſeems to referre, Mat. 10. 14. He that receiveth you, receiveth me, &c. So when Saul was ſent by the Jewiſh Sanhedrim to Damaſcus, Acts 9. he had the letters of the High Prieſt with him, v. 2. And hitherto there is nothing diſcernible in this word Apoſtle that hath any denotation of dignity or government: that muſt be fetch'd from Joh. 20. 21. where Chriſt ſends his diſciples as his Father had ſent him, ſends them ſolemnly, and with commiſſion, in that notion of ſending, wherein the Procurator, or Proconſul, is ſent to his Province, or wherein Moſes is ſent to the Iſraelites in Egypt, (ſend by whom thou wilt ſend, ſaith Moſes) or wherein Kings, and Judges, and Saviours are every where in the Old Teſtament ſaid to be ſent, when they are by God advanced to any Government. Thus muſt Chriſt mean of himſelf, that he was ſent by his father (ſee Mat. 10 40. & 15.24 & Joh. 3. 24. & 5.38. & 6. 57. & 17. 3.) & conſequently thus muſt it be underſtood, that they are ſent by Chriſt, and ſo Joh. 17. 11. As thou haſt ſent me into the world, I alſo have ſent them (without referring to the ordinary שלוחים of the Jewes the meſſengers of the Patriarchs) And ſo as in the earthly Kingdom, the ἡγεμόνες Rulers, or Procurators (ſuch was Pilat in Judæa) which are next the Regal authority, are ſaid to be πεμπόμενοι ſent, 1 Pet. 2. 14. ſo the Apoſtles of Chriſt are ſent alſo in Chriſts ſpirituall Kingdome, ſent not before his face, as Miniſters, Diſciples, the Seventy, Lu. 10. 1. and generally meſſengers are ſaid to be ſent, but ſent as his ſucceſſors and heires on earth, endued with that power by commiſſion from him which he here executed. And this is the meaning of the word here, which ſeems not as yet to be beſtowed on them by Chriſt, but being after really inſtated on them, 'tis here, and c. 17. 5. & 22. 14. occaſionally mentioned, and ſo Mat. 10. 2. by way of προλημψις or anticipation (as the name Peter is, Mat. 4. 18.) the title that belonged to them at the writing of this. Thus when we read that the Father gave judgement to the Son, Joh. 5. 22. we read alſo in effect that the Son gives judgment to the Apoſtles, Mat. 19. 28. Lu. 22. 30. 2 Cor. 10. 6. when the Father gives the Son power to forgive ſins upon earth, Mat. 10. 6. the Son gives power to the Apoſtles to remit ſin on earth alſo, Joh. 20. 23. As the Father gave the keyes to the Son, Iſ. 22. 22. Rev. 3. 7. ſo the Son gave the keyes to the Apoſtles, Mat. 16. 19. As the Father gave the Son to ſit on his Throne, ſo the Son gave the Apoſtles to ſit with him on Thrones, Mat. 19. 28. Lu. 22. 30. As the Father gave the Son to be the foundation or corner ſtone of the Church, Mat. 21. 42. ſo the Son gave the Apoſtles to be foundations upon a foundation, Eph. 2. 20. the foundation of Apoſtles, Chriſt being the chief corner ſtone: And ſo as the Father ſent the Son, Joh. 5. 24. & 17. 18. ſo the Son ſent the Apoſtles, Joh. 20. 21: And from the dignity of this office it is, that the very Angel, Rev. 19. 20. (whoſe name hath no more in it then Απόστολ hath, both ſignifying meſſengers, or legates) profeſſes himſelf to be but a fellow-ſervant of John, and his Brethren, that have the teſtimony of Jeſus, that is, of Apoſtles and Apoſtolick men. The teſtification of the reſurrection of Chriſt and the Chriſtian faith, to which the Apoſtles were ſent by Chriſt being, as 'tis there ſaid, the ſpirit of Prophecy, the moſt honourable office that any mortal can be deſigned to by Chriſt, and there put in compariſon with that joyfull news brought them by that Angel, of the Emperors giving up their names unto Chriſt. See more of this word note on Jo. 20. b. Ro. 16. b. & 2 Cor. 5. c.

d. V. 20. Bleſſed are ye] That the Beatitudes here repeated are the ſame which are mentioned Mat. 5. there is little cauſe of doubting, though whether they were but once delivered only in the Sermon in the Mount, or whether again repeated in ſome other Sermon to other auditors, it is uncertain. That there is ſome variety in the words, as alſo in ſome other places ſome light differences between this and the other Goſpels, ſeems to be cauſed by S. Lukes writing his Goſpel by ſhort Notes, which he had received from thoſe which were preſent, being not an eye-witneſs or ear-witneſs himſelf, (ſee c. 1. 3. and Note on the title of S. Matthews Goſpel.) From whence it followes that theſe words in S. Luke are to be interpreted according to the importance of thoſe in S. Matthew who ſets them downe more fully. And accordingly by the poore here, muſt be underſtood the poor in ſpirit there, by the hungry here, thoſe that hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs there, as the words of an Epitome are to be interpreted according to the ſenſe of the entire copy, before it was thus contracted.

c. Ἀφορίζειν. V. 22. Separate] That the word ἀφορίζειν to ſeparate denotes the firſt ſort of Excommunication among the Jewes, there is no doubt, That they call'd נדוי Remotion, or ſeparation to the diſtance of four paces, for thirty dayes, and that (though not totally yet) in that degree, from civil, and domeſtick, and ſacred commerce, there being a gate into the Temple, call'd the Gate of mourners, by which theſe were to enter, to diſcriminate them from other men. And that Hebrew word cannot be more literally rendred in Greek, then by ἀφορισμός. This did lay a reproach on him that was under it, and therefore that which is here added of ὀνειδίσωσι reproach you, may perhaps be but an appendix, or conſequent of that, But then the ἐκβάλλειν τὸ ὄνομα ὑμῶν ὡς πονηρὸν, to caſt out your name as evil ſeems to referre to an higher degree, that of חרם or anathema. For there is an Hebraiſm in that phraſe, The word ὄνομα name ſignifies no more then perſon (ſo many ὀνόματα names Act. 1. 15. is ſo many men) ὄνομα ὑμῶν your perſons, you, and πονηρὸν is ſcandalous, offenſive, abominable, as שנא is by the Septuagint ſometimes rendred ἀισχύνομαι being aſhamed, ſomtimes βδελύσσω to abominate, ſometimes πονηρὸς εἶμι, to be evil or wicked, Gen. 34. 24. Eſdr. 4, 12. and ſo to caſt out your names as evil will ſignifie to caſt out as wicked, ſhamefull, abominable perſons, a denotation of the חרם, which was the total caſting out, and that with reproaches, curſes, and execrations added to it, ſuch as in Moſes are denounced againſt the greater malefactors. See more of this matter Note Joh. 9. b. Ἐκβάλλειν ὄνομα ὡς πονηρὸν.

f. Ἀπαιτεῖν. V. 30. Aſke] What the word ἀπαιτεῖν here ſignifies, will be worth the enquiry, For if it ſignifie to require or demand, or aske agin, the Prohibition will be ſomewhat ſtrange, and not ſo agreeable either to the Context, or to the duty of Liberality here preſcribed, that any thing but neceſſity ſhould incline us to pitch on that interpretation. For if the ἀπὸ τῦ αἴροντός τὰ σὰ, from him that taketh thy goods be ſo interpreted, as to underſtand his forcible, or involuntary depriving thee, it will then be a meanes to offer up the Chriſtian to the violence of every unjuſt perſon, and oblige him never to make uſe of Chriſtian judicatures, or arbitrations (which appear not to be forbidden the Chriſtian 1 Cor. 6. 4, 7.) to gain his own again, nay not ſo much as to challenge, or make claim to it, when he finds it in anothers hands. Which beſides that it is not agreable to any other precept of the Goſpel, is not at all pertinent to the buſineſſe of Liberality, that uſhers in, and of Charity that immediately attends theſe words. Or if the αἴροντα τὰ σὰ, he that taketh thy goods be (as no doubt it ought) interpreted of borrowing, or receiving by way of loane, then the not-demanding, or asking them again, makes that loane all one with a gift, and ſo the ſame that had before been ſaid, only an addition of a fraud in him that borroweth, and payeth not again. The ſurer way then of underſtanding theſe words aright which are a double rule for our Charity, regulating both our gifts and our loans (both ſpeciall charities, and diſtinctly mentioned in the Scripture, Pſ. 112. 5. the good man is mercifull, and lendeth, and Pſ. 37. 26. the righteous is ever mercifull and lendeth, and Eccluſ. 29. 1. he that is mercifull will lend to his neighbour) will be to obſerve the force of the ἀπαιτεῖν among the Greek Tranſlators of the Old Teſtament, particularly in the book of Nehemiah where it frequently occurres for exacting of uſury, and where the Hebrew משא נשאים uſuram exigentes is rendred ſimply by ἀπαιτεῖν to exact, without any Subſtantive added to it, and ſo the Greek noune ἀπαίτησις exacting, ſignifies there the requiring of uſe. So 2 Mat. 4. 27. that which is rendred required it moſt probably ſignifies the receiving uſe, the period being beſt rendred thus, As for the mony. &c. he put it not into any good courſe, but Soſtratus took the uſe of it, for unto him belonged the managing of the monies. According to which notion the Tranſlation here will be very agreeable, and the ſenſe commodious. Ἀπὸ τῦ αἴροντός from him that receiveth (not ἁρπάζοντος taketh by force, but as αἴρειν is all one with λαμβάνειν to take or receive) by way of loane, τὰ σὰ thy goods, μὴ ἀπαίτει require no uſury of him, lend freely to the poor borrower, without taking, or requiring uſe of him, which being here a precept of charity and mercy from the rich to the poor, may not ſo be interpreted as to bind the poor to do the ſame to the rich, or any to any but the poor, as indeed the every one that asketh, to whom we are commanded to give, is not to be extended to the covetous, craving rich, but to the diſtreſſed deſtitute poor man, and obligeth him that is able, not who is not able to give.

g. Ἀπελπίζειν. V. 35. Hoping for nothing again] The ἀπελπίζειν compared with ὑπολαμβάνειν going before ver. 34. may ſeem to ſignifie proportionably to that, hoping for a returne of kindneſſe from him to whom kindneſſe hath been ſhewed, and ſo as ἀπέχειν v. 24. ſignifies no more then ἔχειν ἀπό, to receive. So by Analogie might ἀπελπίζειν be ἐλπίζειν ἀπό, to hope from. But the truth is there is not in the Bible any ſuch notion of the word ἀπελπίζω, but the word conſtantly ſignifies to diſtruſt, or deſpaire; So Eſth. 14. 19. Judith 9. 12. Iſa. 29. 19. ἀπελπισμένοι forlorne perſons, in a deſperate condition. So alſo Eccluſ 22. 22. μὴ ἀπελπίσῃς, feare not, and ch. 27. 21. ἀπέλπιστον, is without hope, and 2 Mac. 9. 18. ἀπελπίσας, deſpairing, and in all the Bible in no other ſenſe but that of diſtruſt, or deſpaire. And this will very well agree with the Context alſo; thus, The heathens give and lend to other men, knowing that they may want themſelves, and ſo deſigning their preſent act of charity with reflection on themſelves, that they to whom they lend or give may doe as much for them at another time, but the Chriſtian is to doe his acts of charity without any ſuch purpoſe or deſigne of receiving any retribution from man, and yet need not diſtruſt, or doubt, or be diſcouraged in his work. For though he loſe that preſent advantage, yet God who is the great rewarder, ἀνταποδότης, the God of recompence, or retributions, (to which the next words referre, your reward ſhall be plentifull, and ſo v. 38. δοθήσεται, it ſhall be given unto you) will not ſee him a loſer by it, he may be as confident (through the bleſſing of God which is promiſed to an Almeſ-giver) that he ſhall be never the worſe for any thing he thus gives or lends, as if he had in his view a preſent retribution from him to whom he hath given or lent. To this ſenſe perfectly agreeable is that Apoſtolicall ſaying of Barnabas in his Epiſtle, p. 251. μὴ διστάσῃς δῶναι, ἀδὲ δίδὺς γογγύσῃς, παυλὶ αἰλοῦλί σε δίδω, doubt not to give, neither murmure when thou giveſt, give to every one that asketh thee, where the διστάζειν before giving, and the γογγύζειν after, doubting and murmuring, make up the full notion of ἀπελπίζειν diſtruſting or deſparing here, and ſeem to be ſet by him, as his way of rendring this ſpeech of Chriſt. In the ſame ſenſe δυσελπισία is uſed in Teles his Commentary of riches and poverty, where ſpeaking of Covetouſneſſe, that it permits not men to uſe or communicate their wealth, he addes, Ἐνίων ἡ ἀνελευθερία καὶ δυσελπισία τὰ ὑπάρχοντα παρεσφράγισαι, ſome mens illiberality and diffidence hath ſealed up their poſſeſſions. * Ap. Stob. p. 523.

h. Ὑπερεκχύνομαι. V. 38. Running over] It being acknowledged that ἐκχύνομαι ſignifies being poured out, 'twill follow that ὑπερεκχύνομαι muſt, by Analogie with other words, ſignifie abundantly poured out. So we may meaſure it by ὑπερνικῶ, and ὑπεραυξάνω, and many more in the New Teſtament, and generally the word ὑπὲρ in Compoſition is an αὐξητικὸν, to encreaſe and augment the ſignification, and ſo muſt be underſtood in this place. To poure out being a note of plenty, and this, of being more then poured out, of very great abundance.

Κατηρτισμένος ἔσται ὡς. V. 40. Perfect] What is the full meaning and Grammaticall conſtruction of καταρτισμένος ἔσται ὡς —— hath been intimated, Note on 2 Cor. 13. c. To it I here adde the conſentient judgment of * Epiphanius. A diſciple, ſaith he, is not above his Maſter, ἵνα ὁ κατηρτισμένος καὶ πάντα ὡς ὁ μαθητὴς, ὁ διδάσκαλος αὐτῷ, τοῦτ' ἔστιν ἕτοιμος εἰς διωγμὸν καὶ κακολογίαν, but let him be made perfect as his own Maſter was (of whom the Apoſtle tells us Heb. 11. 10. that he was to be made perfect by ſufferings) that is, ready for perſecution, and evil ſpeaking. * Haer. 10. v. 30. cont. Ebion. verſus finem.

34. And I on the other ſide obſerve no ſuch abſtinences, eat meats indifferently, and converſe with men indifferently, and ye cenſure me as ſharply, ſaying,

34. The ſon of man is come eating and drinking, and ye ſay,] Behold a gluttonous man, and a wine-bibber, a friend of Publicans and ſinners.

35. See Mat. 11. note h.

35. But wiſdome is juſtified of all her children.]

36. And one of the Phariſees deſired him that he would eat with him. And he went into the Phariſees houſe, and ſat down to meat.

37. an heathen or one that had lived in a ſinfull courſe,

b.

37. And behold, a woman in the city which was [b a ſinner] when ſhe knew that Jeſus ſat at meat in the Phariſees houſe, brought * an alabaſter box of ointment, * A cruiſe, ſee note on Mat. 26. b.

38. And as he lay along, his feet being behind him that lay next to him, ſhe ſtanding behind him, let fall drops of tears upon his feet, effects of ſorrow and love, and ſtooping down wiped his feet (after that new kind of waſhing them) with no other towell, then that of her own haire, then fell down, and kiſſed his feet, and poured the ointment upon them, (a feſtivall ceremony, and an expreſſion in her of great kindneſſe.)

38. And ſtood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to waſh his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the haires of her head, and kiſſed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.]

39. Now when the Phariſee which had bidden him ſaw it, he ſpake within himſelf, ſaying, This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him, for ſhe is a ſinner.

40. And

40. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid unto him, Simon I have ſomewhat to ſay unto thee.] And he ſaith, Maſter, ſay on.

40. And Jeſus knowing the thoughts of his heart, reſolved to take notice of them, and addreſſing his ſpeech either to the Phariſee whoſe name perhaps was Simon (ſee note b) or elſe to Simon Peter, ſaid, I will anſwer that objection of the Phariſee by a parable which will render the reaſon of this womans extraordinary expreſſion of love, and an account why I ſhould be farre from rejecting of her.

41. There was a certain creditour, which had two debters, [the one ought him five hundred pence, the other fifty.]

41. the one of a very great, the other of a much leſſe, (but the tith of the former) ſumme.

* Or, which therefore of them will love him more intenſely? for the Kings MS. reads τίς οὖν αὐτῶν ἐπὶ πλεῖον, &c.

42. And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. * Tell me therefore, which of them will love him moſt?

43. Simon anſwered and ſaid, I ſuppoſe that he to whom he forgave moſt. And he ſaid unto him, Thou haſt rightly judged.

44. And he turned unto the woman, and ſaid unto Simon, Seeſt thou this woman? I entred into thy houſe, [thou gaveſt me no c water for my feet,] but ſhe hath waſhed my feet with teares, and wiped them with the haires of her head.

44. thou beſtowedſt no feſtivall expreſſion of the ordinarieſt ſort upon me, c

45. Thou gaveſt me no kiſſe,] but this woman ſince the time I came in, hath not ceaſed to kiſſe my feet.

45. Thou didſt not entertain me at my firſt entring into thy houſe with a kiſſe, which is the ordinary ſalutation and expreſſion of kindneſſe,

46. My head with oyle thou didſt not [anoint,] but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

46. See note on Mat. 26. c.

47. Wherefore I ſay unto thee, [Her ſinnes which are many are forgiven, d * for ſhe loved much,] but to whom little is forgiven, the ſame loveth little.

* therefore

47. The greatneſſe of the mercy ſhewn to her hath proportionably a farre greater expreſſion of gratitude from her, d

48. And he ſaid unto her, Thy ſinnes are forgiven.

49. And they that ſat at meat with him began to ſay within themſelves, Who is this that forgiveth ſinnes alſo?

50. And he ſaid to the woman, [Thy faith hath ſaved thee, goe in peace.]

50. This great expreſſion and theſe affectionate extraordinary acts of thy faith are rewarded with a free pardon of all thy ſinnes paſt, Goe and live as thou oughteſt to doe for the reſt of thy life, and Gods favour, and all happineſſe goe along with thee.

Annotations on Chap. VII.

a. V. 3. Sent unto him] A ſeeming difference there is in the ſetting down this relation of the Centurion here from what we find Mat. 8. 5. There the Centurion is ſaid to come unto him, beſeeching him, and ſaying, v. 6. and anſwering v. 8. Here he ſent unto him the Elders of the Jewes, and they beſought him, and when Jeſus was not far from his houſe, v. 6. he ſent friends to him, ſaying, and part of his ſpeech is unreconcileable with his having come unto him himſelf, wherefore neither thought I my ſelf worthy to come unto thee v. 7. rendring a reaſon, why he had not come in perſon to him. This ſeeming difficulty may be anſwered by proportion with that known ſaying of Ariſtotle, ἃ διὰ τῶν φίλων δυνατὰ ἡμῖν δυνατά ἐστι, thoſe things that are poſſible by our friends, are poſſible to us, which ſuppoſes that thoſe things which we do by others, we are our ſelves thought to doe, and ſo what the Centurion did and ſpake here by the Elders of the Jewes, ſent on purpoſe by him, v. 3. and διὰ φίλων, by his friends, ſent again by him, v. 6. he may be truly ſaid by Saint Matthew to have done, and ſpoken himſelf, Eſpecially when (the matter of the ſtory being directly all one in both relations) the Jewes have a ſaying, that removes all difficulty, Apoſtolus cujuſque eſt ut quiſque, every mans proxy, or ſolemn meſſenger, is as himſelf, in which notion Chriſt ſpake when he ſaid, He that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me, Mat. 10. 40. and conſequently what is done by a proxy, is done by himſelfe. Thus is Chriſt ſaid to have preach'd peace to the Epheſians, Eph. 2. 17. which perſonally he did not, but by the Apoſtles; and repentance to the old world, 1. Pet. 3. 19. which he did by Noah; ſo James and John are ſaid to come unto Chriſt, and petition him, Mar. 10. 35. which Mat. 20. 20. their Mother is ſaid to do for them. Which notwithſtanding Saint Luke willing to adde one evidence more of the Centurions humility, from the reaſon of his not going perſonally to Chriſt, chooſes rather to ſet it down exactly, as it was in each circumſtance, then onely in brief, yet without all diminution of the matter, as Saint Matthew had done.

b. ἁμαρτωλὸς V. 37. A ſinner] Ητις ἦν ἁμαρτωλὸς which was a ſinner here applyed to the woman, may be taken in the notion wherein we find ἁμαρτωλοὶ ἐξ ἐθνῶν, Gal. 2. 15. ſinners of the Gentiles and to ſignify no more then a Gentile woman. Thus the word ſeemed to ſignify c. 6. 32. and 34. where it is ſaid that ſinners love thoſe that love them, that is, aliens from the law of God or Chriſt (Amicos diligere omnium eſt, ſaith Tertullian, 'tis common to all men to love friends) for which S. Matthew ſets Publicans c. 5. 46, who we know are oft joyned with ſinners, and for their converſation with the Heathen (from the neceſſity of their office) are look'd upon as a kind of Heathens, whether they were ſuch or no, and were moſt of them Gentiles, as 'tis probable, their office being an employment under the Romans, to bring in taxes to them. But 'tis alſo true that Publicans and harlots are put together, Mat. 21. 31. and that ſeems to refer to the baſeneſs and unworthineſs of thoſe two * infamous callings, and then ἁμαρτωλὸς ſinner, as it is of affinity of ſignification with theſe may perhaps ſignify one that had been a whore, and that is very reconcileable with the former conjecture, that vice or trade of proſtitute whores being among the Gentiles ſo ordinary; And ſo this woman, if ſhe were a whore, was either a Gentile alſo, or becauſe guilty of that gentile ſin, called by this common name of Gentiles, ἁμαρτωλὸς a ſinner. That this woman, whoſoever ſhe was, was not Mary Magdalen, is probable firſt by the no-argument on that ſide, but only the mention of the name of Mary in S. John, c. 12. 3. which preſently ſhall appear to be Marthas and Lazarus's Siſter, and that another ſtory. Secondly by the words in the chapter here following, c. 8. 2. where when it is ſaid that Mary Magdalen was with Chriſt, ſhe is deſcribed by another character, taken from that remarkable mercy wrought on her by Chriſt. that ſhe had ſeven devils caſt out of her, the very mark which is again given her, Mar. 16. 9. when 'tis ſaid that Chriſt firſt appeared to her, and no other mention is made of her in any of the Goſpels but only of her watching where Chriſt was laid after his crucifixion, and her going to the Sepulcher, &c, Chriſts firſt appearing to her, and her witneſſing his reſurrection. Beſides Mary Magdalen, 'tis evident there was another Mary, the ſiſter of Martha and Lazarus, Joh. 12. and ſhe brought a pound of ſpikenard, and anointed the feet of Jeſus, and wiped his feet with her hair, as is evident by comparing that paſſage, Joh. 12. 3. with Joh. 11. 2. where 'tis ſet down of her punctually by way of anticipation, It was Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whoſe brother Lazarus was ſick. And this Mary was not ſhe in this chapter of S. Luke neither. For that ſiſter of Lazarus ſo beloved of Chriſt will be much injured in her ſtory, if ſhe be made an ἁμαρτωλὸς, whether a whore or Gentile. The ſtory of Mary in S. John is indeed all one with that in Mat. 26. 6. and Mar. 14. 3. in the houſe of Simon the leper. As appears, 1. By the mention of Bethany, where it was, in all three Goſpels, and that the town of that Mary and Lazarus, who are therefore both of them ſaid to be at the feaſt, Mary as a wayter, Lazarus lying at meat with them, Joh. 12. 2. And ſo 2ly. By the mention of thoſe two ſpeeches of Chriſt on that occaſion, firſt, that what was done by her was for his embalming, and 2ly. that whereever the Goſpel was preached, this fact of that woman ſhould be preached alſo, the former mentioned in all three, (and ſo likewiſe Judas's murmuring) the latter in two of the Goſpels. But none of all theſe circumſtances belong here to this ſtory in S. Luke. But on the contrary it was in one of the Phariſees houſes, not in Simon the lepers, nor at all, that we have any reaſon to gueſs, in Bethany. And the Phariſee objected againſt Chriſt for this, not Judas, or one of the Diſciples, and the objection was not at the unneceſſary expenſe, as there, but that Chriſt would let a ſinner be ſo kind to him, if he knew it, or if he did not, that he was no Prophet. And then the diſcourſe between Chriſt and Simon, occaſioned by this fact of the ſinner woman in Luke (about the creditor and his debtors, and the application of it to the exceſſe of this womans love above his, cauſed by the mercy of having many ſinnes forgiven, which ſhe had received) is far diſtant from that in the other Goſpels of anointing him for his burial, by way of embalming, as it were, which alſo contains another circumſtance in it, that that of Maries was immediately before his death, Judas going out immediately upon it to betray him, Mar. 14. 10. Mat. 16. 14. and ſo likewiſe in S. John his death followes ſoon after, but this paſſage in S. Luke hath nothing to do with his death, and is ſet down on another occaſion here by S. Luke (whenſoever it was acted, as Luke indeed obſerves not the order of ſtory in all his relations) viz. to ſhew that which Chriſt was upon in the former paſſage, that thoſe which had not lived the beſt lives formerly, were more ready to receive the mercies offered by Chriſt then the Phariſees, &c. that had a better opinion of themſelves. All the affinity between theſe ſtories is that of the Alabaſter or cruiſe of oyntment powred upon him, but when that is known to be the ordinary name of a veſſell, that was uſed to that purpoſe (ſee Note on Mat. 26. b.) and that it was very ordinary at Feaſts to uſe oyntment to powre on them, and perfume them (ſee Note on Mat. 26. c) this will be but a poor evidence to prove theſe ſtories to be all one, becauſe many ſeverall feaſts there might be, and were, and this civility uſed in all or many of theſe. And although in one particular wherein the Story in John differs from the ſame in Matthew and Mark, this in Luke agrees with that in John (which may perſwade ſome that 'tis the ſame ſtory at leaſt, which Luke and John ſet down) as that John mentions not the powring out the oyntment on the head (as Matthew and Mark do) but only on the feet, which they do not (in both which Luke agrees with him) yet will not this be of any force againſt the former arguments, eſpecially when 'tis remembred (what is peculiarly obſerved of S. Johns Goſpel, written after and as a ſupplement of the others) that John finding the mention of the anointing Chriſts head by Mary in the two Goſpels, did not need mention it again, but thought it neceſſary to adde all the reſt, which they had not mentioned, of anointing his feet, and wiping them with the haires of her head, which as it is certain that it was done by Mary, becauſe S. John affirms it, ſo might it alſo at another time be done by another woman, and no wonder at all be in it, nor matter of objection againſt what we have ſaid of theſe being diverſe ſtories. Nay one obſervable difference there is in this very thing, wherein theſe two Evangeliſts thus ſeem to agree. For S. John ſaith cleerly that Mary anointed his feet with the ſpikenard, Joh. 12. 3. mentioning no teares, nor any thing but the ointment, the odour of which ſo filled the houſe: but this ſinner woman in Luke, though ſhe brought into the houſe with her her veſſell of oyntment, yet in another kind of addreſſe (and that which more became her that remembred her former heathen, or ſinfull courſe,) ſhe firſt ſtood by his feet behind him weeping, and began to bedew his feet with tears, then wiped off the tears with the haires of her head, and yet farther kiſſed his feet (all which we find not in S. John) and then anointed his feet with the oyntment, which is the only circumſtance wherein they agree, and ſo it cannot be thought argumentative againſt ſo much to the contrary. And if it be farther granted that this Phariſees name was Simon alſo, but yet was another perſon from Simon the leper (as 'tis ſure enough Simon was a very ordinary name at that time) I cannot foreſee any the leaſt probability againſt the truth of what hath been here obſerved.

V. 44. Water for my feet] That it was the faſhion of thoſe countries in their entertainments to waſh their gueſts feet before meals, is frequently mentioned in the Old Teſtament. And the ſame was of Cuſtome alſo among the Grecians in their more ſplendid extraordinary feaſts, as we find in Athenæus, l. 14. συνελθόντων εἰς τὸ δεῖπνον &c. when they come together to dinner, τοῖς εἰσιοῦσι παρετίθεντο ποδόνιπτρα ὕδατι δι' ἀρωμάτων, they bring out to the gueſts baths for their feet of wine and ſpices. c. Ὕδωρ ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας.

V. 47. For] That ὅτι ſignifies therefore and not for in this place is apparent not only by the clear importance of the Parable precedent, where he that had the greater debt forgiven is ſuppoſed to have greater love and kindneſs to the Creditour, and not therefore forgiven, becauſe he had that love and kindneſs, but alſo by the ſignification of the Hebrew כי which] is promiſcuouſly taken for ὅτι or διότι, for, or therefore, and ſo (by an obſervation before mentioned, Note on Mar. 14. f) according to the practiſe of theſe writers, one of theſe Greek words may be taken for the other, ὅτι for uſed when the ſenſe bears διότι therefore. And ſo Mar. 9. 28. the ſame ὅτι clearly ſignifies διὰ τί for what cauſe or why? Interrogatively. And ſo, I conceive, on the other ſide, Ro. 5. 12. διὰ τοῦτο is ſet when the ſenſe carries it ὅτι, not therefore, but for. that verſe being the proof of the former, not proved by it; and ſo Heb. 11. 23. διότι therefore is uſed for ὅτι for, or becauſe; Moſes was hidden by his Parents, διότι becauſe he was a comely child; ſo Jam. 4. 3. διότι κακῶς αἰτεῖσθε becauſe ye aske amiſs; ſo the Hebrew לכן alſo ſignifies both quia and ideo, and Ecclus. 31. 15. is rendred διὰ τοῦτο wherefore, when it ſhould be ὅτι for, and 1 Pet. 1. 24. διότι wherefore is put for ὅτι for. But as a more direct example of ὅτι wherefore, I ſuppoſe one place in S. John to be worth obſerving. Joh. 14. 17. where Chriſt having upon condition of their loving and obeying him, promiſed the Comforter or Paraclete to the diſciples, v. 15. 16. that he might abide with them for ever, he ſaith of him, that worldly men cannot receive him, becauſe they neither ſee nor know him, but, ſaith he, ye know him, ὅτι παρ' ὑμῖν μένει, καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσται, which in all reaſon is to be ſo rendred, that it may be the effect or conſequent, not as the cauſe or antecedent d. Ὅτι. See Pſ 116. 10. 2 Cor. 4. 13 Eccleſ. 8. 6. διότι.

antecedent of the former, as the coming and abiding of the Paraclete was before mentioned as the conſequent and reward of their loving and obeying, and not as the cauſe of that. And then the ὅτι muſt bear the ſame ſenſe exactly, which here we affixe to it, therefore, or for this cauſe (as if it were διότι or διὰ τοῦτο,) he remaineth with you, and ſhall be in, or among, you.

CHAP. VIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND it came to paſſe afterward, that he went throughout every city and village preaching and ſhewing the glad tidings of [the kingdome of God] and the twelve were with him.

1. the doctrine of Chriſtianity, and the reformation which God now expected and required to be wrought among this people, or elſe he would ſend judgments on them.

2. And certain women which had been healed of evil ſpirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom [went ſeven devils,]

2. ſeven devils had been caſt out,

3. And Joanna the wife of Chuza, Herods ſteward, and Suſanna, and many others, which [[a] miniſtred unto him of their ſubſtance.]

2. had ſupplied him with neceſſaries out of their own poſſeſſions. a

4. And when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he ſpake by a parable.

5. A ſower went out to ſow his ſeed, and as he ſowed ſome fell by the way ſide, and it was trodden down, and the foules of the ayre devoured it.

See Mat. 13. 3.

6. And ſome fell upon a rock, and aſſoon as it was ſprung up, it withered away, becauſe it lacked moiſture.

7. And ſome fell among thorns, and the thorns ſprang up with it, and choaked it.

8. And ſome fell on good ground, and ſprang up, and bare fruit an hundred fold. And when he ſaid theſe things, he cried, He that hath eares to hear, let him hear.

9. And his diſciples asked him, ſaying, [What might this parable be?]

9. What is the meaning of this parable?

10. And he ſaid, Unto you it is given to know the myſteries of [the kingdome of God, but to others in parables, that ſeeing they might not ſee, and hearing they might not underſtand.]

10. Chriſtian doctrine, but to others I ſpake in parables, that that prophecy of Iſaias might be fulfilled on them, which ſaid, Hearing ye ſhall hear and not underſtand, and ſeeing ye ſhall ſee and not perceive, God denying them thoſe more clear means, and allowing them none but parables, as a puniſhment of their former obduration againſt his means. See Mat. 13. 14.

11. Now the parable is this, The ſeed is the word of God.

12. Thoſe by the way ſide are they that hear: then cometh the devil and taketh away the word out of their hearts, leſt they ſhould beleive and be ſaved.]

12. They that receive the word, parallel to the ſeed ſown by the path or way, are thoſe hearers which receive it ſo little way into their hearts, that the devil comes preſently and picks it up, as birds doe corn, and ſo they are never the better for it.

13. They on the rock are they which when they hear, receive the word with joy, and theſe have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away.

See Mat. 13. 20.

14. And that which fell among thorns are they which when they have heard, goe forth, and [are choaked with cares, and riches, and pleaſures of this life, and bring no [b] fruit to perfection.]

14. are choaked by the deceitfulneſſe of riches, and pleaſures, and the cares of this world, and doe not perſevere till time of bringing forth ripe fruit, that is, till harveſt, fall off after ſome few Chriſtian performances. b

15. But that on the good ground are they which in an honeſt and good heart, having heard the word keepe it, and [bring forth fruit with * patience.]

15. continue in all Chriſtian practiſe, and never fall off again.

* perſeverance ὑπομονή.

16. No man when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a veſſel, or putteth it under a bed, but ſetteth it on a candleſtick, that they which enter in may ſee the light.

17. For nothing is ſecret that ſhall not be made manifeſt, neither any thing hid, that ſhall not be known and come abroad.]

17. For 'tis not Gods will that any talent ſhould be laid up uſeleſſe and unprofitable. Mat. 10. 26. Mar. 4. 22.

18. Take heed therefore, how ye hear: for whoſoever hath, to him ſhall be given, and whoſoever hath not, from him ſhall be taken even that which he ſeemeth to have.]

18. See therefore that you receive profit by what you hear: For to him that employes his preſent ſtock, ſhall more be given, But from him which doth not ſo, even that which hath formerly been given him, ſhall be taken away again. Mat. 13. 12.

19. Then came to him his mother and his [brethren,] and could not come at him for the preaſe.

19. Kindred neer unto him, Mat. 12. 46.

20. And it was told him by certain which ſaid, Thy mother and thy brethren ſtand without deſiring to [ſee thee.]

20. Speake with thee.

21. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, My mother and my brethren are theſe which hear the word of God and doe it.

Mat. 12. 50.

22. Now it came to paſſe on a certain day, that he went into a ſhip with his diſciples, and he ſaid unto them, Let us goe over unto the other ſide of the lake, and they lanched forth.

Mat. 8. 23.

23. But as they ſailed he fell aſleep, and there came down a ſtorm of wind on the [c] lake, and [they were filled with water] and were in jeopardy.

23. their boat was filled with water, c

24. And they came to him and awoke him, ſaying, Maſter, Maſter, we periſh. Then he aroſe and [rebuked the wind and the raging of the water, and] they ceaſed, and there was a calme.

24. commanded the wind to ceaſe, and the waves of the ſea not to move ſo turbulently, and accordingly

25. And

25. And he ſaid unto them, Where is your faith? And they being afraid wondred, ſaying one to another, What manner of man is this? for he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him.

See Mat. 8. 28.

26. And they arrived at the countrey of the Gadarens, which is over againſt Galilee.

27. And when he went forth to land, there met him out of the city a certain man, which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any houſe but in the tombes.

28. When he ſaw Jeſus, he cried out and fell down before him, and with a loud voice ſaid, What have I to doe with thee, Jeſus thou ſon of God moſt high? I beſeech thee [torment me not.]

28. let me alone to continue where I am, and doe not before my time caſt me into the place of torments, the pit of hell, v. 31. See Mar. 5. note b.

29. (For he had commanded the unclean ſpirit to come out of the man; for oftentimes [it had caught him, and] he was kept bound with chaines and with fetters, and he brake the bands, and he was driven of the devil into the wilderneſſe.)

29. the devil poſſeſt him and put him into a kind of raving fit, which made him very unruly, and thereupon

30. And Jeſus asked him, ſaying, What is thy name? And he ſaid, Legion, becauſe many devils were entred into him.

Mar. 5. 9.

31. And they beſought him that he would not [command them to goe out into the d deep.]

31. caſt them into the pit of hell.

32. And there was there a herd of many ſwine feeding on the mountains, and they beſought him that he would ſuffer them to enter into them: [and he ſuffered them.]

d.

32. and to ſhew the people the deſtructive power of this Legion of devils, if not reſtrained by his omnipotent goodneſſe, and ſo to let them ſee the great benefits that were now come to them, if they would receive and believe in Chriſt, he did permit (or not reſtrain) them to doe what they ſo much deſired, to enter into the ſwine. See Mat. 5. 13.

33. Then went the devils out of the man, and entred into the ſwine, and the herd ran violently down a ſteep place into the lake, and were choaked.

34. villages in the countrey.

34. When they that fed them ſaw what was done, they fled, and went and told it in the city and in the [countrey.]

35. Then they went out to ſee what was done, and came to Jeſus, and found the man out of whom the devils were departed ſitting at the feet of Jeſus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

36. They alſo which ſaw it told them by what means he that was poſſeſſed of the devils was healed.

37. Then the whole multitude of the countrey of the Gadarens round about beſought him to depart from them; for they were taken with great feare; and he he went up into the ſhip, and returned back again.

38. be one of his conſtant attendants, or diſciples,

38. Now the man, out of whom the devils were departed, beſought him that he might [be with him,] but Jeſus ſent him away, ſaying,

39. Return to thine owne houſe, and ſhew how great things God hath done for thee. And he went his way, and publiſhed throughout the whole city how great things Jeſus had done unto him.

40. the people of the place were very much joyed at his coming,

40. And it came to paſſe that when Jeſus was returned, [the people gladly received him,] for they were all waiting for him.

See note on Mar. 5. c.

42. And behold there came a man named Jairus, and he was [a ruler of the ſynagogue,] and he fell down at Jeſus feet, and beſought him that he would come into his houſe:

42. ſhe was by him left ready to die, but by this time that he came to Chriſt, actually dead, Mat 9. 18.

42. For he had one onely daughter about twelve yeares of age, and [ſhe * lay a dying.] But as he went, the people thronged him. (though that was not certainly known by him, till v. 49.)

* was dead ἀπέθνησκεν

43. And a woman having † an iſſue of blood twelve yeares, which had ſpent all her living upon Phyſitians, neither could be healed of any,

† a flux, ſee Mar. 5. note d.

44. Came behind him, and touched the border of his garment, and immediately her iſſue of blood ſtanched.

45. And Jeſus ſaid, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter and they that were with him ſaid, Maſter, the multitude throng thee and preaſe thee, and ſayeſt thou, Who touched me?

46. know ſome cure hath been wrought by the touching of me.

46. And Jeſus ſaid, Some body hath touched me: for I [perceive that virtue is gone out of me.]

47. And when the woman ſaw that ſhe was not hid, ſhe came trembling, and falling down before him, ſhe declared unto him before all the people, for what cauſe ſhe had touched him, and how ſhe was healed immediately.

48. And he ſaid unto her, Daughter be of good comfort, thy faith hath made thee whole, goe in peace.

49. from the houſe of Jairus (ver. 41.) which brought him word that his daughter was dead, and therefore he ſhould not put Chriſt to the trouble to come down to work a cure, when ſhe was already dead.

49. While he yet ſpake, there cometh one [from the ruler of the ſynagogues houſe, ſaying to him, Thy daughter is dead, trouble not the Maſter.]

50. But when Jeſus heard it, he anſwered him, ſaying, Fear not, believe only, and ſhe ſhall be made whole.

51, 52. And coming into the houſe where there was already a great company of neighbours gathered together, weeping and bewailing the deceaſed, he ſuffered none of thoſe that came with him to goe in, ſave Peter &c. And ſeeing the company within lamenting her death, he comforted them, ſaying,

51. And when he came into the houſe, he ſuffered no man to goe in, ſave Peter and James and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden.

52. And all wept and bewailed her: but he ſaid, Weep not, ſhe is not dead, but ſleepeth.

53. And

53. And they laughed him to ſcorn, knowing that ſhe was dead.

54. And he put [them all] out, and took her by the hand, and called, ſaying, Maid, ariſe.

54. all thoſe that were there lamenting,

55. And her ſpirit came again, and ſhe aroſe ſtraightway, and [he commanded to give her meat.]

55. that they might perceive that ſhe was really revived and not onely in appearance, and withal to refreſh her, he commanded them that were in the houſe to ſet ſome food before her.

56. And her parents were aſtoniſhed, but he charged them that they ſhould tell no man what was done.

Annotations on Chap. VIII.

a' διακονεῖν

V. 3. Miniſtred] The true notion of the word διακονεῖν ſo often uſed in the Scripture will be worth conſidering a while, for the right underſtanding of all places where 'tis uſed. And 1. it is ſufficiently known to belong unto and to be frequently taken in general for any kind of ſervice, or miniſtery. Such was that of diſciples, who waited, attended on the Prophets, did their ſervile offices (ſee Mat. 3. h.) and accordingly διάκονος is taken for ſuch a diſciple, Joh. 12. 26. compared with Luk. 6. 40. Mat. 10. 25. But omitting this ordinary notion, the beſt riſe will be by conſidering the word διάκονοι, and διακονῶν, as it referres to that one particular office of ſervants, that of waiting at feaſts. Thus Lucian in his Cronoſol. among the leges Convivales mentions this, οἱ διάκονοι μὴ χάριν μηδενὶ μηδὲν, Let the waiters do nothing out of favour, or partiality, to any: where διάκονοι are thoſe that in feaſts diſtribute the μοῖραι, or portions, to each gueſt, as it follows there, μηδὲ τῷ μὲν ὁ μοῖρα, τῷ δὲ ἡ γνάθος οὐδὲ, ἀλλ' ἰσότης δὴ πᾶσιν, not to one a larger or better, to another a meaner or leſſer piece, but equality in all. For this we find among thoſe rites or cuſtomes of feaſts, that the διάκονοι diſtributed the portions, firſt to the maſter of the feaſt, and then to the gueſts, each of them in order, either according to the direction of the ἀρχιτείκλινος, or the orderer of the feaſt, or as they pleaſed themſelves, when he did not direct, onely according to that rule of equality, that they ſhould not τῷ μὲν μεγάλα, τῷ δὲ κομιδῇ μικρὰ παρατίθεσθαι, give one a great, another a very little portion. This we find in Lucian, both in his Cronoſol. and Epiſt. Saturn. and ſpeaking of unjuſt officers, he ſaith, ἀποκλέπτουσι οἰκέται διανέμων τῷ μὲν δεσπότῃ ἀπατῆσαι τὸ ἥμισυ ὅλον σὺν τῇ κεφαλῇ, τοῖς δὲ ἄλλοις ὀστᾶ φέρῃ ἐσκεκαλυμμένα, in the diviſion of a ſwine the ſervant gives his maſter half of it with the head, and to the reſt a few bones. Agreeable to this cuſtome of the διάκονοι giving to every man his portion, is that of our Saviour, Luk. 12. 37. ſpeaking of a maſter that entertains his ſervants, περιζώσεται καὶ ἀνακλινεῖ αὐτοὺς, καὶ παρελθὼν διακονήσει, he ſhall gird himſelf like a ſervant, and make them lie down, and paſſing from one to another ſhall diſtribute to every man his portion; a parallel to which we have in * Lucian, ὅταν πλούσιος ἐυωχῇ διακονῶν, καὶ οἱ φίλοι σὺν αὐτῷ, when a rich man entertains his ſervants, and miniſters to them, he and his friends with him. This, as was even now intimated, belonged primarily to the ἀρχιτείκλινος, or οἰκονόμος τροφῶν, the governour, or orderer of the feaſt, and thus we read of Chriſt, when he entertained the multitudes, he acted the part of the ἀρχιτείκλινος, and ἐυχαειτήσας ἔδωκε τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτῶν, οἱ δὲ μαθηταὶ τοῖς ὄχλοις, when he had given thanks he gave to his diſciples, as the œconomus to the waiters, and they to the multitudes, to every man ſingle his portion. So that ſtill the office of the διάκονος is to diſtribute the νομαὶ or μερίδες, though the œconomus break, or divide them. So that that ſaying of Chriſt, Mat. 20. 28. and, in the ſame words almoſt, Mar. 10 45. may juſtly be underſtood of this cuſtome, and this uſe of the word, διακονῆσαι, Ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου οὐκ ἦλθε διακονηθῆναι, ἀλλὰ διακονῆσαι, The ſon of man came not that others might miniſter to him, or diſtribute favours, or ſhew kindneſſes to him, but he to diſtribute to them, and, as it follows, δοῦναι τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ λύτρον ἀντὶ πολλῶν to diſtribute that great gift among his diſciples and all mankind, his life for the redemption of the world. Neither is this interpretation reſiſted or made leſſe probable by that which went before, οὐχ οὕτως ἔσται, &c. but it ſhall not be ſo among you, but he that will become great among you, let him be your miniſter, and he that will be firſt, let him be your ſervant; as if the words belonged onely to the humility required by Chriſt of Chriſtian Governours: for there be two things there ſpoken of by Chriſt, concerning the Heathen Rulers, (to which the Chriſtian are oppoſed) one that they do κατακυριεύειν, uſe their ſervants, as Lords, and owners of them, as of a poſſeſſion (as ſervants were reckoned by them among their κτήματα, their wealth, or riches) and ſo reap fruit and profit by their labours, Which * Xenophon calls ὠφελεῖσθαι ὑπ' αὐτῶν, to be profited by them; the 2d that they do καταξουσιάζειν, exerciſe deſpotical power over them, To which two Chriſt here oppoſes theſe two other duties of a Chriſtian governour in his Church; 1. that he ſhall be beneficial or profitable to thoſe that are under him; 2ly. that he ſhall be humble toward them; and the firſt of theſe is here meant by διάκονον γενέσθαι, being a miniſter, as the 2d by δοῦλον γενέσθαι, being a ſervant, and therefore Chriſt returns and ſpeaks farther to that, The ſon of man came not διακονηθῆναι to be miniſtred unto, but διακονῆσαι to miniſter, and what that is he farther expreſſes, καὶ δοῦναι, and to give his life, &c. From this feſtival cuſtome ſet down in all the parts, Joh. 2. 9. (where there is beſide the νυμφίος or maſter of the feaſt, ἀρχιτείκλινος the divider of the meats and wine, and again the διάκονοι ver. 5. which diſtribute and carry it, being divided, to each gueſt) we may clearly fetch the office of the firſt Deacons in the Church, who were to diſtribute to the poor, as every one had need, under the Apoſtles, as the œconomi, or chief diſpenſers, and to take off that toyle from them, and ſo in like manner at the adminiſtration of the Euchariſt to be miniſterial to the προεστὼς the Biſhop, or Præfect, and diſtribute that wine and bread which he had conſecrated. See * Juſtin Martyr Apol. 2. But to the former of theſe, that of diſtributing to the poor, the word διακονία, miniſtring, in Scripture peculiarly belongs, and ſo ſtill makes good that notion which we now take it in. So Act. 11. 29. εἰς διακονίαν πέμψαι, to ſend ſome relief to be diſtributed to them that want, and Act. 12. 25. and 2 Cor. 8. 4. κοινωνία τῆς διακονίας εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους, the liberality of diſtribution to the ſaints. So 1 Pet. 4. 10. where ſpeaking of hoſpitality, he bids them διακονῶν diſpenſe, or diſtribute, that is, give, and again v. 12. εἴ τις διακονεῖ if any man exerciſe liberality to the poor; So the διακονία καθημερινὴ Act. 6. the dayly diſtribution to the poor widowes, or, as the 16. Canon of the Councel in Trullo interprets the place, ἡ ἐν ταῖς χρείαις τραπέζαις λειτουργία, the diſpenſing of neceſſaries at their tables, and

* Cronoſol.

* Præf. in Kup. παιδ.

* p. 97.

therefore Zonaras on that Canon explains it by οἰκονόμοι τροφῶν, diſpenſers of meat, (meaning, I ſuppoſe, under the chief œconomus or ſteward) rather the diſtributers of it. Thus in * Julian, ſpeaking of the Galilæans, as he ſtyles the Chriſtians, you ſhall find, ſaith he, τὰ λεγομένα παρ' αὐτοῖς ἀγάπλω, καὶ ξενοδοχίῶ, καὶ διακονίαν τραπέζων, their feaſts of love and entertainments, and diſtribution at tables, by which, ſaith he, they allured many to their religion. So in Procopius's ſcholia on 1 Sam. 9. there is mention ὑποδόλων διακονεμένων, which ſure is ill rendred Apoſtolorum miniſtrantium, of the Apoſtles that miniſtred, and ſhould be rendred in the paſſive ſenſe, adminiſtratione or liberalitate aliorum utentium, they that were miniſtred to, for ſo he adds out of S. Paul, δὶς εἰς τὴν χρείαν μοι ἐπέμψατε you ſent twice to my wants. I ſhall need to adde no more to this, but onely that what ſome did διακονεῖν, diſtribute or diſpenſe onely as inſtruments or officers or miniſters of others liberality, that alſo ſome did out of their own eſtates, and ſo here theſe women did ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων αὐταῖς out of their own goods. So, I ſuppoſe, Oneſiphorus, 2 Tim. 1. 18. So Phœbe, Rom. 16. 1. διάκονον ἐκκλησίας τῆς ἐν Κεγχρεαῖς, the miniſter of the Church in Cenchrea, who is therefore called προστάτις (or προστάτης) πολλῶν, that is, πρόξενος (ξενίας δημελόμενος, ἤγουν τοῦ ξένους ὑποδεχόμενος, ſaith Heſychius) an entertainer, and ſuccourer of many, and of Paul himſelf. It is a military word, of ſouldiers relieving and defending and reſcuing one another, which is περιστάσις, and a work of mercy. And he that exerciſeth it, is called indifferently περιστάτης, ὑπισάτης, ἐπιστάτης (ſee Rom. 16. 2.) So in * Demoſthenes, Τὸν περιστάντα ὑπὲρ ὑποτρήσῃ τῶν ἐμῶν Ἀφόβου, who help'd Aphobus to defraud me. And in Strabo, ψευδῆς περίστασις δόγμα, he maintained, defended a falſe opinion, and many the like. And this Phœbe thus called, and ſuch as ſhe, were the ἀδελφαὶ, ſiſters or Chriſtian women, that accompanied the Apoſtles in their travails, and provided for them, that they might preach, and not be put to earne their livings with their hands, 1 Cor. 9. 5. b. Τελεσφορεῖν

V. 14. Bring no fruit to perfection] The word τελεσφορεῖν here is beſt explained by Heſychius καθ' ὥραν τὸς καρπὸς, ἢ τελείως αὐτὸς φέρειν, to bring forth fruits in the ſeaſon, or perfect fruits. Phavorinus ἐντελῶς ἄγειν, to bring forth perfectly. Joſephus uſes it of women that go their full time, that do not miſcarry or bring forth abortives; and ſo it here belongs to that corn that proſpers, and thrives, and comes on well, and continues till harveſt, and miſcarries not by any defect in the ſoyle, or other ill accident.

c. Λίμνη

V. 23. The lake] That which is here truely called λίμνη (for ſo it was, the lake (and not the ſea) of Geneſareth, c. 5. 1.) is called θάλασσα, the ſea, Mat. 8. 24. and θάλασσα Γαλιλαίας, the ſea of Galilee, Mat. 4. 18. θάλασσα and Joh. 6. 1. θάλασσα τῆς Γαλιλαίας τῆς Τιβεριάδος, and c. 21. 1. θάλασσα τῆς Τιβεριάδος, the ſea of Tiberias. And all this not becauſe it was a ſea, but becauſe of the ambiguity of the Hebrew ים, which, as it ſignifies the ſea, ſo alſo any lake or confluence of waters, and is uſed for that great veſſel in the Temple, 1 Kin. 7. 23. which being of ſuch a largeneſſe (30 cubits round, and 5 cubits high, and containing 2000 baths) was a kind of lake, and is there ſo called, a molten lake, the Hebrew ים being there uſed, and by us rendred ſea, but would be more properly lake. And ſo likewiſe the word θάλασσα in the other Goſpels would be better, according to the ſenſe, rendred lake alſo: the lake of Galilee, and Tiberias. See Lyra on Gen. 1. 10.

d. Ἄβυσσος

V. 31. The deep] That ἄβυσσος ſhould here ſignifie the pit of hell, the place created for the devil and his angels, whereſoever it is ſituate, may be gueſs'd by the nature of the word, which ſignifies bottomleſſe, and from the uſe of it in ſome other places of the New Teſtament, as Revel. 9. 1, 2. and 11. 7. and 17. 8. and 20. 1, 3. where there is mention of chaines, as there is of tartarum, 2 Pet. 2. 4. And ſo alſo the context here inclines it, for the firſt requeſt of the devil to Chriſt was, v. 28. I beſeech thee torment me not, and in the other Goſpel, Mat. 8. 29. Art thou come to torment me before my time? expreſſing the devils fear that by this coming of Chriſt he ſhould preſently be caſt into his chains of hell (ſee Note on Mar. 5. b) and confined to thoſe torments, which he thought belong'd not to him till the day of judgement, and the next was in plain words, not to ſend him into hell, or the pit.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. IX.

1. and to qualify them for their office, he gave them power to caſt out devils out of thoſe that were poſſeſs'd with them.

1. THen he called his twelve diſciples together, [and gave them power and authority over all devils,] and to cure diſeaſes.

2. And he ſent them to preach the Kingdom of God, and to heal the ſick.

3. Make no proviſion for your journey, nor take with you ſo much as a ſtaffe to guard you by the way, ſee Mat. 10. e.

3. And he ſaid unto them, [Take nothing for your journey, neither ſtaves] nor ſcrip, neitheir bread, neither money, neither have two coats apiece.

4. as long as you remain in that city. Mat. 10. 11.

4. And whatſoever houſe ye enter into, [there abide] and thence depart.

5. by that means to teſtify to them and others, that ye have been with them, and have not been received, but unworthily rejected by them, and accordingly to expreſſe to them, what is likely to befall them. Mat. 10. 14.

5. And whoſoever will not receive you, when ye go out from that city, ſhake off the very duſt from your feet [for a teſtimony againſt them.]

6. And they departed and went through the towns preaching the Goſpel, and healing every where.

7. Chriſt, and he did not know what to think, becauſe ſome ſaid, that it was John Baptiſt riſen from the dead, who having been killed by him, he feared he would now work ſome eminent revenge on him for it,

7. Now Herod the Tetrarch heard of all that was done by [him, and he was perplexed, becauſe that it was ſaid of ſome, that John was riſen from the dead,]

8. ſome that Elias was come,

a.

8. And of ſome, that Elias had [a] appeared,] and of others, that one of the old Prophets was riſen again.

9. And Herod ſaid, John have I beheaded, but who is this of whom I hear ſuch things? and he deſired to ſee him.

10. And

10. And the Apoſtles when they were returned, told him all that they had done, and he took them, and went aſide privately into a deſert place, [belonging to the city called Bethſaida.]

10. within the territory of Bethſaida.

11. And the people when they knew it followed him: and he received them, and [ſpake unto them of the kingdom of God] and healed them that had need of healing.

11. preached the Goſpel to them,

12. And when the day began to wear away, then came the twelve and ſaid unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the countrey and townes round about, and [† b lodge] and get victuals, for we are here in a deſert place.

12. refreſh themſelves

b. † betake themſelves to their Inns

13. But he ſaid unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they ſaid, We have no more then five loaves and two fiſhes, [except we ſhould go and buy meat for all this people.]

13. and cannot give them entertainment, unleſs we ſhould go and buy, and that muſt be a large proportion to feed all this people.

14. For they were about five thouſand men. And he ſaid to his diſciples, Make them ſit down [by fifties in a company.]

14. See note on Mar. 6. e. and Mat. 8. g.

15. And they did ſo, and made them all ſit down.

16. Then he took the five loaves and the two fiſhes, and looking up to heaven, he bleſſed them, and brake, and gave to the diſciples [to ſet before the multitude.]

16. that they might diſtribute to the multitude a portion for every one. Mat. 14. 20.

17. And they did eat, and were all filled, and there was taken up of fragments that remained to them twelve baskets.

18. And it came to paſſe, as he was * alone praying, his diſciples were with him, and he asked them ſaying, Whom ſay † the people that I am?

* praying by himſelf, his diſciples came to him, συνησαν αὐτῷ κατὰ μόνας, συνῆσαν αὐτοῖς, † or, men, for the Kings MS. reads εἰ ἄνθρωποι.

19. They anſwering ſaid, John the Baptiſt, but ſome ſay, Elias, and others ſay, that one of the old Prophets is riſen again.

20. He ſaid unto them, But whom ſay ye that I am? Peter anſwering ſaid, [The Chriſt of God.]

20. The Meſſias.

21. But he ſtraightly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing.]

21. See note on Mat. 8. b.

22. Saying [The Son of man muſt ſuffer many things, and be rejected of the Elders and chief Prieſts and Scribes,] and be ſlain, and be raiſed the third day.

22. The prophecies muſt be fulfilled which affirm that the Meſſias ſhall ſuffer many things, and be rejected by the great Sanhedrim.

23. And he ſaid unto them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and take up his croſſe daily and follow me.

23. Mat. 10. 38.

24. For whoſoever will ſave his life ſhall loſe it, but whoſoever will loſe his life for my ſake, the ſame ſhall ſave it.

24. Mat. 10. 39. Mar. 8. 35.

25. For what is a man advantaged if he [gain the whole world, and loſe himſelf, or be caſt away?]

25. gain all the wealth of the world, and loſe his ſoul, or life? See Mat. 16. m.

26. For whoſoever ſhall be aſhamed of me, and of my words, of him ſhall the ſon of man be aſhamed [when he ſhall come in his own glory, and in his Fathers, and of the holy Angels.]

26. when he comes ſo illuſtriouſly to puniſh his crucifiers (or at laſt judg the world) See note on Mat. 16. o.

27. But I tell you of a truth, There be ſome ſtanding here which ſhall not taſte of death till they ſee the kingdom of God.]

27. Which is not now ſo farre off, but that ſome here preſent ſhall live to ſee it.

28. And it came to paſſe [about an eight dayes] after theſe ſayings, he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray.

28. Six compleat dayes, but eight, reckoning the firſt and laſt. Mat. 12. m.

29. And as he prayed, the * faſhion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was [white and gliſtering.]

† departure, c.

31. Which appearing, as Angels are wont, in a glorious condition, ſpake of his going out of this world (ſee note on Joh. 13. a. and 2 Pet. 1. f.) as of Moſes out of Egypt to a Canaan, by this means delivering his faithful people, but withal deſtroying them that believed not, Jude 5. Of all which, and the ſeveral branches and conſequents of it Jeruſalem was ſhortly to be the ſcene, and firſt of his crucifixion there.

32. But Peter and they that were with him were heavy with ſleep, and when they were awake they ſaw his glory, and the two men which ſtood with him.

33. And it came to paſſe, as they departed from him,] Peter ſaid unto Jeſus, Maſter, it is good for us to be here, and let us make three Tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moſes, and one for Elias, not knowing what he ſaid.

33. And as Moſes and Elias were parting from Chriſt, Mat. 17. 4.

34. While he thus ſpake, there came a cloud, and overſhadowed them, [and they feared, as they entred into the cloud.]

34. and they were amazed with fear, as the cloud came ſo near to them.

35. And there came a voyce out of the cloud ſaying, This is my beloved Son, hear him.

36. † And when the voice was paſt, [Jeſus was found alone: and they kept it cloſe, and told no man in thoſe dayes any of thoſe things which they had ſeen.]

† And as the voice was, or, was heard, καὶ ἐν τῷ γενέσθαι τὴν φωνήν, 36. Moſes and Elias were departed from Jeſus. And Chriſt commanded them to tell no man what they ſaw, till after his riſing from the dead, Mat. 17. 9. and they obeyed his command and did accordingly.

37. And it came to paſſe, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

37. Mat. 17. 15.

38. And behold, a man of the company cryed out, ſaying, Maſter, I beſeech thee, look upon my Son, for he is my onely child.

39. a ſore affection ſeiſeth upon him at certain times of the moon, and makes him cry out, and it cauſeth ſuch a boyling and agitation within (ſee note on Mar. 9. c.) that he foames at mouth, and it never departeth from him without great pain and agony: this coming to himſelf again (though when it firſt takes him, it makes him ſenſeleſſe, Mar. 9. 25. able neither to ſpeak nor hear) is joyned with an horrible torment, and many grievous bruiſes remain afterward. See note on Mat. 17. c.

39. And lo [a ſpirit taketh him, and he ſuddenly cryeth out, and * it teareth him that he foameth again, and bruiſing him hardly departeth from him.]

40. And I earneſtly intreated thy diſciples, that went about doing miracles, v. 6. to cure him of this Epilepſy, and they were not able.

40. And I beſought thy diſciples to caſt him out, and they could not.]

41. And Jeſus ſaid to his diſciples, What an act of perverſe infidelity, not of weakneſſe, is this in you? will my preſence ſo long, and the power given you by me, v. 1. work no better effects upon you? you will make your ſelves unworthy of ſuch favours by your not making uſe of them, ſee Mat. 17. 21. and Mar. 9. 28. Having thus reprehended his diſciples, he ſaid to the man,

41. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid, O faithleſſe and perverſe generation, how long ſhall I be with you and ſuffer you?] Bring thy ſon hither.

42. he fell into a fit of that diſeaſe, which by the power of the devil was brought upon him, and fell down, and after his manner it made an horrible agitation or tumult within him, and Jeſus caſt out the devil, and freed the man from the diſeaſe,

42. And as he was yet a coming [the devil threw him down and tare him: and Jeſus rebuked the unclean ſpirit, and healed the child] and delivered him again to his father.

43. And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God, but while they wondred every one at all things which Jeſus did, he ſaid unto his diſciples,

44. Mark what I ſay unto you, It is this, I ſhall ſhortly be put to death by the Jews and Romans, and ſhall ſuddenly riſe again, Mat. 17. 23, 24.

44. Let theſe ſayings ſink down into your eares, for the ſon of man ſhall be delivered into the hands of men.

45. But they underſtood not [this ſaying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not, and they feared to ask him that ſaying.]

46. But by occaſion of them, thinking Chriſts kingdome ſhould ſhortly begin, they fell into a diſpute among themſelves, who of them ſhould have the higheſt dignity at this revelation of Chriſts kingdom.

46. Then there aroſe a reaſoning among them, which of them ſhould be greateſt.]

47. And Chriſt either being asked by ſome of them, Mat. 18. 1. or elſe of his own accord, diſcerning by his divine knowledge the debate they were engaged in (though now they were aſhamed that he ſhould know it, Mar. 9. 33, 34.) and being willing to cure this vain ambition in them, took a little child, and ſet him in the next place to himſelf,

47. And Jeſus perceiving the thought of their heart, took a child, and ſet him by him,]

48. And ſaid unto them, The dignity that from me or in my kingdom accrueth unto any, belongs to ſuch as theſe, the humbleſt and meekeſt, The dignity which from my Father is communicated to me, and from me to others, is the portion of the meekeſt. See Mat. 18. 4.

48. And ſaith unto them, Whoſoever ſhall receive this child in my name, receiveth me, and whoſoever ſhall receive me, receiveth him that ſent me, for he that is leaſt among you all, the ſame ſhall be great.]

49. And John anſwered and ſaid, Maſter, we ſaw one caſting out devils in thy name, and we forbad him, becauſe he followeth not with us.

50. for though he keep not company with us, yet if he do it in my name, he is one that believes in me, and not to be forbidden. See Mar. 9. 39. and Mat. 12. 30.

50. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Forbid him not, [for he that is not againſt us, is for us.]

d. 51. when the time was come (ſee Acts 2. a.) when he was to be crucified, not being terrified with that danger, he reſolved firmely to go up to Jeruſalem.

51. And it came to paſſe [when the time was come that he ſhould be [d] received up, he ſtedfaſtly ſet his face to go to Jeruſalem.]

52. ſome of his diſciples before, as harbingers (which was part of the diſciples office.)

52. And ſent [meſſengers before his face,] and they went and entred into a village of the Samaritans to make ready for him.

53. And the Samaritans would not give him reception, becauſe he appeared to them to be a going to Jeruſalem, and they never do ſo, but worſhip in mount Gerizim, Joh. 4. 20. and ſo ſeparate from all thoſe that think Jeruſalem the onely place of worſhip.

53. And they did not receive him, becauſe his face was as though he would go to Jeruſalem.]

54. And when his diſciples James and John ſaw this, they ſaid, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven and conſume them, even as Elias did?

e. 55. The Chriſtians ſpirit, the œconomy, or courſe preſcribed them, differs much from that of a Prophet in the Old Teſtament, moved by zeal againſt the enemies of God: The courſe which you muſt take with ſuch is that of ſweetneſſe and perſwaſiveneſſe, and this propoſal of yours is very contrary to that.

55. But he turned and rebuked them, and ſaid, [Ye know not what manner [e] ſpirit ye are of.]

56. For I came not to kill any, but to preſerve and reſcue from death, and from all that is ill: And all the revenge that Chriſt thought fit to act upon them was to leave them, and go to another village.

56. For the ſon of man is not come to deſtroy mens lives, but to ſave them. And they went to another village.]

57. And it came to paſſe, that as they went in the way, a certain man ſaid unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whitherſoever thou goeſt.

58. you had beſt to conſider what you do, for doing ſo will be far from advancing any temporal intereſt of yours, Mat. 8. 20.

58. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, [The Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have neſts, but the ſon of man hath not where to lay his head.]

59. And there was another diſciple of his, who had already undertaken his ſervice, and attended on him, Mat. 18. 21. who came unto him, and ſaid, Sir, before I betake my ſelf wholly to attendance on thee, spare me so long, till I have buried my father, either now newly dead (of which the news is now come to me) or very old, whom I would attend while he lives, and give him that civility of burial, and then come and follow thee. (Theophylact.)

60. Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead, but go thou, and preach the kingdom of God.]

60. But Jesus replied unto him, The Nazarite, Num. 6. 7. being consecrated to God, was not to pollute himself with his dead father, but leave that work of burying him to others, and so the Priest also; and therefore thou that hast, by the tender of thine attendance, consecrated thy self to me, must referre that office of burying thy father to others that have not undertaken that attendance, and set presently about thy task of preaching the Gospel. See note on Mat. 8. 22.

61. And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee, but let me first go bid them farewell that are at home at my house.

62. And Jesus said unto him, [No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.]

62. He that holds the plough must follow it close, and not make errands home, or betake himself to any other business, till his dayes work be done; if he do, he will not be fit for that imployment: So thou if thou wilt undertake my service, must not * defer or procraftinate, but presently set to it, without any delay, and then follow it with the same diligence: and if thou art not thus ready to set out with me, if thou either pretendest, or really hast such kindness to thy former course and what thou hast left at home, as to take thee off one day from my service, thou art not worthy of the dignity and advantages of a Christian life, art no competent judge of them, nor consequently fit for a disciple of mine.

Annotations on Chap. IX.

a. Ἐφάνη. V. 8. Appeared] The word ἐφάνη appeared seems here to be taken for ἦλθε was come. So 'tis evidently in 2 Mac. 7. 22. οὐκ οἶδ' ὅπως εἰς ἡμῶν ἐφάνητε κοιλίας, I know not how ye came into my wombe. So the Scholiast of Theocritus, φανεὶς, ἐλθὼν, appearing signifies coming. So Plato in the beginning of his Protagoras, Πόθεν ἥκεις Σωκράτης φάνη; that is, whence comest thou Socrates? So Chrysostome, οὐδὲ σὺ εἰς τοῦτο ἄνω φανῆναι δυνήσῃ πόλιν, thou canst not come to the city which is above. * Hom. 73. in Matt.

b. Καταλῦσαι. V. 12. Lodge] Καταλῦσαι properly signifies among Mariners καλαίρειν ἀπὸ πελάγους εἰς τὸ λιμένα, to come back and retire from the sea to the haven, and from thence 'tis applied to travailers, that betake themselves to their inne, which is therefore called καλύμα, because the man and the beast there layed down his lading, and so 'tis generally to refresh ones self, ἀναπαῦσαι, ἀναχωρῆσαι, saith Phavorinus out of Hesychius.

c. Ἔξοδον. V. 31. Decease] That Christs ἔξοδος here signifies his death, and going out of this world, will be acknowledged 1. by the use of a parallel phrase to this sense, Joh. 13. 1. where his death is call'd μετάβασις ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου a passing out of this world, typified there by the Pasch in the beginning of the verse, and that we know was instituted as a commemoration of the Exodus, or going out of Ægypt, 2ly. by S. Peters using it of himself 2 Pet. 1. 15. to signifie his departure, before expres'd by the laying down his tabernacle, v. 13. But that it is here also, in a more solemn sense, of somewhat a greater latitude, may appear by this, that the Ἔξοδος of Christ is here said to be the subject of the discourse betwixt Elias and Moses, and Christ, upon mount Tabor. And what the matter of that discourse was, hath been set down at large, from sufficient evidences, Note on Mat. 17. a. viz. the coming of the great and terrible day of the Lord, Malac. 4. 5. before which Elias was first to come. Which being there sufficiently manifest, and explained to denote the approaching destruction of the obstinate, unbelieving Jews, may farther be cleared by another place, wherein 'tis mention'd what the subject of this discourse was, that of S. Peter, that was present at this vision, 2 Pet. 1. 16. where he affirmes, that at his being on the mount Tabor with Christ, he had a revelation concerning (that which was the matter of that whole Epistle of his) the power and coming of Jesus Christ (which what it signifies in divers places of the New Testament, viz. a middle second coming of Christ upon the Jews, hath been shewn at large, Note on Mat. 24. b.) And so again, 1 Pet. 5. 1. when he saith he was a witness of Christs sufferings, and a partaker of the glory which should be revealed, that latter seems to referre to his presence at the transfiguration, where this glory that was to follow Christs sufferings was represented to him and two other disciples. To which purpose 'tis also observable in what sense we find the word ἔξοδος used Heb. 11. 22. and in the title of the second book of Moses, to denote the departure of the Israelites out of Ægypt to Canaan. And accordingly in S. Judes Epistle (which is but the Epitome of, and parallel to that 2d. of S. Peter) where S. Peter saith, 2 Pet. 1. 15, 16. I will endeavour to put you in mind of these things, that is, of this power and coming of our Lord which he had made known to them, he hath these words v. 5. I would put you in mind, that the Lord having delivered the people of Israel out of the land of Ægypt, destroyed those that did not believe. Which referring to that ἔξοδος, Moses's bringing the Israelites out of Ægypt, supposes that to be an image or resemblance of that coming of Christ, that is, of what Christ should now do within a while, viz. that being gone out of the world, and by that means of his death having brought his people out of their captivity, he should not onely overwhelm his enemies the Jews, like Pharaoh and the Ægyptians, but withal destroy the wicked, impure, Gnostick Christians, like the disobedient Israelites in the wilderness. And that this (as it may properly be contain'd under the word ἔξοδος, so) was the thing that Saint Luke meant here by it, may probably appear 1. by the agreeableness of it, and by the Evangelists referring it (it came to passe, saith he, after these words about 8 dayes, that Jesus took Peter and John, &c. v. 28.) to the discourse immediately precedent (for the expressing of which, as by an Embleme, the transfiguration seems to have been designed) which is all to that purpose of preserving the believers that take up Christs crosse, and destroying all such, who (as the Gnosticks afterward, and those that were corrupted by them) should be most careful to preserve their lives; 2ly. by the mention of Jerusalem, where all this was to be fulfill'd, first Christ to die there, then all these glorious works of God to be shewn upon that people, in destroying the unbelievers, and the ἀπειθήσαντες, the disobedient provokers, Heb. 3. 12, 16, 18. among them, and preserving the sincere, pure, persevering, faithful Christians in the midst of that destruction. These arguments do not pretend to demonstrate, but have been added ex abundanti to that one ground laid Mat. 17. (Note a.) onely as probabilities concurring with that which is there evidenced. To this may be added an observation of * S. Chrysostomes, ὁ μὲν νέος —— ἡ παρουσίαν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἔνσαρκον ἔξοδον καλεῖ, Our Lord Jesus Christ calls his coming in the flesh by this title of ἔξοδος or going out, citing Mat. 13. 3. of the Sower going out, and John 16. 28. of his having come out from the father; and the same * again, ὁ μὲν δὴ χριστὸς ἔξοδον ἡ ἑαυτοῦ παρουσίαν εἰκότως καλεῖ, + To. 4. p. 441. l. 27. * li. 35.

Christ fitly calls his coming ἔξοδον; Which observation, if it have any force in it, then may this other middle coming of Christ to the destruction of the Jews, so often styled παρουσία the coming of the Lord, and of Christ, be as fitly here expres'd by ἔξοδον, not the going away, or departure from this earth, but his coming in power and vengeance from heaven a consequent of his Ascension thither. On * this place of S. Chrysostome the learned Andrew Downes observes, that the Hebrews expresse διακονία and διοίκησις any administration or discharge of any office, by going in and going out. Which if it be applyable to the latter of them, taken alone, (as it is both here and in that place of S. Chrysostome) then 'tis a farther account of the propriety of this sense which I have affix'd to it, this coming of Christ to the destruction of his crucifiers, being an eminent act of administration of his regal office (and thence oft called the kingdom of God) in the executing judgement on such traiterous opposers of his kingdom.

* Tom. 8. p. 560.

d. Ἀνάλημψις

V. 51. Received up] Ἀνάλημψις here applyed to Christ may possibly belong to his assumption up to heaven out of this world, which then might be said to draw near: but 'tis somewhat more probable that it should signifie his Crucifixion which was to be at Jerusalem, toward which place he is here said to go, because his time was come. And to this the expression agrees, which is used by Christ, Joh. 12. 32. ἐὰν ὑψωθῶ, if I be lifted up, which the text saith was a testification of the kind of his death, that is, of his crucifixion: and indeed the Syriack word for the Crosse, being זקף from זקף to erect or lift up (noting the tignum or palus which was in sublime erectus) to be crucified, in the Syriack expression will be to be exalted or lifted up.

e. Πνεῦμα

V. 55. Spirit] The word πνεῦμα Spirit is very diversely taken in the New Testament, 1. sometimes (with the addition of Θεοῦ or Χριστοῦ God or Christ, or ἅγιον holy, and sometimes without it) for the eternal Spirit of God, the holy Ghost, the third person in the sacred Trinity, Mat. 28. 19 into which we are baptized. And from thence 2dly. for the graces and gifts of that Spirit, whether those that are of use to all sorts of men, as the Spirit of supplication, Zach. 12. 10. that is, zealous ardent prayer, and accordingly we read of praying ἐν πνεύματι, Ephes. 6. 18. in, or with, the Spirit, and Jude 20. with the addition of ἁγίῳ in, or with, the holy Spirit, praying as those do that are by the Spirit of God enabled or raised to perform this duty with some ardency. So Eph. 5. 19. being filled with the Spirit (in opposition to being drunk with wine) is expressed by speaking in Psalms and hymnes, and spiritual songs, in, or with, the heart, zealously and cordially, Or whether those which belong not to all, but onely to those which are thus to be qualified for any office, whether Regal, or Prophetick, or Evangelical. So the Spirit of prophecy Act. 2. 18. and the double portion of Elias's Spirit, that is, the right (as of primogeniture) of succeeding him in his prophetick office. So 1 Cor. 14. 12. ζηλωταὶ πνευμάτων zealous of Spirits, that is, of those gifts of tongues &c. that were given the Apostles for the planting of the Gospel. So v. 2. he that speaks with tongues, πνεύματι λαλεῖ μυστήρια, speaks in an hidden, unintelligible manner by that gift of tongues (see v. 19. and 23.) for no man heares, that is, understands him, and in the same sense v. 14. my Spirit, that is, my gift of tongues prayeth, I make use of that gift, which no body but my self understands, &c. 3ly. 'Tis taken for an Angel, whether good or bad; good, Revel. 1. 4. bad, Mar. 1. 23. 5. 2. and unclean, that is, diabolical, or evil spirit, as appeareth v. 9. From the ambiguity of which it is that πνευματικοὶ 1 Cor. 12. 1. is taken in the latitude both for those that are acted with an evil, and which are inspired with a good Spirit, the Spirit of God, which is looked on as a fountain of all supernatural revelations, 1 Cor. 2. 12. and opposed there to the spirit of the world, that which the world knows or can reveal to us, (see Note on Rom. 9. a.) To this, I suppose, must be reduced another notion not farre distant, wherein the word Spirits signifies teachers, pretenders to inspiration from God, whether truely or falsly, so 1 Joh. 4. 1. Believe not every spirit, but trie the spirits, whether they be of God, Give not heed to every teacher, but examine all such pretenders, whether they be truely of God, or no; for, as it follows, many false prophets have gone out into the world, where those false prophets are one sect of those spirits which must be examined. So v. 2. by this ye know the spirit of God, that is, a truely inspired teacher sent by God, Every spirit which confesses Jesus Christ which is come in the flesh, is from God, And v. 3. Every spirit which confesseth not, &c. (the spirit again is the teacher, for to him onely it belongeth to confesse or not confesse.) And this is that of Antichrist (the Antichristian teachers) which cometh and now is in the world, which cannot be affirmed again but of a person; Which is yet more manifest v. 5. They are from the world (διὰ τοῦτο in the Masculine) therefore they speak from the world, and the world heareth them. You are from God, he that knoweth God heareth you; Where the spirits before, are now described as teachers, worldly or divine, and again expressed in the end of ver. 6. by the Spirit of truth, and the spirit of errour, either orthodox, or erroneous, seducing teachers, the latter of which are distinctly called πλάνοι deceivers or impostors, 2 Joh. 7. and those with the same character affix'd to them that belonged to the spirits which were not of God, 1 Joh. 4. 3. From whence it will be most reasonable to interpret the πνεύματα πλάνα seducing spirits 1 Tim. 4. 1. of persons also, though the doctrines of devils that are joyned with them, would incline to interpret them of doctrines taught by such. 4ly. 'Tis taken sometimes for an apparition, the shape or seeming of a body, without any real corporeity in it. So Luk. 24. 37, 39. ἐδόκουν πνεῦμα θεωρεῖν, they thought they saw a spirit, for which Mat. 14. 26. and Mar. 6. 49. φάντασμα a phantasme is used. 5ly. It is taken for the spirit of man, the supreme diviner faculty, opposed to the body of flesh, Gal. 5. 17. 1 Thess. 5. 23. and set higher then ψυχή, the soul, common to man with other sensitive creatures. So 1 Cor. 2. 11. the spirit of a man that is in him, to which it belongeth to search to the secrets and bottome of him. So 1 Pet. 3 19. πνεύματα ἐν φυλακῇ are the spirits and souls of men, (of the meaning of which place see Note on 1 Pet. 3. f.) So Joh. 6. 63. the spirit that enliveneth is the soul that animates the body (as Jam. 2. 26.) And from thence in the end of that verse (where he saith that the words which he spake unto them were spirit and life) the meaning must be, that Christ spake not of a carnal, grosse, but an immaterial, spiritual eating, that is, receiving and laying up his doctrine in their hearts and souls, and amending their lives by it, (which is also the true, durable, profitable eating, farre beyond the corporeal, external, as Christ and his doctrine are the true Manna v. 55.) so Joh. 4. 23. the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit, that is, the service and worship of God now under the Gospel, shall not consist in the external legal performances, but extend to the heart and soul, those duties of real purity and piety, which were typified by those legal shadows; So when the Spirit signifies the Gospel, as that is opposed to the Law under the title of the flesh, Gal. 3. 3. and in many other places, this is taken by Analogie from that acception of the spirit for the soul, as that is the principle of life, and that an inward principle. These are the more obvious acceptions of the word, which belong to most of the places where the word is used, and in most of them the Context will readily determine to which. In some few other places it is used in a different sense, and notes 6ly. a way of dispensation or œconomy, a disposition or course of things, as when the Law is called the spirit spirit of bondage, Rom. 8. 15. that is, the way of dealing with men as with ſervants (as it was with the Jews) and on the other ſide the ſpirit of Adoption, the more ingenuous way of dealing, as with ſons, now under the Goſpel. And ſo here, when they would, as Elias had done, have called for fire on the Samaritans, Chriſt tells them they know not of what ſpirit they are, that is, they conſidered not under what diſpenſation they were, Chriſt came to ſave, &c. the courſe or way of proceedings which the Goſpel brought in, or was meant to teach men, was very diſtant from that which had been obſervable in Elias under the Old Teſtament, and conſequently they muſt not do as Elias had done. Chriſt came to infuſe and teach by his example and ſermons an higher charity (even to enemies and rejecters of Chriſt himſelf) then was thought neceſſary before. They that rejected, and ſcoffed at a Prophet then, the Prophet had commiſſion to deſtroy them, and accordingly without farther admonitions calls for fire from heaven to devoure them preſently: But they that refuſe and crucifie Chriſt, are by him prayed for, and are by his command yet farther to be preached to, and, if poſſible, brought to repentance; and according to this example, ſo are all Chriſtians to conform themſelves, and if they do, then are they ſaid to be of Chriſts, and not of Elias's kind of ſpirit, of the Evangelical diſpenſation or œconomy. So 1 Pet. 4. 14. If ye be reproached for the name of Chriſt, &c. the Spirit of God, that is, the ſame way of œconomy which was uſed toward Chriſt incarnate, reſteth on you, is uſed among you; 7thly, It ſignifies affection, temper, diſpoſition of any (which is a ſenſe lightly varied from the former) ſo Luk. 1. 17. the ſpirit of Elias is that temper, affection, zeal that was obſervable in Elias. So 1 Joh. 3. 24. By this we know that God abideth in us, by the ſpirit that he hath given us, that is, by our having the ſame temper, the ſame affection, which is ſo obſervable in God, that is, that of charity to our brethren, v. 23. That this is the meaning appears by comparing it with ch. 4. 12, 13. If we love one another, God abideth in us, &c. by this we know that we abide in him, and he in us, becauſe he hath given us of his ſpirit. So Rom. 8. 9. Ye are not in the fleſh, but in the ſpirit, that is, (in the former notion of the ſpirit for that inward purity and obedience required under the Goſpel) ye muſt live pure, ſpiritual lives (without which there is no pleaſing God v. 8.) if ſo be the ſpirit of God dwelleth in you, that is, if the ſacred Evangelical temper of which we have the precepts and pattern in Chriſt, continue among you. But if any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, that is, if that temper ſo obſervable in Chriſt be not at all diſcernible in you, ye are none of his, ye cannot pretend to be Chriſtians, or expect to enjoy the priviledges of ſuch, and v. 11. If the ſpirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus dwell in you, that is, if that divine Godlike temper be conſtantly in you, he that raiſed up Jeſus from the dead, that is, God, will alſo quicken your mortal bodies, give even theſe mortal bodies of yours a joyful reſurrection, by his ſpirit dwelling in you, that is, by the power of that ſame Spirit that raiſed Chriſt, if ye be now animated and quickened by that, if that divine temper of his continue in you. So v. 14. being led by the Spirit is living according to the pattern ſet before us by Chriſt. And ſo the ſpirit of fear, and of power, and love, &c. 2 Tim. 1. 7. are thoſe affections of fear on one ſide cowardiſe and timidity, and of courage and conſtancy and adherence to Chriſt (ſuch as was exemplified to us in Chriſt, in declaring and aſſerting his Fathers will) on the other ſide. In the Old Teſtament 'tis farther uſed, ſometimes for skill and abilities, Exod. 28. 3. the Spirit of wiſdome to make Aaron garments, and Exod. 31. 2. Bezaleel is filled with the Spirit of God in wiſdome, and in underſtanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanſhip. Sometimes for zeal, as 1 Sam. 11. 6. where the Spirit of God came upon Saul, and his anger was kindled greatly. Sometimes for a Commiſſion to an office, or employment, as Judg. 3. 10. the Spirit of God came upon Othniel, that is, he received miſſion from God, and he judged Iſrael. So upon Gedeon, ch. 6. 34. and on Ieptha, ch. 11. 29 and on Samſon, ch. 13. 25. but this ſtill joyned with extraordinary abilities for the diſcharge of the office, and with particular incitations to ſome extraordinary things, which might teſtifie to men this their Commiſſion from God, or to themſelves, that they are thus deſigned and qualified for it. As appears by Sampſon c. 14. 6. where the Spirit of the Lord coming mightily upon him, denotes the ſtrength which God gave him to kill the Lion, and that an eſſay of what he ſhould be able to do to the Philiſtines v. 19. Thus Num. 11. 17. when God takes of the ſpirit which is upon Moſes, and puts it upon the Seventy, 'tis apparent that the Spirit there ſignifies the Commiſſion or authority that Moſes had to govern the people, together with abilities to diſcharge it (ſee Deut. 34. 9.) which is there communicated by God to the Seventy, as it follows, and they ſhall bear the burthen of the people with thee, that is, take part of the burthen of ruling them. So v. 25. The Lord took of the Spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the Seventy, and when the Spirit reſted upon them they prophecyed, &c. that is, ſome gifts extraordinary attended this commiſſion, partly to ſignifie that they were thus ſet apart and endowed with authority by God, and partly to fit them for the diſcharge of their office conferred on them. So v. 26. the Spirits reſting on Eldad and Medad was Gods conferring this authority on them, to which were joyned alſo thoſe gifts of the Spirit, and they prophecied alſo, and ſo ver. 29. Would God all the Lords people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them, that is, communicate that power to them which he had given to Moſes, and qualifie them with extraordinary gifts accordingly. So at the making of Saul King, the Spirit of the Lord ſhall come upon thee, 1 Sam. 10. 6. ſome extraordinary change wrought on him, by which his commiſſion was evidenced to himſelf and others, and ſo ver. 10. And proportionably in the New Teſtament, Chriſts Prophetick commiſſion was thus conferr'd on him, The Spirit of God deſcending like a dove, and lighting, or reſting, on him, and (above what had before been done to any) a voice from heaven proclaiming this Commiſſion to be given to him from his Father, and this from Iſa. 61. 1. is called the Spirit of the Lord being upon him, and that explained by his being anointed to preach, Luk. 4. 18. and by the Spirit of wiſdom, &c. Iſa. 11. 2, 3. which ſignifies a commiſſion and all other extraordinary gifts and powers conferred upon him, and is called his being anointed with the holy Ghoſt and with power. And ſo of his Apoſtles Act. 2 4 their being fill'd with the holy Ghoſt, is their being endow'd with commiſſion from heaven for that ſacred function, and accordingly they ſpake with tongues (as the Seventy and Saul, after the Spirits coming on them, prophecied) as the Spirit gave them utterance, and this as the completion of that promiſe of Chriſt that they ſhould be endued with power from on high, Luk. 24. 49. or receive δύναμιν πνεύματος ἁγίου the power of the holy Ghoſt coming upon them. And ſo ever after, the ordaining of a Biſhop in the Church was expreſſed by his receiving the holy Ghoſt. Other uſes there are of the word Spirit, which will be diſcernible by the Context, and be reducible to one or more of theſe, but are too long to be more particularly ſet down here.

2. Therefore ſaid he unto them, [The harveſt truly is great, but the labourers are few, pray ye therefore the Lord of the harveſt, that he would ſend forth labourers into his harveſt.]

or rule of life, and asked him what was neceſſary to be obſerved to the attaining that eternall life which Chriſt promiſed: And he anſwered him, The very ſame which in the Law of Moſes is ſet down as the main ſubſtantiall part of the Law, which he therefore bid him recite unto him.

27. And he anſwering ſaid,] Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy ſtrength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbour as thy ſelfe.

27. And he recited out of Deut. 6. 5. the known ſummary of the Law,

28. And he ſaid unto him, Thou haſt anſwered well, [this do and thou ſhalt live.]

29. But he willing to juſtify himſelf ſaid unto Jeſus, And who is my neighbour?]

29. But he willing to ſet out his own perfections, and being confident of his having performed the firſt part, the duties toward God, by the exact obſervance of the ceremonies of the Law, made no queſtion concerning that, but for the ſecond, the love of the neighbour, he propoſed that other queſtion, Who are contained under that title of neighbour?

30. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid,] A certain man went down from Jeruſalem to Jericho, and fell among theeves, which ſtripped him of his raiment and wounded him, and departed, leaving him halfe dead.

30. This queſtion Jeſus thought beſt to anſwer by a parable, ſaying,

31. And [a] * by chance there came down a certain Prieſt that way, and when he ſaw him he paſſed by on the other ſide.]

* Or, upon occaſion.

31. And a certain Prieſt without any knowledge of what had happened, at the ſame time went that way, and ſaw him, and would take no pity on him. a.

32. And likewiſe a Levite, [when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and paſſed by on the other ſide.]

32. coming thither in his paſſage, ſtaid ſo long as to ſee what condition he was in, and having done left him without any compaſſion.

33. But a certain Samaritane, as he journied, came where he was, and when] he ſaw him, he had compaſſion on him,

33. But though the Prieſt and the Levite, which were his countrey-men, or fellow-Jewes, were not ſo compaſſionate, yet a Samaritan, which was not ſo, being of an Aſſyrian extraction, (ſee Joh. 4. 20.) and one whoſe religion ſeparated him from the Jewes (Joh. 4. 9. and Lu. 9. 53.) was not ſo hardhearted, but aſſoon as.

34. And went to him, and [bound up his wounds, powring in oyle and wine,] and ſet him on his own beaſt, and brought him to an Inne, and took care of him.

34. waſhed his wounds, applied healing things to them, and then bound them up cleanly, as ſurgeons are wont,

35. And on the morrow when he departed, he [took out] two pence, and gave them to the hoſt, and ſaid unto him, Take care of him, and whatſoever thou ſpendeſt more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

See note on Mat. 9. 1.

36. Which now of theſe three thinkeſt thou was neighbour unto him that fell among theeves?

37. And he ſaid, He that ſhewed mercy on him. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, [Goe and doe thou likewiſe.]

37. Take that for an anſwer to thy queſtion, Who is thy neighbour, v. 29. For every perſon that is in want of thy relief, although he be to thee as a Jew to a Samaritan, upon terms of abſolute ſeparation and hoſtility toward thee, muſt be looked on by thee as the object of thy compaſſion and mercy, and of any charity of thine of which he is capable, Mat. 5. 43, 44.

38. Now it came to paſſe as they went, that he entred into a certain village, and a certain woman named Martha received him into her houſe.

40. wholly taken up about making proviſion for (and diſtributing to) the gueſts, b.

(ſee note on c. 8. a.) and ſhe came to Chriſt, and deſired him to bid her ſiſter Mary to joyne with her to make proviſion for the company, which was too much for her to doe alone.

41. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art carefull and troubled about many things,]

41. thou takeſt a great deal of unneceſſary, though not culpable pains (as in all worldly buſineſſe there is a great deal more ſolicitude then is neceſſary,)

42. But one thing is needfull, and Mary hath choſen * that good part, which ſhall not be taken from her.]

* the good portion that is given meat.

42. But the one onely thing which is abſolutely neceſſary, the hearing my word in order to the keeping it, the receving advantage by my coming to thy houſe, is much a more acceptable thing to me, then the entertaining me with ſo much diligence, and the advantage of this will continue to Mary to all eternity.

Annotations

a. Συγκυρία

V. 31. By chance] The word Συγκυρία signifies literally concurrence, when two things fall out together. Συγκυρεῖ, (it should be Συγκυρία) Ζωλυχία saith Hesychius, and Συγκύρημα, Ζωλύχημα (not with any respect to τύχη fortuna, but from τυγχάνω sum, the word signifying being and no more.) So places that lie together are called Συγκυρῦνλα, Num. 21. 25. and 35. 3. and Deut. 2. 37. according to the notion of the Simple Κυρῶ, τυγχάνω, saith Hesychius, and Κυρεῖ, ὑπάρχι, and Κυρία, ἡ κ' φύσιν ὑπάρχουσα δύναμις. And then the rendring will be most exactly thus, And the same time it fell out that a certain priest came down that way; according to * Calcidius's definition of fortune, that it is concursus simul cadentium causarum duum, originem ex proposito trahentium, ex quo concursu provenit aliquid præter spē cum admiratione, a concurrence of two causes falling together, having their beginning from counsel, from which concurrence something proceeds besides hope with admiration. But in Hippocrates it is used frequently to signifie any occasion of doing any thing, l. de Med. vet. δι' ἡδονὴν ἢ δι' ἄλλω τινα Συγκυρίλω, for pleasure, or for any other occasion, or concurrent thing, that being at the same time is the occasion of any thing. And then it may be rendred upon occasion, that is, having some business that occasion'd his going by at that time.

b. Ἀνλιλαμβά νεῖς

V. 40. Helpe] The word ἀνλιλαμβάνεῦς, especially with a Genitive of the person joyn'd with it, signifies to succour, or relieve, any in distresse, so Lu. 1. 54. ἀνλελάβετο Ἰσρὴλ, he hath relieved Israel, a work of ἔλεος mercy, as it follows, and a filling them with good things, when they were hungry v. 43. So ἀνλιλαμβάνεσθε ἀσθενόντων, Act. 20. 35. to relieve the poor, and, as it there follows, to give to them. So ἀνλιλήψεις 1 Cor. 12. 28. the office of relieving the poor; see Note e. on that chap. From hence 'tis discernible, what is the full importance of ἵνα Ζωαναλαβῆλαί μοι here; Christ was received and entertained in the house of Martha and Mary, Martha made provision for him, and all that were with him, this is called πολλὴ διακονία, a great deal of work in providing for them all, at the beginning of the verse; hereupon she complains to Christ that Mary by hearkning to him left her διακονεῖν μόνλω, to minister to them, or provide for them alone, without any body else, and thereupon desires him to bid her bear her company, in making provision for them, the ἀνλιλαμβάνεσθε, as διακονεῖν, noting the making this provision, and the σὺν added to it, the joyning with her, or bearing her company, contrary to the μόνλω, her doing it alone, precedent. Thus Rom. 8. 26. Ζωαναλαμβάνεῦς ἀσθενείας ἡμῶν, is to joyne in relieving our necessities. We have no meanes but prayer to God to relieve our selves in any distresse. But then again, we know not what is absolutely best for us, nor consequently to pray as we ought; therefore when we want and pray for ought, the Spirit of Christ joyneth with us in relieving us, that is, in interceding for us, that what is absolutely best may be granted us, joines with us in prayer, and so in relieving us by praying silently for us, and asking those things, which Christ knowes us to stand most in need of, when we doe not.

CHAP. XI.

1. And upon occasion of his frequent retiring to prayer, at a time when he was upon that performance, his disciples took into consideration, how needfull it was for them to be directed in a right performance of that duty, and thereupon, at his coming out to them, one of them besought him to give them a form of prayer, which they might constantly use, as John Baptist had given to his disciples.

1. AND it came to passe that as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.]

2. And upon that demand of his (being another time, and upon another occasion from that in the Sermon on the Mount, Mat. 6. 9.) Christ said to his disciples, Whensoever ye pray solemnly, omit not to use this form of words,

2. And he said unto them, When ye pray, say,] Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name, Thy kingdome come, Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth,

See Mat. 6. 11.

3. Give us day by day our daily bread.

a. 4. hath done us any injury.

4. And forgive us our sins, for we also forgive every one that [is a indebted to us,] And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

5. And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall goe unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves,

6. travailing by this way, is come to my house, and I have nothing to entertain him.

6. For a friend of mine [in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him.]

b. 7. both I and my children which might deliver it to thee are

7. And he from within shall answer and say, Trouble me not, b the doore is now shut, and [my children are with me] in bed, I cannot rise and give thee.

8. if respect of friendship will not work upon him, yet his coming without bashfulnesse at such a time of night, which is an argument of his reall want, and of his confidence in him to whom he comes, will certainly make him.

8. I say unto you [though he will not rise and give him because he is his friend, yet because of his * importunity he will] rise, and give him as many as he needs.

* shamelessnesse ἀναιδίαν.

9. And the same effect, let me tell you, will your constancy and earnestnesse in prayer to God have upon him.

9. And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.]

10. For no child or friend of God's ever misseth to receive from him what he thus asketh.

10. For every one that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened.]

11, 12, 13. There is no feare that God should deny such petitions, or give his children any hurtfull thing, when they ask that which is good for them, And though many things which men aske be not such, yet his Spirit, and the assistances of that, are so certainly so, that they will never be denied to them that aske them of the Father.

11. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?

12. Or if he shall ask an egge, will he offer him a scorpion?

13. If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly father give the holy Spirit to them that ask him?]

14. And the disease which that devil inflicted on the man deprived him of speech, and he cast out the devil, and restored the man to his speech again,

14. And he was casting out a devil [and it was dumb, and it came to passe that when the devil was gone our, the dumb spake] and the people wondred.

15. But

15. But ſome of them ſaid, He caſteth out devils through Beelzebub the chief of the devils.] 15. But ſome perſwaded themſelves v. 17. that all his power was from Beelzebub, Mat. 9. 34. and 12. 24. and that he having power of all inferior devils, enabled him to caſt them out.

16. And others tempting him, ſought of him a ſigne from heaven.] 16. Others, to make triall of his power, deſired him to ſhew them ſome miracles or tokens of Gods ſending him, ſome voice from heaven, or the like.

17. But he knowing their thoughts, ſaid unto them,] Every kingdome divided againſt it ſelf is brought to deſolation, and an houſe divided againſt an houſe falleth. 17. To the former of them, thoſe that thought he uſed the devils power to caſt out devils, he uſed theſe arguments of conviction (and to the latter his anſwer is ſet down Mat. 12. 39. and here ver. 29. &c.)

18. If Satan alſo be divided againſt himſelf, how ſhall his kingdome ſtand?] becauſe ye ſay that I caſt out devils through Beelzebub. 18. If there be a diviſion among the evil ſpirits, and one devil ſet himſelf againſt another, their kingdome cannot long endure, For though tis poſſible for the advancing of the devils kingdome, one inſtrument of his may undoe that which another hath done, which is not a diviſion, but a politick union and conjunction in the ſame project, yet for one to oppoſe, and violently to eject the other (ſee Mar. 1. 25.) and to doe his utmoſt to caſt him and his kingdome out of the world, this is a diviſion, which cannot be imagined among thoſe that are of a conſpiracy, but only betwixt enemies bent to ruine one another. Mat. 12. 27. g.

19. And if I by Beelzebub caſt out devils, by whom doe your ſons caſt them out? therefore [ſhall they be your judges.] 19. that which is done by them before your eyes will be an argument of conviction againſt you.

20. But if I with the finger of God caſt out devils, no doubt the kingdome of God is come upon you.] 20. But if by the power (and ſpirit Mat. 12. 28) of God it be, that I caſt out devils, then as the miracles of Moſes, confeſt by the Magicians to be done by the finger of God, Exod. 8. 19. were a certain teſtimony that he was ſent by God to redeem the people out of their bondage, So is this a certain argument, that I am now ſent by God, to redeem you, if you will believe on me.

21. When a ſtrong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace] 21. The devil will not be caſt out of his poſſeſſions, unleſſe ſome perſon arm'd by the power of God, ſuperiour to what the devil is poſſeſt with, come and conquer him.

22. But when a ſtronger then he ſhall come upon him and overcome him, he taketh from him * all his armour wherein he truſted, and divideth his ſpoiles.] 22. And therefore my caſting out devils is an argument that I come with that power, greater then any the devil hath, and conquer and diſarme him, and give all that follow me the benefits of that victory to be diſtributed among them.

* his complete armour, την πανοπλιαν αυτου

23. He that is not with me is againſt me; and he that gathereth not with me ſcattereth.] 23. Tis proverbially ſaid, He that is &c. and therefore he that doth not aſſiſt, but caſt out Satan, muſt be reſolved to be an enemy of his, and not to operate by power from him. See Mat. 12. 30. and Mar. 9. 40.

24. When the unclean ſpirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through drie places, ſeeking reſt, and finding none, he ſaith, I will return unto my houſe whence I came out.] 24. But to you that have received ſuch miracles of mercy (particularly that of caſting out devils) and made no uſe of them, I ſhall adde this parable, When &c. ſee Mat. 12. 43.

25. And when he cometh, he findeth it ſwept and garniſhed.

26. Then goeth he and taketh to him ſeven other ſpirits more wicked then himſelf, and they enter in, and dwell there, and the laſt ſtate of that man is worſe then the firſt.

27. And it came to paſſe as he ſpake theſe things, a certain woman of the company lift up her voice and ſaid unto him,] Bleſſed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou haſt ſucked. 27. And about this time his mother and brethren came to ſpeak with him, and one came and told him ſo, Mat. 12. 47. and upon mention of his mother, a woman there preſent ſaid aloud, 28. But he ſaid, Yea rather, bleſſed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.] 28. But he ſaid, Whoſoever ſhall hear and obey the the word of God, is to me as dear as mother or brethren, Mat. 12. 49, 50. and indeed that bleſſedneſſe of being an obedient faithfull ſervant of God, is farre greater then this other of having been the perſon of whoſe womb Chriſt is born, abſtracted or ſeparated from this other of having undertaken the obedience of God.

29. And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to ſay,] This is an evil generation: they ſeek a ſigne, and there ſhall no ſigne be given it, but the ſigne of Jonas the prophet. 29. As for the ſecond queſtion propoſed v. 16. he now in the preſence of a great multitude gave anſwer alſo to that, (ſee Mat. 12. 39.)

30. For as Jonas was a ſigne to the Ninevites, ſo ſhall alſo the ſon of man be to this generation.] 30. For as Jonas preaching in the ſtreets of Nineve, being accompanied with the miracle of having been three daies in the whales belly, and then being caſt up on the ſhore alive, was an aſſurance to them, that without repentance they ſhould ſpeedily be deſtroyed, So ſhall the preaching of Chriſt to the men of this age, accompanied with his death and reſurrection after three daies, be a certain forerunner of deſtruction to them that believe not.

31. The queen of the ſouth ſhall riſe up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and ſhall condemn them: for ſhe came from the uttermoſt parts of the earth to heare the wiſdome of Solomon, and behold, [* a greater then Solomon is here.] 31. here is more of wiſdome, heavenly divine doctrine, then ever was in all Solomons words, or writings. Mat. 12. 42.

32. The men of Nineve ſhall riſe up in the judgment with this generation, and ſhall condemn it, for they repented at the preaching of Jonas, and behold, [* a greater then Jonas is here.] 32. here is more powerfull preaching, denuntiation of ſeverer judgments, then thoſe that Jonah denounced againſt Nineve.

33. No

33. To that purpoſe of v. 28. that they only are bleſs'd which not only heare but obſerve Gods commands, belongs that known ſpeech of Chriſt, delivered at another time alſo, Mat. 5. 15. and Lu. 8. 16. No man &c.

33. No man] when he hath lighted a candle putteth it in a ſecret place, neither under a buſhel, but on a candleſtick, that they which come in may ſee the light.

34. And to the ſame purpoſe may be applied that other, uſed alſo by Chriſt in the ſame ſermon on the mount, (ſee note on Mat. 6. 22. l.) that the heart being once truly warmed with Chriſtian virtues will fill the whole body with charitable and Chriſtian actions.

34. The light of the body is the eye, therefore when thine eye is ſingle, thy whole body alſo is full of light but when thine eye is evil, thy body alſo is full of darkneſſe.]

35. Take care therefore that the Chriſtian precepts and graces afforded thee, be not accompanied with an unchriſtian life.

35. Take heed therefore that the light which is in thee be not darkneſſe.]

36. If therfore the Chriſtian doctrine have taken full poſſeſſion of thee, and no faculty or affection be left out from being wrought upon by it, then ſure the actions will be moſt illuſtriouſly ſo, and the whole life of ſuch an one will be as a room with a blazing torch or candle in it, enlightned in every corner, without any intermiſſions or mixture of unchriſtian actions.

36. If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole ſhall be full of light, as when * the bright ſhining of a candle doth give thee light.]

* a candle by bright ſhining enlightneth thee, ἡ λαμπὰς τῦ ἀστραπῆ φατίζει σε.

37. And as he ſpake, a certain Phariſee beſought him to dine with him, and he went in, and ſat down to meat.

38. the Phariſee wondred to ſee him lie down to dinner without waſhing his hands firſt. See Mar. 7. 3. notes on a. and b.

38. And [when the Phariſee ſaw it, he marvailed that he had not firſt waſhed before dinner.]

39. Ye hypocriticall Phariſees waſh your ſelves, as if a man ſhould waſh his veſſels, the outſide of them only, leaving the inſides of them full of all filthineſſe; for thus doe ye waſh your bodies, leaving your ſoules full of all uncleanneſſe.

39. And the Lord ſaid unto him, [Now doe ye Phariſees make clean the outſide of the cup and platter, but your inward part is full of * ravening and wickedneſſe.]

* violence, and villany, ἁρπαγῆς καὶ πονηρίας. See 1 Cor. 5. h.

40. This is an extreme folly, for if your outward waſhings were in obedience to God, you would cleanſe the inſides, your hearts and ſoules alſo as well as your bodies.

40. Ye fooles, did not he that made that which is without, make that which is within alſo ?]

c. d. 41. The beſt way of purifying your ſelves, eſtates, meats, and drinks, &c. from all pollution cleaving to them, is (in ſtead of that which you Phariſees attempt by waſhing your hands, your veſſels &c.) by works of mercy and liberall almeſgiving, as far as you are able, reſtoring to the injured, or if there be not place for that, giving to thoſe that want.

41. But rather * c give almes of ſuch things as you have, and behold, all things are d clean unto you.]

* What you have or are able, give almes or in almes.

Theſe are the main things which God requires of you, though thoſe other lower performances ought not to be omitted, of paying tithes exactly, according to the law and cuſtome among you.

42. But woe unto you Phariſees, for ye * tithe mint and [rue, and all manner of herbs, and paſſe over judgement and the love of God: theſe ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.]

* pay tithes of, δεκατοῦτε.

43. Conſiſtories, Mat. 23. 6.

43. Woe unto you Phariſees, for ye love the uppermoſt ſeats in the [ſynagogues,] and greetings in the markets.

44. grown over with graſſe, and they which ſee the ſpecious outſides of them, Mat. 23. 27. know not what is within, viz. bones of dead men and putrefaction, and ſo are polluted by them, (ſee note on Mat. 23. g.)

44. Woe unto you Scribes and Phariſees, hypocrites, for ye are as graves [which appear not, and the men that walk over them, are not aware of them.]

45. Doctors of the Law, members of the Sanhedrin, or Conſiſtories, and ſaith unto him, This ſpeech of thine ſeems to reflect on us, and the gravity that belongs to our places and perſons, and is a reproach to us.

45. Then anſwered one of the [Lawyers, and ſaid unto him, Maſter, thus ſaying thou reproacheſt us alſo.]

46. And he ſaid, [Woe unto you alſo, ye lawyers: for ye lade men with burthens grievous to be born, and ye your ſelves touch not the burthens with one of your fingers.]

46. And ye certainly are not free, Ye are they which lay heavy taſks on others, and think not your ſelves obliged to performe or undergoe any part of them.

47, 48. Woe be to you for that hypocriſie of yours, in appearing to bear ſuch reſpect, as to rebuild the tombes of thoſe prophets, whom your fathers killed; you your ſelves having as bloody thoughts againſt thoſe that are now ſent to you, and being ready to fill up their meaſure of blood-guiltineſſe, Mat. 23. 32. By your adorning their ſepulchers, ye bear witneſſe that your fathers kill'd the prophets, and at the ſame time ye are well pleaſed with their works, that is, delighted in, and meditate the like; and though ye ſay Mat. 23. 30. that if you had lived in their dayes, ye would not have put the prophets to death, yet by your preſent actions of perſecuting me, and thirſting after my blood, ye ſhew that ſuch pretenſions are but hypocriſie in you.

e. 47. Woe unto you, * for ye e build the ſepulchers of the prophets, and your fathers killed them.

48. † Truly ye bear witneſſe that ye allow the deeds of your fathers, * for they indeed killed them, and ye build their ſepulchers.]

* that ὅτι

† Thus ye beare witneſſe, and conſent, or are well pleaſed with the deeds, Ἄρα μαρτυρεῖτε καὶ συνευδοκεῖτε τοῖς ἔργοις

49. And ſo clearly you are the people of whom God hath prophecyed, that they will kill and perſecute thoſe whom he ſends to them, for this was begun by your fathers, and continued in you, and is like to be perfected by you.

49. Therefore alſo ſaid the wiſdome of God, I will ſend them Prophets and † Apoſtles, and ſome of them they ſhall ſlay and perſecute,]

* that ὅτι

50. And this is likely to be the effect of it, the Jewes of this age ſhall undergoe the ſevereſt vengeance that all the murthering of Gods prophets can bring on a rebellious people.

50. That the blood of all the prophets which was ſhed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation.]

51. See Mat. 23. g.

51. From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which periſhed betwixt the Altar and the Temple, Verily I ſay unto you, it ſhall be required of this generation.

52. have robb'd the people of that underſtanding of Scripture, which might make them embrace the Goſpel now preach'd to them: ye will not receive the faith your ſelves, and thoſe which are inclinable to receive it, ye hinder as much as you can.

52. Woe unto you lawyers, for ye [have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entred not in your ſelves, and them that were entring in ye hindred.]

53. And

* be ſharply angry with him. * poſe him concerning many things.

53. And as he ſaid theſe things unto them, the Scribes and Phariſees began to [* urge him vehemently, and to *f provoke him to ſpeak of many things,

54. Laying wait for him, and ſeeking to catch ſomething out of his mouth, that they might accuſe him.]

53, 54. to expreſſe great anger (ſee Mar. 6. a.) and indignation againſt him, and to propoſe many things to him by way of queſtion, that they might get ſomewhat from him, which being teſtified againſt him, might be matter of accuſation. f.

Annotations on Chap. XI.

a. Ὀφείλει

V. 4. Indebted] The word ὀφείλειν to owe, is here to be taken in a notion peculiar to the Syriack language (wherein Chriſt certainly ſpake) which neither the Greek, nor Latine, nor Hebrew had made uſe of; For he that ſinnes, or offends, either againſt God or man, is in Syriack ſaid חיב a debter, and ſo חיבא debitum, a debt, that is, peccatum, a ſinne. So Exod. 32. This people חטא חטאה have ſinned a ſinne, the Targum read חב חובתא hath ought a debt. So Lev. 4. If a prieſt, &c. יחטא ſhall ſinne, the Targum reads, יחוב, ſhall owe. So Lu. 13. 4. of thoſe on whom the tower fell, doe you think, ſaith Chriſt, that theſe were ὀφειλέται παντὸς ἀνθρώπου, debters, that is, offenders, beyond all? And proportionably to this, to pardon is by them expreſs'd by שבק, to remit, and here is rendred ἀφίεναι, to releaſe or abſolve.

b. Θύρα κέκλεισται

V. 7. The doore is ſhut] The Romans were wont to expreſſe the firſt part of the night, the cloſe of the evening, by prima face, candle-lighting. A later part other nations expreſs'd by ſhutting up the dores, called in Greek κλωσίθυρον, which time was wont by a kind of bell-man to be cryed about the ſtreets. Thus Joſ. 25. About the time of ſhutting the gate, where the Greek reads ὡς δὲ ἡ πύλη ἐκλείετο, when the gate was ſhut. Thus in this place, the doore is ſhut, is meant as an expreſſion of the lateneſſe of the time of night, and is expreſs'd v. 5. by μεσονυκτίου at midnight.

c. τὰ ἐνόντα

V. 41. Such things as you have] The phraſe τὰ ἐνόντα ſignifies according to ability. So when Epictetus appoints to abſtain from oathes ἐκ τῶν ἐνόντων, as farre as we are able, and in Gemiſthus Pletho περ. ἀρετ. p 57. Ζὴν εὐτελῶς ἐκ τῶν ἐνόντων φιλοκαλῶν, ſpeaking of him, who of that which he hath, exerciſes liberality without any great expenſe. This is expreſs'd in Tob. by ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων σοὶ ποίει ἐλεημοσύνην, give alms of what thou haſt, and ſo Lu. 8. 3. & 12. 33. and ſo ſaith Heſychius, Ἐνὸν, ἐνυπάρχον, ἢ δυνατόν ὄν, that which a man hath in his power; and Phavorinus to the ſame purpoſe, δυνατὸν, ἐνδεχόμενον, ἐνυπάρχον, and 'tis anſwerable to that of Deut. 16. 10. which we read, according as the Lord thy God hath bleſſed thee. But becauſe the precept is here given to the hypocriticall Phariſees, who may have been guilty of great ſinnes of injuſtice, and 'tis not impoſſible ἁρπαγὴ may ſignifie that, v. 39. (though I conceive it may fitly be taken in another ſenſe, noted 1 Cor. 5. Note h.) and becauſe this ſinne of oppreſſion, and rapine, and cheating, and wronging others is ſo ordinary in the world that it may be reaſonable for our Saviours ſpeech to reſpect that among other ſinnes, and ſo to propoſe here the way, on the ſinners part, required for the cleanſing of that. Therefore it is not amiſs yet farther to obſerve, that the place here τὰ ἐνόντα δότε ἐλεημοσύνην, and not ἐκ τῶν ἐνόντων, or ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων, may in conſtruction be ſo rendred, as that the two Accuſative caſes ſhall be ſet by way of Appoſition, and both follow the Verb δότε, and then the meaning will be, give what you have, or as far as you are able, as far as all that you have will reach. This we know the injurious is bound to, in caſe of rapine, to reſtore all that he hath taken away, before he can hope for pardon; but in caſe he be not able to reſtore all, yet certainly he muſt goe as far as he can, and that is the leaſt that will be accepted, (nay Zacchæus's example when he repented, may be fit in that caſe to be conſidered, who made a fourfold reſtitution to the injured perſon, and gave half of his goods to the poor, over and above) And he that either reſtores to the utmoſt, or doth it as far as is now in his power, he doth reſtore τὰ ἐνόντα in this ſenſe. But becauſe many caſes there are, wherein there is not place for exact reſtitution to the perſon injured, he may be gone, and all that have right to what was his, and the like, and in that caſe giving to the poor, in works of mercy or pity, is the only way left of reſtitution: and the like holds in other ſinnes, wherein though no other man be wrong'd yet there is pollution contracted, and that muſt be cleanſed by ſome effectuall works of repentance, and mercy to the poor is ſpecified as an eminent work of this kind, Dan. 4. 27. therefore in all theſe, and the like reſpects, the precept is here given more generally, to make uſe of theſe works of almes, where the caſe requires, as reſtitution where the caſe requires that, and even then, after Zacchæus's example, almes alſo; And ſo the full of the precept is, τὰ ἐνόντα δότε ἐλεημοσύνην, give what you have in almes, even all that you have, where all is ill gotten, and the whole lump is by that means unclean; or as much as you have taken by rapine, and oppreſſion, whatever that is (with advantage) if you have ſo much: If you have not, τὰ ἐνόντα, what you have will by Gods mercy be accepted. And ſo in other ſinnes, wherein others have not been injured, or wherein no reſtitution is required, ſtill a very liberal almes-giving is required, not only ſo much, as were every mans duty, abſtracted from theſe pollutions thus contracted (as almes-giving, we know is ſimply under precept, and ſome degree of it is our righteouſneſſe, in the ſacred ſtyle, we are unjuſt if we performe it not) but in ſome proportion to a treſpaſſe-offering, ſo much more, as a fruit of repentance, and a revenge on our ſelves, and an evidence of our true contrition for our ſinnes. And this in reſpect of the quotum, ſet down indefinitely (not defining the juſt proportion, but leaving that to our choice) τὰ ἐνόντα, what we have or are able to give, and not onely ſome ſmall mite, unproportionable, as it would perhaps be interpreted, if it were here ἐκ τῶν ἐνόντων in Gemiſthus's notion premiſed, or as that is no more than ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων in Tobit, out of what thou haſt.

d. πάντα καθαρὰ ἐστὶν

1b. Cleane] The Arabick word for almes Zachat, hath a double notion, ſay they, either of encreaſing, or cleanſing; the firſt, quia erogatio ejus conciliat benedictionem opibus, becauſe the giving almes obtaines a bleſſing on the wealth, and ſo encreaſeth it; the ſecond, quod opes ab inquinamento & animum ab avaritiæ ſordibus purgat, becauſe it purgeth the riches from the pollution and filthineſſe that adheres to them, and the mind from the ſullages of covetouſneſſe, according to that of Mat. 6. If the eye be ſingle, that is, where the virtue of liberality is in the heart, the whole body is full of light, that is, of all Chriſtian virtues, contrary to the vices pointed at by the darkneſſe that followes. In reference to this notion of the word in the Syriack, and Arabick, this ſeems to be here ſpoken by our Saviour, Give almes, which comes from a word that ſignifies to cleanſe, and all ſhall be clean to you, your wealth ſhall be purg'd and bleſſed, and your mind cleanſed alſo.

e. Οὐαὶ ὅτι οἰκοδομεῖτε

V. 47. Build the Sepulchers] The meaning of this paſſage being thus rendred, Woe unto you that ye build the ſepulchers of the Prophets, and your fathers kill'd them, will ſoon appear, if it be obſerved 1. that the woes here ſo oft denounced in this and other places againſt the Phariſees, were for ſeverall acts of Hypocriſie in them.

Now Hypocriſie or perſonation, being the outward appearance, the diſguiſe, or ſpecious attire, of an action, that is here ſet down by it ſelf, the vice that was diſguiſed, and endevoured to be conceal'd under it, being not here named, but by their preſent actions (perſecuting Chriſt) viſible and notorious, and withall intimated by S. Matthew, chap. 23. 32. as if he had ſaid, Your building, and adorning the ſepulchers of the old Prophets which your fathers kill'd, is in you a ſolemn perſonation or hypocriſie, acting the parts of very pious men, that bear much reverence to them, (and ſuch is your ſpeech, Mat. 23. 30. that if ye had lived in your fathers dayes, ye would not have had any hand in the killing the prophets.) Secondly, by obſerving the καὶ and, between the μαρτυρεῖτε ye bear witneſſe and the Μαρτυρεῖτε καὶ Συνευδοκεῖτε συνευδοκεῖτε ye have a complacency with the deeds of your fathers; for that And conjoines two different things affirm'd of them by our Saviour, which are ordinarily confounded, Firſt, ye bear witneſſe to the works of your fathers, ye teſtifie to all men that your fathers kill'd the prophets that were ſent to them, and Secondly, ye like well, approve of their deeds, (not that by their building their tombs they expreſs'd that approbation, but that otherwiſe that was evidently ſeen) and though to diſguiſe this, ye adorne their ſepulchers, yet ye doe really the ſame things that ye profeſſe to condemn, and ſo are Hypocrites in ſo doing: which is more diſtinctly ſet down by Matthew, when he adds in a prophetick ſtyle πληρώσατε fill ye up the meaſure of your fathers, noting their fathers ſins, that they diſclaim, to be of the ſame kind, but of an inferior degree to thoſe which they are now ready to practiſe, and ſo to bring upon them thoſe woes, that utter exciſion, which had not befall'n their fathers. Thirdly, by taking in into this period that which both here, and in S. Matthew, is at the cloſe of it, I will ſend them Prophets and Apoſtles, and ſome of them they will ſlay and perſecute, to evidence them the generation of thoſe Vipers, whoſe practiſes they profeſs'd to diſlike, but doe really imitate, which is the thing, wherein their Hypocriſie conſiſted, and upon which the judgment of hell came upon them.

V. 53. Provoke] Ἀποστοματίζειν in ordinary Greek is to recite without book, as a ſcholer doth a leſſon, ἀπὸ μνήμης λέγειν, ſaith Suidas, and Phavorinus. And accordingly the place in Heſychius muſt be corrected, in ſtead of ὑποστομίζειν, ὑποστομαλίζειν. But here by an Hebraiſme of uſing the Active voice in the ſenſe of the Hebrew * Hiphil, it ſignifies to make recite, and belongs to the Maſter or him that hears the other ſay his leſſon. So ſaith Suidas, the word is uſed ὅταν διδάσκαλος κελεύει τὸν παῖδα λέγειν ἅπερ ὑπὸ τοῦ μαλῶν, when a maſter bids a boy ſay, or recite, and Heſychius ὑπὸ μνήμης ἀξιῶν λέγειν to require one to ſay by heart, as Julius Pollux of the Paſſive. Ἀποστομαλίζεσθαι, ἐρωτᾶσθαι τὰ μαθήματα, to be asked, or required, an account of what he hath learnt. Agreeably to this did they here aske Chriſt queſtions, and poze him, to hear what he could or would ſay, as an angry ſchoolmaſter, that ſeeks occaſion of ſeverity againſt a ſcholer. Theophylact expounds it by πυκνῶς ἐρωτάω, and ἄλλα καὶ ἄλλα ἐρωτῶ, and παγιδεύω, asking often one queſtion after another, enſnaring.

CHAP. XII.

Paraphraſe.

1. Of all other dangers take ſpecial heed of the Phariſees, ſee Mat. 10. 17. (and Sadducees Mat. 16. 6.) whoſe doctrine, expreſs'd by leaven Mat. 16. 12. is full of hypocriſie, puffes them up into a great opinion of their owne ſanctity, and hath an influence, like leaven, to the ſowring of all their actions, and accordingly theſe men, though they make a great ſhew of piety, and may be apt to deceive you, and make you expect good from them, yet will they of all others be readieſt to betray you, Mat 10. 17. &c.

1. IN the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, inſomuch that they trod one upon another, he began to ſay unto his diſciples [firſt of all, Beware ye of the leaven of the Phariſees, which is hypocriſie.]

2, 3. This I ſay not, that you ſhould ſo beware as to be afraid of them, or conceale any part of your meſſage, I only foretell you your danger, that you may prudently combate with it, proclaim publickly to your faces whatſoever you have been taught by me, and not only ſecretly and whiſperingly, but publickly and confidently beat down this hypocriſie, and falſe doctrines of theirs (that that is the meaning of v. 2. 3, appears by comparing them with Mat. 10. 27. and Mar. 4. 22.)

2. For there is nothing covered, that ſhall not be revealed, neither hid, that ſhall not be known.

3. Therefore whatſoever ye have ſpoken in darkneſſe, ſhall be heard in the light: and that which ye have ſpoken in the eare in cloſets, ſhall be proclaimed upon the houſe tops.]

4, 5. And let me tell you, as one friend would doe another, that which is moſt for his intereſt, that theſe Phariſees at the utmoſt can but kill the body, and when that is done, there is an end of their malice, and therefore 'tis much wiſer to feare diſpleaſing of God (as you will doe, if for feare of men ye omit to diſcharge your duty) who as he will caſt both body and ſoule into hell, upon diſobedience and diſloyalty to his commands, ſo can, if he pleaſe, and will, if he ſee it beſt for you, preſerve you in the midſt of the greateſt dangers.

4. And I ſay unto you, my friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can doe.

5. But I will forewarne you whom you ſhall feare, Feare him which after he hath killed, hath power to caſt into hell, yea, I ſay unto you, Feare him.]

6. This is a work of that providence of his, that attendeth and watcheth over the ſmalleſt things in the world, the vileſt ſparrow or bird of the ayre, in every motion of it, is within the reach of Gods care.

6. Are not five ſparrowes ſold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?]

7. And agreeably to that particular providence of his, which extendeth to every event, you may reſolve of your ſelves, that God hath a moſt particular providence over all that belongs to his ſervants. This will fortifie you againſt all feare, whatſoever your dangers are, For ſure there is more value ſet on you, and care taken for your preſervation, then there is over all the ſparrowes that are in the world.

7. But even the very haires of your head are all numbred, feare not therefore, ye are of more value then many ſparrowes.]

8. And this encouragement you have, that your fearleſſe confeſſion of Chriſt and his truth ſhall be rewarded with his owning you in the day of judgement (which ſure is more to your advantage then any thing you can acquire by compliance with the world.)

8. But I ſay unto you, Whoſoever ſhall confeſſe me before men, him alſo ſhall the ſon of man confeſſe before the Angels of God.]

9. Whereas the contrary feare, or cowardiſe, or falling off from your duty, ſhall cauſe Chriſt to diſclaim you, when you have moſt need of him.

9. But he that denieth me before men, ſhall be denied before the Angels of God.]

10. And

10. And whoſoever ſhall ſpeak a word againſt the ſon of man, it ſhall be forgiven him: but unto him that blaſphemeth againſt the holy Ghoſt it ſhall not be forgiven.]

10. Here are added by S. Luke words ſpoken by Chriſt on another occaſion, Mat. 12. 32. and ſeem to be applied by him to the aggravation of the ſinne of the Phariſees, on occaſion of whom this whole paſſage from v. 1. was delivered, That they that by the meanneſſe of Chriſts humane appearance are tempted to deny him to be the Meſſias, and doe accordingly oppoſe him, may have ſome place for pardon, and be in ſome degree excuſable, but they that attribute his works of power, (his miracles done viſibly by the finger of God) to the working of the devil in him, there is no place of excuſe and mercy for them, if they doe not, upon the reſurrection of Chriſt, and the Apoſtles preaching it to them, return and repent, and effectually receive Chriſt.

11. And when they bring you unto the ſynagogues,] and unto Magiſtrates and powers, take ye no thought how or what things ye ſhall anſwer, or what ye ſhall ſay.

11. This being ſaid of them, as in a parentheſis, he returnes to other paſſages of that ſpeech of Chriſts, Mat. 10. 9. when they bring you before Conſiſtories (ſee note Mat. 6. d. Jam. 2. b.)

12. For the holy Ghoſt ſhall teach you in the ſame hour what ye ought to ſay.]

12. See Mar. 13. 11.

13. And one of the company ſaid unto him, [Maſter ſpeak to my brother that he divide the inheritance with me.]

13. Sir, there is a controverſie between my brother and me, about the dividing our patrimony, I deſire to avoid the delaies of a ſuit at law, and to doe as it is ordinary, referre it to arbitration, and who ſo fit as you our Maſter, to conclude it between us your diſciples and followers.

14. And he ſaid unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?]

14. But he (knowing what had hapned to Moſes when he would have made peace among the Jewes, Exod. 2. 14. Who made thee a Prince or a Judge over us?) gave them an anſwer which the Evangeliſt ſets down in the ſame words, wherein the Greek rendred the Hebrew there, that is, I will not be liable to ſuch objections from men, as were then ungratefully made againſt Moſes, I will not meddle with your matters of intereſt, wherein he that is not awarded what he deſires, will think himſelf unjuſtly dealt with.

15. And he ſaid unto them, Take heed and beware of covetouſneſſe, for * a mans life conſiſteth not in the abundance of the things which he poſſeſſeth.]

* 'tis not in any mans having ſuperfluous, that his life from his poſſeſſions conſiſts. Or, no mans life, if he have never ſo much abundance, depends on his poſſeſſions. ὅτι ἐν περισσεύοντι τινὶ ἡ αὐτοῦ ἐστιν ἐκ τῶν ὑπαρχόντων ζωὴ αὐτῷ.

15. All that I ſhall ſay to you is, That the deſire of wealth, the labour to encreaſe your own by leſſening another mans poſſeſſions, the not being content with what you have, is a ſinne of great danger, diligently to be avoided, and indeed that which doth no man any good. For though poſſeſſions are uſefull to ſuſtain life, yet no man is able to prolong his life, or to make it any thing more happy or comfortable to him, by poſſeſſing more then he needs or uſes, that is, by any ſuperfluity of wealth. The only way to be the better for the wealth of the world, is to diſpoſe and diſtribute it to the ſervice of God, and benefit and comfort of others, ver. 21.

16. And he ſpake a parable unto them, ſaying,] The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully.

16. To which purpoſe Chriſt ſpake and applied the parable following.

17. And he thought within himſelf, ſaying, What ſhall I doe, becauſe I have no room where to beſtow my fruits?]

17. And he contrived and caſt within himſelfe in his thoughts, what he ſhould doe with all that plenty which was ſo much greater then his barns could hold.

18. And he ſaid, This I will doe, I will pull down my barns and build greater, and there will I beſtow all my fruits and my goods.

19. And I will ſay to my ſoul, Soule, thou haſt much goods laid up for many years, take thine eaſe, eat, drink, and † be merry.]

† feaſt ſumptuously

18, 19. And his reſolution was, that he would pull down his barns, and build bigger, and lay up all in them (never thinking of giving others any of that which he knew not what to doe with) and then he ſhould be an happy man, have wealth enough for many yeares plentifull, voluptuous, feſtival living, pleaſing himſelf, and enterteining others.

20. But God ſaid unto him, Thou fool, this night * thy ſoule ſhall be required of thee: then whoſe ſhall thoſe things be which thou haſt provided?

* doe they require thy ſoule from thee. See note on 6, 16. b.

21. So is he that layeth up treaſure for himſelf, and is not rich towards God.]

21. This is directly the caſe of any man that makes no uſe of his encreaſe and plenty, ſave only to poſſeſſe it, and provide for himſelf by it, never thinking of employing that which he hath to ſpare, to the relieving the poor, or otherwiſe to the ſervice of God.

22. And he ſaid unto his diſciples, Therefore I ſay unto you,] take no thought for your life, what ye ſhall eat; neither for the body, what ye ſhall put on.

22. To which purpoſe of truſting Gods providence, in oppoſition to covetouſneſſe, is that which Chriſt ſaid at another time, Mat. 6. 25.

23. The life is more then meat, and the body is more then rayment.

24. Conſider the ravens, for they neither ſow nor reap, which neither have ſtore-houſe nor barn, and God feedeth them: how much more are ye better then the fowles?

25. And which of you with taking thought can add to his * ſtature one cubit?

* age. See Mat 6. note m.

26. If ye then be not able to doe that thing which is leaſt, why take ye thought for [the reſt?]

26. other things, which are greater and ſo in proportion harder then thoſe, and depend as little on your ſolicitude.

27. Conſider the lilies how they grow, they toyle not, they ſpin not: and yet I ſay unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of theſe.

28. If then God ſo clothe [the graſſe] which is to day in the field, and to morrow is caſt into the oven, how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith?

28. the flowers, ſee note on Mat. 6. p.

29. And ſeek not ye what ye ſhall eat, or what ye ſhall drink, [neither be ye a * of doubtfull mind.]

* Solicitous.

29. and be not diſturb'd with thoughts and anxiety, Mat. 6. 31.

30. For all theſe things doe the nations of the world ſeek after: and your Father knoweth that you have need of theſe things.

31. But rather ſeek ye the kingdome of God, and all theſe things ſhall be added unto you.

32. Fear not little flock, for it is your Fathers good pleaſure to give you the kingdome.]

32 Entertain no ſolicitudes for ſuch things as theſe; for your Father which deſtin'd you to an everlaſting kingdome will not faile to allow you your portion here of thoſe things that are uſefull for you.

33. Sell that ye have and give almes, provide your ſelves bags that wax not old, a treaſure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.

33. Mat. 6. 19.

34. For where your treaſure is, there will your heart be alſo.

35. Let your loynes be [b] girded about, and your lights burning.]

35. Be ye as ſervants attending their maſters buſineſſe, ready whenſoever he commands them any thing, or hath any buſineſſe for them.

36. Like the attendants on a bridegroom, (who whenſoever he comes from the marriage-feaſt to the chamber, comes haſtily, and is not patient of any delaies) alwaies ready to anſwer at the firſt knock.

36. And ye your ſelves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will returne from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately.]

37, 38. As in that caſe 'tis a great happineſſe for a ſervant to be found ready, becauſe by that meanes he may atttend his Maſter (whereas if at that minute he be out of the way, he utterly loſes him) and as a reward of that diligence, the bridegroom will entertain his ſervants, ſet them down, and wait upon them himſelf, ſo is it a bleſſed thing to be found employed as Chriſt would have us, whenſoever he comes to call on us, and in order to that to be alwaies ready, not to fall off from him in the leaſt manner.

37. Bleſſed are thoſe ſervants, whom the Lord when he cometh ſhall find watching, Verily I ſay unto you, that he ſhall gird himſelf, and make them ſit down to meat, and will come forth and ſerve them.

38. And if he ſhall come in the ſecond watch, or * come in the third watch, and find them ſo, bleſſed are thoſe ſervants.]

* or in the third watch, & when he comes, find; for the Kg MS. τρίτην φυλακὴν ἔλθῃ εὕρῃ.

39. And as Chriſt's coming will be to the rewarding of all faithfull ſervants, perſevering believers, ſo will it be to deſtroy all lethargick ſtupid impenitents, who by their own negligence lie open to all that vengeance that thus lights on them.

39. And this know, that if the good man of the houſe had known what houre the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have ſuffered his houſe to be broken through.]

40. And therefore to avoid that danger alſo, it concerns all to be perpetually upon their guard, becauſe this coming of Chriſt to viſit and puniſh is like to be ſuddain, but the time uncertain. See Mat. 24. 43.

40. Be ye therefore ready alſo, for the ſon of man cometh at an houre that ye think not.]

41. peculiarly to us thy conſtant attendants, or to all Chriſtians ?

41. Then Peter ſaid unto him, Lord, ſpeakeſt thou this parable [to us or even to all ?]

42, 43. The parable doth in ſeverall degrees belong to every Chriſtian, who hath ſome truſt committed to him by Chriſt, and muſt be very carefull to diſcharge it, (ſee Mat. 24. 45.) to you as ſtewards here, to all Chriſtians as ſervants, v. 43. and no mans truſt is ſo mean, that diligence in it ſhall not be rewardable. But to them again with ſome difference, as they have received more or leſſe of divine revelation, immediately, or mediately, v. 47.

42. And the Lord ſaid, [Who then is that faithfull and wiſe ſteward, whom his Lord ſhall make ruler over his houſhold, to give them their portion of meat in due ſeaſon ?

43. Bleſſed is that ſervant whom his Lord when he cometh ſhall find ſo doing.]

44. And be he never ſo meanly imployed, God will reward his truſtineſſe and diligence with committing to him the greateſt truſts, ſee Mat. 24. 47. the greateſt office of dignity in the Church.

44. Of a truth I ſay unto you, that he will make him ruler of all that he hath.]

45. And upon that conſideration abuſe that truſt and power repoſed in him as a ſteward, deal injuriouſly with thoſe that are under his rule, and ſpend his maſters goods riotouſly, and luxuriouſly.

45. But and if that ſervant ſay in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming, [and ſhall begin to beat the men-ſervants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken.]

46. with the untruſty falſe ſtewards, the unbelieving Jews, which have not reform'd upon all Chriſts preaching unto them.

46. The Lord of that ſervant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an houre when he is not ware, and will cut him in ſunder, and appoint him his portion [with the unbelievers.]

47, 48. According to the degree of knowledge which God hath afforded, ſo ſhall their crimes receive aggravation of guilt, and encreaſe of puniſhment. And the more light and grace he beſtowes on any, the greater, and the more Chriſtian performances will he require of them.

47. And that ſervant which knew his Lords will, and prepared not himſelf, neither did according to his will, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes.

48. But ye that knew not, and did commit things worthy of ſtripes, ſhall be beaten with few ſtripes. For unto whomſoever much is given, of him ſhall be much required, and to whom men have committed much, of him they will aske the more.]

c. 49. It is to be expected as a conſequent of my coming into the world, that perſecution ſhould attend, Mat. 10. 34. and this will be a means of exploring and trying who are faithfull, and who are not, And therefore I am ſo far from wiſhing this otherwiſe, that I rather deſire that it were already kindled or begun.

49. I am come to ſend fire on the earth, and c what * will I, if it be already kindled ?]

* doe I deſire ? that it were already kindled.

d. 50. But I am to bear the firſt part of it, to be immerſt in afflictions, Mat. 20. 22. Till this come to be accompliſh'd upon me, I am in ſome ſtreights, terrified, like a woman with child, with the apprehenſion of the pangs approaching, Mat. 26. 39. but very willing to be delivered, to doe and ſuffer that whereunto I was ſent.

50. But I † have a d baptiſme to be baptized with, and how am I * ſtreightned till it be accompliſhed ?]

51, 52, 53. Soon after my departing great diviſions and feudes will break out concerning me, the whole land ſhall be divided into factions, and civil broyls, Mat. 10. 34. and 24. 7.

51. Suppoſe ye that I came to give peace on earth ? I tell you nay, but rather diviſions.

52. For from henceforth there ſhall be five in one houſe divided, three againſt two, and two againſt three.

53. The father ſhall be divided againſt the ſon, and the ſon againſt the father, and the mother againſt the daughter, and the daughter againſt the mother, the mother-in-law againſt the daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law againſt her mother-in-law.]

54. Many ways you have of preſaging what weather it will be, which ſeldome fail you, as when,

54. And he ſaid alſo to the people, [When] ye ſee a cloud riſe out of the weſt, ſtraight way ye ſay, There cometh a ſhower, and ſo it is.

55. And when ye ſee the South wind blow, ye ſay, There will be heat; and it cometh to paſſe.

56. Ye that can judge by ſight of the skyes and the winds, what will befall, Why ſhould ye not have as great ſagacity to diſcern and preſage the judgements that are near approaching towards this nation, if they doe not ſuddainly repent, and receive Chriſt ?

56. Ye hypocrites, ye can diſcern the face of the sky and of the earth: but how is it that ye doe not diſcern this * time ?]

58. When thou goeſt with thine adverſary to the Magiſtrate, while thou art in the way, give diligence that thou mayſt be delivered from him; leſt he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer caſt thee into priſon.]

† δίκαιον

57, 58. And why doe you not (without need of looking upon the skyes for the preſage) by the ſame rationall way of judging, in which you proceed in other matters, uſe the ſame prudence in divine matters of danger, which you doe in humane worldly contentions? and ſo when you ſee an action coming againſt you, wherein you are ſure to be caſt, ſet preſently to reconcile the adverſary, to make your peace and eſcape the danger? (to which purpoſe was this which Chriſt ſaid at another time, Mat. 5. 25.)

59. I tell thee, thou ſhalt not depart thence till thou haſt payd the very laſt mite.

Annotations on Chap. XII.

V. 29. Of doubtfull mind] Μετεωρίζεσθε ſignifies primarily and literally to be carried up high in the aire, as clouds or birds flying there; which becauſe they have no firme foundation there, but are toſt and driven about uncertainly, hence it ſignifies, firſt, ῥέμβεσθε vagari, in Stephanus's Gloſſary, to thinke of this and that without any conſiſtence of minde, μετέωρος ὁ μὴ ςαθερὸς τὸν νοῦν, he that hath no fix'dneſſe of minde; and ſo intention of thoughts in prayer is ἀμελετήτεον ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ, and on the other ſide in * S. Baſils Aſcetick rules, μετεωρισμὸς ἄκαιρος importune wandering of thoughts in prayer (proceeding from former company and unprofitable diſcourſe) ἀπειρημένος ἔτω, is forbidden, and ſo ἀκρόασις ἀμελετήτος, in Nyſſen, is attention of hearing. Chryſoſtome, εἰς τὸ ἱπποδ. Ἀμετεωρίτως ἀτενίζειν εἰς μαππάριον, to look earneſtly, without ever looking off, on him that holds up the mappa or white cloth in the races. Secondly the word ſignifies to hang, as the clouds doe in the ayre, in an impatient ſuſpenſe or † anxiety, as in † Lucians Icaromenip. μετέωρος ὑπὸ τῶν λόγων is explained by ἐκ τῶν ὤτων ἀπηρτημένος and κεχηνώς, one that had his eares gaping, as it were impatient and very deſirous to hear the end of the ſtory. So in Philo leg. ad Caium, πᾶσα ἡ πόλις μετεώρου, ἀκοῆς διψῶσα βελτίονος, all the city was in an anxious ſuſpence, thirſting after ſome better news. So Eccluſ 26. 12. μετεωρισμοὶ ὀφθαλμῶν ſeems to ſignifie the ſuſpenſe, anxious, earneſt gazing of the eyes, ſuch as there is ſet as a Character of a libidinous perſon; and ſo it ſeems the phraſe is uſed among the Hebrews. For ſo in the Jeruſalem Targum on Gen. 49. 22. Oculos ſuſpendere, & unam earum intueri, to hang the eyes, &c. is ſet to ſignifie an amorous or luſtfull look upon a woman. From hence again 'tis clearly, to be in doubt, and uncertainty of reſolution, as in Agathias l. 2. ſpeaking of the cities Italy, they were, ſaith he, μετέωρα καὶ δεδουμένα doubtfull and ambiguous, ἐφ' ὅτῳ χωρήσουσιν ἀμφιγνοοῦντα not knowing to which part they ſhould betake themſelves, in the ſame manner, as ἄιρειν ψυχὴν, to lift up the mind is to keep in ſuſpence, Joh. 10. 24. So in Dorotheus, * διδασκαλ. 1. Ἀδιαφορεῖν and μετεωρίζεσθαι are all one, when one is not intent on what he hath in hand, but is uncertain, and indifferent which to take to, all one with ἀσκόπως περιφέρεσθαι following, being carried about without any certain aime. Thus it ſeems to ſignifie in this place, where as a piece of ὀλιγοπιςία, littleneſſe of faith, if not infidelity, is forbidden this doubtfull anxiety and ſolicitude concerning Gods Providence, this uncertainty of minde, betwixt hope and fear; μέριμνα, ſollicitude, being put by S. Matthew in ſtead of it in the place particularly parallel to this verſe, c. 6. 31. and ſo expreſs'd in the former part of this chapter, v. 22. and 25. and ſo ſaith Theophylact, μεριμνᾷν, ἤτοι τὸ μετεωρισμὸν ἀπαγορεύει, he forbids ſollicitous care under that phraſe. Thus doth pendere, to hang, ordinarily ſignifie in Latine, and ἄνω καθῆσθαι to be above in Demoſthenes De coron. the very paraphraſe of this word, μετεωρίζεσθαι, in the native ſignification of it.

2. Μετεωρίζεσθαι

p. 906. E.

b. Περιζώσασθαι

V. 35. Girded about] Beſide the generall uſe of girding for putting on clothes, frequent in theſe bookes, as Joh. 21. 7. διεζώσατο ἐπενδύτην he girt on his upper garment, and v. 18. thou didſt gird thy ſelf, that is, dreſſe or clothe thy ſelf at thine own will (and from hence, in a ſenſe ſomewhat varied, in the end of the ſame verſe, another ſhall gird thee, that is, bind thee as a priſoner or captive, as I conceive it alſo is Job. 12. 18. where girding is ſet oppoſite to looſing of bonds) three ſorts of men there are in theſe books which are proverbially ſaid to be girt, 1. The Jewiſh Prieſts, Levit. 16. 4. who had a linen girdle, and the high Prieſt one embroiderd with gold, &c. Exod. 39. 5. after whoſe example the ſon of man is brought in Revel. 1. 13. ἐνδεδυμένον ποδήρη, καὶ περιεζωσμένον πρὸς τοῖς μαςοῖς ζώνην χρυσῆν, clothed in a long garment, and girt about the breaſts with a golden girdle, and ſo the ſeven Angels Revel. 15. 6. Secondly, Souldiers whoſe military girdle was ſo ſpeciall a part of their armour, that in Homer ζώνη ſignifies the whole military ὁπλισμὸς armature, and ζώννυσθαι to be girt is ὁπλίζεσθαι to be armed, ſaith Euſtathius in Iliad. β, and λ, and Suidas in like manner, that ζώννυσθαι to be girt is καθοπλίζεσθαι to be armed. Hence is it that diſcincti ungirt ſignifies the unarmed, and 2 King. 3. 21. where we read as many as were able to put on armour, the Greek literally from the Hebrew hath it, περιεζωσμένοι ζώνην, girt with a girdle. So 1 King. 20. 11. the girt and ungirt are the armed and unarmed (though I know not by what miſtake the Greek hath χυρτὸς and ὀρθὸς) and to this ſort of the military girdle or belt, belongs that place of Epheſ. 6. 14. having your loines girt, where the truth, that is, Orthodox profeſſion of the Goſpel, in oppoſition to hereticall doctrines and practiſes is deſigned to be this girdle, which keeps all their armour cloſe about them. Thirdly, ſervants or waiters, who ſerve at tables, who having their clothes, after the Eaſterne manner, looſe and long, and flying about, found it neceſſary to gird themſelves, that they might doe ſervice the more readily; So in Horace

——— Succinctus curſitat hoſpes,
Continuátq; dapes, nec non vernaliter ipſis
Fungitur officiis ——— of a Maſter waiting at his table, as a ſervant. So in Propertius the officers at ſacred feaſts, ſuccincti popæ; ſo when, Job. 12. 18. the Greek reads fitly out of the Hebrew περιέδησε ζώνην ὀσφύας αὐτῶν, God bound their loines about with a girdle, * Olympiodorus expounds it, μεταβάλλων αὐτοὺς εἰς οἰκέτας, he turnes them into ſervants. And ſo here in this place, let your loins be girt, being here an expreſſion of thoſe that expect the commands of their Maſter (as alſo that of their lampes burning, if you compare it with Mat. 25. 7.) and ſo v. 37. when he ſaith of the Maſter, that he will gird himſelf and waite upon them. So Luke 17. 8. when the maſter ſaith to the ſervant, περιζωσάμενος διακόνει μοι, gird thy ſelf and miniſter to me. And ſo Joh. 13. 4. Chriſt when he went to waſh the diſciples feet, that is to perform that ſervants office, λαβὼν λέντιον διέζωσεν ἑαυτὸν, he took a linen cloth, and girded himſelf, that ſo he might ſhew that he came οὐ διακονηθῆναι, ἀλλὰ διακονῆσαι, not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter, Mat. 26. 28. And that 'tis ſo in this place

* Caten. p. 253.

alſo appears both by the mention of their Lord, whom they waite for, v. 36. and the μακάριοι οἱ δοῦλοι happy are thoſe watching ſervants, v. 37.

c. Ei. V. 49. What will I] The particle εἰ which is ordinarily rendred if, is oft an Optative, or expreſſion of wiſh or deſire. So c. 19. 42. Εἰ ἔγνως if thou kneweſt, for O that thou kneweſt: ſo c. 22. 42. εἰ βούλει, if thou wilt, for, O that thou wouldeſt. So Num. 22. 29. Joſ. 7. 7. Job. 16. 14. and ſo in Moſes's ſpeech to God, Lord if thou wilt forgive them. And this moſt clearly from the various uſe of the Hebrew אִם or לוּ, which ſignifies both ſi and utinam, if, and would to God. And thus may it be here, εἰ ἤδη ἀνήφθη, O that it were already kindled, and then the latter part will be an anſwer to the queſtion propoſed in the former, thus, τί θέλω; what doe I deſire? Beyond all things that it were already kindled. Another way of rendring the words will bear, what doe I deſire if it were already kindled? that is, I deſire no more but this: Or again by rendring the τί as if it were πῶς, how doe I deſire that it were already kindled? But as all theſe come to the ſame ſenſe. ſo the former ſeems the more eaſie and naturall; unleſs we preſer that other reading which we find in Marcus * p. 923. D. Eremita * De baptiſ. καὶ τί θέλω εἰ ἤδη ἀνήφθη, and I would be pleaſed, or glad, if it were already kindled. As for the fire here, although that may ſignifie only a purgative fire, and intimate Chriſts deſire of puriſying the world from the droſſe of ſinne, for which he came, Tit. 2. 14. and to referre to the coming of the holy Ghoſt, who appeared in fire, Acts 2. yet it rather ſeems to be reſtrained by the Context to the fire of perſecution, all one with diviſion v. 51. which though it cauſe ſome ſmart, yet it hath very uſefull qualities, as that of exploring or trying, in which reſpect 'tis ſaid 1 Cor. 11. 19. there muſt be diviſions among you, that they that are approved (tryed, and found right in this fire) may be made manifeſt among you. And that this ſhould be conſequent to Chriſts coming, ſee v. 52. &c. & Lu. 2. 35. that of trying Heb. 4. 12. Lu. 2. 35. who are faithfull adherents to him, who not. Which is the ſpeciall work of fire, and the effect of perſecution for Chriſts ſake.

V. 50. A Baptiſme] The phraſe ἔχω βαπτισθῆναι is all one with μέλλω, the note of the future. So 2 Eſdr. 4. 45. habet venire is uſed for μέλλει ἔρχεσθαι is to come. And in the Athanaſian Creed ἀναστήσονται they ſhall riſe is rendred in Latine, habent reſurgere. So in * Chryſoſtome. ἔχει διακεῖσθαι for μέλλει, and again δεδάξαι εἶχε, that is, ἔμελλε, And ſo † oft in Lactantius, quòd carne indui haberet in terra, that is, that he was to be incarnate; and again, quòd plurimæ ſectæ & hæreſes haberent exiſtere, that there ſhould be many ſects and hereſies.

Paraphraſe.

CHAP. XIII.

1. Galileans, a faction of Judas Gaulonita, which taught doctrines contrary to ſubjection to the Roman Empire, whom, it is thought, Pilate ſet upon, and killed when they were offering ſacrifice, and powred out their bloud, as the bloud of beaſts was poured out in the ſacrifices.

1. THere were preſent at that ſeaſon ſome that told him of the [Galileans, whoſe bloud Pilate had mingled with their ſacrifices.]

2. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid unto them, Suppoſe ye that theſe Galileans were ſinners above all the Galileans, becauſe they ſuffered ſuch things?

3. if you continue your preſent wicked practiſes, raiſing ſedition under pretence of piety, as frequently you are apt to do, (ſee Titus Boſtrenſis p. 803. C.) then as they periſhed at the day of Paſcha at their ſacrifice, ſo ſhall a multitude of you on that very day (ſee Joſephus of the Jewiſh war, l. 6. c. 11. and l. 7. c. 17. and Euſeb. Eccl. Hiſt. l. 3. c. 5.) in the Temple be ſlaughtered like ſheep, and that for the ſame cauſe, a ſedition raiſed in the city.

3. I tell yee, nay: but [except yee repent, yee ſhall all likewiſe periſh.]

4. Or thoſe eighteen, on whom the tower in Siloe fell and ſlew them, think ye that they were ſinners above all men that dwelt in Jeruſalem?

5. periſh in the ruines of the whole city, as they of that tower.

5. I tell you, nay, but except ye repent, ye ſhall all [likewiſe periſh.]

6. And he ſpake alſo this parable, to them, of which this is the plain meaning, This people hath long been unprofitable, made no returns to all Gods husbandry beſtowed upon them, and yet God hath given them ſpace to repent, and ſent his ſon to dreſſe and manure them, and if this doe not work upon them, there is nothing to be expected but deſtruction and exciſion. The parable was this. A certain man, &c.

6. He ſpake alſo this parable,] A certain man had a figtree planted in his vineyard, and he came and ſought fruit thereon, and found none.

7. Then ſaid he unto the dreſſer of his vineyard, Behold, theſe three years I come ſeeking fruit on this figtree, and finde none: Cut it down, why cumbreth it the ground?

8. And he anſwering, ſaid unto him, Lord, let it alone this year alſo, till I ſhall dig about it, and dung it.

9. And perhaps it will bear fruit, or, make this experiment, whether it will bear fruit or no:

9. And if it bear fruit well:] and if not, then after that thou ſhalt cut it down.

10. And he was teaching in one of the ſynagogues on the Sabbath.

11. ſore diſeaſe inflicted on on her by the devil, v. 16. for the ſpace of eighteen years, and ſhe did ſo extremely ſtoop, that ſhe could hardly ſee the heavens.

11. And behold, there was a woman which had [a ſpirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wiſe lift up her ſelf.]

12. thy diſeaſe.

12. And when Jeſus ſaw her, he called her unto him, and ſaid unto her, Woman thou art looſed from [thine infirmity.]

13. And he laid his hands on her, and immediately ſhe was made ſtreight, and glorified God.

14. the head of the Conſiſtory being angry that Jeſus did cures on the ſabbath, gave command to the multitude, ſaying, There are ſix daies, in the compaſſe of which men ought to doe all the work, which they doe in the week.

14. And [the Ruler of the ſynagogue anſwered with indignation, becauſe that Jeſus had healed on the ſabbath day, and ſaid unto the people, There are ſix daies in which men ought to work;] in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the ſabbath day.

15. The Lord then anſwered him and ſaid, Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the ſabbath day looſe his oxe or his aſſe from the * ſtall, and lead him away to watering?

* ſtable, See c. 2 note c.

16. And

16. And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, [whom Satan hath bound, lo, theſe eighteen years, be looſed from this bond] on the ſabbath day?

16. on whom Satan hath inflicted a ſore diſeaſe, of 18 years duration, be cured of this diſeaſe

17. And when he had ſaid theſe things, all his adverſaries were aſhamed, and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

18. Then ſaid he, Unto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto ſhall I reſemble it?

19. It is like a grain of muſtard-ſeed, which a man took and caſt into his garden, and it grew, and waxed [a] a great tree, and the fowles of the aire lodged in the branches of it.

19. Mat. 13. 31.

20. And again he ſaid, Whereunto ſhall I liken the kingdom of God?

21. It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three meaſures of meale, till the whole was leavened.

21. Mat. 13. 33.

22. And he went through the cities and villages teaching, and journeying toward Jeruſalem.

23. Then ſaid one unto him, Lord, [are there few that * ſhall [b] be ſaved? And he ſaid unto them,]

* eſcape

23. is the doctrine of the Goſpel likely to be received by the generality of men, or onely by a few diſciples of us? And the reply that Chriſt made to this queſtion, was to adviſe him and all others

b.

24. Strive to enter at the ſtraight gate: for many, I ſay unto you, will ſeek to enter in, and ſhall not be able.]

24. That they ſhould not be led away with the example of the many, that neglected the preſent opportunity, and after would not find admiſſion, when they ſhould deſire it, either into the Church here, or the kingdom of God at the day of doom, That the Goſpel ſhould at length be removed from the obſtinate Iews, and conſequently heaven alſo.

25. When once the Maſter of the houſe is riſen up, and hath ſhut to the doore, and ye begin to ſtand without, and to knock at the doore, ſaying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he ſhall anſwer and ſay unto you, I know you not whence you are.

26. Then ſhall ye begin to ſay, We have eaten and drunk in thy preſence, and thou haſt tanght in our ſtreets.

27. But he ſhall ſay, I tell you, I know you not whence you are; depart from me all ye workers of iniquity.]

25, 26, 27. That a great deal of timely care and induſtry and contention was required to get the end of our Chriſtian faith and hope, and that a little formal ſeeking of him, a deſiring the reward upon no farther pretences, then that the Goſpel hath been preached among them, that they have eat and drunk in Chriſts preſence, nay that they have by him been enabled to work miracles, Mat. 7. 22. &c. would not ſerve the turn, without a carefull and due performance of all that Chriſt requires of us. As for others, be their pretences and confidences never ſo great, they ſhall at the day of judgement be utterly rejected, and their wicked doings rewarded with everlaſting fire.

28. There ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth, when ye ſhall ſee Abraham, and Iſaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and you your ſelves thruſt out.]

28. And then what a reſtleſs torment will it be to you, to ſee the fathers of the old world, that never ſaw or heard Chriſt preach among them, as you confeſſe you have, received by God into his kingdom, and you rejected? Mat. 8. 11, 12.

29. And they ſhall come from the eaſt, and from the weſt, and from the north, and from the ſouth, and ſhall ſit down in the kingdom of God.]

29. And though but few Iews ſhould receive the faith, yet diſciples ſhall come in to Chriſt from all the quarters of the world, and by him in the Church be received and entertained, as at a feaſt (which is ſome farther anſwer to the queſtion v. 23.) and ſo conſequently bear the Patriarchs company in heaven.

30. And behold there are laſt which ſhall be firſt, and there are firſt which ſhall be laſt.]

30. And they that are now afarre off, the Gentiles, ſhall be admitted to his favour, while the preſent Iews through their obduration ſhall be caſt out, v. 28.

a. Κόκκου σινάπεως

V. 19. A great tree] That a muſtard-ſeed grows into a tree, is affirmed Mat. 13. 32. and thereupon it is there ſaid that it is μεῖζον λαχάνων not the greateſt of herbs, or things that grow of ſeeds, but (as μεῖζον imports) greater then ſuch, and therefore it follows there, that it becometh a tree, and here that tree a great one, δένδρον μέγα. This is not to be meaſured by what we ſee of this ſeed among us, but by conſidering the Hebrew ſoyle and clime, of which this is ordinarily affirmed among their authors. In the Babyloniſh Talmud, Ketub. fol. 3. there is mention of three boughes of חרדל, or muſtard, one of which being broken off from the reſt yielded nine Kabs of ſeed, and the wood thereof was ſufficient to cover a little houſe. So in the Jeruſalem Talmud, Peah c. 7. there is mention of a bough yielded three Kabs of that ſeed. And again in the ſame place, of a ſtemme or bough of muſtard, which Simon the ſon of Chalaphta had in his garden, into which he could climb up as into a figtree. And therefore agreeably to this it is that our Saviour here ſpeaks ſo great things of it. And whereas it is ſaid Mat. 13. 32. that it is the leaſt of all ſeeds, although among us, ſome other ſeeds may be found leſſe then that, as Rue, and Poppy, yet it is not neceſſary it ſhould be ſo there. However it is apparent that the ſmalneſſe of it was Proverbial among them, and is therefore mention'd by Maimonides, More Neb. P. 1. b. Σωζόμενοι

V. 23. Saved] What is the notion of σώζειν in the New Teſtament hath already been touched on, Note on Mat. 10. n. ſee Mat. 19. 6. And for a fuller declaring of it, it will not be amiſſe firſt to obſerve it in the Old Teſtament, there the Hebrew reciprocal המלט and הינצל, ſaving, or delivering, himſelf, from מלט, and נצל, are ordinarily rendred σώζειν, and ῥύεσθαι to be ſaved, or delivered, and ordinarily ſignifie elabi or evadere, to evade, or eſcape. So Gen. 19. 9. οὐ δυνήσομαι ζωθῆναι εἰς τὸ ὄρος, I cannot eſcape to the mountain, in the ſame ſenſe, that φεύγειν εἰς τὰ ὄρη, flying to the mountains Mat. 24. 16. So Gen. 19. 22. מהר המלט שמה, the Septuag. reads, σπεῦσον τοῦ ζωθῆναι ἐκεῖ, make haſt to eſcape thither, where to eſcape is to get out of the reach of Sodome, the place which was then to be deſtroyed, and flee as to a ſanctuary, to that other city. So 1 Sam. 19. 12. ἀπῆλθε καὶ ἔφυγε καὶ σώθη, he departed and fled and eſcaped. So Joel 2. 32. whoſoever ſhall call upon the name of the Lord, ימלט ſhall eſcape, or ζωθήσεται, ſhall be ſaved, in that ſenſe, Rom. 10. 13. So Iſa. 45. 20. where Symmachus reads, οἱ διαφυγόντες τῶν ἐθνῶν, they that eſcape of the nations, the Septuagint reads οἱ ζωζόμενοι τῶν ἐθνῶν, the ſaved of the nations. So Iſa. 49. 6. the preſerved of Iſrael, and Eccl. 39. 9. ὁ ζωζόμενος, he that eſcapes, or is ſaved. So of the ſick man, Joh. 11. 12. If he ſleep, σωθήσεται he will eſcape, and Act. 27. 20, 21. ζωθῆναι οὐ δυνάμεθα we cannot eſcape the ſhipwrack, ſo 'twas ſhew'd to ſignifie Mat. 24. 22. οὐκ ἂν ἐσώθη πᾶσα σὰρξ, the tribulation was ſo great, that if it had not been ſhorted by God, no flew had eſcaped, but for the ſake of ἐκλεκτοι (which (as it was ſhew'd there) denotes the remnant which by Gods promiſe was to be preſerved, and which is all one with ζωζόμενοι the dayes were promiſed to be ſhortned. So διασώζεσθαι is uſed Act. 28. 1. and is ordinarily rendred, eſcaped. This being premiſed of the prime importance of the word, the next thing obſervable will be, what hath formerly been mention'd, that in the Prophets there is frequent mention of a remnant, κατάλειμμα, that ſhould by the mercy of God be reſcued out of the common calamity, the fatal πανολεθρία of the Jews, that was now at hand; Theſe are ſometimes call'd, the eſcaping (evaſio) of the houſe of Iſrael or Judah, or, the eſcaping that remaineth, or, the remnant that is eſcaped, Iſa. 37. 31, 32. In which place he that ſhall weigh it, or compare the tranſlation of the vulgar Latine, with Forerius's new one, out of the Hebrew, will find that the reliquiæ de Hieroſolymis, the remnant of Jeruſalem, & ſalvatio (that is, the ζωζόμενοι) de monte Sion, they that are ſaved, or, eſcape of mount Sion, are all one with evaſio quæ derelicta eſt, the eſcaping which is left, that is, they that eſcape, when others periſh; See Nehem. 1. 2. and 3. where he asks εἰ ζωθέντων οἱ καταλειφθέντες, of the ſaved that are left. So that ζωζόμενοι is æquipollent to the Hebrew שריד, reſiduus, remnant, which therefore is rendred by it, Jer. 4. 17. and 44. 14. and in other places (parallel to which we read, λείψανον σωζόμενον, a remainder that eſcapeth, in Julian, * Or. 1.) and once by πυρφόρος (not, as the printed copies read it πυρφόρος) Obad. 18. which ſignifies, ſaith Heſychius, ὁ μόνον διασωθέντα ἐν πολέμῳ, him that eſcapes alone in warre, (the πυρφόρος being a † Vates, which before the firſt colours carries a firebrand, when the armies are to meet and fight, and hath the priviledge of a Legate or Herald not to be hurt or * violated.) From this acception of the word ζωζόμενοι, the ſaved, for that remnant which ſhould eſcape of the Jews out of the common deſtruction and ſlaughter that fell upon that people, call'd ἐκλεκτοι ſometimes (and therefore, ſaith Theophylact, ἐκλεκτοι and ζωζόμενοι are all one) ſometimes καταξιωθέντες ἐκφυγεῖν Luk. 21. 36. they that have the honour or favour to eſcape: another acception there is of it for thoſe which ſhould believe in Chriſt, receive and embrace him at his coming, and, having done ſo, adhere and cleave faſt unto him. So when Iſa. 10. 22. it is prophecied that the remnant of Iſrael ſhall return, the Apoſtle, Rom. 9. 27. applies that place (literally ſpoken of the return from the Babyloniſh captivity) by way of accommodation to their receiving the faith of Chriſt, τὸ καταλειμμα ζωθήσεται, a remnant ſhall eſcape out of that Epidemical unbelief, and receive Chriſt. Thus Procopius underſtood that ζωθήσεται peculiarly of believing in Chriſt, in Iſ. p. 576. ἐσώθη τὸ κατάλειμμα, ἥ ἀπαρχὴ τοῦ Σωτῆρος οἱ μαθηταὶ, the firſt fruits of that remnant that eſcaped, was the diſciples of our Saviour. So Luk. 19. 9. the σωτηρία that was come to Zacchæus at that time, was repentance, converſion, the σῶσαι τὸ ἀπολωλὸς, the recovering the ſinner, or the publicane, to repentance, ver. 10. So 1 Cor. 7. 16. the believing wifes ſaving her huſband, is converting him to the faith, And Rom. 11. 14. provoking and ſaving the Jews, is by emulation bringing them to repent and receive the Faith. And ſo the ζωζόμενοι here ſhall be thoſe, eſpecially the Jews, that believed in Chriſt and adhered to him, according to the importance of that Act. 11. 17. ὅπως ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ κατάλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸν Κύριον, that the remnant of men (that is, of the Jews, oppoſed to the Gentiles after mentioned) might ſeek the Lord. To this purpoſe it is that Ignatius in his Epiſtle to Polycarp bids him πάντας παρακαλεῖν ἵνα σώζωνται exhort all that they eſcape, that is, repent and accept the faith, and that * Procopius makes δύο τάγματα σωζομένων two ranks of theſe eſcapers, the Jews that expected the Meſſias, and the Church of the Gentiles, the latter of which having called τὸ ἐξ ἐθνῶν ζωζομένων πλῆθος, the multitude of them that eſcape of the Gentiles, he ſtraight interprets by ἐθνῶν συνδρομὴ καλουμένων Χειστιανῶν, the running together of the nations called Chriſtians. And then the clear meaning of this uncertain mans queſtion will be this, Whether this doctrine or faith of Chriſt ſo contrary to the humour and paſſions of the world, ſhould be able to propagate it ſelf, and prove ſo ſucceſſefull, as to be received by many, or whether it ſhould be contained and incloſed within a narrow pale, that ſo he might either reſiſt Chriſt with the many, or have the honour of being one of the few ſingular perſons that received him. And accordingly Chriſts anſwer is to put him on that narrow path that leadeth to life, that the few were likely to find, the way of infidelity being ſo broad and beaten though it led to absolute destruction. By this explication of this place will appear also what is meant by the same word, Act. 2. 47. where 'tis said that the Lord προσετίθει τοὺς ζωζομένους καθ' ἡμέραν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, that is, by the grace and power of God there came daily many new converts, penitent, reformed Christians unto the Church. The rise of that interpretation in that place will be best taken from the admonition of S. Peter. ver. 40. of that chap. in these words, σώθητε ἀπὸ τῆς γενεᾶς σκολιᾶς ταύτης, be ye saved from this crooked generation, where the importance of the σώζεσθε is clearly, getting out, escaping, flying from that great pertinacy, and obduration of that age against all the miracles of Christ and his Apostles, crucifying him, and resisting all the powerfull methods of his workings, that is, not being saved eternally (for that would not be matter of exhortation unless as that is a certain consequent of repentance and belief in Christ,) but retracting the vitious course that they and others went on in, the μετανοήσατε v. 8. Repent. For when S. Peter had said Repent, 'tis added, that in many other words he admonished them, saying, σώθητε, be saved or escape, &c. which is an affirmation that to repent is the same thing, which in other and more words is to be saved, or escape, from that perverse generation, as in Simplicius σωτηρίας ἀρχὴν ἔχοντες, having the beginning of being saved, is set to expound a former phrase, οἱ ἀρχόμενοι παιδεύεσθαι, they that begin to be instructed. And accordingly in Zaleucus in his proœm to his Laws, where νῦν ἔχοντες and σωθησόμενοι are put together as phrases of the same importance, wise men and such as meant to be safe. And therefore when it followes that they that willingly received the word, that is, that admonition of his, were baptized, and that there were 3000 that day added to the Church, that certainly is an explication of this phrase προσετίθει ζωζομένους, he added the saved, or reformed Christians. So that that which was done in such a measure one day, ver. 41. is said farther to be done every day, ver. 47. in some measure, and the ἀσμένως ἀποδεξάμενοι τὸν λόγον they that willingly entertained the word there, is but a paraphrase of ζωζόμενοι the saved here, which being in the present and not future tense must needs belong to the present condition of men, that is, such penitent forsakers of the wicked perverse age, σωζόμενοι ἀπὸ γενεᾶς σκολιᾶς there, saved out of the crooked generation, and in a parallel phrase, ἀποφυγόντες τὰ μιάσματα τοῦ κόσμου, they that fled from the pollutions of the world, 2 Pet. 2. 20. by which Christians are there expres'd. In this sense we have the word used observably by Procopius on Isa. 26. σωζομένων τῶν ἐθνῶν Ἰσραὴλ πονηρῷ καὶ ὁμοίῳ ζήλῳ πνεύσαντι Ἕλλησι μᾶλλον ἤπτετο, ἢ ταῦτα βλέπειν σωζόμενα. When the Gentiles came in to Christ (not when they were saved or come to heaven, for the Jews could not see that, but) when they forsook their idolatry, and inbraced the Christian faith, and so escaped out of that perverse generation, the Jews were inflamed with envy, and would rather have endured any punishment, then to see the Gentiles thus reform, and reproach to them their infidelity and impenitence. Thus also will the word be explained 1 Cor. 1. 18. and 2 Cor. 2. 15. where σωζόμενοι, the saved, are believers, they that embrace the Gospel and are opposed to ἀπολλύμενοι, they that perish, as to the contrary, those that believ'd not, both there, and 2 Cor. 4. 3. where he saith his Gospel is hid to them, that is, to those which heard, but believed it not, ἄπιστοι unbelievers, v. 4. unless perhaps ἀπολλύμενοι may be thought a higher degree of the same thing, to wit those that for their unbelief are deserted by God, and so blinded that they cannot see, and then proportionably to that, σωζόμενοι may be those penitent believers, endued with a higher degree of grace from heaven. But that ἀπολλύμενοι signifies no more then the unbelieving Jews, that continued in their unbelief (and so by proportion, σωζόμενοι the contrary) may farther appear by an ancient place in * Clemens, where προσδοκώμενοι ἀεὶ τοὺς ἀπολλυμένους, praying for those that perish (not for them that are already destroyed) notes the prayers in the Easter week, which were offered to God by the Christian Church for the Jews, as appeares by the beginning of the 14. chap. δεῖ πενθεῖν ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν, &c. ὅτι οὐκ ἐπίστευσαν, We ought to mourn for them, because they have not believed. All that I shall adde to this, is but the opinion of Joh. Curterius, the translator of Procopius on Isaiah, who meeting oft in that Author with the word σωζόμενοι, those that are saved, hath sometimes been forced to render it, quibus salutis cura est, they that have care of salvation, the matter not bearing any interpretation which had nearer reference to salvation, or decree of salvation, then that expression of his would bear. Out of all that hath been said of this word, the notion of σωζόμενοι will sufficiently be cleared in all the places of the New Testament; and for the notion of the verbe σώζεσθαι we have said enough already to give direction for the understanding it, where ever 'tis to be met with, not alwayes for eternal salvation, but oft for other kinds of escaping, and deliverances out of diseases every where almost in the Gospels, out of other dangers, ὡς διὰ πυρός, 1 Cor. 3. 15. as one that escapes out of the fire (ζημιωθεὶς losing much in his passage, but himself escaping) διὰ ὕδατος 1 Pet. 3. 20. either through, or from, the water, and μόλις σωθήσεται scarcely escape, 1 Pet. 4. 18. and ἐν φόβῳ σώζετε, Jude 23. rescue in fear or in time of danger, snatching them out of the fire. All which we shall referre to their several places, see Note on Rom. 10. a. and 13. c.

V. 33. I must walk] That there is in this verse an ellipsis or defect, there is little doubt, and what it is will be best judg'd by comparing it with the former verse, or with Joh. 5. 17. In the former verse he tells Herod that for a time he is about the businesse of his miracles, curing diseases and casting out devils, and it shall not be in his power to hinder him; though he threaten or design to kill him, v 31. he should not be able to do it, but shortly indeed he should have made an end of his businesse, and then he should be put to death. The time of his doing miracles, &c. he there calls to day and to morrow, as the time of his being put to death, the third day; and so in this verse he gives him a reason why he should not fear his threates, nor go out of the way, which he was advised to v. 31. because, saith he, δεῖ με σήμερον καὶ αὔριον: There is a necessity in respect of Gods decree, that to day and to morrow, that is, for that space before mentioned, I should cure, &c. or, as it is Joh. 5. 17. ἐργάζεσθαι work. (so Theophylact, Δεῖ με χρόνον τινὰ παρεσκευάσθαι ἐνταῦθα θαυματουργοῦντα, I must stay here a while and do miracles,) and then indeed it is as necessary τῇ ἐχομένῃ the third day, or, the day immediately following or adjoyning (see Note on Mar. 1. b.) or after my work is done, πορεύεσθαι to go, either in that sense, wherein that word is taken c. 22. 22. that is, to be put to death (and so 'twill be all one with τελειοῦσθαι which is to be martyr'd, as we have τελείωσις ἀθλητῆ in Nyssen, and other Christian writers, or else πορεύεσθαι to go from thence (as he was advised to do v. 31.) up to Jerusalem, that being the place where the judgement of the great Sanhedrim was, where (and no where else) the cases of Prophets, which were accused of any great crime, were to be tryed, (see Cuneus de Repub. Heb. l. 1. c. 12.) whereupon it follows immediately, O Jerusalem, Jerusalem!

V. 34. Under her wings] Ἐπισυνάγειν ὑπὸ τὰς πτέρυγας, to gather under the wings seems to be a Proverbial phrase among the Jews for gathering and admitting of Proselytes: thus in Maimonides tit. Isuri bia, c. 13. speaking of the three wayes of receiving Proselytes, circumcision, baptisme, sacrifice, he addes, ובן לדורות, &c. And in like manner through all ages, as oft as a Gentile would enter into the Covenant and be gathered תחת כנפי השכינה under the wings of the divine Majesty, CHAP. XIV.

a. 1. And being upon an invitation perswaded to go on a Sabbath day, and dine with one of the Pharisees of great quality, a Ruler, or member of one of their Consistories, they themselves that had thus invited him, did insidiously and treacherously watch and observe what he would do, on purpose to take advantage against him, (A thing contrary to all laws of hospitality.)

1. AND it came to passe as he went into the house of one of the a * chief Pharisees to eat bread on the sabbath day, † that they watched him.]

* Rulers which were Pharisees † even they were watching him, αυτοι ησαν παρατηρουμενοι αυτον,

2. And behold, there was a certain man before him which had the dropsie.

3. by way of prevention asked a question of the Doctors of the law and Pharisees that were present, saying, Is the working of a cure on a sick man a thing forbidden, and so unlawfull to be done upon a sabbath day?

3. And Jesus [answering, spake unto the Lawyers and Pharisees, saying, Is it lawfull to heal on the sabbath day?]

4. And they held their peace. And he took him, and healed him, and let him go.

5. And he said unto them,

5. And he answered them, saying,] Which of you shall have an asse or an oxe fallen into a pit, and will not straightway pull him out on the sabbath day?

6. And they could not answer him again to these things.

7, 8, 9, 10. And being at this feast he observed how desirous those persons (Doctors of the law, and Pharisees, &c.) were, every of them to take place, or have the precedence at the feast, and thereupon knowing their inclinations, he spake this parable to them, which imported how much more honourable it is for a man to set himself below, then above his place, and how certain a way that is to get him honour.

7. And he put forth a parable to those which were bidden, when he marked how they chose out the chief rooms, saying unto them,

8. When thou art bidden of any man to * a wedding, sit not down in the highest room, lest a more honourable man then thou be bidden of him.

* a marriage-feast, γαμους, see Mat. 9. c. & 22. a.

9. And he that bad thee and him come and say to thee, Give this man place, and thou begin with shame to take the lowest room.

10. But when thou art bidden go and sit down in the lowest room, that when he that bad thee cometh, he may say unto thee, Friend, go up higher: then shalt thou have * worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee.]

* honour, glory, δοξα

11. For humility is the onely thing that is valued, or commended, or thought fit to be rewarded either by God or man.

11. For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.]

12. Let not thy intertainments be of those which can, or are likely to entertain thee again, or to whom thou hast obligations of affinity, &c. for this is but a worthlesse way of hospitality, in which there is nothing commendable or thank-worthy.

12. Then said he also to him that bad him, [When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours, lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee.]

13, 14. The onely commendable way, and that which it will be reasonable for God to reward is, the entertaining of those that want, and who are not likely to make thee any return, for this God will be thy debter, and pay thee at the day of judgement, and there can be no such advantage to thee as that.

13. But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blinde,

14. And thou shalt be blessed, for they cannot recompense thee, for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just.]

15. Upon this occasion one repeated that known saying among the Rabbines, Blessed, &c. that is, 'tis certainly a much happyer thing to be feasted by God in his kingdom, then by any man on earth, and therefore that is most true which was said v. 14. that 'tis more advantageous to any man to entertain the poor then any else.

15. And when one of them that sate at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.]

16, 17, 18, &c. To this Christ replied by a parable intimating the truth of what that person last had said, but withall, telling them that this celestiall feast, everlasting reward was that, that they had oft been invited to, and the generality of the Jews neglected to make use of the invitation, preferring their own designes of worldly advantages before it, thereby provoking God extremely. And therefore the heathen, and sinners, and mean persons of the world were fain to be taken in, nay importunately woo'd to come to that feast, in stead of them; and those that were the principally designed guests to be utterly rejected.

16. Then said he unto him, a certain man made a great supper, and bad many,

17. And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready.

b. 18. And they all * [b] with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused.

* presently

19. And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21. So that servant came and shewed his Lord these things. Then the Master of the house being angry, said to his servants, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22. And the servant said, Lord, it is done, as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.

23. And the Lord said unto the servant, Go out into the high-wayes and hedges, and compell them to come in, that my house may be filled.

24. For I say unto you, that none of those men that were bidden shall tast of my supper.]

25. And

25. And there went great multitudes with him, and he turned, and ſaid unto them,

26. If any man come to me and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and ſiſters, yea, and his own life alſo, he cannot be my diſciple.]

26. If any man offer to undertake my diſcipleſhip, and doth not preferre me before all others that are neareſt to him, yea and before his own life too, Mat 10. 37. he is not for my turn; And my ſervice being ſo ſure to bring perſecutions along with it, will not be for his.

33. So likewiſe whoſoever he be of you, that forſaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my diſciple.]

33. So he that undertakes to be a Chriſtian, muſt reſolve to renounce all that is moſt pretious to him in this world, or elſe he will not be able to hold out, and ſo had better never pretend to that profeſſion.

34. Salt is good, but if the ſalt have loſt his ſavour, wherewith ſhall it be ſeaſoned?]

34. A Chriſtian is the ſalt of the earth (Mat. 5. 13.) of infinite uſe and benefit to all with whom he converſeth, being an example of purity and other virtues whereof Chriſtianity is made up; But if he ſhall faile in the exerciſe of theſe, prove earthy, heavy, and inſipid, without any active ſtirring quality, like to thoſe bodyes, whoſe ſalt is drawn from them, he is utterly deſtroyed, and periſhed.

35. The unhappy remainder is uſeleſs beyond the moſt noiſome excrement, or putrid carcaſs. It is not fit or uſeful (as ſome things are) to enrich the ground, no nor to mix with other things, which being corrupted from their primary uſe, are yet good for that (and ſo are kept, though in a mean place, for that uſe) 'tis neither at preſent, nor for the future by long digeſtion, or farther putrefaction capable of being good manure or compoſt for the earth, but is utterly unprofitable, and generally dealt with as ſuch, caſt out without any reſpect into thoſe places where men would have nothing grow, apt only to convert a good ſoile into a deſert. Let every diſciple, every Chriſtian, deſigned by Chriſt to be the ſalt of the earth, lay this to heart, for he is neerly concerned in it. c.

Annotations on Chap. XIV.

a. V. 1. Chiefe Phariſees] What is meant by Rulers ſimply, Rulers of the people, and Rulers of the ſynagogues, hath been formerly ſhewed, Note on Mar. 5. c. and on Mat. 9. g, viz. that the Rulers ſimply were the Judges in their leſſer Conſiſtories, in particular cities, or, when the Context belonging to Jeruſalem ſo enforceth it, thoſe of the great Sanhedrim at Jeruſalem. Now the Phariſees which are ſo oft mentioned in the Goſpel, were a particular ſect in their religion, αἵρεσις, ſaith S. Paul, who was one of them, and that an improvement of the חסדים or Haſidæi (as they were ἐκουσαζόμενοι τῷ νόμῳ 1 Mac. 2. 42. thoſe that voluntarily performed ſome things, which the Law required not, and were contrary to the Karæi or Scripturarii, who were for that only which was commanded by law) forming thoſe things into doctrines or precepts, and obliging all to the performance of them, which the Haſidæi performed as free-will offerings, and ſo divided themſelves from the reſt of the profane world (which did not as they did) nay from the Haſidæi themſelves (who performed as much as they, but did not think themſelves or others obliged by law to doe ſo,) and therefore were call'd פרושים Phariſees, ἀφωρισμένοι ſeparate or divided from other men, and by S. Paul ἀκριβεστάτη αἵρεσις, a ſect that required the moſt exact performances of any. By this it appears that theſe were not any order or ſort of men ſetled by law, which had ἄρχοντες or rulers over them, but only a ſect, of which ſome of all orders of men were, and indeed a prevailing ſect, taken up by moſt of the chief men of the nation, the Elders in the great councel or Sanhedrim in Jeruſalem, and the Rulers in the Conſiſtories in other cities, which therefore are call'd ἄρχοντες Φαρισαίων Rulers, and thoſe rulers Phariſees, one of whom is here ſpoken of and ſtyled τὶς τῶν ἀρχόντων τῶν Φαρισαίων, one of the rulers that were Phariſees.

b. V. 18. With one conſent] Ἀπὸ μιᾶς is all one with the Syriack adverb מן מחדא anſwering the Greek ἀπὸ from, and חדא being of the feminine numeral which is μιᾶς one. And there is little queſtion but S. Luke ſo rendred that Syriack word. Now מחדא clearly ſignifies ἐξαχρῆμα, εὐθέως preſently, and to ἐξ ἀυτῆς, (which is all one literally with this phraſe) and conſequently 'tis beſt rendred preſently. See our learned Mr. Fuller in his Miſcellanies.

c. V. 35. Land] The meaning of εἰς γῆν here will be gueſs'd, firſt by that ſaying of Mat. 5. 13. You are the Salt of the earth, that is, the perſons by whom the whole world of men muſt be ſeaſoned; and 2ly, by the uſe of the word ἡ γῆ the earth, or the land ordinarily for the men, the inhabitants of the earth, as 1 Sam. 27. 9. τύπτει τὴν γῆν, ſmiting the earth, and the like very often. From whence 'tis eaſie to conclude, that for the ſalt to be uſefull, or fit εἰς γῆν, for the earth, is to be proper for the uſe of men, and if by its illneſſe it ceaſe to be ſo, 'tis of all other things the moſt unprofitable, for whereas other things being not fit for men, may yet be fit for the dunghill, ſalt by its naturall impropriety is debarr'd even from that moſt inferior degree of profitableneſſe. But perhaps, and indeed moſt probably, γῆ here may, in the husbandmans notion, ſignify land whether paſture, meadow, or tillage, all which are improved by manure. So is γῆ uſed Heb. 6. 7. Now two ſorts of manure there are; Some things have a peculiar propriety to the enriching of ground, and are uſed alone, without mixture of any thing elſe with them, as to ſome ground, ground, marle, lime, &c. Some things having not this propriety in any speciall manner, yet being in mixture with those that have, are fit for this turne, and of such generally our mixum's or composts are made, wherein all kind of dung being one speciall ingredient, that mixum may well be the thing, that is here expres'd by κοπρία or dungbill, whither, as is here intimated, many other things are cast, as well as dung. Now salt, which is very good for domestick uses, when that loses its virtue, when 'tis corrupted, μωρανθῇ, and so is no longer good for those uses, 'tis likewise good for nothing else. Other things, when they are corrupted, do but change their use; dung it self, in the utmost degree of putrefaction, is good for enriching of land, but salt corrupted, quite unlike other putrid things, is not good singly by it self to be laid on any sort of land, no nor in mixture, or compost with any thing else, no not with dung, which is most usefull. And this is the state of a putrid disciple, a corrupt Christian, he doth hurt whersoever he is, but no kind of good, and therefore as a wicked, and not onely unprofitable servant (or as ἀχρεῖος unprofitable is the worst character that can be) ἔξω βάλλεται, he is cast out, as here the unsavory salt, as ἀδόκιμος rejectaneous, or reprobate, whereas the good Christian is elect, precious, a good and faithfull servant, very profitable to his Masters use, and honour, and the advantage of other men. In this expression of our Saviours of salts loosing its savour, one thing farther may deserve to be added from the Chymists doctrine of salt. For it is certain that salt, if we speake strictly, is not capable of being made insipid, nothing in nature being able so to worke upon that fix'd incorruptible principle. It is therefore necessary that in this place by salt loosing its savour, we understand a mix'd body, wherein salt abounds, (so in our vulgar dialects, especially in Hebrew, מלח is the common name of salt and salt-bodyes, and is indifferently rendred by ἅλυκος and ἅλας) and then tis most true, that salt may loose its savour, that is, that in such a body the salt may be either removed, and drain'd forth, and then the body will be really insipid, or buryed in a mass of other prevailing elements, and then to us it will appeare insipid, and be justly said to have lost its savour. And on these terms our Saviours parable exactly corresponds with the process of nature in all mix'd bodyes; For when in their dissolution, their spirit, Phlegme, and Sulphur are called forth, the remainder yet is, in several cases, reducible into the ancient forme, and when it is not, yet it is usefull to many and those noble purposes, at least it is helpfull to the ground, to make it fertile. Thus corrupted fruits and plants, the excrements and carcasses of living creatures, thus lime, and ashes, and burnt land are profitably used in tillage, some immediately applyed, others after digestion and being putrifyed. But if at last the salt be draind out of these, or any other bodyes, what is left is an useless elemental earth, in the Chymists language a Caput mortuum or terra damnata, and is not fit for the land to be immediately laid upon it, nor yet for the dunghill or mixum, there to be rotted a while, and then made use of, but possibly good for walkes or allies, where we would have nothing grow, there to be trodden under foot of men, as it followes in the text. Accordingly in the Primitive discipline the χειμαζόμενοι and ὑποπίπτοντες did cast themselves at the feet of the pious Christians, as meriting to be trampled on by them, and calling to all that enter the Church to tread on them as unsavory salt. If to this it be objected that by this way of interpretation, ἅλας salt in the second place shall be taken for the salt body, or that which hath salt in it, whereas in the first place it signifies salt it self, the answer will be obvious, by reflecting on the parable of salt, Mat. 5. to which is immediately subjoyned, Ye are the light of the world, and to that is added, not Do you shine, but let your light so shine &c. Where as Christians are first named light it self, and then luminous bodyes, so both there and here Christians are first resembled to salt it self, and then immediately to salt bodies, or things which have salt in them, and so still this is an agreeable interpretation.

c. εἰς τὴν

18. I will arise and goe to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee,

20. And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck and kissed him.

Annotations on Chap. XV.

a. Μὴ ἔχοντας χρείαν εἰς μετάνοιαν.

V. 7. Repentance] The difference of μετάνοια change of mind from λύπη grief, or sorrow, for sinne, or dislike of what a man hath done, is sufficiently known, and as it hath place in many other passages, so eminently in this. For as he that lives a Godly life, may and doth often fall into such sinnes as deserve his sorrow and displeasure at himself, and so cannot be said not to want that sorrow, so it is certain that that man continuing all his life so, without any eminent fall into wilfull sinne, may be said not to need that μετάνοια that change, which here is spoken of, and is required to the bringing home of a lost sheep, a prodigall to his fathers house. So he that was wash'd already had no need, saith Christ, save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit, Joh. 13. 10.

b. Κεράτια

V. 16. Huskes] The Κεράτια which are here set down as the food of Swine, are the fruit of the Carobe, or arbor Ceratonia (which the Syriack translation reads accordingly חרובא) mentioned by Dioscorides l. 1. and Galen l. 7. de Simpl. Med. fac. who calls the tree it self κερατωνία, and that, saith Hesychius, is an Ægyptian fig, Κερατωνία, συκῆ Αἰγύπτιος. This fruit Gorrhæus thus describes, that 'tis of the length of a mans finger, forked, about the breadth of a thumb, very sweet, but hard of concoction, and of an ill juice, which is agreeable to what is affirm'd of it by Pliny l. 15. c. 24. who adds that the rind of it is the part that is eaten, and thereupon c. 28. In siliquis quod manditur, quid nisi lignum est? that part of it which is eaten is the wood. Whence it is that Siliqua the Latine word for that fruit, comes also to signifie the huske or rind of any kind of fruit, which is the reason, I suppose, why the word is ordinarily rendred husks, though the Latine siliqua doe not alwaies signifie so. Of this fruit Dioscorides saith, that χλωρὰ λαμβανόμενα κακοσόμαχα τυγχάνει, καὶ κοιλίας διαλυτικά, If they be taken green, they are very ill for the stomach, and are apt to breed looseness, ξηρανθέντα δὲ ἧττον κοιλίαν ἐυστομαχώτερα ὄντα ἡ δὲ ῥιφθεῖσα, being dried they are medicinall for a looſneſſe and are diureticall. The uſe of them green was probably that which belongs to this place, where the Swine are ſaid to feed on them, as they were wont to be allowed to doe on thoſe other fruits, which were good for nothing elſe. This fruit, ſaith Pliny, was ordinary among the Ægyptians, agreeing therein with Heſychius, to which perhaps that part of the Parable referres v. 13. where the prodigall is ſaid ἀπεδήμησε μακρὰν εἰς χώραν, to have travailed afarre off to a region, though it be not named: For that it cannot referre to ſome countrey in Judæa may ſeem, both becauſe there is no mention of that fruit in Judæa, and becauſe feeding of ſwine was againſt the laws of the Jewes (for as to that mention of heards of ſwine among the Gadarens, all that can be concluded thence is this, that Gentiles then inhabited there, and ſo Joſephus diſtinctly numbers Gadara among the ἑλληνίδες πόλεις which Pompey took away from the Jewes) and thirdly becauſe 'tis ſaid that ἀπεδήμησε μακρὰν, he travailed a great way off.

I. 15. c. 28.

Μακρὰν εἰς χώραν.

c. Νεκρὸς

V. 24. Dead] The Scripture-notion of the word Νεκρὸς dead may be learn'd from hence, to ſignifie one that is deſperately engaged in a wicked courſe. Thus thoſe that were carried into captivity, and deſpair'd of returne, are call'd dead bones, Ezec. 37. 3. and the reducing of them is ſaid to be the bringing them out of their graves, v. 12. So the ſtate of Abrahams body, and Sarahs womb, in reſpect of having hopes of a poſterity, is call'd deadneſſe, Rom. 4. 19. noting deſperation of children, and no more; So the ſtate of unchriſtian living is call'd death, 1 Joh. 3. 14. And they that lived in a Gentile courſe are ſaid to be dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes, Epheſ. 2. 1. (ſee Rom. 4. 17.) So 1 Tim. 5. 6. She that lives in pleaſure is dead, while ſhe lives. So the Jewes have a ſaying, Ill men while they live are ſaid to be dead. And ſo the ancient Arabs, Not he that is at reſt is dead, but the living dead man he is truly dead: and all this no otherwiſe, then according to the ordinary notion of Pythagoras, who for any that had forſaken his ſchool, that is, refuſed to live according to his rules of Philoſophy, had a κενοτάφιον, an empty coffin ſet in his place, to ſignifie him to be morally dead. Accordingly reformation or recovery to good life, is call'd a riſing from the dead, reviving, being quickned, paſſing to life, in theſe and other places, and ſignifies no more by all theſe expreſſions but only repentance from dead works, or renovation.

25. And Abraham with all * mildneſs and gentleneſs, and compaſſion, without any reproaching or reviling ſaid unto him, All that I can in this thy ſad condition impart to thee, is only to tell thee what thou art now to expect, and to mind thee of the reaſonableneſs of it; For all thy portion of abundance, and proſperity, and eaſe, and felicity, without intermixture of afflictions, thou haſt already enjoyed, and ſpent upon thy ſelf, in thy life time, without imparting them to any other though in neverſomuch want of thy relief; and on the other ſide Lazarus hath had all his portion of afflictions already, And now 'tis but juſt, that he ſhould have his bliſſe, and you your torment without any allay or mixture. e. οὐκ εἶπεν, ἀπαιδευσίαν ἢ ἀγνωμοσύνην &c. ἀλλὰ τὸ τέλειον, ἀσύγκρατον, ἀμιγὲς βασάνων. This see p. 808. 27. Then he ſaid, I pray thee therefore, Father, that thou wouldſt ſend him to my fathers houſe,

31. And he ſaid unto him, If they hear not Moſes and the prophets, neither will they be perſwaded though one roſe from the dead.]

31. But Abraham anſwered him with a quite contrary affirmation, That they which by the knowledge of their duty, delivered by Moſes and the denunciations of the Prophets, are not wrought on, or brought to obedience or amendment of life, would not in any probability be wrought on by a narration of one that came to them from the dead, There being more reaſon to perſwade any rationall man, that the Scriptures are true, and worth our heeding, or (that being ſuppoſed as among the Jews it was) that upon that one motive delivered in them, he ſhould reform and amend his life, then there would be to truſt or believe him that ſhould bring a meſſage from the dead to any man on the earth, and to forſake an habit of ſinne upon that motive.

Annotations on Chap. XVI.

2. Αδικία.

V. 8. Unjuſt ſteward] What is meant by ἀδικία unrighteouſneſſe in the 8. v. may be conjectured by the uſe of the ſame word v. 9. and the meaning of both, I conceive it to be fetch'd from ſome obſervations in the Hebrew tongue, as firſt that δίκαιος juſt, and ἀληθὴς true, are taken in the ſame ſenſe by the ſacred writers (& therefore Heſychius explaines ἀληθὴς true diſtinctly by δίκαιος juſt) that אמת is rendred by the Septuagint δικαιοσύνη juſtice, Gen. 24. 49. and Iſa. 38. 19. and conſequently that ἄδικος unjuſt and ἀληθινὸς true, are directly oppoſite one to another. Thus they are ſet in this place v. 11. (and Job. 7. 18. ἀληθὴς is expreſs'd by οὐκ ἔστιν ἀδικία ἐν αὐτῷ, there is no unrighteouſneſſe, that is, falſneſſe in him) and therefore muſt be reſolved to ſignifie (both of them) in a notion wherein they are thus contrary one to another. And ſo indeed ἄδικον unjuſt, and δόλιον deceitfull, appeare to be all one by comparing Mal. 2. 6. ἀδικία οὐκ εὑρέθη iniquity was not found in his lips, with 1 Pet. 2. 22. οὐκ εὑρέθη δόλος guile was not found in his lips. In this notion δίκαιος ſeems to be uſed, 1 Cor. 15. 34. ἐκνήψατε δικαίως, awake truly, or perfectly (in oppoſition to hypocriticall unſincere reformation,) explained by the not-ſinning that followes. Now what is meant by ἀληθινὸν μαμωνᾶ v. 11. is cleare, that true, perfect, valuable, durable riches, which is infinitely to be preferred before all the riches of this world (as ἀληθῶς βρῶσις, truly food, Joh. 6. 55. is ſuch food as will make him immortall that feeds on it, in oppoſition to the manna, which they that fed on, dyed) that is, either the reward and bliſſe in heaven only, or grace here (as preparative to that) together with that hereafter. Conſequently μαμωνᾶ ἄδικον oppoſite to that muſt ſignifie this inferiour, vain, ſuperfluous (as Phavorinus took it, μαμωνᾶς, ὁ ἄδικος ἢ ὑπὲρ χρείαν πλοῦτος) tranſitory, falſe wealth, ſo unvaluable in compariſon of that other, called by the Rabbins (juſt in that ſtyle) ממון שקר the vain, or falſe, mammon, which they joyne with הון לעולם the riches of this world, which is ſo ſcandalouſly vain and falſe and unfit to be truſted on, that הון the Plenty or riches of this world (which is oft by the Targũ rendred ממון mamon) is Prov. 10. 2. by them rendred שקראי a lye. And then the ſame, no doubt, is the meaning of that other phraſe, varyed from this only in the form, by a moſt ordinary Hebraiſme, μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας, mammon of injuſtice, or falſeneſſe, and an example of it we have (from whence the phraſe ſeems to be tranſcribed) in the Targum alſo, Iſa. 33. 15. he ſeparates himſelf מממון רשקר from the mammon of iniquity, or the falſe riches, and ממון רשקר the mammon of falſeneſſe, Ezech. 22. 27. Having found now the meaning of ἄδικον, and ἀδικία, v. 11. and 9. it will not be hard to reſolve what is the meaning of the οἰκονόμος ἀδικίας ſteward of falſeneſſe alſo, either ſo as may be proportionable to this notion of it, maintained throughout this parable, for thoſe tranſitory falſe riches, called by the Targum (as was ſaid) שקראי, falſeneſſe, that is, ἀδικία, and then it will ſignifie the diſpenſer of this inconſtant, tranſitory, falſe riches of this world. Or elſe as it muſt, by that ordinary Hebraiſme, ſignifie οἰκονόμος ἄδικος, a falſe, unjuſt ſteward, as κριτὴς ἀδικίας, an unjuſt Judge c. 18. 6. but ſo, not as to commend his falſeneſſe, but only his prudence, in making uſe of that wealth, which was put into his hands (be that called τὸ ἀπέχοντα v. 1. or ἀδικία here, or μαμωνᾶ ἀδικίας v. 9. or ἄδικον v. 11.) ſo, as might give him a ſubſiſtence after, when his office was taken from him, and ſo the οἰκονόμος ἀδικίας the ſteward of falſeneſſe, that is the falſe ſteward, will be as perfectly all one with υἱοὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου, the children of this world, i. e. worldly men, following in this verſe, as the ממון שקר or רשקר, the falſe riches or the riches of falſeneſſe, with the הון לעולם, the wealth of this world, or worldly wealth, as even now was ſaid. As for the mention of ἄδικος unjuſt in the ſecond part or application of the Parable v. 10. which is there oppoſed to πιστὸς faithfull, that doth not refer to the deceitfullneſſe of the ſteward in the Parable in cheating his maſter, but to the rich man, in the counter part, his not making uſe of thoſe poſſeſſions intruſted to him, to that advantage of his own ſoul to which they might have been improved. In which reſpect, he that doth like the ſteward in the Parable, makes ſuch prudent proviſion for himſelf, is not ἄδικος falſe, but πιστὸς faithfull, making a gainfull uſe of that which was committed to his truſt, which is there called being faithfull in a little, and is the very Chriſtian virtue commended to us in that Parable, the making us friends with our riches; ſo that ἄδικος there alſo ſignifies falſe, viz. to that truſt put into their hands, in not making what advantage they might of it. And laſtly for that paſſage v. 12. εἰ ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ πιστοὶ οὐκ ἐγένεσθε, if you have not been faithfull in that which is anothers, it is not ſo to be taken as if the rich mans gaining by the truſt committed to him, after the manner of the deceitfull ſteward, were thereby accuſed; for on the other ſide the thing found fault with in the parable, in the 12. v. is the not doing that which the falſe deceitfull ſteward did, and was commended for, v. 18. that is the not making ſuch an uſe of that tranſitory wealth (that paſſes from one owner to another) at that time put into his hands, as might help him to reception and entertainment, when he was out of his ſervice. For (to conclude this matter) it muſt be obſerved, that every rich man is in reſpect of God, as a ſteward to his Maſter, appointed to be a diſpenſer of that wealth put into his hands by God, which may therefore be here called ἀλλότριον anothers, not ſo much his who poſſeſſeth it, as Gods whoſe ſteward he is, or theirs to whom it is to be diſpenſed. And then as in Ariſtoles Rhetor. l. 2. c. 23. 'tis mentioned as a law of Theodectes, τοῖς κακῶς ἐπιμεληθεῖσι τῶν ἀλλοτρίων ἵππων ὑπεύθυνον εἶναι παρὰ δίκην τὸν οἰκοῦντα, that to them that did not take good care of other mens horſes they did not deliver their own; ſo is it here, and only one difference there is between him, and a ſteward among men. He hath liberty to uſe the wealth put into his hands ſo as may be moſt (not only for his Maſters, but alſo) for his own advantage, viz. to his endleſſe reward in heaven, which though it were an injuſtice and falſeneſſe in a ſervant here on earth, who is altogether to conſider his Maſters profit, not his own, and ſo was injuſtice in this ſteward here, in the firſt part of the parable, yet it is duty, and that which by the will and command of God we are obliged to in the execution of that ſtewards office which the rich man holds under God, and is the only thing commended to us in this parable; and is ſo far from denominating him that makes that advantage of the treaſure intruſted to him, an unjuſt or unrighteous ſteward in the application, that it denominates him πιστὸς faithfull in the latter part of the parable and him only ἄδικος falſe, that doth it not.

V. 9. They may receive] The word δέξωνται here is taken Imperſonally, as it were, not denoting the perſons that ſhould receive them, whether God, or Angels, or good works themſelves (though 'tis true that Chriſt who accounts what is done to our poor brethren, done unto him, will ſo receive and reward the mercifull) but after the manner of the Scripture-ſpeaking, to ſignifie no more, then you ſhall be received, that is, that theſe works of charity ſhall (through Gods acceptance and promiſe to reward them) prepare, as it were, a place in heaven for you, and ye ſhall, when your riches faile, be received into everlaſting habitations. This I ſuppoſe is the meaning of that place in Eccluſ. c. 16. 14. Πᾶσα ἐλεημοσύνη (not in the Dative but the Nominative caſe) ποιήσει τόπον, every work of mercy ſhall make, or prepare a place, to wit, in heaven for thee, and ſo the place will be intelligible, which otherwiſe will not, and the conſequents will be naturall, ᾧ ἕκαστος κατὰ ἔργα ἀνθρώπου ἀνταποδώσει, every man ſhall finde according to his works. Many examples of this phraſe, δέξωνται ὑμᾶς, for you ſhall be received will be obvious to any in the reading of the Scriptures. So when we read 2 Sam. 21. 8. of the five ſons of Michal (for ſo our Hebrew copyes now read, and ſo did thoſe which the Chaldee and LXXII render) that ſhe bare, &c. it cannot be underſtood, which ſhe, that is, Michal, bare, but which were born to Adriel the ſon of Barzillai, for 'tis cleare they were not Michals but Merabs children. So 2 Sam. 24. 1. the anger of the Lord was kindled againſt Iſrael, and he moved, that is, not God moved for 'twas Satan, 1 Chron. 21. 1. but) David was moved againſt them, &c. And ſo Caſtellio happily renders it eo impulſus eſt David, &c. ſo in this Goſpel c. 6. 38. we read δώσουσι they ſhall give in the latter part of the verſe, for that which was δοθήσεται it ſhall be given, in the beginning. So Lu. 23. 31. εἰ ἐν τῷ ὑγρῷ ξύλῳ ταῦτα ποιοῦσιν, if they doe ſuch things, that is, if ſuch things be done, (that is, ſuch judgements fall) on the green tree. So Βλέπουσι Rev. 16. 15. ἵνα βλέπωσι τὴν ἀσχημοσύνην αὐτοῦ, and they see his uncomelineſſe, that is, his uncomlineſſe be ſeen.

Απαιτοῦσι So Lu. 12. 20. this night ἀπαιτοῦσι, they require thy ſoul, that is, thy ſoul is required from thee.
εἶπε So Mat. 19. 5. εἶπε is not he, that is, God, ſaid, but it was ſaid by Adam or rather by the hiſtorian, as his concluſion from thence, Gen. 2. 24.

c. V. 12. Another mans] What is meant by ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ was before touched (Note a.) I ſhall only adde to the explication of it a paſſage of an antient writer, the author of the Eccleſiaſticall Hierarchy c. 3. making a difference and oppoſition between the τὰ ὄντως ὄντα, καὶ ἀθανάτως κτητὰ, καὶ αἰωνίως ἡδέα, on the one ſide, the things that have a true being, are poſſeſs'd immortally, and are eternally ſweet; And on the other ſide, τὸν ἀβέβαιον ἐν τοῖς ἀλλοτρίοις ἂν ἔσαν ἀλλὰ δοκοῦσαν ἐυπάθειαν, the unſtable pleaſure which conſiſts in things that are other folkes, and which is not really, but only in appearance. On which 'tis Maximus's Scholion, Ἀλλότρια, ſaith he, are τὰ κτὶ κόσμον ὡς ὑ πρὸς ἰδικῶς ἀλλὰ ἐξ ἄλλων εἰς ἄλλως μεταπίπτοντα. The things that are other mens ſignifie the things of this world, which are not properly any particular mans propriety, but paſſe from one man to another. And this truly ſeems the moſt proper notion of ἀλλότρια here, thoſe things that are not properly our own, in reſpect of the weak tenure we have in them, they paſſing from us, or we from them ſo ordinarily; and ſo the ἀλλότριον here will be more fully agreeable, and parallel to the ἄδικον μαμωνᾶ falſe mammon, as we even now explained it, and to τὸ ὑμέτερον that which is yours indeed (your propriety, peculiar, that ſhall never be removed from you) will be all one with ἀληθινὸς πλοῦτος, the true riches.

d. V. 19. A certain rich man] That this is not a ſtory but a parable, may appear by Gemara Baby. ad Cod. Πλοῦτος Berachoth, where thus much of it is ſet down, that a King made סעודה גדולה a great feaſt, and invited all the ſtrangers, and there came עני אחד, one poor man and ſtood at his gates, and ſaid unto them, Give me פרוסה אחד one bit or portion (almoſt the Latine pars) ולא השגיחו עליו and they conſidered him not, and he ſaid, My Lord the King, of all the great feaſt thou haſt made, is it hard in thine eyes to give me פת אחד ביניהם, one bit, or fragment, among them. And the title of this paſſage there is משל למלך בשר ודם A parable of a King of fleſh and blood.

V. 25. Receivedſt thy good things] The phraſe of receiving thy good things ſeems to be agreeable to the Hebrew ſtyle, which uſeth קבל עולמו receiving his world for an uninterrupted courſe of ſecular felicity, when all things ſucceed according to a mans will in this world, according to an ancient ſaying of theirs, כל שעברו עליו ארבעים יום בלא יסרין קבל עולמו, whoſoever ſhall paſs through forty dayes without chaſtiſments hath received his world, a full abundant reward for all the good he hath done here.

CHAP. XVII.

* ſcandals σκάνδαλα 1. THEN ſaid he unto his diſciples, [It is impoſſible but that * offences will come;] but woe unto him through whom they come.

1. It is not to be imagined that God ſhould ſo think fit to interpoſe his power perpetually as to hinder or not permit falſe doctrines and ſchiſmes, and other the like means of hindring or diſcouraging men in their Chriſtian courſe to come into the world (Mat. 18. 7.) to draw men from the Chriſtian doctrine of truth and chatity.

* ſcandalize σκανδαλίσῃ 2. It were better for him that a milſtone were hanged about his neck, and he caſt into the ſea, then that he ſhould [* offend one of theſe little ones.]

2. diſcourage, or drive off one Chriſtian to unchriſtian life.

3. Take heed to your ſelves, If thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, rebuke him, and if he repent, forgive him.

4. And if he treſpaſſe againſt thee ſeven times in a day, and ſeven times in a day turne again to thee, ſaying, I repent, thou ſhalt forgive him.]

3, 4. Be ye carefull that ye be not guilty of any degree of this, But on the other ſide after the example of Chriſt (mentioned in this matter, Mat. 18. 11, 12.) doe the utmoſt in your power to reduce any Chriſtian that offendeth, though it be by injuring thee, In which caſe thou art to be ſo far from being angry with him, or deſigning revenge, that thou muſt, beſide pardoning him upon his reformation how often ſo ever he offend thee, uſe all probable means to bring him to repentance.

5. And the Apoſtles ſaid unto the Lord, Increaſe our faith.]

5. Upon another occaſion (moſt probably that Mat. 17. 20. where in the diſcourſe between his diſciples and him, he taxeth their unbelief) he was intreated by ſome of the diſciples, (who were not able to caſt out a devil, or cure the young man of the Epilepſy, Mat. 17, 16.) that he would give them more of this gift of miracles, that they might be able to doe all, to which they were by his deſignation ſent, but were not able to doe them, for want of ſome higher degree of this miraculous faith then as yet they had attained to,

6. And the Lord ſaid, If ye had faith as a grain of muſtard-ſeed, ye might ſay unto this ſycamine tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the ſea, and it ſhould obey you.]

6. And he ſaid unto them, If you had but the leaſt degree of true faith, you ſhould by my power be enabled to work any the greateſt miracle, remove mountains, Mat. 17. 20. make trees grow in the ſea, &c. But what I mean by this true faith I will expreſſe to you by a parable, or ſimilitude.

7. But which of you having a ſervant plowing or feeding cattel, will ſay unto him by and by, when he is come from the field; Goe and ſit down to meat?

8. And will not rather ſay unto him, Make ready wherewith I may ſup, and gird thy ſelf and ſerve me, till I have eaten and drunken, and afterward thou ſhalt eat and drink?

9. Doth he thank that ſervant becauſe he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not.

10. So likewiſe ye, when ye have done all thoſe things which are commanded you, ſay, We are a unprofitable ſervants: we have done that which was our duty to doe.]

7, 8, 9, 10. As it is with an hired ſervant, 'tis not ſufficient for him to doe that one buſineſſe for which he was hired, but other common offices there are, which belong indifferently to all ſervants, as waiting at table, &c. and when he hath done his other works in the field, for which he was hired, as ploughing, &c. he muſt firſt ſet cheerfully to the other offices, before he think he have done his duty, or expect to receive his ordinary food, his daily wages; ſo muſt ye (whoſe task it is to cure diſeaſes, caſt out devils) doe all thoſe things with all fidelity which are means to that end, or never think you have performed your duty. When confidence of my power, and uſing the mention of my name will not caſt out devils, then ſolemn prayer is your duty to be ſuperadded to that, and when that and prayer alone will not doe, you muſt adde faſting alſo, Mat. 17. 21. and not think that 'tis free for you to doe, or not to doe this, (and that if you doe it, 'tis eminent virtue in you) but you muſt looke upon it as neceſſary duty, which when you have done, you have done no more then was commanded you, and was ſtrictly required of you to doe. This is the beſt anſwer which is likely to be given to your requeſt of having your faith encreaſed. Doe not you neglect the means, and you ſhall be able to doe what miracles you will; But as long as you think your partiall obedience will ſerve the turne, and will not take the pains to faſt and pray, to caſt out a devil, and the like; this is an infidelity in you, Mat. 17. 17, 20. which will diſable you from doing thoſe miracles, which otherwiſe you would eaſily be able to doe.

For indeed it is already among you, the Goſpel preacht, which is the ſcepter of this kingdom, and all other parts are but attendants of that. See Mat. 3. c.

22. And turning to his diſciples, he tells them of theſe Phariſees, and other the like contemners of his preaching, that they that now deſpiſe this ſcepter of the kingdom, receive not the Goſpel, there ſhall come out againſt them that iron rod, deſtruction for this great ſinne, and then 'twill be too late for them to wiſh for theſe daies of mercy, which now they deſpiſe, and make no uſe of.

And that is all the foreknowledge of the time you ſhall have in anſwer to your queſtion, ver. 20.

Annotations on Chap. XVII.

V. 10. Unprofitable ſervants] What is meant by ἀχρεῖος δοῦλος, unprofitable ſervant, will be matter of ſome queſtion, becauſe of the ſomewhat diſtant character ſet upon it, Mat. 25. 30. There he is to be caſt into utter darkneſſe, his unprofitableneſſe is a damning ſin, expreſſed alſo by wickedneſſe and ſlothfulneſſe, but here they that have done all that is commanded (which ſure is not a ſtate of ſo much danger) muſt yet call themſelves unprofitable ſervants, becauſe they have done no more then ſo, have done nothing for which they ſhould be thanked or rewarded above ordinary, v. 9. To this 'twere anſwer ſufficient to ſay, that the ſame word is often uſed in ſeveral notions, ſometimes in a ſtricter (for barely not-profitable,) ſometimes in a larger ſenſe. Thus ἠχρειώθησαν might ſeem to be uſed Pſal. 14. 3. and from thence Rom. 3. 12. (ſee Note on Rom. 1. g.) for all kind of impiety (as ἄνομος is ſometimes he that lives not exactly according to law, ſometimes the moſt wicked, lawleſs perſon) but that word in that place muſt be underſtood according to the notion of the Hebrew there, which ſignifies putrid, or ſtinking, which is therefore uſeleſſe, good for nothing, as rotten Eph. 4. 29. is oppoſed to good for uſe. Beſide this therefore, there may be yet a farther account given of the word in that of Mat. 25. thus, The phraſe ἀχρεῖος δοῦλος ſignifies a ſervant that brings in no profit to his Maſter. Now according as the office or employment of this ſervant is, ſo this will have more or leſſe of guilt in it; he whoſe office or ſervice conſiſts in trafficking for his Maſter, to whom 'tis under precept (as it was in that ſervant, Mat. 25. he had been commanded by his Maſter to trade with his talent, Luk. 19. 13. and from thence an obligation lay upon him, he ought to have put the money to the exchangers, Mat. 25. 27.) his not bringing in profit is downright diſobedience, and accordingly as he is call'd unprofitable in one place, v. 30. ſo he is formerly by the ſame Evangeliſt ſtyled wicked, and ſlothful, v. 27. which he could not have been, if he had done all that was required of him. And ſo though a bare unprofitableneſs founded in a performance of all that was commanded (as here it was) bring not utter darkneſs upon the ſervant, but only deprive him of thanks, or reward above wages, v. 9. yet when that unprofitableneſſe is inſeparable from direct breach of precept, as there it appears to be, there it moſt juſtly brings that ſevere ſentence upon the unprofitable. This difference then (which is but Extrinſecal, & Accidental to the nature of the word) being acknowledged, and ſo giving the account why the unprofitable in one place ſhould be under a greater guilt then in the other, in all other reſpects the notion will be the ſame in both places. There tis ſet to ſignify him who had brought in no profit to his Maſter, made not uſe of his abilities, v. 15. to improve the talent committed to him. And agreeably ſo it muſt ſignifie here. For two ſorts of ſervices are here taken notice of, One, that which is the particular task for which he is hired, as ploughing, feeding cattel, v. 7. another, which though it be not named or ſpecified to him, or indented for at his entring into the ſervice, yet belongs to every one, what office ſoever he is in, (as he is a ſervant) viz. bringing in meat, waiting upon his maſter at table, v. 8. This Ariſtotle in his Politicks names among the ἐγκύκλια διακονήματα, thoſe ſervices that belong to every ſervant (as the ἐγκύκλια μαθήματα are Grammar, Muſick, Exerciſes, which belong to all young men, whatſoever faculty they apply themſelves to.) Parallel to this, what ſervices are of this kind, though they be not ſpecified, or indented for by name, they are yet in all reaſon, and by obligation of obedience and ſervice to his Maſter, to be performed by him; and he that neglects or refuſes to perform them, doth not perform the duty of a ſervant, and for ſuch neglect deſerves ſtripes, where the Maſter hath that power over ſervants (as in Chriſts ſpeeches he is ſuppoſed to have, he ſhall be beaten with many or with few ſtripes, which may be the reaſon that among the Jews there is no law given for the obedience of ſervants to Maſters, becauſe the Maſters could by puniſhments enforce that themſelves.) But then when all this is performed, this is little for the commendation of a ſervant, neither thanks, nor reward extraordinary are due to him for this. It muſt be remembred, what Seneca hath obſerved, that the ſervant is humilis amicus, a lower ſort of friend, that is to tend and conſider his Maſters good, and to contrive what may moſt tend to it, and perform it upon occaſions, Exiguum eſt ad legem bonum eſſe, ſaith he, It is a petty ſmall thing to do no more then he is commanded to do, that is the meaning of τὰ διατεταγμένα, and ὀφειλομεν ποιεῖν here, doing what is commanded, nothing but ſtrict duty, what he is obliged to, as a ſervant. The profitable or uſeful ſervant doth more then ſo, whatever he ſees will tend to his Maſters advantage, he doth it of his own accord; and he that doth not, though he have broken no precept, is yet to acknowledge himſelf unprofitable. And this notion of the unprofitable ſervant belongs fitly to this place, where, I ſuppoſe, Chriſt ſpeaketh of the unfaithfulneſſe of the Diſciples, who contented themſelves with calling the name of Jeſus over the Epileptick, and when that would not do, did not proceed to faſting and praying (which means would have enabled them to cure him) and now come and deſire Chriſt to encreaſe their faith, v. 5. that is, their power of working miracles, when (as he tells them) if they would do their duty in all parts, as becomes ſervants to do, that is, faſt and pray when need required, uſe the proper and neceſſary means toward the end, they would be able to do what miracle they pleaſed. And this is but duty, ſaith Chriſt, the doing of it they muſt not look on as ſupererogating virtue, but as that to which they are ſtrictly obliged, and which, though it be not commanded to all, yet being a means neceſſary to an end, is, by interpretation, commanded to all them to whom that end is commanded, and ſo to them who were commanded to cure diſeaſes, &c. Mat. 10. 8. For 'tis ordinarily ſaid that there are two ſorts of Neceſſaries, 1. thoſe things that are ſo neceſſitate præcepti, by neceſſity of precept, or becauſe they are commanded: 2. others neceſſitate medii, neceſſary as means, without which I cannot do that ſervice which is required of me; And ſo was this of fasting and praying to the casting out of some devils (the Apostles task at that time, part of their office) and as they that do not this fail much of their duty, and have no reason to expect that God will supply them, enable them farther to do that work without use of that means, so they that do it have little reason to expect any thanks for it, which is the adequate importance of this place.

b. V. 33. Preserve it] Ζωογονῆν the word here used hath a special significancy in * Greek authors, opposite to ἀποκτεῖναι. As the latter belongs to those creatures which bring forth egges first, and then, after some time, living creatures, so the former belongs to all other creatures which bring forth alive at first. And this might have not onely a commodious but elegant sense in this place, thus, that they that die and lose their lives for Christs sake, shall immediately, without any intervall of the ψυχοπαννυχία sleeping of the soul in death, bring forth a new life into all eternity. But perhaps it may be unfit to affix this Critical notion of the word in Humane writers to this of S. Luke; and if we judge by the use of the word in the Greek of the Old Testament, which hath a greater consent and sympathy with the writers of the New Testament then any other sort of books, ζωογονῆν will signifie no more then σώζειν to save or preserve; for so it is used Exod. 1. 17, 18, 22. And then the meaning of the verse will be, that he that shall use any crafty means of policy at that time to save his life, it shall probably prove unsuccessefull to him, when he that intrusts himself and his life to Gods providence and direction, and so doth endanger the losing of it, shall be more likely to save it then any other.

8. Yea certainly he will suddenly proceed against their persecutors, and when he doth so, it will fall very heavy upon the Jews: For when Christ comes to do vengeance, there shall be very few Christians to be found in Iudæa (see note on Mat. 24. b.) they that are converted of the Iews shall be gone out and dispersed among the Gentiles. 12. I fast every munday and thursday, the second and fift dayes of every week, on which we are wont to hear the Law read in our Synagogues, and I pay tithes of herbs and every thing which others make doubt (it being not determined by law) whether they are to be paid or no.

43. And immediately he received his sight, and followed him, glorifying God: and all the people, when they saw it, gave praise unto God.

Annotations on Chap. XVIII.

2. Ἐκκακῆν

V. 1. Not to faint] Μὴ ἐκκακῶν here is to be explained by Hesychius and Phavorinus, who have jointly, the one out of the other, these words, Ἐκκακῶμεν (not as the printed copies of both authors corruptly read it, ἠχμαλῶμεν, ἠκνδιῶμεν, but, as 'tis clear it must be mended) ἀμελῶμεν, ἀκνδιῶμεν, by which 'tis clear, that the word signifies negligence or careleſſeneſſe. The other rendrings of the word by non defatigari and non deficere, seem to be grounded on a conjecture that the reading should be ἐκδέμειν, whereas the Manuscripts agree in this other reading, and the importance of the Parable is very well satisfied with it, which is to stirre us up to diligence and importunity in prayer, πρὸς πάντοτε, to pray at all times, answerable to which is ἔρχεσθαι εἰς τέλος in the Parable v. 5. that is, coming perpetually, constantly (according to the importance of the Hebrew תמיד: see note b.) and therefore the Syriack here reads, coming at all times, that is, never to omit the constant, frequent, set houres of performing this duty. So likewise 2 Cor. 4. 1. Having this ministry, this office intrusted to us, οὐκ ἐκκακοῦμεν, we are not slothful or negligent in it; So Gal. 6. 9. When we are a doing good, μὴ ἐκκακῶμεν, let us not be slothful, but as men that have a sure reward in their eye, &c. And in the same matter, 2 Thess. 3. 13. μὴ ἐκκακήσητε καλοποιοῦντες; be ye not negligent in doing good: onely it is to be observed that as κακὸς in Greek signifying sometimes an idle, sluggish, base person, (and so ignavus, a slothful person, in Latine) is also a fearful, pusillanimous, cowardly person, so ἐκκακεῖν in some places being, by the Context concerning afflictions, determin'd to it, signifies to be discouraged, to play the coward. So 2 Cor. 4. 16. when, upon the consideration of the afflictions which attend the preaching of the Gospel, he yet resolves that the gain which they are to receive by it, is more then the losse of life it self to him, and thereupon, contrary to all discouragements, οὐκ ἐκκακοῦμεν, we are not afraid, or discouraged; for if our outward man be destroyed, if we should suffer any affliction even to death it self, yet, &c. So Ephes. 3. 13. Wherefore I beseech you μὴ ἐκκακεῖν ἐν ταῖς θλίψεσί μου ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν, not to be discouraged, or afraid, or disheartened, in your Christian course, on occasion of my afflictions suffered for you, for this (that I suffer for you) is your glory, matter of incitement, not of discouragement to you. And these are all the places, where the word is used in the New Testament.

b. Τυπτιδζειν

V. 5. Weary me] The word ὑπωπιάζειν is twice used in the New Testament, here and 1 Cor. 9. 27. It is an Agonistical word in the first use of it, belonging to the πυκτὴ or cuffers, which was one of the Grecian exercises, or to the παγκρατιὰι, which was a mix'd exercise, made up of cuffing and wrestling together, and is the thing referr'd to in that place to the Corinthians, among whom the Isthmii agones (one of the four sorts of them in Greece) were celebrated. Now the word coming not from ὑπὸ and πίζω (as, against all Analogie, some would have it) but from ὑπώπιον, and that from ὑπὸ and ὀπὴ, a lividnesse, or blewnesse under the eyes, or, on the face, and that such as is caused by blowes, signifies distinctly to strike in the face with the fist, or with caestus which they used in their hands to cuffe with: and so as the word συλαγωγεῖν to get the adversary under him, belongs there to wrestling, so this ὑπωπιάζειν to cuffing, and both together make up the παγκράτιον (the exercise so called from πᾶν and κράτος as requiring all strength, to the using of it) which, saith * S. Chrysostome, the Apostle referres to there. From this Agonistical use of the word ὑπώπιον, and ὑπωπιάζειν, another is, which is gotten into common use for reproaching or putting any man to shame, that blewnesse under the eyes, or on the face being a visible mark of being beaten. And thus as the Latine suggillatio, so this Greek word is used among the Latines, Consulatus Auli, saith Cicero, non tam Consulatus est, quàm Magni nostri hypopion, His Consulship is a meer contumely or reproach to Pompey who made him Consul. So in Nilus p. 87. ἀνεκδ. Narr. 6. speaking of the valiant expressions of a gallant woman, he saith ἐωτῆ ὑπώπια δεξάμενον, that he received them as contumelies and upbraidings of his own impatience. And thus the word is to be taken in this place, either, Lest her continual coming shame me, or, Lest she coming so oft, at last let loose her tongue to contumelies and railings at me. But the former is the most proper sense, most agreeable to the acception of εἰς τέλος in the sacred dialect (being the Greek of לנצח, which Psal. 103. 9. is rendred εἰς τὸ τέλος, and so 1 Thess. 2. 16. signifies long duration or continuance, and is ordinarily rendred for-ever) and answerable exactly to the designe of the Parable, set down v. 1. that we ought to pray πάντοτε, and that by doing so, we should make God ashamed (as it were) to deny or cast off our importunity. Hence it is that the Fathers in their prayers and speeches to God use the phrase, ὑσωπῶ σε. I put thee to shame, to wit, by continual importuning. Σὲ ὑσωπῶ † μόνον ἀγαθὸν, in S. Basils Liturgie, I put thee to shame, thou that art the onely good. So in the Psaltery of the Greeks, in which there are so many prayers mix'd, οἶδα γὰρ, Κύριε, εἰ μὴ ὑσωπᾶ ἀπὸ τὴν ἰδίαν ἀγαθότητα, οὐκ εἴασας, &c. Unlesse, O Lord, thy goodnesse put thee to shame, that is, extorted this from thee; Which expression of theirs, as it referres without all doubt to this of S. Luke, and is but another way of paraphrasing Gods being wrought on by way of importunity; so it is a clear evidence of the truth of what hath been said, of the notion and importance of this word ὑπωπιάζω in this place.

* ἡ γὰρ ὀργὴ ἡ παντάπασιν, &c.

V. 7. Though he bear long] The meaning of μακροθυμῶν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς here is best found by comparing the verse with Ecclus 35. 19. where speaking of God, Ποιήσει κέλευθον, saith he, καὶ ἐὰν μὴ βραδύνῃ, ὀδὸν μὴ μακροθυμήσῃ ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ὁ κραταιὸς, The mighty one will execute judgement, and will not delay, nor be slack toward them. So μακροθυμία, patience, or long sufferance, signifies slackness in punishment, or deferring of it. And so that verse there, is but a paraphrase of this. The difference is 1. that this is by way of Interrogation, which, we know, serves onely to increase the force of the Affirmation, and 2. that μακροθυμῶν in the close is in the Participle, which, though it be easily supplied with the Verb ἔστι, ordinarily understood, yet in very ancient copies, as that most ancient one in the Kings Library, and so in that which S. Chrysostome, and * Antiochus, and the ancient Translator, and also the Syriack and Arabick made use of, it is read μακροθυμεῖ: And so the sense is complete — Doth he delay? or, Is he slack toward them? or in doing justice to them? Certainly he shall not. See Theophylact. The occasion of Christs saying this in this place may seem to be, to take off the great stumbling block from the Disciples, or converted Jews, who as yet saw nothing but afflictions toward themselves and Christ, were persecuted for Christianity, whereas the Jews that held out against Christ continued prosperous in it. To these our Saviour both here, and ch. 21. 28. gives assurance that an heavy vengeance shall light upon this nation, that it shall be utterly laid wast, that the Jewish religion (which, as long as it lasted, seemed a great prejudice against the faith and doctrine of Christ) shall be destroyed, that the persecuted believers shall be delivered, and this that should suddenly come to passe within the age of some that then lived, Mat. 16. 28. Mat. 26. 64. and Joh. 21. 22. To the same purpose it is, that the Apostles in their Epistles, when they speak to these converted Jews, scattered abroad upon the persecution in Judaea, do very frequently mention the suddennesse and certainty of this vengeance on the Jews, and destruction of their Temple and worship, as an argument of great force to keep those converts in their faith, who, as long as the Temple stood, and the sacrifice continued, were oft tempted to doubt, which was the truer religion, the Christian, or that of the Jews. So we find S. Paul pressing it Rom. 13. 11. knowing † καιρὸν, this great season, this famous time foretold of, wherein they were to be rescued from their persecutors, and so their σωτηρία (the same that was mention'd Mat. 10. 22. see note h.) nearer then when they first believed, or were converted to the faith. And again ἤδη ἡμέρα ἤγγικε, this day was nigh at hand, and therefore they should keep close to all Christian practise; so Jam. 5. having denounced the woes then near approaching upon the Apostatizing Gnosticks (who to preserve their worldly tranquillity complied with the Jews, and joyned with them in persecuting the Orthodox Christians) v. 1. &c. and the cries of the oppressed and persecuted (that is, of the ἔκλεκτοι βοῶντες the elect crying here) v. 4. he then comforts the believers v. 7. by this argument, v. 8. that this παρουσία τοῦ Κυρίου ἤγγικε this coming of the Lord (the very same that is here v. 8.) was now close at hand, and that explained by ὁ κριτὴς πρὸ τῶν θυρῶν ἕστηκεν, the judge standing at the dore, which shews that he will ἐκδικεῖν ἐν τάχει, as it is in this verse, avenge the sufferers, the believers speedily. The same argument is pressed by S. Peter (who, as S. James, c. 1. 1. wrote to those of the dispersion, that is, to the converted Jews scattered in other nations, upon their being persecuted out of Judaea.) 1 Pet. 4. 7. The end of all things (that is, of the Jewish sacrifices, and all their legal ceremonies, and the Temple, and people) is at hand, though

CHAP. XIX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND Jeſus entred, and paſſed through Jericho.

2. And behold, there was a man named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the Publicans, and he was rich.

3. And he ſought to ſee Jeſus who he was,] and could not for the preaſe, becauſe he was little of ſtature.

3. And he was very deſirous to ſee the perſon of Jeſus, having no farther deſigne, or thought at the preſent, but that, ver. 14.

4. And he ran before, and climbed up into a ſycomore tree to ſee him; for he was to paſſe that way.

5. And when Jeſus came to the place, he looked up, and ſaw him, and ſaid unto him, Zacchæus, make haſte and come down; for to day [I muſt abide at thy houſe.]

5. I mean to be entertained by thee.

* entertain'd him rejoicing, ὑπεδέξατο αὐτὸν χαίρων

6. And he made haſte and came down, and * received him joyfully.

7. And when they ſaw it, they all murmured, ſaying, That he was gone to be [gueſt with a man that is a ſinner.]

7. entertained in an heathen's, or, Publican's houſe.

* wronged any man,

8. And Zacchæus ſtood and ſaid unto the Lord, Behold Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor, and if I have* taken any thing from any man by falſe accuſation, I reſtore him fourfold.]

8. And whilſt Chriſt was there, Zacchæus made this ſpeech unto him, Sir, half my wealth I beſtow upon the poor, and whomſoever I have defrauded (ſee note on c. 3. c.) or, as a Publican, exacted more from them then was due, I will, according to to the law for theeves, make a fourfold reſtitution.

9. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, This day is ſalvation come to this houſe, for ſo much as he alſo is the ſon of Abraham.]

9. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, This day repentance, and ſo the Goſpel, and the mercies of the Goſpel are come home to Zacchæus, as being a believer, and ſo one (though a Publican) to whom the promiſes made to the ſeed of Abraham doe belong.

10. For the ſon of man is come to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt.]

10. His being an heathen or Publican, or a ſinner in his former life, doth not render him uncapable of receiving benefit from me, but contrariwiſe gives him a capacity of it, upon his repentance. For this was the end of my coming to reduce ſinners to repentance, and to obtain mercy for ſuch, Mat. 18. 12.

11. And as they heard theſe things, he added, and ſpake a parable, becauſe he was nigh to Jeruſalem, and becauſe they thought that the kingdome of God ſhould immediately appear.

11, 12. And at this time, or not long after, being now not farre from Jeruſalem, the chief city of the Jewes, and ſo the palace or royall city, and upon occaſion of their thinking, that he would ſhortly take upon him a regall authority, (chap. 17. 20.) and that that would be at Jeruſalem, he ſpake this parable unto them, A certain man born heir to a kingdome, took a great journey to take poſſeſſion of it (hereby intimating of himſelf, that he was to ſuffer, and riſe, and goe to heaven, ſo to be inſtalled in his kingdome) and then to return again in an eminent manner to ſhew himſelf among his countrey-men where he was born, and over whom he was to reign.

12. He ſaid therefore, * A certain noble man went into a farre countrey to receive for himſelf a kingdome, and to return.]

* a certain man of high birth, ἄνθρωπός τις εὐγενὴς

13. And he called his ten ſervants, and delivered them ten pounds, and ſaid unto them, Occupy untill I come.]

13. And having ſeverall ſervants, he gave each of them a ſtock of mony to traffick with in his abſence, commanding them to improve it to his beſt advantage, that he might receive the benefit of it when he returned, (noting that the Apoſtles were after his departure to preach to the Jewes, gain as many of them as they could, goe through all their cities, before Chriſt ſhould thus come and ſhew himſelf in that regall illuſtrious manner upon them, and ſo likewiſe that all other inferior Chriſtians were, and are to imploy their diligence and induſtry, according to their talents, to bring in ſome encreaſe unto God.)

14. But his citizens hated him, and ſent a meſſenger after him, ſaying, We will not have this man to reign over us.]

14. Now the reaſon of his journey to that far countrey, v. 12. was becauſe thoſe his countrey-men, over whom he was to reign, and was now only gone to be inſtalled or inthroned in his right, ſet themſelves contumaciouſly againſt him, and diſclaimed having him for their king, (noting the Jewes ſtanding out againſt the faith, as 'twas after his reſurrection preacht to them by the Apoſtles, ſee note on Mat. 24. b.)

15. And it came to paſſe, that when he was returned, having received the kingdome, then he commanded theſe ſervants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the money, that he might know how much every man had gained by trading.]

15. And when he came back again, after his inſtalment, to excerciſe his regall office among them, he firſt examined his ſervants what increaſe they had made, (noting the fruit that had come in, the harveſt or number of converts by the preaching of the Apoſtles over all Jewry.)

16. Then came the firſt, ſaying, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.

17. And he ſaid unto him, Well, thou good ſervant, becauſe thou haſt [been faithfull in a very little, have thou authority over ten cities.]

17. improved theſe earthly commodities (ſee Lu. 16. 10.) thou ſhalt be more highly preferr'd, (noting the reward of the Apoſtles labour in preaching the Goſpel, 1. governing in the Churches, which they had planted, then reigning with Chriſt, enjoying an higher degree of glory, as they had laboured more abundantly.)

18. And

18, 19. And the ſecond having imploy'd his time well, but not ſo well, was alſo rewarded proportionably.

18. And the ſecond came, ſaying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds.
19. And he ſaid likewiſe unto him, Be thou alſo over five cities.]

20, 21. But a third out of a pretence of extraordinary fear of diſpleaſing, in ſtead of imploying laid up his talent, (made no kinde of uſe of the abilities that God had given him, lay idle, without ever endevouring to doe any thing that might bring in any glory to God) And his ſloth, being the chief cauſe of his doing thus, made him (either really, or, to excuſe his ſloth, pretendedly) look upon it as a piece of auſterity and rigidneſſe in the Maſter (in Chriſt) to exact any fruit, any increaſe of his talents.

20, And another came, ſaying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound, which I have kept laid up in a napkin :
21. For I feared thee, becauſe thou art an auſtere man, thou takeſt up that thou laidſt not down, and reapeſt that thou didſt not ſow.]

22. But this was farre from an excuſe of his unprofitableneſſe, 'twas rather an aggravation of it, and an acknowledgment, that would bear witneſſe againſt him, and condemn him, make his ſlothfulneſſe and unprofitableneſſe appear to be a ſinne againſt conſcience in him.

22. And he ſaith unto him, Out of thine owne mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked ſervant ; Thou kneweſt that I was an auſtere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping what I did not ſow.]

23. For upon this acknowledgment, ſaith the Maſter, what poſſible reaſon can be given, why thou ſhouldſt not put my money into a bank amongſt the merchants, that it might have yeilded me ſome encreaſe at my return ?

23. Wherefore then gaveſt thou not my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with uſury ?]

24. The more unprofitable this man hath been, the fitter 'twill be to encreaſe the reward of him that hath been diligent, and ſucceſsfull.

24, And he ſaid unto them that ſtood by, [Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds.]

25, 26. And though that was conceived unequall by ſome, becauſe he had ſuch plenty already, yet the King adhered to his ſentence, upon this ground of his dealing with his ſervants by way of diſtributive juſtice, which conſiſts not in giving to all equall portions, but moſt to them that have done him moſt diligent, faithfull ſervice, and mulcting and puniſhing the unfaithfull, and idle perſon.

25. And they ſaid unto him, Lord he hath ten pounds.
26. For I ſay unto you, Unto every one that hath, ſhall be given ; and from him that hath not, even that he hath ſhall be taken away from him.]

27. But thoſe countreymen of his (whoſe king by right he was) which, when he was gone to be inſtalled in the kingdome, ſent him that contumacious anſwer, v. 14. (noting the Jewes that would not ſubmit to him upon the Apoſtles preaching the Goſpel after the reſurrection) being now inſtated in his throne, he preſently commanded to be put to the ſword, executed as ſo many rebels. (The fate that ſoon befell the Jewes, after his inauguration in his kingdome, that is, his going to heaven.)

27. But thoſe mine enemies, that would not that I ſhould reign over them, bring hither, and ſlay them before me.]

28. And when he had thus ſpoken, he went before, aſcending up to Jeruſalem.

29. Mat. 21. 1.

29. And it came to paſſe, when he was come nigh to Bethphage, and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he ſent two diſciples,

30. an aſſe tied, and a foal with her, which was not yet backt, take the foal

30. Saying, Goe ye into the village over againſt you, in which at your entring ye ſhall find [a colt tied, whereon yet never man ſate, looſe him] and bring him hither.

31. And if any man ask you, Why doe ye looſe him? Thus ye ſhall ſay unto him, Becauſe the Lord hath need of him.

32. And they that were ſent, went their way, and found even as he had ſaid unto them.

33. And as they were looſing the colt, the owners thereof ſaid unto them, Why looſe ye the colt ?

35. Mat. 21. 9.

34. And they ſaid, the Lord hath need of him.

35. And they brought him to Jeſus : And they caſt their garments upon the colt, and ſet Jeſus thereon.

36. And as he went, they ſpread their clothes in the way.

37. all his followers that believed and attended him

37. And when he was come nigh, even now at the deſcent of the mount of Olives, [the whole multitude of the diſciples] began to rejoice and praiſe God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had ſeen,

38. Hoſanna, or Save now (Mat. 21. a.) we acknowledge thee to be our king ſo long expected, the Meſſias, (ſee note on Mat. 11. a. and Mar. 11. 9.) God in heaven ſend all proſperity on this thy kingdome, And the loudeſt Hoſannaes or acclamations or confeſſions of his regality be made unto thee.

38. Saying, [* Bleſſed be the king that cometh in the name of the Lord, peace in heaven and glory in the higheſt.]

* Bleſſed in the name of the Lord be the king that cometh, Ευ. λογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος βασιλεὺς ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου

39. And ſome of the Phariſees from among the multitude ſaid unto him, Maſter, rebuke thy diſciples.

40. The thing is moſt true which they ſay, and if they ſhould join with you to ſmother it, it would by ſome other the unlikelieſt waies be proclaimed in deſpight of you.

40. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, [I tell you, that if theſe ſhould hold their peace, the ſtones would immediately cry out.]

41. And when he was come neer, he beheld the city and wept over it.

42. O that thou alſo wouldſt (ſee c. 12. note. c.) yet conſider and lay to heart, before it is too late, even in this criticall time, what concerns thy future tranquillity and proſperity ſo much, But thou doſt not at all conſider it.

42. Saying, [if thou hadſt known, even thou at leaſt in this thy day, the things which belong to thy peace ! but now they are hidden from thine eyes.]

a. 43, 44. And now what remains ? why that within a while the Romans ſhould beſiege thee cloſe, and famiſh thee, and take the city, and deſtroy all that are in it, and demoliſh the Temple utterly (ſee note on Mat. 24. a.) and all this by way of puniſhment for thy not conſidering what Chriſt hath by way of meſſage from God revealed to thee, that is, for thy not repenting upon all his calls.

43. For the daies ſhall come upon thee, that thine enemies ſhall [a] caſt a trench about thee, and compaſſe thee round, and keep thee in on every ſide,
44. And ſhall * lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee, and they ſhall not leave in thee one ſtone upon another, becauſe thou knoweſt not the time of thy viſitation.]

* daſh thee againſt the ground, ἐδαφιοῦσί σε,

45. And

45. And he went into the Temple, and began to caſt out them that ſold therein, and them that bought, Mat. 21. 12.

46. Saying unto them, It is written, My houſe is the houſe of prayer, but ye have made it a den of theeves.

47. And he taught daily in the Temple. But [the chief prieſts and ſcribes, and the * chief of the people ſought to deſtroy him.] 47. The Sanhedrim ſat in conſultation how they might put him to death.

2. V. 43. Caſt a trench] That Titus might ſtarve the city the ſooner, he ſhut up all the avenues, building five works without the city, and when the Jewes beat down them, he built a wall round about it, 39. furlongs long, and 13 caſtles or forts in it, whoſe compaſſe was 10 furlongs, and all this finiſh'd in three daies, ſaith Joſephus, De Bell. Jud. l. 6. c. 8. And when this was done, there was no poſſibility for any to come out, and the greateſt diſtreſſe that ever was, followed, eating of girdles, and ſhooes, and the coverings of their ſhields, and at length dung and durt, and hay, and mans-fleſh, and a rich woman called Mary fed on her own ſucking-child, and many other ſad expreſſions of this σωοχὴ or diſtreſſe are ſet down by Joſephus.

CHAP. XX.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND it came to paſſe that on one of thoſe daies, [as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the Goſpel, the chief prieſts and the ſcribes came upon him with the elders,] 1. he went into the Temple, and as he expounded the leſſon, and on occaſion of that made known the Goſpel to the people (ſee Mat. 9. note l.) the Sanhedrim came to him,

2. And ſpake unto him, ſaying, Tell us, By what authority doeſt thou theſe things? or who is he that gave thee this authority? Mat. 21. 23.

3. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, I will alſo ask you one thing, and anſwer me.

4. The Baptiſme of John, was it from heaven, or of men? See note on Mat. 21. e.

5. And they reaſoned with themſelves, ſaying, If we ſhall ſay, From heaven, he will ſay, Why then believed ye him not?

6. But and if we ſay, Of men, all the people will ſtone us: for they be perſwaded that John was a prophet.

7. And they anſwered, that they could not tell whence it was.

8. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I doe theſe things.

9. Then began he to ſpeak to the people this parable, A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to husbandmen, and went into a farre countrey for a long time.] 9. And after a parable delivered by him, and ſet down, Mat. 21. 21. he added this other, Mat 21. 28. A certain man that had a family, planted a vineyard, and did all that was neceſſary to that turn, fenced it with a good ſtrong mound, hewed a trough to preſſe the grapes in, and built a lodge for the keeper of it, and then let it out to farmers at a rent, and himſelf travailed for a time, (noting the care and proviſion God had made for the Church of the Jewes, Iſa. 5. which made him a ſtrange return for all this, killed his prophets, (which called for fruits of good life from them,) and at laſt his ſon Chriſt Jeſus himſelf.)

10. And at the ſeaſon he ſent a ſervant to the husbandmen, that they ſhould [give him of the fruit of the vineyard,] but the husbandmen beat him, and ſent him away empty. 10. pay him that rent, which his vineyard was to yeild him,

11. And again he ſent another ſervant, and they beat him alſo, and intreated him ſhamefully, and ſent him away empty.

12. And again he ſent the third, and they wounded him alſo, and caſt him out.

13. Then ſaid the Lord of the vineyard, What ſhall I doe? I will ſend my beloved ſon, it may be they will reverence him when they ſee him.

14. But when the husbandmen ſaw him, they reaſoned among themſelves, ſaying, This is the heir, come, let us kill him, [that the inheritance may be ours.] 14. and ſeiſe on his inheritance, as our own, of which we have already the poſſeſſion, Mat. 21. 38.

15. So they caſt him out of the vineyard, and killed him. What therefore ſhall the Lord of the vineyard doe unto them?

16. He ſhall come and deſtroy theſe husbandmen, and ſhall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they ſaid, God forbid.] 16. They of the Sanhedrim anſwered with joynt conſent, Mat. 21. 41. He will (as tis in any reaſon to be expected) come and deſtroy thoſe husbandmen, and diſpoſe the vineyard into other hands. Which when Chriſt, from their own confeſſion had taken for a granted truth, and Mat. 21. 43. brought home and applied to them, as a prediction of what was in any reaſon to befall them (ſee v. 19.) they then expreſt a greate averſation or diſlike of it.

17. And he beheld them, and ſaid, What is this therefore that is written, The ſtone which the builders rejected, the ſame is become the head of the corner? Mat. 21. 42.

* daſh him to pieces, λικμήσει αὐτὸν, Mat. 21. g.

18. Whoſoever ſhall fall upon that ſtone ſhall be broken, but on whomſoever it ſhall fall, it will * grinde him to powder.

19. And the chief prieſts and the ſcribes the ſame houre ſought to lay hands on him, and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had ſpoken this parable againſt them.

20. And they watched him, and ſent forth ſpies, which ſhould feign themſelves juſt men, that they might take hold of his words, that ſo they might deliver him unto the power, and authority of the Governour.]

20. And the Phariſees ſent ſome of their diſciples, and ſome of thoſe that adhered to Herod, Mat. 22. 16. to entrap and enſnare him, to which end they put on the diſguiſe of upright conſcientious men, that earneſtly deſired to be inſtructed in a ſcruple of every daies practiſe, about paying tribute, meaning by his anſwer to take advantage, and, if he ſaid any thing againſt Cæſar's right, at they ſuppoſed he would, then to accuſe and implead him before the Procurator of the Romans.

21. And they asked him, ſaying, Maſter, we know that thou ſayeſt and teacheſt rightly, neither acceptest thou the perſon of any, but teacheſt the way of God truly.

22. Is it lawfull for us to give tribute unto Cæſar, or no?

23. But he perceived their craftineſſe, and ſaid unto them, [Why tempt ye me?]

23. Why doe ye deſire and endevour to inſnare me?

24. Shew me a peny, whoſe image and ſuperſcription hath it? They anſwered and ſaid, Cæſars.

24. See Mat, 22. 20. and note c.

25. And he ſaid unto them, Render therefore unto Cæſar the things which be Cæſars, and unto God the things which be Gods.

26. And they could not take hold of his words before the people, and they marvailed at his anſwer and [held their peace.]

26. without any reply departed from him.

27. Then came to him certain of the Sadducees (which [[a] deny that there is any reſurrection]) and they asked him,

27. affirm that there is no future ſtate of men after this life

a.

28. Saying, Maſter, Moſes wrote unto us, If [any mans brother] die having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother ſhould take his wife, and raiſe up ſeed unto his brother.

28. any man that hath brethren, Mat. 22. 24.

29. There were therefore ſeven brethren, and the firſt took a wife and died without children.

30. And the ſecond took her to wife, and he died childleſſe.

31. And the third took her, and in like manner the ſeven alſo, And they left no children and died.

32. Laſt of all the woman died alſo.

33. Therefore in the reſurrection, whoſe wife of them is ſhe? for ſeven had her to wife.

And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid unto them, The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage.

35. But they which ſhall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and [the reſurrection from the dead,] neither marry, nor are given in marriage.

35. that future ſtate,

36. Neither can they die any more, for they are equall unto the Angels, and are the children of God, [being the children of the reſurrection.]

36. being made partakers of that future eternall eſtate.

37. Now that the dead are raiſed, even Moſes ſhewed at the buſh,] when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob.

37. But as for the main point diſputed between you Jewes, that there is another life after this, your own Moſes will inſtruct you, in thoſe words which he delivered at the buſh, Exod. 3. 6. (ſee note on Mat, 22. d.)

38. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: [for all live unto him.]

38. For thoſe that are departed out of this world, have another life, the ſoules of the juſt are already in the hands of God, and their bodies ſure to be raiſed up, and united to them by the power of God.

39. Then certain of the Scribes anſwering ſaid, Maſter, thou haſt well ſaid.

40. And after that they durſt not ask him any queſtions at all.

41. And he ſaith unto them, How ſay they that Chriſt is David's ſon?]

41. And after ſome few things, Mat. 22. 35. the Phariſees being come about him, he propoſed a queſtion to them, Mat. 22. 41. what they thought of the Meſſias, whoſe ſon he was; and upon their anſwering, that he was David's, he again asked, how that could be?

42. And] David himſelf ſaith in the book of Pſalms, The Lord ſaid to my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand,

42. When

43. Till I make thine enemies thy footſtool.

44. David therefore calleth him Lord, how is he then his ſon?

45. Then in the audience of all the people, he ſaid unto his diſciples,

46. Beware of the Scribes, which deſire to walke in long robes, and love greetings in the markets, and the higheſt ſeats in the ſynagogues, and the chief rooms at feaſts.

46. Mat. 23. 1, 7.

47. Which devour widowes houſes, and for a ſhew make long prayers:] the ſame ſhall receive greater damnation.

47. They are perſons of great covetouſneſſe & cruelty, oppreſſors of the poor and helpleſſe, without any mercy, and that they may hold up their reputation, which is neceſſary to enable them to doe ſo ſecurely, they pretend great devotion, and pray a great while.

6. As for all theſe things that make now ſuch a magnificent ſhew, Mat. 24. 2. within few yeares they ſhall be utterly deſtroyed and demoliſhed, ſee note on Mat. 24. 2.

7. And they asked him, ſaying, Maſter, but [when ſhall theſe things be? and what ſigne will there be when theſe things ſhall come to paſſe?]

7. When ſhall this deſtruction of the Temple be, and with it of the Jewiſh ſtate? and what prognoſticks of it will be diſcernible?

8. And he ſaid, Take heed that ye be not deceived, for [many ſhall come in my name, ſaying, * I am Chriſt, and the time draweth neer:] goe ye not therefore after them.

*I am he, and the ſeaſon, ἐγώ εἰμι, καὶ ὁ καιρὸς

8. One prognoſtick, or forerunner of that deſtruction ſhall be, that many deceivers ſhall ariſe among you, each pretending to be the Meſſias, and that he will ſoon deliver you.

9. But when ye ſhall hear of warres and commotions, be not terrified: for theſe things muſt firſt come to paſſe, but the end is not by and by.]

9. Another forerunner is that great commotions and tumults there ſhall be in Judea, before the Romans come to deſtroy them utterly, ſee note on Mat. 24. d.

10. Then ſaid he unto them, [* Nation ſhall riſe againſt nation, and kingdome againſt kingdome,]

*The nation ſhall be raiſed againſt the nation, & the kingdom againſt the kingdome, ἐγερθήσεται ἔθνος ἐπὶ ἔθνος καὶ βασιλεία ἐπὶ βασιλείαν, 10. They ſhall riſe up and ſlaughter one another, Mat. 24. e. Revel. 6. 12, 13, 14.

11. And great earthquakes ſhall be in divers places, and famines, and peſtilences, and fearfull ſights, and great ſignes ſhall there be from heaven.

Mat. 24. 7.

12. But before † all theſe they ſhall lay their hands on you, delivering you up to the ſynagogues and into priſons, being brought before kings and rulers for my names ſake.]

† all theſe things, τούτων πάντων,

12. But firſt they ſhall fall foule on the preachers of the Goſpel, and all pure ſincere Chriſtians, and bring you before the Jewiſh Conſiſtories, and Roman Governors for the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, Revel. 6. 11. and Mat. 24. 9.

13. And it ſhall turn to you for a teſtimony.

13. And this bringing of you before the Gentile powers ſhall be a means of divulging the Goſpel to them. See Mar. 13. 9.

14. Settle it therefore in your hearts] not to meditate before what ye ſhall anſwer.

14. In this caſe remember what was formerly ſaid to you, Mat. 10. 19. and 30. and belonged peculiarly to this point of time now ſpoken of;

15. For I will give you a mouth and wiſdome, which all your adverſaries] ſhall not be able to gainſay or reſiſt.

15. For I will furniſh you with thoſe anſwers, and that conviction to all your adverſaries, that they

16. And ye ſhall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends, and ſome of you ſhall they cauſe to be put to death.

17. And ye ſhall be hated of all men for my names ſake.

18. But there ſhall not an haire of your head periſh.]

18. But whatſoever befall you, treachery, perſecution, death it ſelf, v. 16. 17. be confident of this, that it ſhall not tend to the leaſt diſadvantage, but rather to the greateſt gain to you.

19. In your patience poſſeſſe ye your ſouls.]

19. And though ſome few of you ſhall ſuffer death in this cauſe, and ſo be eternally crown'd by ſuffering, yet this let me tell you, even for this life, that if ye endure with conſtancy, and perſevere, and fall not off from your profeſſion, that ſhall of all others be the moſt probable way of eſcaping, or obtaining deliverance from this ſweeping deſtruction, Mat. 10. 39. Mar. 13. 13.

20. And when ye ſhall ſee Jeruſalem compaſſed with armies, then know that the deſolation thereof is nigh.

21. Then let them which are in Judea, flee to the mountains, and let them which are in the midſt of it, depart out, and let not them that are in the countreys enter thereinto.

22. For theſe be the daies of vengeance, that all things which are written, may be fulfilled.

23. But woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give ſuck in thoſe daies: for there ſhall be great diſtreſſe in the land, and wrath upon this people.]

20, 21, 22, 23. But when you ſee Jeruſalem beſieged by the Romans (Mat. 24. 15. note f.) then reſolve the deſtruction of the city is neer, and accordingly all that are in it, let them flie out of Judea, and thoſe that are in the confines or regions about Judea, let them take care not to come into it, but (ſee Revel. 6. 16.) look on it as a place moſt ſadly to be de deſtroyed, on which all the dolefull prophecies are now to be fulfilled, which have been prophecied againſt Judea.

24. And they ſhall fall by the edge of the ſword, and ſhall be led away [b] captive into all nations: and Jeruſalem ſhall be [trodden down of the Gentiles, [c] untill the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.]

24. conquer'd by the Romans, Revel. 11. 2. And while this is a doing in Judea, the Goſpel ſhall be preached over the Gentile world, Mat. 24. 14. ſee Rom. 11. 25. and being by them received, ſome effect that ſhall have among the Jewes, by way of emulation, Rom. 11. 11, 13. moving them to receive the faith alſo, and by their doing ſo, Jeruſalem ſhall again be inhabited by Jewiſh (as well as Gentile) Chriſtians: ſee not on Revel. 11. f. b. c.

27. Thus ſhall Chriſt's regall office, in puniſhing and avenging the perſecutors of him and his diſciples, be moſt glorioufly revealed, ſee Mat. 13. 26.

27. And then ſhall they ſee the ſon of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory.]

28. And when ye ſee theſe things thus come to paſſe,

28. And when theſe things begin to come to paſſe, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.]

then let all true Chriſtians, Apoſtles, and others, that have ſo long been perſecuted by the Jewes, look up and hold up their heads with cheerfulneſſe, as knowing that to them redemption approacheth, and deliverance from the dangers which encompaſſe them, ſee Act. 3. a. and Rom. 13. b. and Rom. 8. l.

32. And indeed within a matter of 40 years all this ſhall moſt ſadly come to paſſe, ſee Mat. 24. 34. &c.

32. Verily I ſay unto you, This generation ſhall not paſſe away, till all be fullfilled.]

33. And there is no kind of doubt of the completion of it.

33. Heaven and earth ſhall paſſe away: but my word ſhall not paſſe away.]

34. But doe ye take heed that ye indulge not to any kind of luxury or exceſſe, Mat. 24. 49. which may make you unfit for watchfulneſſe (ſee Rom. 13. 13.) and the ſame care you are to take that worldly ſolicitude, fear of loſſes, and conſequently of want doe not enſnare you to the denying of Chriſt, or falling away from him, (Mat. 13. 22.) and ſo that day of vengeance on the enemies of Chriſt come ſuddenly, and involve you with the impenitent Jews.

34. And take heed to your ſelves, leaſt at any time your hearts be overcharged with ſurfeiting and drunkenneſſe, and cares of this life, and ſo that day come upon you unawares.]

36. Be ye therefore perpetually upon your guard, and be conſtant in prayer to God, that he will vouchſafe you to be of the number of that remnant, to whom the promiſe of eſcaping all this calamity is made (Mat. 10. note. f.) that when Chriſt ſhall thus come in vengeance againſt the nation, ye may meet him with cheerfulneſſe and confidence, and not fear any ill from him, but rather appear victorious with him, in this deſtruction of yours, as well as his enemies.

37. And as he exhorted them to diligence and prayer, ſo gave he them example, buſying himſelf in Gods ſervice all the day, and at night ſpending much time in prayer.

37. And in the day time he was teaching in the Temple, and at night he went out, and abode] in the mount that is called the mount of Olives.

38. And all the people came early in the morning to him in the Temple for to heare him.

Annotations on Chap. XXI.

a. δῶρα

V. 4. Offerings] The Hebrew קרבן ſignifies both a gift, and the treaſury into which the gifts were caſt; and ſo the Greek δῶρα gifts here is uſed for γαζοφυλάκιον v. 1. and ſo Mar. 12. 41.

b. Αἰχμαλωτισθήσονται εἰς πάντα τὰ ἔθνη.

V. 24. Captive into all nations] The number of thoſe that in the ſiege of Jeruſalem by Titus died by ſword and famine, is ſaid to be eleven millions by Euſebius Hiſt. l. 5. c. ζ'. out of Joſephus. Then when the city was taken the handſomeſt, ſaith he, were reſerved for triumph, the reſt, ſaith he, that were above 17 yeares of age were ſent bound to Ægypt to be ſlaves there, others diſperſed in the Provinces to be torn aſunder with wild beaſts, thoſe under 17 ſold to merchants of all countreys. And of all theſe the number was 97000.

c. καιροὶ ἐθνῶν

Ib. Untill the times of the Gentiles] What is the meaning of ἄχρι πληρωθῶσιν καιροὶ ἐθνῶν, till the ſeaſons, or times, of the Gentiles be fulfill'd may be gueſs'd partly by the importance of the word καιροὶ ſeaſons, partly of the πληρωθῶσιν fulfill'd, partly of the ἄχρι untill. The word καιροὶ vulgarly ſignifies a ſeaſon, a time deſigned and appointed, (according to the notion of the Hebrew word) or elſe expected, and looked for, and in both reſpects belongs fitly to the preaching the Goſpel to the Gentils, that being a thing that God had ſo long determined, and ſo oft foretold, and which though the Gentiles foreſaw not, yet is ſaid to be expected by them, (becauſe all they could deſire or expect was really ſumm'd up in this) not only in that prediction of Jacob, where Chriſt is ſtyled the expectation of the Gentiles, but in S. Pauls diſcourſe of it Rom. 8. 19. where the earneſt expectation of the creature, that is, the Gentile world (ſee Rom. 8. Note d.) is faſten'd upon this. Then for the πληρωθῶσι joyned to theſe καιροὶ ἐθνῶν, that ſure will bear ſome proportion with, if it be not parallel to, Rom. 11. 25. where the phraſe is very like this here, ἄχρις οὗ τὸ πλήρωμα τῶν ἐθνῶν εἰσέλθῃ, untill the time that the fulneſſe of the Gentiles enter. That is there explain'd to ſignifie the multitude of Gentiles receiving the faith, coming into the Church, and ſo πλήρωμα fulneſſe, v. 12. (See Rom. 11. Note d.) and proportionably to that, their ſeaſons being fulfill'd will be the preaching that Goſpel to them, which they ſhall thus receive, and which was ſo deſigned, and expected for them. Now for the ἄχρι untill, where it is ſaid, Jeruſalem ſhall be trodden down of the Gentiles, untill theſe ſeaſons of the Gentiles be fulfill'd, the explaining of that will be the farther clearing of the whole πληρωθῶσι καιροὶ ἐθνῶν whole matter. The treading down of Jeruſalem by the Gentiles is not particularly their victory over it by Titus, but their conſequent poſſeſſing of it, even till Adrians re-building a part of it, and calling it by his own name Ælia, and inhabiting it with Gentiles, which ſeems to be deſcribed Rev. 11.2. by the outer court of the Temple being given to the Gentiles, and ſo caſt out of the meaſuring. Upon the doing of this it follow'd, that as all the Jewes (remaining ſuch in oppoſition to the Chriſtians) were utterly baniſh'd the city, and a ſwines head ſet at the Gates, to baniſh even their eyes from it, ſo the believing Chriſtian Jewes returned thither again from their diſperſions, and inhabited it again, and joyn'd, and made one Congregation, one Church with the Gentiles, which had there by that time received the faith alſo, and till then continued a diſtinct Church from the Jewes; ſee Revel. 11. Note f. By which it appears how punctually this prediction, in our notion, was fulfill'd, that Jeruſalem ſhould be inhabited by the Gentiles, all the Jewes in a manner excluded, till the time that the Goſpel had been freely preach'd unto the Gentiles, and by them, in ſome eminent manner, been receiv'd, and then it ſhould be reinhabited with Jewes again, viz. the Chriſtian Jewes, who being wrought on by emulation of the Gentiles, were now many of them brought to receive the Faith. See Rom. 11. 11, 13. d. Ἔθνη

V. 25. Nations] The ἔθνη nations here are the ſeverall parts or tetrarchies of Paleſtine, ſo divided by the Romans, ſee Lu. 3. 1. each of them called ἔθνος nation, and all together ἔθνη nations. See Note on Mat. 24. e and Rev. 11. g. For to the Jewes ſure it is that there the diſtreſſe and conſternation belongs, not to the Gentiles. See Note on Rev. 6. f.

Ib. The ſea] That by the word θάλασσα ſea may be meant Galilee, ſee Note on Rev. 7. b. and of that people particularly Joſephus tells us, that Veſpaſian being ſent by Nero into Paleſtine, did ſubdue the Galileans, the moſt valiant, powerfull and beſt fortified nation of all Paleſtine, killing above an hundred thouſand, and carrying captive above fourty thouſand Jewes in that expedition. Where we ſee that Galilee ownes the name ἔθνος, and that there were diverſe ἔθνη nations in Paleſtine, of which Galilee is by Joſephus ſaid to be the moſt valiant. See Baronius An. Ch. 39. Neronis 13. But it is as probable, that as 'tis ordinary in theſe books to expreſs the whole by enumeration of the parts, and ſo the whole world by the mention of heaven, and earth, and ſea (ſee Note on 2 Pet. 3. e.) ſo here the univerſall deſtructions of the Jews may be deſcribed by all theſe. e. CHAP. XXII.

Paraphraſe.

1. NOW the feaſt of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the Paſſeover.]

1. Now the feaſt of unleavened bread drew nigh, which conſiſts of ſeven daies, and a day of preparation to them, wherein alſo no leavened bread is uſed, and that is the feaſt of the Paſſover, Mar. 14. c.

2. And the chief prieſts and ſcribes ſought how they might kill him; for they feared the people.]

2. And the Sanhedrim of the Jews were deſirous to find out ſome ſafe way of apprehending and putting him to death, Mar. 14. 1. for they durſt not doe it with any great noiſe, for fear of the people.

3. Then entred Satan into Judas ſurnamed Iſcariot, being of the number of the twelve,

4. And he went his way, and communed with the chief prieſts and captains, how he might betray him unto them.]

3, 4. And Judas one of his twelve conſtant attendants, being a covetous perſon, and in the diſcharge of his office (of keeping the bagge, of relieving the poor) deceitfull and theeving, Joh. 12. 6. and to that ſinne of ſacrileadge adding that of hypocriſie, in pretending great care of the poor, Joh. 12. 5. whom he thus robb'd, and upon Chriſt's admoniſhing him mildly of it, Mat. 26. 10. Mar. 14. 6. Joh. 12. 7. yet, it ſeems, not reforming, but incenſed againſt his Maſter, the Devil or his own covetous heart by the devils ſuggeſtion, put him upon this project of gain to make ſome advantage by delivering Chriſt into the hands of the Jewes, Joh. 13. 2. And upon his conſenting to this ſuggeſtion, the Devil was permitted by God to have this power over him, to enter into him, Joh. 13. 2. and doing ſo, he incited him to make a bargain with the Rulers of the Sanhedrim, and their miniſters or officers (ſee note g.) to deliver up Jeſus unto them (as after Chriſt's talking with him, and telling him diſtinctly of it, and the ſinne and danger attending it, Mar. 14. 21. and his not yet relenting, 'tis again ſaid that with the ſop the devil entred into him, Joh. 13. 27. hurrying him to the ſpeedy execution of it.)

5. And they were glad, and covenanted to give him money.]

5. And they gladly embraced the treaty, and ſtruck a bargain with him, that he ſhould have thirty ſhekels to deliver him up without much noiſe, Mat. 26. 4, and 15.

6. And he *[a] promiſed, and ſought opportunity to betray him unto them †[in] the abſence of the [b] multitude.]

*[a] thanked them.
†[in] without a tumult,

6. And although this were as low and vile a ſumme, as could be, the price of a ſlave, Exod. 21. 32. (ſee Zach. 11. 13.) yet Judas thanked them heartily for the offer, being very covetous, and ſo very glad of the opportunity of getting money, and from thenceforth he watched a fit ſeaſon wherein to doe it, without any noiſe or ſtirre about it. See Mat. 26. 4. Mar. 14. 1. a, b,

7. Then came the day of unleavened bread, when the paſſover muſt be killed.]

7. And the paſchal day was now come, wherein they eat no leaven in their bread, and in which the lamb was to be killed and eaten, ſee note on Mar. 14. c.

8. And he ſent Peter and John, ſaying, Goe and prepare us the [Paſſover] that we may eat.

8. unleavened bread and bitter hearbs, the memoriall of the deliverance out of Ægypt, ſee note on Mar. 14. c.

9. And they ſaid unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare?

10. And he ſaid unto them, Behold, when ye are entred into the city, there ſhall a man meet you bearing a pitcher of water, follow him into the houſe where he entreth in,

11. And ye ſhall ſay unto the good man of the houſe, The maſter ſaith unto thee, Where is the gueſt-chamber, where I ſhall eat the paſſover with my diſciples?

12. And he ſhall ſhew you a large upper roome furniſhed, there make ready.

13. And they went and found as he had ſaid unto them, and they made ready the [Paſſover.]

See ver. 8.

14. And when the hour was come, he ſate downe, and the twelve Apoſtles with him.

15. And he ſaid unto them, With deſire I have deſired to eat this paſſover with you before I ſuffer.

16. celebrate this feaſt with you (ſee note on Mat. 26. f.)

16. For I ſay unto you, I will not any more [eat thereof,] untill it be fulfilled in the Kingdome of God.

17. And he took the cup and gave thanks, and ſaid, Take this, and divide it among your ſelves.

18. I ſhall no more drink with you after this feſtivall manner, celebrate no more paſcha] commemorations before my departure out of this world, our next feſtivity muſt be kept in heaven.

18. For I ſay unto you, [I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, untill the kingdome of God ſhall come.]

19. And he took bread, and gave thanks and brake it, and gave unto them, ſaying, This is my body, which is given for you: [this doe in *remembrance of me.] *commemoration ἀνάμνησιν

20. In like manner after they had done eating, he took the cup of charity, uſuall among the Jewes, and ſaid, This cup is at this time to you the ſealing of a New Covenant (ſee note on the title of theſe books) in my blood, which ſhall ſhortly be ſhed for you, as this is now poured out.

22. And truely the ſon of man [goeth, as it was determined, but woe unto that man, by whom he is betrayed.]

23. And they began to enquire among themſelves, which of them it was, that * ſhould doe this thing. * was about to doe, μέλλων πράσσειν

25. Sometime before this (to wit, before his departing from Jericho, Mat. 20. 25, 29. nay before he came thither, Mar. 10. 42,46.) there had been a contention among the diſciples (occaſioned by the requeſt of Zebedee's wife for her two ſons, Mat. 20. 20.) which of them ſhould be look'd on, as the worthieſt, and ſo be preferr'd before the reſt.

28. Ye have followed me as diſciples, Mat. 19. 28. and been hitherto conſtant to me in all the afflictions and perſecutions that have befallen me.

31. And at this point of time, the ſtory whereof is here in relating v. 20. (not at the time of that other paſſage ver. 24.) Chriſt addreſs'd his ſpeech particularly to Peter, ſaying, As for you, Simon, I tell you, that either upon ſome ſinne committed by thee, giving Satan ſome ſuch right of claim, (poſſibly ſomewhat done criminouſly by him in that contention of the diſciples, mention'd v. 24. the indignation of the ten againſt the two, Mat. 20. 24.) or elſe ſuggeſting ſomewhat againſt thy ſincerity, as againſt Job's, Job 1. 9. Satan hath accuſed you before God, and required that he may have the ſhaking of you, liberty to doe his worſt to drive you from the faith of Chriſt.

31. And the Lord ſaid, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath deſired to have you, that he may ſift you as wheat.]

32. This is granted to him, and your danger thereupon is great, but I have prayed for thee, that thou be not conquer'd by him and his terrors, ſo farre as utterly to forſake the faith; and for any ſinnes that in this combate thou proveſt guilty of, let this uſe be made of them, when by repentance thou art recovered out of them, that thou be the more carefull to confirm and ſtrengthen others, that they fall not in like manner. See note on 1 Cor. 5. e.

32. But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; and when thou art converted ſtrengthen thy brethren.]

33. And he ſaid unto him, Lord, I am ready to goe with thee both into priſon, and to death.

34. And he ſaid, I tell thee, Peter, [the cock ſhall not crow this day, before that] thou ſhalt thrice deny that thou knoweſt me.

35. Formerly I ſent you out without any proviſion, and yet ye wanted nothing.

35. And he ſaid unto them, When I ſent you without purſe, and ſcrip, and ſhooes, lacked ye any thing? And they ſaid, Nothing.]

36. But now ſome diſtreſſes ye are like to meet with, in like manner as ye will firſt ſee them fall moſt ſharply upon me.

36. Then ſaid he unto them, But now he that hath a purſe let him take it, and likewiſe his ſcrip; and he that hath no ſword, let him ſell his garment and buy one.]

37. For now according to the prophecy Iſa. 53. 12. paſt on the Meſſias, I muſt be put to death as a malefactor, For all that is foretold of me ſhall now ſuddenly be accompliſhed.

37. For I ſay unto you, that * this that is written muſt yet be accompliſhed in me, And he was reckoned among the tranſgreſſors: For the things concerning me have an end.] * now this which hath been written muſt be fulfill'd on me, to wit, and he-- τέτελεσται γὰρ τὸ περὶ ἐμοῦ τέλος ἔχει proaching them, told him they had two ſwords anong them, But he gave them by a ſhort reply to underſtand, that he did not really mean that they ſhould goe and provide them ſwords, but only that great dangers were now approaching them.

39. And he came out, and went as he was wont to the mount of Olives,] and his diſciples alſo followed him. 39. And he according to his wont, went out to the mount to pray.

42. Saying, Father [If † thou be willing, remove this cup from me: neverthe-leſſe not my will but thine be done.] 42. O that thou wouldſt, (ſee note on ch. 12. c.) or, I pray thee remove this bitter cup from me: Yet if this be thy pleaſure, whatſoever thou ſeeſt beſt to be done, I moſt heartily embrace it, before that for which now I pray.

† thou wilt take this cup from me, εἰ βούλει παρένεγκεῖν τὸ ποτήριον τοῦτο ἀπ' ἐμοῦ.

43. And there appeared an Angel unto him from heaven ſtrengthning him.] 43. And an Angel was ſent from heaven to repreſent ſuch conſiderations to him of the advantages and benefits of his death, as might make him bear it cheerfully.

44. And being in an agony he prayed more earneſtly: And his ſweat was as it were great ᶠdrops of blood falling down to the ground.] 44. After that being in ſuch a commotion of mind, which ſignifies an apprehenſion of extream danger, without any trembling at it, or endeavour to avoid or eſcape it, he prayed more vehemently, and fell proſtrate upon his face, Mar. 14. 35. ſaying the ſame words, and more to the ſame purpoſe, and he ſwet (as men in agonies are wont) great glutinous drops like thoſe of blood when it drops on the ground. ᶠ

45. And when he roſe up from prayer, and was come to his [diſciples, he found them ſleeping for ſorrow.] 45. three diſciples Peter and James and John, Mat. 26. 37. he found them faſt aſleep, this ſleep being an effect of that great heavineſſe, and diſpiritedneſſe which their ſorrow had produced.

46. And ſaid unto them, Why ſleep ye? Riſe and pray, leſt ye enter into temptation.

47. And while he yet ſpake, behold, a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, went before them, and drew neer unto Jeſus to kiſſe him.

48. But Jeſus ſaid unto him, Judas, [* betrayeſt thou the ſon of man with a kiſſe?] 48. Is a kiſſe the token by which thou haſt promiſed to deliver me up to them? Mar. 14. 44.

* delivereſt, παραδίδως

49. When they which were about him ſaw what would follow, they ſaid unto him, Lord, ſhall we ſmite with the ſword?] 49. When the diſciples ſaw what was toward, they offered to have fought for his reſcue.

50. And one of them ſmote the ſervant of the high prieſt, and cut off his right eare.] And S. Peter in the heat of zeal, without Chriſt's permiſſion, and againſt the precepts which he had alwaies taught them, drew a ſword, and cut off the right eare of Malchus, a ſervant of the high prieſt's.

51. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, Suffer ye thus farr. And he touched his eare and healed him.] 51. And Jeſus reproving Peter for ſo ſo doing, Mat. 26. 52. ſpake to thoſe that came to apprehend him, to let him alone but ſo long as to reſtore the man his eare, and upon a touch he was cured.

52. Then Jeſus ſaid unto the chief prieſts and ᵍ captains of the temple, and the elders which were come to him, Be ye come out as againſt a thief with ſwords and ſtaves? ᵍ

53. When I was daily with you in the Temple, ye ſtretched forth no hands againſt me, but [this is your houre, and the power of darkneſſe.] 53. this is the time wherein the devil and you are permitted to work your wills upon me.

54. Then tooke they him and led him, and brought him into the [high prieſt's houſe,] And Peter followed afarre off. 54. houſe of Caiaphas the high prieſt of that year, where the Sanhedrim was aſſembled, Mat. 26. 57.

55. And when they had kindled a fire in the midſt of the hall, and were ſet down together, Peter ſat down amongſt them.

56. But a certain maid beheld him as he ſate by the fire, and earneſtly looked upon him, and ſaid, This man was alſo with him.

57. And he denied, ſaying, Woman, I know him not.

* even ʰ

58. And after a little while, [another ſaw him, and ſaid, Thou art * alſo of them. And Peter ſaid, Man, I am not.] 58. another maiden, Mat. 26. 71. Mar. 14. 69. (ſee note on the title of S. Matthew's Goſpel) ſeeing him ſaid, Thou art even one of them. But Peter denied, and ſaid, Woman I am not.

59. And about the ſpace of one houre after, [another confidently affirmed, ſaying, Of a truth this fellow alſo was with him; for he is a Galilean.] 59. And ſome others that ſtood by (Mat. 26. 73. Mar. 14. 17.) affirmed confidently that he was certainly one of his company, for, ſaid they, his ſpeech diſcovers him to be a Galilean, Mat. 26. 73. &c.

60. And Peter ſaid, Man, I know not what thou ſayeſt.] And immediately while he yet ſpake, the cock crew. 60. But he ſaid (with addition of oathes, and imprecations, Mat. 26. 74.) I am not what thou affirmeſt me to be.

61. And the Lord turned and looked upon Peter; and Peter remembred the word of the Lord, how he had ſaid unto him, Before the cock crow thou ſhalt deny me thrice.

62. And Peter went out and wept bitterly.

63. And [the men that held Jeſus mocked him] and ſmote him. 63. while Peter was in the hall of the high prieſt, Mat. 26. 58. and 69. (before the latter part of the precedent ſtory of S. Peter) the ſouldiers that were ſet to guard Jeſus, Mat. 26. 67. ſpit in his face.

64. And when they had ʰ blindfolded him, they ſtroke him on the face, and asked him, ſaying, [Prophecy] who is it that ſmote thee? 64. Tell us, if thou art able to know and declare ſecrets, ʰ

65. And many other things blaſphemouſly ſpake they againſt him.

66. And aſſoon as it was day, [the Elders of the people, and the chief prieſts, and the Scribes came together, and led him] into their councell, ſaying, 66. the Sanhedrim met, and call'd for him to be brought.

67. Art thou the Chriſt? tell us. And he ſaid unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe.

68. And if I ſhall demonſtrate to you by never ſo convincing arguments that I am the Meſſias, you will neither ſatisfie nor anſwer my proofs, nor yet yield to the force of them, and releaſe me out of your hands.

68. And if I alſo ask you, ye will not anſwer me, nor let me goe.]

69. Within a while ſhall I the Meſſias be exalted to the right hand of my Father, and then ſhall you ſee me execute judgment and vengeance upon you, Mat. 26. 64.

69. Hereafter ſhall the ſon of man ſit on the right hand of the power of God.]

70. From hence they concluded that he made himſelf the ſon of God, and asked him, whether he were ſo or no? He anſwered that he was.

70. Then ſaid they all, Art thou then the ſon of God? And he ſaid unto them, Ye ſay that I am.]

71. This they concluded to be a blaſphemous ſpeech, and ſo that he was guilty of death by his own confeſſion, in taking upon him to be the Meſſias.

71 And they ſaid, What need we any farther witneſſe? For we our ſelves have heard of his own mouth.]

Annotations on Chap. XXII.

V. 6. Promiſed] What ἐξωμολόγησι ſignifies here, will be more eaſily determined, when 'tis reſolved that as among Grammarians, ſo in the reſt of the places in the New Teſtament, it clearly denotes one of theſe two things, either confeſſion of ſinne, or giving of thanks, both being the importance of the Hebrew הודה in hiphil from ידה. Thus ſaith Phavorinus, Ἐξομολόγησις ἡ ἐπὶ τῷ πεπονθότων μὴ ἐυχαειτίας ἢ ἐυεργεσιῶν ἐπαειδμησις, it is a thankfull acknowledgment or enumeration of benefits, ἢ ἐπὶ κακῶς πεπραγμένων παρὰ τὸ ἁμάρτημα ἐξαγόρευσις, and the guilty mans acknowledgement of what he hath done amiſſe, which is vulgarly known by the title of ἐξομολόγησις, and again, Ἐξομολογοῦμαι, ἐυχαειτῶ, it ſignifies to give thanks. In the ſenſe of confeſſing of faults 'tis to be found Mat. 3. 6. Mar. 1. 5. Acts 19. 18. James 5. 16. In that of praiſing, or giving thanks, Mat. 11. 25. (the very place cited by Phavorinus, ἐξομολογοῦμαί σοι πάτερ, I thanke thee O father) Lu. 10. 21. Rom. 14. 11. 15. 9. Phil. 2. 11. Rev. 3. 5. And in no one place is it taken for promiſing (the meaning of ὁμολογεῖν in Greek Authors, and eſpecially in the Inſtitutions of Theophilus, ὁμωμίπλις, ὁμωμίπλω, τοῦ' ἔστι, ὁμολογεῖς, ὁμολογῶ) or of any thing of that nature. And then the choiſe will be very eaſie, which of theſe two ſenſes we ſhall think fit to apply to this place, that of confeſſing being very aliene and unfit for the turne, and the Arabick interpreter pointing us to this of giving thankes, which being an expreſſion of joy, is oft taken for joy it ſelf, and ſo is fit for this turn, the covetous purſebearer being very well pleaſed with ſuch a bargain.

a. Ἐξωμολόγησι

Ib. Multitude] Ὀχλος here ſignifies a tumult, after the manner of the Hebrews, who uſe המון (literally a multitude) for a tumult, or noyſe alſo. See Forerius on Iſaiah p. 197.

b. Ὀχλος

V. 25. Benefactors] The Hebrew word נדיב, which they uſe for a Prince, and is by the Septuagint rendred βασιλεὺς, ἄρχων, τύραννος, doth primarily ſignifie liberall, magnificent, benefactor, and ſo, as in the chooſing of Princes in Ariſtotle, Pol. l. 3. ἢ ἐπὶ τοῖς ἐυεργεσίας καθίσαν τοὺς βασιλεῖς, they made them Kings that had been their benefactors; ſo in the deduction of the word alſo, Princes are here called ἐυεργέται benefactors, and ſo Jeb. 21. 28. where the Hebrew reads נדיב munificus, beneficus, the Greek reads ἄρχων, and the Targum אַרכונה (the Greek ἄρχων got in amongſt them) a Prince, and ſo it ſignifies there. For this S. Matthew, in his account of the ſame ſpeech of Chriſts, uſes οἱ μεγάλοι the great ones, and καλοῦνται are called being ordinarily ſet to ſignifie no more then εἰσὶ are, the words here ἐξουσιάζοντες αὐτῶν, they that have authority over them ἐυεργέται καλοῦνται are called benefactors, is directly to the ſame ſenſe, parallel with οἱ μεγαλοι ἐξουσιάζουσιν αὐτῶν the great ones have authority over them. ſo as in the ſenſe, ἐυεργέται benefactors ſhall be the ſubject of the propoſition, and ἐξουσιάζοντες they that exerciſe authority, the Prædicate, thus, Their Princes called benefactors exerciſe authority over them.

c. Ἐυεργέται

V. 26. Younger] As they that were Rulers among the Jewes, or Judges in their Sanhedrin, were called Elders, ſo others, their officers eſpecially that attended them, are commonly ſtyled by way of diſtinction from them νεώτεροι the younger. And proportionably in the Church, as πρεσβύτεροι are they that preſide and governe in it, called here μείζονες greater, ſuperior to others, ſo they that are under them, are here called νεώτεροι (ſee Acts 5. 6. and ſo 1 Tim. 5. 1. Tit. 2. 6.) and in other places ἰδιῶται, 1 Cor. 14. 23, 24. and Acts. 4. 13. and ἐν τάξει ἰδιώτου, or ἀναπληροῦντες τόπον τοῦ ἰδιώτου 1 Cor. 14. 16. they that are in the place and condition of ordinary men or idiotes.

d. Νεώτεροι

Ἰδιῶται

V. 41. Withdrawn] The uſe of the word ἀπεσπάσθη is obſervable among the Helleniſts, ſignifying no more then to depart. So 2 Mac. 12. 10. ἐκεῖθεν δὲ ἀπεσπασθέντων σταδίους ἐννέα, when they were departed thence nine ſtadia. So Act. 21. 1. ἡμᾶς ἀποσπασθῆναι ἀπ' αὐτῶν, we were gone or departed from them. And ſo if that be the word in this place, it muſt certainly ſignifie no more, but will be thus beſt rendred, he departed from them. But then the Kings MS. reading ἀπεστάθη, that is not capable of any other rendring.

e. ἀπεσπάσθη

V. 44. Drops of blood] That Chriſt ſwet drops of blood is not affirmed in this place, but only that he ſwet drops of ſweat of a ſtrange thickneſſe or viſcouſneſſe, and conſequently as big as the drops wherin blood is wont to fall upon the ground. So ſaith Juſtin Martyr, Theophylact, and Euthymius; and 'tis * Ariſtotles obſervation of the ἀγωνιῶντες, men in an agony, ὅτι μάλιστα ἱδρῶσι, that they ſweat extreamly. But that the ſweat ſhould ſo farre exceed the proportion of ſweat, as the drops wherein blood uſes to fall are above the drops wherein ſweat is wont, this was the ſtrange thing, and the expreſſion of the heavineſſe of this agony, which is here mentioned. See Photius Epiſt. 138. Of the like uſe of ὡσεὶ, as or like as, ſee Note on Mat. 3. 1.

V. 52. Captaines of the Temple] Στρατηγοὶ ἱεροῦ, captaines of the Temple here mentioned (and στρατηγοὶ captaines v. 4.) and in two other places of this Author, Act. 4. 1. and Acts 5. 24. in the ſingular number, στρατηγὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ, ſignifie no more then the captaines of a band, or captaines of more hands of Roman ſouldiers, ſet at the porches of the Temple to guard and keep peace, that there might be no ſedition raiſed in the city at the aſſembling of the Jews, at the Temple. Thus ſaith Joſephus Αλωσ. l. 5. c. 15. was there a guard placed in the tower called Antonia, which was thence ſetch'd out at feaſt dayes, to be a guard or φρούριον to the Temple, (and therefore Chryſoſtome renders it clearly the captain of the ſouldiers of the Temple) for ſo ſaith the ſame Joſephus Αρχαιολ. l. 8. c. 4. at that time when the people came to their feaſts, eſpecially at the Paſſover, there being danger of tumults, Cumanus ſet τῶν στρατιωτῶν μίαν τάξιν, a band of ſouldiers, with their armes, to ſtand ἐπὶ τῶ ἱερῶ τοῶν in the porches of the Temple. Theſe ſouldiers are mentioned Mat. 26. 47. for thoſe that are there called a great multitude with ſwords and ſtaves, ἁμαρτωλοὶ are the ἁμαρτωλοὶ foretold by Chriſt, v. 45. the ſinners, that is, Gentiles, and Joh. 18. 3. ἡ σπεῖρα a band of ſouldiers, and here στρατηγοὶ τῶ ἱερῶ, that is, the Commanders with their τάξεις bands of ſouldiers with them; and χιλίαρχ accordingly χιλίαρχ τῆς σπείρης the Colonel of this band Acts 21. 31. is ſure the στρατηγὸς commander, or παρεμβολὴ captain here, and that tower of Antonia the παρεμβολὴ, or Caſtle v. 34. whither he commanded Paul to be brought to ſafe Cuſtody. Such alſo (ſaith Nicephorus l. 1. c. 32. and before him Chryſoſtome and Theophylact) κυςωδία was the κυςωδία the watch or guard, Mat. 2. 65. which being ſet by the Romans to keep all quiet, was offered by Pilate to the Jews to watch the grave of Jeſus, that none might ſteal him away, and make that matter of a new ſtirre among them. For that theſe were not Jews, appears ſufficiently by their watching on the Sabbath day, which eſpecially at the time of the Paſſover the Jews durſt not to have done. This guard of the Romans, and care of theirs to prevent ſeditions among the Jews, ſeems to have taken its riſe from the former care and practiſe of the Jews, in defending themſelves from the Idumeans 1 Mac. 4. 60, 61. for there Judas Maccabæus having built high walls and ſtrong towers about mount Sion, leſt the Gentiles ſhould tread it down, as they had done before, they ſet there a garriſon to keep it, and fortified Bethſura to preſerve it. And the Commander of the Garriſon was moſt probably he, whom Joſephus calls by this ſtyle of στρατηγὸς ναῦ, or ἱερῶ then, the captain of the Sanctuary or Temple. But now the caſe being altered, and the Roman Conquerours taking the ſame care, and keeping the like guards againſt the uproars and tumults of the Jews, as the Jews did formerly againſt the Idumeans, 'tis to be ſuppoſed, that the στρατηγὸς τῶ ἱερῶ at this time was a Roman not Jewiſh Commander, though yet in Joſephus ſpeaking of thoſe times, we have Ananus and Eleazar called στρατηγοὶ, who were Prieſts l. 20. c. 8. See Sigonius l. 7. de Rep. Heb. c. 23. where he takes notice of theſe Roman Commanders among the Jews under the title of ἡγεμόνται, and στρατηγοὶ τῶ ἱερῶ, and alſo of their Lictors, ὑπηρέται officers, Acts 5. 26. ῥαβδοῦχοι Serjeants, Acts 16. 35. to apprehend diſturbers, and ῥαβδίζειν Acts 16. 22. to beat them with rods, and then of bands of ſouldiers to quell commotions, as you may ſee Acts 16. 20. where bringing S. Paul and Silas to the στρατηγοὶ, ſuch like captains of bands at Philippi, their complaint is, that ὅτι οἱ ἄνθρωποι ἐκταράσσουσιν ἡμῶν τὴν πόλιν Ἰουδαῖοι ὑπάρχοντες, theſe men raiſe ſedition in our city being Jews, ſuppoſing that thoſe officers were there ſet among them in other cities, as well as at Jeruſalem, to quell ſuch commotions, which were feared eſpecially from the Jews.

V. 64. Blind-folded] This uſage of Chriſt here referres to that ſport ſo ordinary among children, called μυίνδα, in which it is the manner firſt to blindfold, which is v. 64. συκαλύπτειν, then to ſtrike him, δέρειν, v. 63. and τύπτειν v. 64. then to aske him who ſtroke him, which is ἐπερωτᾶν v. 64. and not to let him goe, till he named the man aright, who had ſtroke him. And ſo was here uſed as a contumely or reproach toward him.

CHAP. XXIII.

Paraphraſe.

1. AND [the whole multitude of them] aroſe and led him to Pilate.
1. the whole company of the Sanhedrim by the vote of the major part, not of all, v. 51.

2. And they began to accuſe him, ſaying, [We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæſar, ſaying that he himſelf is Chriſt a King.]
2. We found him drawing away the nation from the religion of their anceſtors, and alſo forbidding to pay Cæſar the Roman Emperour his dues (ſee note on Mar. 12. a. and Mat. 22. b) taking upon him to be our long expected Meſſias, and ſo conſequently our King.

3. And Pilate asked him, ſaying, Art thou the King of the Jews? And he anſwered him and ſaid, [Thou ſayeſt it.]
3. I am ſo.

4. Then ſaid Pilate to the chief Prieſts and to the people, I find no fault in this man.

5. And they were the more fierce, ſaying, He [ſtirreth up the people teaching] throughout all Jury beginning from Galilee to this place.
5. teacheth ſeditious doctrine, and hath done ſo.

6. When Pilate heard [of Galilee,] he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

7. And diſcerning that his dwelling and abode was in Galilee which belonged to Herods government, and ſuppoſing Herod by his knowledge in the Jewiſh religion, to be fitter for the cognizance of this caſe, he remitted the hearing of it to Herod, who was perſonally at Jeruſalem at that time (ſee note on Lu. 1. l.) on occaſion of the feaſt.

8. And when Herod ſaw Jeſus, he was exceeding glad: for he was deſirous to ſee him of a long ſeaſon, becauſe he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have ſeen ſome miracle done by him.

9. Then he queſtioned with him in many words; but he anſwered him nothing.

13. And Pilate, when he had [called together the chief Prieſts, and rulers, and the People,]

15. Nor is this my opinion only, but I ſent him, and referred the hearing of the buſineſſe to Herod v. 7. who being more acquainted with your religion then I am, may be deemed a more competent judge, and after he hath had cognizance of him, he hath no way expreſs'd his opinion that his crimes are capital.

19. (Who for a certain ſedition made in the city, and for murther, was caſt in priſon.)

20. Pilate therefore willing to releaſe Jeſus, ſpake again unto them.]

20. Pilate again made another aſſay to ſoften the people, being, on opinion of Chriſts innocence (and having received a meſſage from his wife, Mat. 27. 19.) deſirous to ſave his life, and only to inflict ſome inferior puniſhment on him, v. 16.

21. But they cryed, ſaying, Crucifie him, crucifie him.]

21. But they were peremptory for the putting him to death.

22. And he ſaid unto them the third time, Why, what evill hath he done? I have found no cauſe of death in him: I will therefore chaſtiſe him, and let him goe.

See v. 15.

23. And they were inſtant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified: and the voices of them, and of the chief prieſts [prevailed.]

25. And he releaſed unto them him, that for ſedition and murther was caſt into priſon, whom they had deſired; but he delivered Jeſus to their will.

Act. 3. 14.

26. And as they led him away they laid hold upon one Simon a Cyrenian, coming out of the countrey, and on him they laid the croſſe, that he might bear it after Jeſus.]

26. And having put on him a Scarlet robe, a crown of thornes, a reed like a Scepter in his hand, and ſo made him a mock-king of the Jewes and then taken all from him again, and uſed him contumelioufly, Mat. 27. 29. &c. they led him out to crucifie him, and as they went, they preſs'd one Simon to carry his croſſe, on which he ſhould be crucified, after him. See Mat. 27. note e.

27. And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which alſo bewailed and lamented him.

28. But Jeſus turning unto them ſaid, Daughters of Jeruſalem, weep not for me, but weep for [your ſelves and for your children.]

28. the calamities which are ready to befall this whole nation, for this ſinne of rejecting, and crucifying me, are likely to be farre greater, and more worthy of your tears, then what now befalls me.

c. 29, 30, 31. For heavy days are ſhortly to come upon this people, miſerable ſtreights and diſtreſſes firſt, and then even utter deſtruction, expreſs'd as 'tis here, Jo. 2. 19. Hoſ. 10. 8. Apoc. 6. 16. by calling the mountains to cover them, and by that other proverbiall phraſe of cutting off the green tree with the dry, Ezech. 20. 47. the righteous and the wicked together, Ezech. 21. 2, 3. or the rich and the poore together, that is, making an utter deſolation, v. 4. (ſee 1 Pet. 4. 18.) And if my portion, who am the ſon of God, and innocent, be in your opinion ſo ſad and lamentable, under this Roman judge and ſouldiers, what will become of the profeſt enemies of God, who as a dry trunk of a tree are as it were fitted and markt out for the fire, and ſhall fall into the hands of whole armies of the Romans? Or if in the diſtreſs that ſhall come upon you, the rich and the noble ſhall be put to ſuch ſtreights, then what will the condition of the meaner ſort be?

30. Then ſhall they begin to ſay to the mountains, fall on us, and to the hills, cover us.
